MAYOR DUNNE TO CALL PROMPTLY FOR TROOPS IF VIOLENCE SPREADS

Chicago's Executive Makes Announcement to This Effect.

Employers See Signs Looking to the Settlement of Strike.

President Shea Calls on National Officers to Meet In Chicago.

Chicago, May 15.—Mayor Dunne for the first time during the strike made the definite declaration today that a call for state troops would promptly follow a spread of the strike accompanied by violence.

Possible signs of the end of the teamsters' strike began to grow today. President Shea of the Teamsters' union sent a telegram to President Gompers of the American Federation of Labor, requesting a meeting of the national board of that body to be held in Chicago at the end of the week. The report also was confirmed that President Shea had telegraphed the national officers of the International Bortherhood of Teamsters to come to Chicago forthwith. The teamsters' executive board will be in session about Wednesday. Some of the members are already here. One of them, Vice President Casey, is en route from San Francisco. The move to bring the national board of the American Federation of Labor together was viewed by the team owners, who through their various associations have been striving to bring about a conciliation between the strikers and employers and by labor officials generally as important in the direction of a settlement. This may possibly take the form of the calling off of the strike. The telegram to President Gompers asked that he call a meeting to be held in Chicago not later than Saturday. The following are the executive of the central labor body: Samuel Gompers, president; James Duncan, vice president; John Mitchell, second vice president; James O'Connell, third vice president; Max Morris, fourth vice president; Dennis Hayes, fifth vice president; Daniel Keefe, sixth vice president; J. B. Lennon, treasurer; Frank Morris, secretary.

International President Shea's utterances today contained no note indicating a purpose to surrender.

"The papers say we are weakening," he said, "but I want to say that if any teamsters comes into the meeting tonight and advocates surrender I will not answer for him."

"Are you going to take any further legal proceedings in the prosecution of the strike" he was asked.

"Legal proceedings!" he exclaimed in apparent disgust. "We will leave that to the employers. They have an injunction, but injunctions do not drive wagons. We shall not resort to legal proceedings. The strike will be won by the strength of the Teamsters' union."

Chicago May 15.—Influences in the Teamsters' Joint Council, at work to halt a general strike movement including all drivers in Chicago, are expected to bear fruit at a meeting of the council tonight and avert a new and greater industrial upheaval here.

Rumors that the executive board of the International Brotherhood of teamsters would meet in Chicago tomorrow and action of ice wagon drivers in accepting the wage schedule of last year coupled with reports that dozens of strikers have applied for their old positions at the department stores, sustains a belief among the employers that the end of the strike is not far off. A meeting of the joint Liverymen's association is called to consider action in relation to a threatened strike of 2,000 cab drivers, who refuse to take their passengers to stores under the union ban. The cab drivers' situation is in a balance as the men say they will not withdraw from the position taken when the ultimatum was delivered. The liverymen say they will not withdraw the ultimatum. The result depends upon the determination of the teamsters' joint council tonight.

Before Master in Chancery Sherman, hearing of the federal injunction cases continued today, attorneys for the employers were working hard to obtain light on the alleged slugging feature of the strike, to show that "violence committees" exist for every union during the times of strikes, and that men are trained for "slugging" work, and employed exclusively for that purpose.

It was declared today that if the union men called as witnesses continued in refusal to answer questions, orders citing for contempt would surely follow.

Responding to a riot call from policemen who were unable to cope with a mob of strike sympathizers, last night, a patrol wagon, hurrying at full speed to the scene, collided with a crowded street car, seriously injuring nine persons and bruising a dozen others.

Regardless of the victims of the wreck, the assailants of a detective and non-union workman, whose actions had caused the appeal for police protection, continued their attack until calls brought a score of policemen, who were compelled to fight their way through the mob attracted by the wreck and riot. The policemen used their clubs vigorously and arrested fifteen men, who were seen throwing stones or threatening the non-union men.

Fully 100 letters threatening death have been received by a half dozen men, who have been given wide publicity as managers of the employers' end of the teamsters' strike. Serious consideration is being given the letters. Bodyguards are now attending the principals on the employers' side of the teamsters' strike, and all are accompanied, day and night, by guards. Secretary Job of the Employers' association, and Robert Therne of Montgomery Ward & Co., admitted today having received many threats.

Charles Casey, business agent of the Carriage and Wagon Makers' union, No. 4, accused of being an accessory to the murder of Charles Carlstrom, who, it is alleged, was brutally beaten to death by alleged hired thugs, waived examination today and was held to the criminal court without bail. The examination of Casey's four companions in the alleged plots was continued until May 25. With one exception the bonds of these men were fixed at $17,000. The bonds of Henry J. Neuman, financial secretary of Carriage and Wagon Makers' union, No. 4, who was arrested at the same time as Casey, were fixed at $25,000. Unable to furnish the necessary bonds, the men were returned to jail. The police are centering their efforts today towards the capture of George Malloy, ex-president of the union. Malloy, according to the police, took an active part in the plans for what is declared to have been a systematic "slugging crusade" against non-union men.

MORTON TO RETIRE

From Cabinet In Fall and Newberry May Succeed.

Secretary of Navy Plans to Go Abroad In June.

Washington, May 15.—Paul Morton said yesterday in response to questions prompted by reports he would soon retire from the cabinet that he did not intend to leave public life until the fall. That he would do so then, he said, was a matter which had long been understood between him and the president. Mr. Morton is planning to go abroad in June. The question of his successor has not been considered, although in the Middle West there have been reports that T. H. Newberry of Detroit, a millionaire who has been proffered and has accepted the assistant secretaryship of the navy, is destined to become its head upon Mr. Morton's retirement.

Mr. Morton took office as successor of William H. Moody, the present attorney general, on July 1, 1904. When appointed he was second vice president of the Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe Railroad, was ranked as one of the foremost railroad men of the United States and received a salary said to exceed $35,000 a year, as well as possessing a large private fortune. As a cabinet minister Mr. Morton has maintained a large establishment and has entertained lavishly. He made greater financial sacrifice to enter the cabinet than any man of recent years, save, perhaps, Elihu Root.

Mr. Morton never intended remaining permanently in public life, because his large private business interests would not permit it. His father was secretary of agricultrue under President Cleveland, and Mr. Morton had been a Democrat until the campaign of 1896. He had long been a close personal friend of President Roosevelt.

Although as a railroad officer Mr. Morton had admitted the giving of rebate rates, he proved one of the strongest supporters of government legislation of railroad rates. It was upon his frank admission of the facts that the interstate commerce commission obtained the issuance of an injunction against the Santa Fe system to prevent the giving of rebates.

Soon after the president in his last message to congress recommended railroad rate legislation, Mr. Morton publicly declared his opinion that rates should be regulated in case of protests of discrimination by a specially constituted court, and that legislation should also be enacted for the protection of the railroads themselves against special interests which have hitherto forced the giving of rebates.

The statement in which Mr. Morton outlined his views was somewhat divergent from the president's belief that the interstate commerce commission should have enlarged powers, but it provides for strict regulation nevertheless. The fact that Mr. Morton has admitted giving rebates, which practice, as indulged in by nearly all railroads, the president has set about to cure by legislation, has caused much talk about Mr. Morton's tenure of office.

The beginning of proceedings against the Santa Fe system, the retention of special counsel, Messrs. Judson and Harmon, to conduct the case, coupled with their impatience at the backwardness of the administration, caused more talk of Mr. Morton's connection with the alleged offenses. That any coldness existed between Mr. Morton and the president, however, was disproved by President Roosevelt's statement to him at the first cabinet meeting since Mr. Roosevelt's return. "I read your speeches on the railroad rate question, Mr. Morton, and approve of them. We are working to the same end although perhaps through different avenues."

As head of the navy department, Mr. Morton's administration has been unmarked by any important naval policy. Certain improvements have been made in navy yard administration, but the important question of the establishment of a legally organized general staff in the navy and bringing to an end the present deplorable friction between the bureaus has not been definitely acted upon.

COULD NOT AGREE

Jury In Koch Case So Reports and Is Discharged.

Had Been Deliberating on Verdict Since Noon on Saturday.

St. Paul, May 15.—A special to the Dispatch from Mankato, Minn., says: The jury in the Koch case reported to Judge Cray shortly before 9 o'clock today that it was unable to agree on a verdict. Judge Cray sent the jury back for further deliberation.

The jury was called into court at 11 o'clock and upon the announcement being made that no verdict had been agreed upon, Judge Cray discharged the jurymen from further consideration of the case. This is the second disagreement in the case against Dr. Koch.

When the jury came into court the first time today, W. H. Wilcox, foreman of the jury, stated to the court that the jury was divided on the facts in the case. He added that the jury stood seven to five, and was about to continue, when the court interrupted him by ordering him to make no further statement as to how the jury stood. The impression prevails that seven were for acquittal and five for conviction.

JOHN HAY IN FINE HEALTH

Alarmist Rumors Regarding His Condition Without Foundation.

Bad Nauheim, May 15.—Frank H. Mason, American consul general at Berlin, remains here as Secretary Hay's companion, relieving him of correspondence and other work, while Mrs. Hay is absent in Paris. Mr. Hay took his fifteenth bath today. The course includes six more, which, however, are not taken every day. The secretary, therefore, will remain here probably ten days longer. Mr. Hay, according to his present intention, will visit Berlin before leaving Germany.

New York, May 15.—A cable from Nauheim to the Herald says: All sorts of alarmist rumors have ben circulated respecting the health of John Hay. Some stated he would never return to work. I came here to find out at the fountain head what was the true state of things. Let me say at once that Mr. Hay is in very good health. He is stopping at the Hotel Bristol. Having been led to suppose I would find a sick man, I was pleasantly surprised to see a man brisk of manner, clear of eye and in excellent spirits.

They tell me the secretary of state was inclined to be fretful and irritated when he first arrived here. Indeed, after taking the baths he resolved to go away, but friends persuaded him to remain, knowing the condition of his mind merely caused by the first action of the baths upon the system.

Today Mr. Hay takes the fourth bath, and is going through the entire cure of twenty-one—three baths and a days' rest before the following three are taken. Such is the Bad Nauheim system.

"I am feeling quite well, thank you," said Mr. Hay. "I was tired—more tired than I knew—but now I'm all right again. The treatment here has done me a world of good. I shall be perfectly sound presently."

Mr. Hay is suffering from the effects of overwork and the after consequences of influenza.

There is not the slightest doubt that Mr. Hay will at the end of twelve days, when the cure is completed, leave the place in good health.

I asked Consul General Mason, a friend of Mr. Hay for the last thirty years, and who has been with him for some days sharing his apartments, whether he considered there was anything in the secretary of state's health to prevent his resuming the responsibilities of his office. Mr. Mason replied:

"No; Mr. Hay as spoken no word suggestive of relinquishing office. Why should he? On leaving here he will probably go to Paris and London and then back to America."

DETERMINED TO RESIGN

President of Structural Building Alliance Would Quit Posilion.

Buffalo, May 15.—More than 500 delegates were in attendance when the convention of the Structural Building Trades' Alliance of America was called to order today, representing $90,000 wage earners engaged in the building industry. Frank Buchanan of Chicago is president of the alliance. One of the most important matters to be considered at the meeting was the resignation of President Buchanan. At the last meeting of the board of governors of the alliance, held at Washington, Mr. Buchanan tendered his resignation. It was not accepted. He, however, is determined to resign.

During the convention the delegates will consider the many claims of unsettled jurisdiction between various crafts that have arisen.

The question of placing the Lewis and Clark centennial exposition on the unfair list also will be considered. It is alleged that the exposition authorities have discriminated against union labor in the erection of some of the buildings.

DEWEY IS BETTER.

Washington, May 15.—The condition of Admiral Dewey, who was taken ill Saturday in New York, and who returned to his home in this city yesterday, is reported today to be better.

AN ORGANIZED BAND OF THIEVES IN MADISON

Madison, Wis., May 15.—An organized band of thieves is believed to be operating in Madison. Last night safes were blown in the offices of A. E. & J. W. Frederickson, contractors, J. H. Snell, fruit dealer; W. Prick, contractor; J. H. Flndorff, planing mill.

The residence of Edward Hanson, president of the Wisconsin Wagon company, was also broken into, but nothing of value was taken at any place.

BOY LOSES LIFE IN FIRE AT KENOSHA, WIS.

Milwaukee, May 15.—An Evening Wisconsin special from Kenosha, Wis., says the Calkins block was destroyed by fire today, entailing a loss of $30,000, partly covered by insurance. John Smith, 16 years old, a painter's apprentice, lost his life. The postoffice was located in the building burned. One of the postoffice employes was overcome by smoke while trying to save supplies. The fire started from an explosion, which occurred in the basement while Smith was filling a bucket with paint.

STEAMER IS CONFISCATED.

Nagasaki, May 15.—The naval prize court at Sasebo has confiscated the British steamer Sylviana.

The Sylviana, a vessel of 4,187 tons, was captured on Feb. 20 last, bound for Vladivostok with Cardiff coal on board. The place of her capture was not reported at the time.

RURAL CARRIERS.

Washington, May 15.—(Special to The Herald.)—Edward M. Trove has been appointed regular, and Hans B. Nelson substitute rural carriers on Route No. 1, at Wolverton, Minn.

GREAT NAVAL BATTLE IS CERTAIN TO OCCUR IN VERY NEAR FUTURE

No Delay Is Necessary For Preparing Nebogatoff's Ships.

Fleets Joined Forces May 10, and Should Be Moving Northward.

St. Petersburg Paper Reports Battle But Has No Confirmation.

St. Petersburg, May 15.—A naval action within a few days is regarded as likely in well-informed naval circles. The Associated Press learns that Admiral Rojestvensky and Rear Admiral Nebogataff joined forces May 10. There is reason to believe the united fleet will proceed northward immediately. No delay was necessary for the purpose of coaling or cleaning Nebogatoff's ships as his division made a stop for this purpose before entering the Straits of Malacca.

Upon the strength of an untraceable rumor an evening paper here got an extra out announcing that a naval battle had commenced, but the admiralty has no confirmation of the report and discredits it.

STILL AT HON-KOHE BAY.

Rojestvensky Returns After Temporarily Leaving There.

Tokio, May 15, 2 p. m.—It is definitely known that Rear Admiral Rojestvensky, after temporarily leaving Hon-Kohe bay on May 8, re-entered the bay and continues at anchor there.

A high Japanese official sketched to the Associated Press the important movements of the Russian fleets in violation of neutrality. He said: "The governor of Indo-China officially reported that the Russian fleet had departed from Kamranh bay on April 22, but on April 23, there returned to the bay one cruiser, two torpedo boats and fifteen transports of the Russian fleet. On April 24 the entire Russian fleet reentered Kamranh bay and rode at anchor until April 26, when the majority of the warships sailed, leaving behind four converted cruisers and one torpedo boat destroyer. These vessels took on supplies of coal and provisions. On April 26, toward evening, these vessels stopped and examined the German steamer Loosok and the Norwegian steamer Providence, which passed outside of the bay. On April 27 more than thirty Russian vessels were anchored at Hon-Kohe, and at 5 o'clock in the afternoon they stopped and examined the British steamer Stettin, which was passing.

"According to the French official report Vice Admiral Rojestvensky promised Admiral De Jonquiers he would leave Hon-Kohe May 1. The Russian fleet was still at Hon-Kohe on May 8. The latest advices report the presence there on May 12 of seven warships, five cruisers, seven torpedo boat destroyers and two concerted cruisers.

"Since the advent of the Russian fleet in the East, Saigon has become a basis for military supplies for Vice Admiral Rojestvensky's fleet. The number of vessels furnishing supplies to the Russians is so great that those which were anchored at Saigon May 5 were countable by tens."

SKIRMISHING

Continues on Land, But No Serious Fighting.

Gunshu Pass, Manchuria, May 15.—Skirmishing continues in the Olouria mountain region on the Russian left, but the fighting is not serious.

Calm continues on the right. The Chinese, however, report that Field Marshal Oyama is directing large masses of troops from Fakoman toward Tounsiakou, where a concentration is proceeding and the river is being bridged by pontoons. The Liao river is full of junks which bring up stores and provisions.

About 80,000 Japanese reinforcements have arrived at the front. The Japanese cavalry in particular has been considerably strengthened.

Prisoners say that the Japanese armies are ready to advance when the word is given.

During a recent terrible dust storm which raged three days, the soldiers, tents and entrenchments suffered severely. The Russian troops are being fitted out with summer uniforms.

SAW RUSSIAN SHIPS.

Singapore, Straits Settlements, May 15.—Thirteen Russian warships were sighted May 12 off Cape Varella, about fifty miles north of Kamranh bay by the steamer Jason, which arrived here today.

EMBARGO ON COAL.

Tokio, May 15, noon.—The government has prohibited the exportation of coal to Saigon. The embargo is to continue as long as the Russian fleet is in Indo-Chinese waters.

JAP LAND IN KOREA.

New York, May 15.—A delayed dispatch from the Herald correspondent at Seoul, Korea, by way of Chefu, says it was rumored early last week in the Korean capital that the Japanese recently landed 30,000 troops at Gensan.

Large quantities of military stock have landed recently at Puksheng, to the north of Hamhung. These indications point, the correspondent asserts, to an advance being made shortly in Vladivostok.

General censorship, which of late has been more lax, is being rigidly enforced.

CONGRESSMEN PLAN JUNKET

Will Make Personal Inspection of the Irrigation Projects.

Washington, May 15.—(Special to The Herald.)—A congressional excursion party, composed of members of both house and senate committee on irrigation, will meet at Kansas City June 1 to commence a tour of Western states and territories for the purpose of making a personal inspection of a number of the large irrigation projects which the government is constructing.

The first stop will be made at El Paso, where a visit will be made to the Engle Dam site on the Rio Grande. The party will also take a sixty-mile drive into the mountains of Arizona to examine the construction work now well under way on the Roosevelt dam. A careful study will be made of conditions on the Colorado river, the visit extending into the famous Imperial valley, portions of which are several hundred feet below sea level. In California stops will be made at Riverside, Los Angeles, San Francisco, Redding and Sacramento.

On June 17, the third anniversary of the reclamation act, the congressional party will be at Hazen, Nevada, at which time and place the water will be turned upon 50,000 acres of land under the Truckee-Carson project, constructed by the government, and the first of the large irrigation projects to be put into operation. Leaving Nevada, short stops will be made in Ogden, Salt Lake, and at various points in Idaho, Washington, Oregon, Montana, Wyoming and Colorado. The party will break up at Denver July 4. Included in the party are the following:

Senators Newlands, Nevada; Fulton, Oregon; Simmons, North Carolina; Dubois, Idaho; and Warren, Wyoming. Representatives Mondell, Wyoming; Cooper, Wisconsin; Reeder, Kansas; Marshall, North Dakota; Jones, Washington, and Hitchcock, Nebraska. The majority of these gentlemen will be accompanied by their wives. In addition to the members of congress Judge J. I. Parker, representing the secretary of the interior and wife; C. J. Blanchard, representing the reclamation service, and wife; H. W. Hunter, Washington Post, and wife, and Arthur Ruhl, Collier's Weekly, will be of the party.

CROKER SATISFIED

That His Brother Died From Natural Causes.

Kansas City, May 15.—Richard Croker, Jr., arrived here today on the way to New York with the body of his brother, Herbert V. Croker, who was found dead on a Santa Fe train near Newton, Kan., on Friday morning.

After a talk at central station with Chief of Police Hayes, Mr. Croker said: "I am satisfied with the investigation the police have made of my brother's movements while in Kansas City. I have nothing to say about his death, except that I am sure he died from natural causes; that he was not the victim of foul play."

No further investigation of the case is to be made.

EXPLOSION OF CELLULOID INJURES MANY FIREMEN.

Vienna, May 15.—Fire broke out at noon today in the heart of the city and a force of firemen and police assembled on the spot. The firemen were just entering the burning building, when a heavy explosion of celluloid occurred, and between thirty-five and forty persons, including firemen, police, passers-by and employes were injured, some of them seriously.

FLOODS IN NEBRASKA.

Lincoln, Neb., May 15.—A special to the Star from Fremont, Neb., says the worst of the flood there came today, when a temporary dike was swept away by the Platte river. About half of the city is under water, but it is believed the worst has been reached. Union Pacific train service is today injured by the high water.

RUSSIAN AUTHORITIES THINK INTERIOR CRISIS HAS PASSED

St. Petersburg, May 15.—With the Russian May day happily passed without general disorders, the authorities breathe easier and are inclined to regard the danger of a really serious interior crisis as over. The turbulence will doubtless continue with sporadic disorders, but the plans of the Social Democrats and Social Revolutionists to produce disaffection among the troops and cordinate peasant and workmen movements for the creation of a state of general anarchy have signally failed. The only place whence acute disorder was reported yesterday was Kishineff, and that was in no sense attributable to the revolutionists. Apparently a crowd of soldiers off duty got out of hand, pillaged shops and even government buildings, and created a reign of terror among the inhabitants until surrounded and arrested by their comrades. It is now evident that while the Social Democrats and Social Revolutionists made a lot of noise, they had neither organization nor real leadership behind them. Even the Terrorists held aloof while waiting for bigger game. These two parties, which already have forfeited the sympathy of the major portion of the Liberals, now stand discredited by their failure with the working lower classes generally. The attempt to retrieve their lost prestige in St. Petersburg by proclaiming a general strike for today, also has broken down, the workmen refusing to follow their leadership. A period of calm is now likely to supervene, in which the intelligent elements of reform, which are not in sympathy with violence, will devote themselves as they are doing to discussing and elaborating ideas of the form which the promised popular representation should take, and to bringing rational pressure to bear on the government to meet their views.

Everything now depends on Vice Admiral Rojestvensky, but cool observers are more and more convinced that the reforms of the Russian state, like all their predecessors, will come from above and not from below. The people are not ripe for physical revolution. In the meantime reforms in all directions are being worked out, although the Liberals are too impatient to properly appreciate the great changes which are gradually being effected. The repeal of the law prohibiting Poles from buying land will be followed by a general amelioration of the condition of the Jews, touching particularly the extension of the right of residence on which the committee of ministers is now earnestly laboring.

GOTTSCHALK PLAN TO ESCAPE IS TOLD BY FELLOW PRISONER

St. Paul, May 15.—(Special to The Herald.)—Sheriff Anton Meisen has been informed of a plot hatched by William Williams and Edward Gottschalk to enable them to escape from the county jail.

The sheriff believes that only the removal of Gottschalk from the third floor to another floor after his sentence to death, prevented the men from attempting to put it into effect. The information came from Williams, who, on Sunday, took the sheriff to the corridor on the third floor, where the shower baths are located.

Williams showed the sheriff that one of the sections of the pipes connected with these baths had been loosened so that it could be removed with a couple of turns.

This section was about two feet in length, and, with a heavy iron nut at one end, would have formed a convenient weapon.

The scheme, Williams says, was for Gottschalk to secure the pipe and conceal it in his cell until a jailer came with food. Then he was to knock him senseless, steal his keys, lock him in the cell, release Williams and the two were to attempt to force their way out of the jail.

When Gottschalak was sentenced he was removed to another floor and Williams weakened and informed the sheriff of the plot. Gottschalk says the story is a "pipe dream" invented by Williams.

TWO FRENCH DEPUTIES ASK ABOUT NEUTRALITY.

Paris, May 15.—The chamber of deputies re-assembled today after the Easter holidays.

M. Vaillant, Socialist, presented an interpellation of the government upon the observance of neutrality in the far East and M. De Pressen, Socialist, interpellated the ininistry upon the neutrality and Morocco.

Premier Rouvier, in reply, said the government as recently explained had given explicit orders to the authorities in the Far East to strictly observe neutrality and this continued to be the situation. The interpellations were thereupon postponed and immediately announced that the government had abandoned its intention to issue a yellow book on the neutrality question.

AUTO-BOAT TOWED TO PORT.

Paris, May 15.—The ministry of marine has received a dispatch announcing that the torpedo boat destroyer Arbalete has arrived at Cagliari, Sardinia, towing the auto-boat Quand Meme, having on board her owner, the Duke Decazes, and all the crew of the racer.

TAX COLLECTOR IN CUSTODY.

San Francisco, May 15.—Edward J. Smith, the defaulting tax collector of this city, has arrived here in the custody of two detectives and has been landed safely at central police station, where he is now confined.

ROSEN IS ACCEPTABLE.

St. Petersburg, May 15, 7 p. m.—Count Cassini, the retiring Russian ambassador to the United States, has conveyed to Foreign Minister Lamsdorff and the emperor President Roosevelt's official assurance that Baron Rosen will be persona grata as the successor of Count Cassini at Washington.

MURDERER TO MAKE NOVEL CLAIM

Somerville, N. J., May 15.—That George H. Wood had a dual personality and that his better nature knows nothing of anything that may be done under the influence of the evil spell will be the defense made by Wood's attorney. Wood is put on trial here today for the murder of George Williams last winter. It is believed that this will be the first time this novel defense has been offered in a murder case in the history of criminology.

Williams, a storekeeper in the village of Watchung, N. J., was found shot to death in his sleigh a short distance from his home early last February. He had started from the village to drive a strange man to a farm house some distance away and suspicion at once rested upon the stranger. Wood was arrested and identified as the man who had accompanied Williams and was charged with the murder. At the time of his arrest he claimed that for three days his mind had been a blank and that he remembered nothing of that period.

HE VISITS DULUTH

Lieut.-Governor Ray W. Jones In City a Few Hours.

Says That He Will Very Likely Be Candidate For Governor.

Lieutenant Governor Ray W. Jones paid a flying visit to Duluth today, arriving in the city from St. Paul on the morning train and returning this afternoon at 3:45 o'clock over the Great Northern, on the Gopher State express. He said his business here at this time is of a strictly private nature, and he had little to say regarding politics, further than that the interview which appeared in the Minneapolis Journal last week, and also in The Herald, to the effect that he would very likely be a candidate for governor next election, was authentic, and that he gave it as it was published.

"As I said to the Journal," said Mr. Jones, "that there will doubtless be plenty of candidates for the office. All of them, I suppose, will want Hennepin county, but as soon as anybody tries to go in there and start the muss and discord we had last year, I may decide to step into the ring myself.

"I had a talk with Senator George R. Laybourn this morning, and he says that he has no aspirations for the lieutenant-governorship, although there is a report in Minneapolis that he has his eye on the position. I am sure I do not know how such a report became current, and the senator appears to be as much at sea on this point as anyone else.

"We all hope that there will be perfect harmony in the Republican ranks in Minnesota when the time for the election of another set of state officers arrives. It is our earnest prayer that there shall never again be such a party mix-up as we had when Governor J. A. Johnson came out the victor. I presume that Governor Johnson will be a candidate for re-election when the proper time comes. He is making a first-class executive, and his work appears to be giving general satisfaction. He is very popular all through the state."

"Will Bob Dunn ever come to the front again in state politics?" was asked. The lieutenant governor smiled.

"I very much prefer not to be quoted either way on that," he said.

"A good deal of hard work was done during the last session of the legislature. I think it is perfectly safe to say that never before in the history of Minnesota did a set of legislators put in such a period of hard and earnest work. They did their work well and faithfully. A good deal of labor was expended on the new code, which sometimes took up as much as sixteen or eighteen hours' a day of the legislators' time. They even gave attention to the task at home nights. The new code is a wonderful work. It is rather difficult to tell whether it will give entire satisfaction until we see it in actual operation."

The lieutenant governor lunched with E. H. Windom at the Kitchi Gammi club.

Staples and Miss Rose Reinhart. The reception committee is made up of Messrs. and Mesdames M. W. Turner, J. G. Vivian, W. B. Patton, Harry W. Cheadle, George Hargreaves, Mrs. D. S. Forgy and Mrs. J. E. Burgo. The floor committee will be Messrs. Hugh Burgo, Theodore Reinhart, Charles Armstead, S. F. Staples, A. S. Wakeman, Claude Hare, Ralph Moore, H. S. Newell, James eKily and Walter Mishler.

THURSDAY, AUG. 8,

Date Set By Governor For Gottschalk's Execution.

St. Paul, May 15.—(Special to The Herald.)—Edward Gottschalk, who pleaded guilty to the murder of Joseph Hartmann, his accomplice in the robbery and murder of Christian Schindeldecker, on Feb. 18 last, must hang on Tuesday, Aug. 8.

Governor Johnson today, after reviewing the records of the case, as certified to him by Judge Lewis, who sentenced Gottschalk last Thursday, fixed the date of execution, according to law, which prescribes that the governor shall select a day sixty days after the passing of sentence.

DEFENSE BEGINS IN THE HOCH TRIAL.

Chicago, May 15.—Testimony for the defense began today in the trial of Johann Hoch, charged with wife murder. The defense waived any opening address to the jury. Dr. Gustav Kolisher, an expert for the defense combatted the theories set forth by Dr. Lewke, Prof. Haines and other experts for the state in regard to the cause of the death of Mrs. Walcker-Hoch. Dr. Kolisher declared that had arsenical poisoning been the cause there would been noticeable corroding of the mucous membrane of the stomach.

Dr. Kolisher gave as his opinion that the arsenic found in the body of Mrs. Walcker-Hoch came there from the soil of the graveyard, which he said, like the earth of all cemeteries is saturated with the poison.

FRANCE TO SEND ENVOY TO WEDDING.

Berlin, May 15.—The Tageblatt today says: The surprising news comes to us from Paris that the French government has decided to send a special envoy to attend the wedding of the crown prince (Frederick William) to Duchess Cecilia of Mecklenburg-Schwerin, June 6. This has been determined upon in principle by the French cabinet.

CONGRESSMAN

Failed To "Move On" and Was Arrested.

St. Louis, Mo., May 15.—For failing to "move on" when ordered by a policeman, Congressman John T. Hunt was arrested and given a ride in the patrol wagon.

The congressman was standing on the corner talking politics with friends when an order to move on greeted him. Thinking that the officer had recognized him and was joking he paid no attention to the command.

The officer grabbed him by the arm and started toward the call box. Hunt attempted to explain, but the arm of the law was obstinate and Hunt was forced to accompany the officer to the station.

There explanations were made and Hunt was released. The policeman was rebuked.

FOR THE ORPHANAGE.

Annual Benefit By Knights of Columbus.

Duluth Council Knights of Columbus is now arranging for a benefit entertainment for St. James orphanage. The council had made the benefit for this very worthy charity an annual feature and its aid is proving very valuable in the support of the institution. To support the seventy or more children always found within its walls, is no small item but the public is called upon but very little to contribute to it.

The entertainment this year will be given in the Cathedral auditorium on the evening of June 1 and will consist of an illustrated lecture on Rome by Rev. H. Moynihan of the College of St. Thomas at St. Paul and a musical program by local talent. Rev. Moynihan was for five years a resident of the famous Italian city and will speak from personal observations.

LOOMIS' CHARGES

AN EARLY TRIAL

Will Be Asked By Attorneys for Dr. Koch.

Mankato, Minn., May 15.—(Special to The Herald.)—Gen. Childs has opposed the giving of bail in the Koch case. Judge Cray thought a new trial ought to be given if bail should not be allowed. Gen. Childs said he would present argument against bail, and the court will hear the argument on Monday next.

Dr. Koch must stay in jail for at least a week. The defense is of the opinion that the state, in opposing bail, is trying to inflict unnecessary hardship on Dr. Koch. The defense will, it says, press for an early trial for the coming June term at Mankato, or earlier. That question will come up on Monday next. There is no idea of any change of venue from Mankato.

At the devotional meeting at the Young Women's Christian association yesterday afternoon, Miss Taylor, state secretary, was the speaker. Miss Taylor who is making the annual visit to the local association will be here for the annual meeting which will be held tomorrow evening in the gymnasium.

Miss Taylor gave a most earnest and helpful talk yesterday afternoon. She took as her subject, "Our Idea of Christianity and Christ's Idea of Christianity." She said in part:

"If the question 'What is your idea of Christianity' were put to a certain number of people the answer would be various and would doubtless surprise us all. To many a certain intellectual life, doctrines and creeds would constitute their life in Christ; to others living up to a certain moral and ethical standard will comprise their idea of personal Christianity and to others it will simply mean a selfish desire to save their own souls and many more answers would probably be given. In this day when there are more creeds presented than ever before the question will come to all of us concerning this Christianity to which we are trying to live. And as Christ founded the kindom He must compel our attention and to Him we must turn and He will teach us more. We will find that the keynote of His teaching is service. The prophets of old taught an eye for an eye and a tooth for a tooth but Christ came and taught and showed by His life, the opposite of this harsh law. His whole ministry was one of service and it is the one thing that will solve all our own doubts. In time of trouble and doubt, nothing will be found so efficient as following Christ's example and entering upon a ministry or service for others. The trouble will grow less, the doubts will fade away in the peace of soul that will come in giving to others.

"We are all of us constantly exerting an influence with the lives with which we come in contact. Our influence is for good or evil, it cannot be neutral. And if we are Christian women, how careful we should be that the influence we have is one for good. Some one has said that there is no greater detriment to Christianity than un-Christ like Christians. And if we have opportunities given us greater than another we will be held to greater account."

Miss Taylor spoke further of the influence which the women prominent in Y. W. C. A. work exerted upon the lives with which they came in contact. The kindly helpful spirit of Mrs. Margret Sangster, Helen Miller Gould and Janet McCook as was shown at the convention recently held at Detroit was spoken of.

Miss Taylor will speak tomorrow evening at the annual meeting and it is greatly desired that a large number be present. In addition to the regular reports, six directors will be elected and new plans for the organization he considered. In speaking informally of the local work, yesterday Miss Taylor said:

"The growth has been marvelous, a condition which we find very often in the Northwest. The need of an association is felt and almost in a night it springs up into active and consistent work. The local association will in a short time need larger accomodations but the thing I most desire for it at present is another worker for the industrial girls. There are in Duluth 500 girls employed in the factories that are being reached in no way by the association. The thing we most want now is a worker trained in industrial work who will go among the girls and present the work and help them. This will need another worker and I hope greatly to secure it for the Duluth association."

THE ABDICATION OF THE PRINCE

By Edgar White.

(Copyright, 1905, by Daily Story Pub. Co.)

"He bowed his head and bent his knee
Upon the monarch's silken stool;
His pleading voice arose: 'O, Lord,
Be merciful to me, a fool!"

Behind the painted mask none cared to look, the jester himself least of all. With it on he dared to approach the princess. Unmasked and dressed as humankind, he consorted only with the serfs of the show. That is why he liked the mask best. Yaco—companion of mock lords and dukes—was better than Barney Fairleigh, derelict on the tide of life. She smiled at Yaco, but looked not toward Barney. It made all the difference in the world. Of course the play demanded the smiles, but nevertheless they came quite natural, and increased her beauty.

At one place he bowed so low before her that she placed a tiny foot upon his impossible hair, and this is the nearest he ever came to touching her. The thrill of that contact made him her slave. While he played the footstool, the jester's eyes modestly sought the floor. His dismissal came when the princess said:

"Yaco, away! Here comes his highness!"

The heir apparent, all gold and velvet, was tall and black-eyed and young. Yaco hated him with right good will. The princess loved him—in the play. In reality, she did not know. The prince loved her in the play and imagined he did in reality. Before the footlights he had a rival, whom the audience saw was unworthy of her. In natural life—the coast was clear. On the stage the prince made love furiously. Off of it he bided his time. Just before the curtain fell on the last act the fool sang a quaint love song over the happy ending of the romance between th prince and the princess. Then he slouched over to a saloon and took the taste of the song from his mouth. He mistrusted the prince off the stage, but was his loyal servant while on it.

To an outsider the situation would have seemd complex. To the fool it was crystal clear. The lady could not love him; she ought not love the prince; the prince did not know how to love her. All these between the dropping of the last curtain on one night and its ascent the next night.

"Stand back, thou fool!" the gallant prince said when he sought to kiss the lady's hand.

And the fool stood back.

But that was in the play, and as the heroine smiled indulgently he did not mind.

When the court of tinsel and painted castles had moved far to the westward there came a dreary day. The people who were expected to pay the customs that the throne might stand became sadly remiss in their obligations, and mercenary landlords and shopkeepers, unawed by royalty, clamored for their shekels. The prince went to the lady's room and proposed that they should flee ere morning dawned.

"But our friends; how will they get back home?" she asked.

"Walking's good; let 'em foot it."

The lady recoiled.

"And you, who brought them away out here, would desert them?"

He laughed after the style of the villain, which he was—off the stage.

"Why, my dear," he said, "the show's busted, and it's every man for himself. To save you from discomfort. I thought I'd take you with me."

"I'll not go a step!" she said, promptly and decidedly.

She saw he wasn't a hero after the curtain fell.

"Then——"

He advanced toward her, his sinister dark eyes telling of a darker purpose. Before he grasped her the fool entered, unprompted. The lady sprang to his side, and this time he did not bend his head for her tiny foot, but looked squarely into the bitter eyes of the prince who sought to destroy his mistress.

"The fool!" sneered the prince.

"Ay! And yet a man. Now, on your knees, my lord, and beg this lady's pardon!"

There was nothing like it in the lines he recited nightly and yet 'twas delivered with strange dramatic power. As the princess looked at the fool, who was a man, and at the courtier, who was not, her color came and went and the fine blue eyes glowed with something akin to pride.

"Get out of here!" roared the nobleman.

The fool had meekly obeyed far less lusty tones, and it seemed odd this menace did not move him now.

"You will not kneel? Then see——"

Down to this hour the prince could not give you a veracious account of how it all happened, but he recalls that when his eyes opened he was lying in the corner of the room and that there seemed to be funny little specks dancing mockingly in front of him. He did not want to die in the presence of the lady, so he told her he was truly repentant that business troubles had so engrossed him for the instant he had failed to realize he was of high degree, and had acted the knave; with her kind permission he would now withdraw and worry her no further.

That was the abdication of the prince.

When he was gone Yaco told the princess that out of his savings he had paid the bills of the retinue of the footlight kingdom and had furnished them tickets for their homeward journey. Would she deign to suffer a like consideration at his plebian hand?

"Yaco," said the princess, as she walked toward him and gave him a grateful little hand, "thou art the real prince."

"I would 'twere so, lady," said the jester, "for then I might dare to tell thee a long-cherished secret of mine."

She ran to her trunk and took out a gilt paper crown, which she placed upon his head.

"Now tell it, your highness."

The dancing blue eyes invited disclosures.

"Why—why—in truth I've heard them say it of enough, but just now my dull head fails to serve me, and I cannot rightly choose my words—but—but——"

She looked up into the bonnet face and understood.

"I know," she said, simply, "and I love you too, Yaco, my king."

Northwestern Switchman Has Miraculous Escape From Death.

Nenominee—J. H. Bell, a switchman on the Northwestern line, had a miraculous escape from death in the Sawyer-Goodman yards, on the Menominee river. He was riding through the switch yard near the Menominee river hospital, and was standing on the step attached to the front of the switch engine in place of a cowcatcher. In some way he slipped and fell in front of the engine. He escaped being killed, but was dragged some distance and battered and bruised. One fractured rib is the only broken bone.

Newberry—It is given out at Newberry that on and after May 15 the ordinance prohibiting animals running at large within the village limits will be strictly enforced. The poundmaster has orders to impound all animals found wandering upon the streets after that date. Herertofore it has been the policy to have the poundmaster act as a sort of herder and drive the cows out of town within certain hours, but this has always occasioned more or less confusion and dissatisfaction. A Newberry man has informed the council that he will furnish pasture to all who want it at the rate of $1.25 a month per head, and the city dads evidently consider that owners of stock who are not willing to pay this amount are not entitled to any leniency.

Iron Mountain—Rev. Frank P. Knowles of Iron Mountain, and Rev. L. W. Westphal of Iron River, have been successful in arranging for the organization of a Presbyterian church at Pentago, Iron county. As soon as an organization is perfected, it is understood that the money will be forthcoming for the erection of a neat place of worship. It will be the first church in the village.

Escanaba—The annual report of the chief of the Escanaba fire department shows that department No. 1 responded to seventy-two calls during the year and department No. 1 to sixty-three calls. The value of the buildings endangered was $31,040, and the value of their contents was $26,050. The insurance on the buildings was $12,600, and on the contents $7,800. Losses by fire during the year amounted to $2,762.62 for buildings and $2,181.10 for contents of buildings damaged. The plant of the Northwestern Cooperage and Lumber company, which was a total loss, was not included in the report, because the chief was unable to secure the data necessary.

SAD END OF MAYOR'S SON

Worked as Common Laborer and Perished In Mississippi

Memphis, Tenn., May 15.—After returning from his boarding house to the United States Snagboat Macomb to report for daily duties, Karl Venemann, a native of Holland, who has been identified as the son of the mayor of Muntendam, fell into the Mississippi river, and though diligent search was made, no trace of the body has been found. The police are puzzled whether it was suicide or accident. Venemann was employed as ordinary laborer and had been drinking. He was formerly employed by the city and worked in the streets as one of the sewer gang. It has been known for some time that he had seen better days, and on several occasions Mayor Williams has received communications from relatives in Holland to make efforts to persuade Venemann to return home.

Ten years ago, it is said Venemann left home, owing to domestic troubles. By the recent death of an uncle he was beneficiary in the will to the amount of 24,000 gulden, and inquiry at his boarding house revealed the fact that he had inquired for mail. A letter addressed to him and bearing his home postmark was delivered, and it is thought contained funds which he recently wrote for. The letter was not opened and will be kept until communication can be had with the father.

MONSTER SEA TURTLE

Brought Out of Briny Deep Off Baltimore.

Baltimore, Md., May 15.—A monster sea turtle, known as a leatherback, was brought up from Roaring Point, at the mouth of the Nanticoke river, Saturday morning. The turtle weighed between 600 and 700 pounds, was a fraction over six feet long from tip to tip of shell and had flippers over three feet from tip to tip.

A half-inch hawser was required to halter the big fellow to a post. During an effort to free itself the rope, which was fastened over the head and under the flippers, became so tight that it was found that the turtle would be chocked. The big reptile became entangled in an ordinary fish net spread off the mouth of the Nanticoke and practically wrecked it.

BRIDES TO BE WEEP

For Lovers Who Perished In the Harrisburg Wreck.

Stories of Pathos That Tell of Heroic Actions.

Philadelphia, Pa., May 15.—Two shattered dreams of love add their woe to the tales of death and horror forming the sad aftermath of the dynamite wreck of the Pennsylvania Cleveland-Cincinnati flyer at Harrisburg. A visit to his sweetheart, Jessie Ammerman of 1421 Fairmount avenue, which made him miss an earlier train and take the ill-fated Western express Wednesday night, caused the death of Charles Bryson, chauffeur for Clifford B. Harmon, president of Wood, Harmon & Co., a big real estate firm.

Bryson, under the name of Charles Brizoni, had been in the employ of Mr. Harmon for several years. Wednesday morning Harmon gave Bryson $50 and told him to take the 4:30 express for Cleveland, where he was to perfect himself in the workings of a new automobile that he might be capable of looking after a new $5,000 automobile being constructed for Harmon for a trip through Europe this summer. Bryson, instead of taking the 4:30 train, spent the afternoon and evening with Miss Ammerman, to whom he was engaged, and barely caught the Western express.

Mr. Harmon hurried to Harrisburg and finally found Bryson's body burned beyond recognition, but which he was able to identify by a ring and lock of hair.

That William H. Holmes, Jr., of 1859 North Thirteenth street, was a passenger on board the ill-fated Cleveland-Cincinnati express on Wednesday evening, and that his body is now among the unidentified dead at the morgue in Harrisburg is almost established.

Holmes, who was just 20 years old, was a salesman for a shoe manufacturing firm here. He returned to this city from a trip West Wednesday.

The young salesman's sweetheart, Miss Marguerite Patton, of 2037 North Twentieth street, was in Wilmington, Del., and he called her up on the phone, telling her he was in town and would return West that evening. She came on, and that night went to the station with the unfortunate young man.

Miss Patton, who is prostrated by the apparent misfortune to her lover, was seen today at her home. She said between her sobs that she went with Holmes to Broad Street station and knew positively that he was on the ill-fated train.

"He pleaded with the gateman," said Miss Patton, "to allow me to go inside of the gates as far as the sleeper. Permission was granted, and I stood talking with him until the train pulled out. He told me not to worry, that he would soon return. He stood on the steps of the sleeper until the train drew out of sight. That is the last I ever saw of him.

"I can't realize he is dead. He seemed so happy and jolly when he left me. He always wrote me a letter every day. I should have received one this morning. He must be dead or he would have written long before this. He left me to go to Mt. Vernon, Ohio."

At the home of the young man his mother is prostrated with grief. Last night she and H. L. Medlar went to Harrisburg to view the unidentified dead at the morgue, but they failed to discover any trace of young Holmes. They saw nothing but trunks, legs and arms, dismembered and charred parts of human bodies.

Miss Yetta Robinson, whose body was identified, was a niece of Mr. and Mrs. S. Goldman of this city, with whom she had been staying for four months. She was a remarkably handsome girl of 20, and lived at 700 Market street, Cleveland, Ohio. The members of the Goldman family accompanied her Wednesday night when she boarded the ill-fated express to go home. They were greatly worried when they heard of the wreck, and their worst fears were realized when they read that an unidentified girl, with long blonde hair, was among the victims. They hurried to Harrisburg and recognized the unidentified body of a young woman as that of their niece by the gold filling in her teeth, and also by a fragment of a night dress which she wore.

Both legs and arms had been severed, and the Goldmans intend to have the body brought here for burial to save her parents from further anguish by looking at the mangled remains.

Samuel Lando Acts Comedy-Drama In District Court.

Larceny Case Against Rose Ettinger Next For Trial.

The disposal of the criminal cases on the present term calendar of district court began this morning with the trial, before Judge Dibell, of Samuel Lando, a junk peddler, who was indicted for grand larceny in the second degree, under the name of Joseph Lonstoff.

It is charged that Lando, while occupying the same room with Gust Larson, a woodsman, in a lodging house at 525 West Superior street, the night of April 5, relieved the latter of an open-faced silver watch, valued at $10.

Lando denies the theft, and claims that Larson's watch, which was found on his person when searched at police headquarters, was purchased from a woodsman, on West First street, for $3.

Lando, who is an odd character in many ways, and who has been about the Head of the Lakes for several years in the peddling business, created something of a diversion in the court room this morning when called to the witness stand in his behalf. During his examination by Judge Potter, his counsel, Lando became so excitedly in earnest in telling his story that he stood up and, with a stream of words, emphasized by gesticulations, began telling the story of his life until the county attorney protested, and demanded that his talk be confined to answering the questions put to him.

Questioned as to his place of residence Lando said that he was a single man and "lived most anywhere." He said that on the morning after the watch is claimed to have been stolen he met a woodsman on First street who said:

"Little Sheeny, come here."

"That's me," continued Lando, "and I am not insulted by it. He wanted to sell me the watch for $10 but I only had $4.50 and I did not want to spend all my money."

Lando declared that he could not have stolen the timepiece for if he had he would not have been so foolish as to have carried it on his person from early in the morning until 1 o'clock in the afternoon, at which time he was arrested.

"I am an old man," said he, "a man who has an education, a little, just so I can speak eight or nine languages."

Questioned as to the personal appearance of the man from whom he bought the watch, Lando brought a smile by earnestly inquiring:

"Do you thing when I deal with a man I take his picture?"

"Let's go back to that room again," said Judge Potter, referring to further questioning about the lodging place where Lando and Larson slept.

Lando took the question literally and protested, "I don't want to go back there."

Cross-examined by County Attorney McClintock Lando admitted in a whisper that he had been convicted three times for drunkenness and once he pleaded guilty and served ten days because he bought a pair of rubbers from a boy who afterwards denied the sale because he was afraid his father would punish him.

The arguments were to be made this afternoon.

Lando is the person who was arraigned in municipal court and who was released under the promise that he would find the person of whom he bought the watch and appear again before the court a few days later. He did not appear, however, and was arrested the first time he came back to the city from Superior. He now claims he was on his way back to the court to make his excuses, when taken into custody.

The next case on the criminal calendar, which will be reached this afternoon, is that of the state against Rose Ettinger, the young woman charged with taking a quantity of jewelry and money from a lake avenue restaurant and lodging place, where she spent one night.

Judging from the young woman's talkative streak when arraigned a few days ago, she will keep her own counsel and the county attorney busy to keep her in check if she reaches the witness stand.

WILL DREDGE OUT SAND BAR

Zenith Dredge Company to Remove Obstruction at Ontonagon.

A contract with the Zenith Dredge company of Duluth for the dredging out of a sandbar at the mouth of the Ontonagon river, in Northern Michigan, was closed today at the office of Major Charles L. Potter, government engineer for this district. The contract calls for the removal of about 35,000 cubic yards of material at 20 cents per yard, and a dredge will leave for Ontonagon, Wednesday. The work is very urgent and dredging operations are to be pushed day and night, Sundays and holidays, until completed. The sandbar has been a great source of annoyance, by reason of its obstruction to the harbor at Ontonagon. Some of the lumber concerns at that point have had timber on the docks awaiting lake shipment for some time, owing to the fact that the lumber boats could not enter because of the shallow water.

In view of the urgency of the work, an additional appropriation of $5,000 was provided by congress as an emergency fund, besides the regular appropriation made for the improvement of the harbor.

Jury Hears Depositions.

In Judge Cant's room, the morning session of court in the malpractice case of David McTaggert against D. C. G. Shipman, was taken up with the depositions of several prominent surgeons of Chicago, including Drs. Nicholas Senn, John E. Owens, John D. Murphy and Walter H. Allport. Some time was taken up by the attorneys in objecting to the hypothetical conditions suggested by the physicians.

DEED OF A MANIAC

San Diego Man Kills Four and Wounded Two Persons.

Not Known That He Had Enmity Against Any of Them.

San Diego, Cal., May 15.—Four persons are dead and two others probably will die as a result of wounds inflicted by a man who is supposed to have been crazed by liquor. Those dead are:

WILLIAM STEWART.
HARRY DODDRIDGE.
H. W. CHASE.
W. P. ROBINSON.

The wounded: Mrs. Emma Stewart, and Mrs. H. Doddridge.

The series of tragedies was committed by W. P. Robinson, a house cleaner.

About 8 o'clock this morning, Robinson left his house at the corner of Fourth and A streets and going to the apartments in the same building occupied by Mrs. Emma Stewart, the landlady, and her son, William, rapped for admission. Mrs. Stewart, upon opening the door, was shot through the head by Robinson, who had leveled a rifle. Robinson then entered the room, where young Stewart, who had been seated at breakfast, was just rising from the table. Robinson attacked him at once, plunging a long knife into his body, close to the heart, the blade sinking deep into the chest, and again into the abdomen. At the second stab Stewart sank to the floor with blood pouring from his body in a stream.

Robinson then returned to his rooms, reloading his rifle and leaving his knife and apparently slipped a revolver into his pocket. Leaving his rooms again, he descended to the first floor, one portion of which is used as a carpenter shop by H. W. Chase. Chase probably saw Robinson enter, but paid no attention to him, for Robinson approached close to him, and suddenly throwing up his rifle, fired, the bullet entering Chase's breast, close to the heart. The third victim, apparently, died immediately.

From the carpenter shop Robinson proceeded on his bicycle down Fourth street for several blocks, through the business section of the city, with the rifle still in his hand. He went directly to the house of Doddridge, internal revenue collector, on the northeast corner of Second and H streets. He left his wheel at the curb and ran up the steps to the front door, carrying his revolver in one hand and his rifle in the other. In response to his ring, Harry Doddridge, son of W. H. Doddridge, and who is an engineer at the San Diego brewery, opened the door. Robinson immediately raised his revolver and at the crash young Doddridge sank to the floor with a bullet just above the heart. Death followed before medical aid could be summoned.

Mrs. Doddridge, the young man's mother, heard the shot, and perhaps witnessing the tragedy, ran screaming from the house. Robinson, hearing the screams, started through the house after the woman. As she was crossing the yard the crazy man caught sight of her and fired, the bullet striking her in the back. She fell headlong upon her face in the yard. W. H. Doddridge, who was in bed on the second floor when the commotion began, jumped or fell out of the window, breaking the bones of his right hand and probably sustaining internal injuries.

Robinson searched the house for more people. When he came to the room just vacated by Doddridge, he climbed upon the bed and, placing his revolver to his temple, fired a bullet which tore off the top of his head.

There is no known reason for thinking there had been ill-feeling between Robinson and any of his victims. Collector Doddridge says he never even saw or heard of Robinson before.

Work was commenced this morning on the audit of the city's books, by the firm of Marwick, Mitchell & Co. of New York.

Two men in the employ of the firm started on the comptroller's books this morning, and the other city officers will have their accounts checked over in turn.

DISTURBANCE AT SHIPYARD

Cossacks Break Up the Demonstration Without Difficulty.

St. Petersburg, May 15, 5:25 p. m.—There was a serious disturbance this afternoon at the Schlursburg Causeway on the left bank of the Neva above St. Petersburg. The Chevalier Guards have just left their barracks on Horse Guard boulevard at a gallop.

The Associated Press is informed by telephone that the men at the shipyards walked out in a body carrying red flags and singing revolutionary songs. So far as learned the troops have not fired on the workmen.

When a representative of the Associated Press arrived at the scene of the trouble, pickets were posted about the works, but all was quiet. The presence of the guards was unnecessary and they returned to their barracks, a detachment of Cossacks having broken up the demonstration and dispersed the workmen without difficulty.

Some American submarine boats are being constructed in the Newsky shipyard.

PRESIDENT GOMPERS

Will Go to Chicago to Confer on Teamsters Strike.

Washington, May 15.—As the result of correspondence, telegraphic and telephonic communication from Chicago, President Samuel Gompers of the American Federation of Labor will leave here today for Chicago, where he will arrive tomorrow afternoon and confer with President Shea and other officials of the Teamsters' union. He does not expect that it will be necessary to call a conference of the executive committee of the federation.

Mr. Gompers declared that his trip to Chicago was at the earnest solicitation of parties representing both sides to the controversy.

President Gompers is said to have issued a call today to all members of the American Federation of Labor, estimated at 2,000,000, to contribute to a strike benefit for the Chicago teamsters. Forty-two branches of the teamsters' union in New York have already made contributions, it is asserted. One thousand dollars donated by the New York drivers is reported as having been received today.

BISHOP AND TREASURER

Of United Brethern Hand In Their Resignations.

Topeka, May 15.—The most important incident in today's program of the United Brethren's confgerence, was the resignation of Bishop E. B. Keppadt, of Westerfield, Ohio. The bishop is now 70 years old and closing the twenty-fourth year of his present work. He was next to Bishop Castle in point of seniority.

The conference unanimously voted the retiring bishops half salary for the remainder of their lives. There will now have to be two bishops chosen and if the committee reports for six, then four will be required.

Following the resignation of Bishop Keppart, came that of Dr. William McKee of Dayton, for twenty-eight years the treasurer of the conference.

HOBO SAVED LIMITED TRAIN

By Pulling Bell Rope When He Saw the Danger.

Shelbyville, Ind., May 15.—By almost a miracle the west-bound limited passenger train, which comes through here about 6 o'clock in the evening, escaped derailment and the probable loss of hundreds of lives. The train was running at a high rate of speed when a terrific storm struck the train at right angle and the rain dashed against the engine in sheets, so that the engineer for the moment could not see the road in front of him. A tramp, who gave his name as George Colly, and stealing a ride on the blind baggage, believing his time had about arrived, scrambled to the opposite side of the car to a void falling timber and discovered at a distance in front that telegraph poles were falling across the track. He immediately caught the bell rope and gave it several hard pulls, and the engineer stopped the train within a few feet of the obstruction. The tramp and many of the passengers aided the train men in removing nine telegraph poles which had fallen across the track.

Realizing their narrow escape the passengers took a collection for Colly, and quite a sum was raised for him. The train men also gave him their thanks and placed him in the passenger coach to be taken to his destination.

STEEL PRINCE DONNER

And His Wife Sign Articles of Separation.

Pittsburg, Pa., May 15.—William H. Donner, the millionaire steel man residing in Shadyside, has signed articles of separation with his wife, Margaret Hall Donner, and she has gone to her home in Azalia, Indiana. He will have the custody of the three children. No divorce proceedings have been entered and none will be begun.

Attorney Leto Weil said: "It is true that Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Donner have entered into an agreement of separation and have separated. The reasons for the separation are purely personal."

The first statement regarding the separation contained the allegation that he had given his wife $100,000 in cash and agreed to pay her the sum of $5,000 annually. This Mrs. Donner denies. She says the amount is about $60,000. Mrs. Donner is now with her father on a farm at Azalia, Ind.

Mr. Donner was born and reared in Columbus, Ind., where he met his wife and where they were married about sixteen years ago. He first was engaged in business at Anderson, Ind., where he was interested in a tinplate mill. Later he came to Pittsburg and became interested in other tin plate mills, and became president of the Union Steel company, which was merged with the Sharon Steel company. These two were later sold to the United States Steel corporation for about $45,000,000, and it is said the profits were about $7,000,000, of which Mr. Donner received $2,000,000. He is said to be worth twice that amount now.

Mrs. Donner is an attractive woman, and was a favorite in the social circles in which she moved.

She comes from a highly respected Quaker family in Indiana and is a vocalist of no mean ability.

REPORT IS DUE

Council Likely to Order West Superior Street Paving.

New Application Will Be Made For Parlor Theater License.

A report from the board of public works to the council on the petition for the paving of West Superior street from Eighth avenue west to Twenty-sixth avenue west, is due this evening.

If the board reports favorably on the petition, the pavement will be ordered, and the preliminary work of collecting the assessment and advertising for bids will be at once commenced.

The bids cannot be called for until there is sufficient money in the revolving fund to pay for the contract, and this will not be until the preliminary assessment of 80 per cent is collected. The contract is not likely to be let before Aug. 1, and if this is the case, the work is not likely to be completed before next year.

Some action will also be taken this evening on the second application for the Parlor theater license. The theater has changed hands since the council refused it a license two weeks ago, and the new owner announces that he will operate it along respectable lines, and not allow anyone to solicit the sale of liquor.

If the aldermen believe the promises made by the new owner, they may reconsider their action of two weeks ago.

* * *

The council will probably ignore the suggestion of the board of fire commissioners that Park Point be made passable for fire engines, at the present time. To make either Lake avenue or Minnesota avenue passable for fire engines would mean paving them, and this the property owners would not be likely to stand for at the present time, especially since they are contemplating the expense of putting in water and sewer extensions.

Unless this suggestion of the board is acted upon, the other suggestion that platforms be built at different points along the beach to support fire equipment would be useless.

* * *

Other matters of routine business are due to come up this evening, including a number of sewer connections which have been ordered by the health department, and a grist of liquor and plumbers' licenses.

INDIANA WOMAN

Orders a Telephone Put on a Grave.

Columbus, O., May 15.—A local telephone company has received a request to furnish and set a telephone at the head of a grave in one of the cemeteries here. The woman who wants the instrument installed is a strong believer in Spiritualism, and holds frequent conversations with the departed relative. As she cannot talk with the dead unless she is at the grave, she conceived this plan which would relieve her of the necessity of making trips to the cemetery.

VIOLATES LAW

West End Building Being Constructed With Eight Inch Walls.

Contractor Anticipates Proposed Changes In Building Ordinance.

Although his building is almost completed and is now being roofed over, the owner of a West end flat structure faces the prospect of prosecution for a violation of the city building ordinance, and unless certain changes are made as recommended by the committee from the builder's exchange, he may be compelled to either tear down what he has built or strengthen it as directed by the city building inspector.

The owner in question took out a permit under the same head as the frame structure for a brick veneered flat building in the West end. This type of building comes under the same head as the frame tructures, and an eight inch outside wall is allowed under the ordinance, for a building two stories in height.

Instead of building a brick veneered structure, however, he is claimed to have put up a solid eight inch brick wall, making it an ordinary brick structure. Under the building ordinance as it now stands, any building two stories or more in height must have a sixteen inch wall in the basement and a twelve inch wall in the two upper stories.

The building is now almost completed and is being roofed in. Building Inspector Kelley learned of what was being done Saturday, and this morning he took the matter up with the owner. Just what arrangement will be arrived at, is not known.

The question of allowing an eight inch wall in a two story building is the principal point on which the contractors and builders are kicking for a change in the ordinance. They claim that an eight inch wall answers all the requirements of safety and that it can be built much more cheaply than a twelve inch wall.

The matter is now before a committee from the council, the building inspector and a committee from the builders' exchange. Some understanding will probably be reached and recommended to the council for passage a week from tonight.

Should the change be made the West end building would comply with all the requirements of the ordinance, but if the change is not made the owner may be compelled to make expensive alterations in the walls he has just completed.

Under the ordinance any person who refuses or neglects to comply with the ordinance is liable to a fine of not to exceed $100, and for each day that he refuses or neglects to comply with the ordinance, a separate case may be brought against him.

POKER PLAYERS

Seeking Stranger Instructed With the "Band."

Evansville, Ind., May 15.—Joe Reed, claiming to be a banker, of Pittsburg, Penn., is being sought by seven or eight young men who indulged in a game of poker with him.

Reed, a flashy dresser, about 28 years old, had been in the city for several days. This morning he was approached by several young gamblers, it is said, and asked to take a hand in poker. He consented, and at the noon hour the gang decided to adjourn for dinner.

Reed was intrusted with the "bank," amounting to about $400. He said he would step across the street for a few minutes to eat his dinner and return within fifteen minutes.

The "boys" waited an hour, and when he did not return, began a search, which thus far has proved futile.

West Duluth

WILL HAVE IT SOON

Progress Being Made Toward Building Ramsey Street Dock.

Ferry Service To Superior Can Then Be Inaugurated.

Progress is made in the matter of an appropriation for the city dock at West Duluth, at the foot of Ramsey street, and Alderman Getchell is pushing it. The permanent improvement fund, out of which the $2,000 appropriation is to come, is not at the highest point, but with the money still due, and the June settlement, the fund will be swelled to a considerable extent, and the money for the dock may be had at this time out of the sinking fund, which can afterwards be reimbursed from the permanent improvement fund. As soon as the length and other particulars about the dock are figured out, the advertising for bids for the building of the dock will take place, and before very long West Duluth will be fitted out.

Not only does West Duluth need a city dock for general purposes, but those who live in West Duluth and work in Superior, and those who live in Superior and work in Duluth—and there are many of each—are looking forward to the construction of the dock so that a ferry service between West Duluth and Superior may be established. It is understood that just as soon as a suitable landing is provided for on this side, such ferry service will be established. This will save much time for those engaged, as stated. At present it is quite a long ride down to Garfield avenue, across the interstate bridge, and anywhere in Superior, except to Connor's Point. A good many men are engaged in work in Superior, for instance, on the docks and such places, which makes the ride much longer. A ferry will give them more time to sleep in the morning and will help in many ways.

SERMONS ON MANHOOD.

Rev. Mooney Preaches First of a Series.

Rev. Roderick J. Mooney, rector of Holy Apostles church of West Duluth, preached yesterday on "The Man With the Withered Hand," the first of a series of sermons on the miracles performed on men by the Savior. The last of the series, some Sundays hence, will be on "Manhood," and will doubtless be of great interest, as Mr. Mooney is a rarely eloquent and forceful speaker. For his sermon of yesterday he took as a text parts of the tenth and thirteenth verses of the twelfth chapter of St. Matthew: "And behold there was a man which had his hand withered. And He said to the man, stretch forth thy hand." Mr. Mooney said in part:

"The restoration of the withered hand was one of the great miracles worked by our Blessed Lord on the Sabbath day, though St. Mark's gospel, 1-34, and the allusion in St. John's, 7-21-23, give reasonable grounds for the belief that other great works of a similar nature were wrought by Him on the Sabbath.

"The accentuation which Christ gave to the Sabbath, and its proper observance, must at once accost every intelligent student of the Bible. It was in the synagogue on the Sabbath day that this poor, afflicted one was when he received the blessing of a cure. Our towns and cities are full of people afflicted with withered hands; the person, for instance, able to see the weakness of others; able to point out the black spots in our city and national life; aye, even able to point out to us what to them seem to be the defects in the church, but who are lacking the moral sense or ability to offer a cure, to lend a hand, or utter a word of instruction. People whose hearts and lives are so calloused by sin, avarice and jealousy as not to be able to offer the word of sympathy to God's suffering ones. Churchmen and women who can see others going astray and are without the spiritual ability to offer a word of suggestion to the erring one. Withered hands; ah, yes, withered by sin and wrongdoing. Withered by neglect. Parents who have the pain of seeing their children going to destruction; employers who, because of their sordidness, are unable to lift their employes; employes who, because of their defects, disqualified from doing what is right for their employers. Rich people who, because of their self-conceit and luxurious living, are unable to hear the appeals of rare opportunities for the lifting up of suffering humanity, and the great army of people who, because of the love of pleasure, have withered their possibilities of usefulness in God's holy service.

"But to all comes the voice of the Lord, He wants us; He wants our service. What an honor! King Emanuel wants our services. He is ready and just as willing to cure withered hands now as of yore. He loudly appeals to us through the cries for help which come to us in tremendous chorus from the submerged tenth; from those in distress, from those weary of sin. Oh for the quickened faith which will enable us to hear the cry and to see the possibility of a cure.

"Jesus is able to save. Tonight let us make this a personal matter, so that each of us may be able to do our work in the great revival which is coming! Dear brother and dear sister, are your hands withered. If you find them to be so, go to the Lord in prayer; accept His appointed means of grace and get the blessing which shall equip you for valiant service for God and our country by being able to assist those who are your own dear friends, your own loved ones, the very bone of your bone and flesh of your flesh. The exigencies of the hour call for immediate action. Are you ready to respond?"

FAREWELL WEDNESDAY.

Father Feehely to Be Tendered Reception.

On Wednesday evening a farewell reception will be given to Rev. Father Feehely of St. James church, prior to his departure for his old home in Ireland, which will take place Thursday. The reception will be held at St. James hall. There will be a musical program and some speeches as well as some surprises for Father Feehely.

Rev. Father Feehely will leave West Duluth for about three months. He will visit his old home in Ireland during his absence and it is hoped the trip will give him back robust health. Feehely will be relieved by Rev. John F. Kelly of New York, who preached in St. James church yesterday at high mass. Father Kelly is considered a most eloquent man and was listened to yesterday with much pleasure. Father Feehely bade his congregation farewell yesterday morning, expressing the hope that they would remember the things he has been teaching them and that they would help Father Kelly with the work during the absence of the regular pastor.

ITS FIRST SHOOT.

Rod and Gun Club Smashes Lots of Birds.

The West Duluth Rod and Gun club held its initial shoot yesterday afternoon on its grounds at the foot of Sixty-first avenue west. The place is ideal for a shooting ground, being on a sand bar a little out from the shore and with plenty of room to spare. The club house was used during the intermittent rains by a good many women, they having gone down to see the first shoot held by the club. A good many visitors from the Central and Highland Gun clubs of the city were present to break a few birds over the trap and everybody seemed to enjoy the first affair.

Frank Jackson did the best shooting of the day. He made one perfect score at a bunch of ten birds and Ike Deatherage also did some fine work, making the best string shooting of the day. Other members of the club who shot were Capt. F. R. Holmberg, E. E. Moseman, William Morke, Richard Klug, S. A. Bishop, J. W. Nelson, Thomas Murphy, E. Webber, W. Holmberg and J. W. Schroeder.

ON SUBWAY BRIDGE.

Preparing to Put In Steel Structure.

A number of men are at work on the bridge over the Jenswold street subway making preparations for putting in a new steel bridge. The wooden bridge now spanning the subway was put in as a temporary structure and was to have been replaced by a steel bridge long ago. The steel bridge will be put in shortly.

Something should be done to provide a better roadway to West Duluth from the city. The subway affords meagre width for car tracks alone and when a team is going through at the same time as a car—and cars are slated to meet there—it requires a good deal of jockeying on the part of the driver to get through with safety.

WITH UNCLE SAM.

Fred Mayhew Belongs to Seventh Cavalry.

H. R. Patterson has received a letter from Fred C. Mayhew whose people live on Sixty-first avenue west near Wadana street. Fred writes that he has joined the United States army and is now in Troop K, Seventh cavalry, stationed at Fort Ogelthorpe, Georgia. The troop is ordered to the Philippines for service and will leave Fort Ogelthorpe June 15, sailing from San Francisco July 1.

Fred says in his letter to tell "the boys" that he expects to be home in December, 1907 in time for Christmas.

Social Session.

Division No. 4, A. O. H., will have a social session tomorrow night in Gilley's hall and quite a pretty program is being prepared. The principal speaker will be Rev. Father Kelly of New York who is here to relieve Father Feehely, who is about to go abroad. Miss Edith Cashin will give a vocal solo and Barbara Pecor and Lester Whalen, the noted child musicians, will play. Recitations will be given by Page Cashin and Kitty Cashin. Refreshments will be served by the women's auxiliary of the division.

Needs More Singers.

Miss Grayse Frances Turner met those who desire to join the proposed vested choir of Holy Apostles church, last Saturday evening at the church. Miss Turner believes she has procured some excellent material but she is in need of contraltos, tenors and bassos. These she finds to be scarce. A choir of about thirty voices is proposed.

HORSE RACE AT FOND DU LAC

Residents of Little Village Witness an Exciting Sprint.

Residents of Fond du Lac witnessed a horse race yesterday that furnished more excitement than has been seen in the little village for many months.

One of the citizens of the village owns a trotter which he considers about the fastest thing in horse flesh that ever stepped on four legs. It has been the ambition of his neighbors for the last two years, to get something to beat the trotter, but until yesterday their efforts met with poor success.

Yesterday a well known attorney who lives in Fond du Lac had the long wished for opportunity. He was keeping a fast trotter for a prominent Duluth mining man, and was out exercising the horse. By some peculiar chance the two men and the two horses came together at one end of the main street, and started for the other end. The attorney with his trotter won out by a neck and the good people of Fond du Lac were divided between their aversion to Sunday racing and joy over the victory of the attorney and his strange trotter.

KENNELLEY IS SIGNED

Former Duluth First Baseman Will Rejoin Old Team.

Kennelley, who played first base for Duluth in 1903, has been signed by Manager Van Praagh, and will again hold down his old position at the first corner of the diamond.

O'Dea, who has been playing first base since the team reported for practice, will shift over to second base, where he played with the Superior team last year. Head, who is at present playing second base, will be retained for the present at least, and this will give the team three candidates for the other two infield positions. Kennelley led the first basemen in the Northern league both in batting and fielding, in 1903, having a batting average of .298 and a fielding average of .980.

"Si" Bennett will also be given a trial in the outfield. "Si" signed with the Marshalltown, Iowa, team this spring and showed up well in spring practice, but injured his knee and was forced to lay off for a couple of weeks. He returned to Duluth and will be tried in the games against Hibbing today and tomorrow.

Cook, one of the pitchers, and Frank Schafer, the Duluth boy, who was tried out in the outfield, have not been found up to the mark and have been released. One or two more pitchers will go shortly after the season opens, and the infield will also be cut down.

CHILD FIGHTS BIG RAT.

Shows Courage and Sacrifice While Feeding Chickens.

Hanover, Pa., May 15.—A remarkable display of juvenile courage and sacrifice was made by Hallie, little daughter of L. A. Barnhart of near Hanover. She was feeding her flock of pet chickens when a huge rat darted from beneath the nearby corncrib and caught one of the chicks. The child pluckily grabbed the rat by one of its hind legs, and after having been bitten a dozen times she succeeded in strangling it. With blood streaming from her wounds the little girl carried the rescued chick and the slain rodent to her mother and told of the encounter.

Rigid System for Inspecting Immigrants at Ellis Island.

Inspector Dean and Matron Root Return From Deporting Charges.

Immigrant Inspector William H. Dean returned last evening from New York city, where he and Miss Frances Root of St. Luke's hospital took two women for deportation. Miss Root returned last evening also. The two women taken to New York were Gertrude Vehar, insane, and Fannie Sillaupaa, a pauper, and suffering from tuberculosis of the bones. The insane woman landed at New York last October and went to her sister at Sparta, Minn. Some time afterwards insanity developed, and the woman became violently afflicted. The matter was called to the attention of the immigrant inspector, and the deportation was the result. The other woman is in bad shape, the tuberculosis of the bones now affecting the knees and ankles. The insane woman is an Austrian, and was placed on the steamer Finland for deportation to Austria, while the other woman was put on the Oceanic, to be sent to Finland, where her home is. The insane woman created a great deal of trouble on the way East, and required the consatnt attention of both the inspector and the matron. She had to be kept under the influence of morphine most of the time in order that she might not create too much of a scene on the way to New York.

The party left here a week ago Sunday and arrived at Ellis island on the 9th. After turning over their charges, the inspector and the matron were shown the system followed by the immigrant commissioner at Ellis island in inspecting those coming into the country. The commissioner told Mr. Dean that on the day he was there, and on the previous day, 6,000 people had been admitted into the country on each day. And he expected, from what was in sight, that this average would keep up for two days more.

The commissioner mentioned that somebody from Duluth had sent him a cartoon from one of the local papers picturing immigrants coming through a mesh, with the attached statement that the mesh is too large. The commissioner claimed that this is not the case and that the mesh is not large by any means. The commissioner stated to Mr. Dean that undesirable people so far as health and financial standing is concerned cannot possibly get through New York. Officials first inspect them on the other side and they are then inspected at Ellis Island.

Each incoming vessel must be examined in quarantine at Ellis Island and there the immigrants are taken off in large barges. When they are landed from the barges they are passed through the main corridor of the immigration building and up two flights of stairs, a system of railings making them go single file. They have to pass muster with a squad of doctors, each detailed to look out for diseases of certain parts of the anatomy. The examination here is extremely rigid, even to the gait of the immigrants being critically inspected and each one being made to walk fast in order that any defect may be detected. Those who do not fully satisfy the examining physicians in this ordeal are put by themselves for further examination which is as exacting as a medical examination can be imagined. If any defect is found, the patient is immediately deported.

Those who pass the examination are then made to produce their money, which is changed into the American equivalent for them. This they must carry in their hands, together with their steamship check and the amount is examined and the destination learned. If it appears that they are likely to become public charges before long, they are immediately deported, but if they can show sufficient funds to keep them a reasonable length of time until they can secure work, they are passed. But still they do not get out of the hands of the officials. They are taken to the bureau where transportation is sold, and must there purchase their ticket for the place they are aiming for. Then they are taken to the barge office, where they buy the food necessary to maintain them until they arrive at their destination, getting this at cost. The officials then take them in groups to the trains which they are to take. In this way Uncle Sam takes care of the immigrants from the time they land until they are on their way to their destination. Bunco sharps have no chance until the immigrant is on the train.

Mr. Dean expresses the greatest admiration for the way Miss Root handled the insane patient all the way to New York.

"I have seen a good many matrons in similar positions," said he today, "but Miss Root far surpasses anybody else I ever saw handling a patient. Her care of that poor woman could not be improved upon and was remarked by other travelers on the trains we had to take. Even the unfortunate woman, almost utterly senseless as she was, could not bear to have Miss Root out of her sight at all. I canont say too much for the matron."

WOMEN IN CLEVELAND

Cannot Alight Backward From the Street Cars.

Cleveland, O., May 15.—Women who get off street cars backward will bother the Cleveland Electric railway no more, at least not on the new open cars. A device, sprung from the inventive minds of President Andrews and Manager Stanley, will bring not only consternation to femininity, but security to the railway company claim department.

The natural tendency of women on alighting, Andrews declares, is to grasp the hand rail with the right hand and thus face to the rear. On the new cars the only rail within reach will be the one on the seat, which can, of course, only be grasped with the left hand. It is believed that this simple arrangement will prevent many accidents in the future.

BUSINESS HONESTY.

If anything has resulted from the many investigations recently made of corruption in public office, it is that when we have been heaving bricks at venal senators, congressmen, state legislators, aldermen, public officials everywhere, we have been doing a worthy thing, perhaps, but we have not thrown our bricks far enough and reached those back of the corrupt public servants.

In other words, we have been aiming at the puppets; at the effect, and not at the cause; for back of political dishonesty almost every time is business dishonesty.

Legislators are not selling out the public because they enjoy it, or because they find it beneficial to their health and moral well-being. They are paid to do it, and paid well, let us hope.

Back of them are the business men of this country, great and small, but generally great. Many of them affect ignorance of what is being done, and in their capacity of director or simple stockholder let paid tools do the work of public corruption, while they dignifiedly affect not to know anything about it. They generally do, though, and if they don't they ought to.

If business methods were thoroughly honest there would be no field for the corrupt public servant, and he would have to go to work. His occupation would be gone. Therefore our dignified, pharasaical and innocent business magnate is the man to begin on. If he does not know that the officers of his corporation are tempting statesmen of high degree and low into betrayal of their trust, he ought to be told about it, and the only way he can escape the knowledge in these days of publicity is to shut himself off from public print or communion with his fellows.

Therefore, while not neglecting our corrupt public officials, a little missionary work among our business men would seem a proper field of public endeavor.

PAROCHIAL SCHOOLS.

The United States has just issued a report on the subject of parochial schools, in which some important and interesting facts appear. For instance, have taxpayers in Duluth ever considered what it would mean in school taxes if all the children now being taught in the parochial schools were to be thrown at once into the public schools? The government estimate is that the parochial schools now save in taxes to town, county and state from $20,000,000 to $25,000,000 every year. And at the same time, the parents of the children in attendance upon parochial schools are contributing just as largely toward the payment of public school taxes as the parents of the children that attend the public schools.

This sacrifice these parents make in the cause of religion. It is their belief that the children should receive religious instruction with their education, and to secure that result they are willing to pay taxes to support the public schools, and at the same time to maintain their own parochial schools by contributions through the local parish church or the payment of tuition. Largely the parochial schools are Roman Catholic, though there are many Lutheran schools conducted for the same reasons and run upon the same basis.

The education provided in these schools, upon the whole, appears to be keeping pace with that provided in the public schools. After receiving first communion, many pupils go from the parochial schools into the public schools, and there, when the first opportunity for comparison comes, they measure up favorably, and take about the same grade as pupils of a similar age who have started in the public schools.

The Catholic educational system is run upon about the same system as that in the public schools. Modern methods are followed in the Catholic schools. They have their own local school committees and inspectors, with what might be called critic teachers, and their normal schools for the training of instructors, with certificates of proficiency. They are also establishing model or practice schools. Their teachers' institutes are excellent. Organized in New York under the auspices of the Paulist fathers, these "Sisters' Institutes" have spread widely.

CRINOLINE.

We have closed our ears so far to the rumors of the return of crinoline, waiting to have them opened by the voice of authority. Reluctantly have we awaited what we feared would come, the official utterance of the dread news that the prodigious, preposterous and perplexing diving bell skirt is on the way back. It was rumored several years ago, and the rumor proved to be untrue. It was rumored a few weeks ago, and we all hoped for the best.

Now it has come. Straight from Paris, where the styles—some of them—come from. The awful decree has gone forth that the crinoline is coming back, and when the voice of authority makes a statement like this the only thing for suffering humanity to do is to meet its fate with what calmness and philosophy it may be able to muster.

It is useless to say that the hoopskirt is ugly, uncomfortable, disfiguring. Roget, in his inimitable work, the "Thesaurus," could have had nothing else in mind when he strung together these pearls of language: "Eye-sore, fright, spectre, monster, misshapen, unornamental, inartistic, unsightly, unseemly, uncomely, unshapely, unlovely, unbeauteous, graceless, ungainly, uncouth, frightful, hideous, odious, uncanny, forbidding, repellant, repulsive." But it is all useless. Fashion says "crinoline," and crinoline it will be.

But the prospect is fearsome. The streets will be all too narrow, the sidewalks too scanty, conveyances inadequate. Theaters will seat only half as many as they do now. Street car dividends will fall off because three women will take up a whole car. Automobiles will have to be of the freight or "seeing New York" fashion. When the new styles appear horses will take fright and man will take to the woods.

We must summon up all our courage and fortitude, and be prepared to face a hydra-headed social revolution.

Make way for the hoopskirt!

WE KNOW IT.

It is not likely that there has been any great hope that anything valuable to the common people would grow out of the hearings of the United States senate committee on interstate commerce over the railroad rate matter. If there was any such hope, surely it must have existed in circles that have not heard much about the character of the United States senate and its amiable relations with the railroads of the country.

Therefore there will be no great disappointment if the result is what the Washington correspondent of the Railway Age assures his railroad readers it is going to be. "It may be said," he remarks, reassuringly, "that the senate committee is practically of one mind already as to the general character of the report to be made. It will be against government rate-making, and the report will be backed up by arguments, legal and economic, to show that a grant of such power to a government commission would be dangerous, if not unconstitutional. The majority sentiment is opposed to any serious consideration of the so-called Esch-Townsend bill."

Again: "There is a growing sentiment among the members of the committee for a speedy termination of the hearing." Of course there is such a sentiment. What is the use of having a hearing when the members are already convinced, and like a prejudiced jury, wouldn't permit themselves to be disturbed in their conclusions by any amount of evidence or argument?

It must be difficult for the railroad officials who are gravely arguing their case before this biased court to keep straight faces. Their prospects of success are nearly as good as though they were arguing the interests of their railroads before their own boards of directors.

THE RAG PICKERS.

The rag and junk industry does not sound like a very important one, but it is important enough in Minnesota to be dignified by a chapter in the report of ex-Labor Commissioner John O'Donnell, recently issued, and to give a means of livelihood to about 7,500 people in this state.

Fifteen hundred men and women are engaged in collecting waste materials of all sorts and starting them on their way to usefulness, and averaging five to a family—a very small average for the class of people engaged—the total of 7,500 is reached. The uses to which their harvest is put are many and interesting. Old bones are used to whiten sugar, it seems, metals are worked over and sold as new, and rags make note paper, wrapping paper, and even cheap, shoddy clothing.

This country even imports rags. One of the inspectors was told by an agent of a large paper house that the rise in the price of linen paper was due partly to the falling off in the pilgrimages to Mecca. Peddlers in Arabia, it seems, follow the line of the pilgrimage, and pick up the fine linen garments that are cast aside. China also sends many rags, and the paper mills at Appleton, Wis., receive some from these sources.

In spite of the thousands of unsavory sources from which these rags come, it is curious to note that the most thorough search failed to find any evidence that disease resulted from them. The rag pickers were found, in robust health, associating closely with rags that would be regarded with the deepest suspicion by those not used to them. Nor does it appear that there are any regulations by the health authorities of this or other states designed to make the handling of rags sanitary, though correspondence with other countries developed the fact that in many places there are rules, more or less rigid, along this line.

The business is not particularly dignified, but its importance upon close inspection teaches us not to despise the day of small things.

Hotel Gossip.

"The fact that the area of desirable government land is rapidly becoming less and less makes the opening of the Flathead Indian reservation in Montana one of great interest to the homeseeker in the Northwest," said R. J. Ellison of Butte, Mont., at the St. Louis. "There are approximately 2,500,000 acres in the reservation which will be thrown open to settlement as soon as the survey and classification of lands have been made.

"The best land lies in the northern portion of the reservation and is part of the celebrated Flathead valley, which is believed to be one of the best agricultural and fruit raising sections in the Northwest. Excellent transportation facilities via Kalispell gives the settler a chance to see these lands without the expenditure of a large sum of money, and no doubt many who visit the Lewis & Clark exposition will stop off to see the reservation."

"The building of branch lines by the Northwestern transcontinental roads, and the fact that there is undoubtedly more railroad building to be done during the present year, will open a vast area of country that has heretofore been handicapped because of lack of transportation facilities," said H. A. Snow of Grand Forks at the McKay. "Take, for example, the Greenbush extension of the Great Northern in Minnesota. For years the farmers and merchants of that big section of the state were compelled to carry their products and supplies by team for distances of from forty to seventy miles. The new line affords railroad facilities, and a direct market with Duluth and the Twin Cities is assured. There is a considerable area of fertile land available for settlement tributary to the new line, and the region should settle up quickly, now that a railroad is a sure thing.

"Much the same is true of other sections in Minnesota, and of certain parts of the Dakotas. Several extensions are being built by different lines in both North and South Dakota, making the settlement and farming of remote sections of land an easy matter."

"It's been quite a long time since I was up in this country," said A. F. Fadner of Chicago at the St. Louis. "The last time, if I remember rightly, was four years ago next fall. Then I was up here on a hunting expedition, with three friends. We went up in the Cloquet river country, and had pretty good sport, although I didn't kill all the law allowed. We got some pretty fine specimens of the deer family, but I let the biggest one get away, owing, I guess, to his hypnotic eye.

"Ordinarily I am perfectly cool and collected in the woods while hunting, and have my wits about me as much when shooting at a deer as if a rabbit were the mark. I have never been affected with the buck fever, and do not think of getting excited until the shooting is all over. But the day I saw the big one things were different, someway. I never could quite understand it. It was merely one of those queer incidents that are always happening to men in the woods, even the old experienced ones, I suppose.

"I had been hunting all the morning with absolutely no success at all. I had not even seen the tail of a deer. There were quite a number of signs, but this did me little good, and I finally determined to strike over into a section of the country where I had never been. I reached the place after walking something over an hour and was rather disappointed on my arrival there, for deer signs were very scarce, indeed. I only ran across one fresh track in ten minutes walk, and that was a very small one. I decided to go on across the burning, however, a distance of about two miles, and see what there was to see on the other side. I found pretty good walking in an old deer trail that followed a fringe of brush, and led in the direction I desired to go.

"It was a bright fall morning, almost too warm for walking. The sun shone and there was scarcely a cloud in the sky. I had given up all thought of seeing anything to shoot at out there in the open, and was swinging along at a fast pace, with no regard to the noise I was making, and scarcely keeping any lookout for game. Then I saw my deer, or the deer I thought was going to be mine. He stood about 100 feet away, squarely facing me, though a little to the right of the trail. He was a big buck, and must have had at least ten prongs on each branch of his horns. He stood perfectly still, looking at me intently. Not a muscle quivered. It must have been the very force of that impelling gaze that made me look at him in the first place. When I saw him I immediately became as immovable as he was. It was the prettiest picture I ever saw in the woods. I admired his many fine points, recognized the fact that he was a prize worth bagging, and began to figure whether I had better plant my bullet squarely in the center of that broad breast, or land it between the eyes. But during this time I never thought of raising my gun. I held it in my hands as if it were a stick. Meantime he looked and I looked. Why I didn't haul up and shoot at once, the way I had always done before, I do not know to this day, unless he had me thoroughly hypnotised. We must have stared at each other in this manner, neither of us moving a muscle, for fully half a minute, before he gave a sudden snort, wheeled sharply on those splendid legs and made a dash for the protecting brush at his back. The spell was broken with his first movement, and I got three shots before he had disappeared in the brush, but I worked too hard to make up for lost time, and failed to even draw blood, where, if I had taken my time, one shot would probably have dropped him."

MINNESOTA OPINIONS.

Paynesville Press: The trust busters are ransacking every corner of the country—except the butcher shops and stockyards—for evidence against the beef trust. If they would visit any country stock yard and make a note of the prices being paid for choice cattle and then visit the village butcher shop and ask the price of beefsteak they would have all they ought to need. But that method seems to be too simple to be noticed by learned judges and and fifty-thousand-dollar attorneys.

Wadena Tribune: Mr. Samuel R. Van Sant at one time governor of Minnesota, has announced that he is not yet out of political life. Surprises such as this should be broken to the public more gently.

Austin Herald: A man is loyal to himself when he is loyal to his town. What counts for the upbuilding of a city counts for the betterment of each individual of the community. A dull, dying city means a declining valuation. Every dollar spent within a city means that much more wealth for that community. Every dollar sent out of town is a proportionate loss.

St. Cloud Journal-Press: The passage of the Horton capitol commission bill was the worst mistake of the legislature and on par with this the commission is giving Governor Johnson several openings to make political capital for himself—and he seems to be improving the opportunity.

A feller feels at certain times
Like hidin' in a hole;
That's when the winds of frigid climes
Blow from the frozen pole.
But when the springtime gently steals
And April flowers are out,
Why, that's the time a feller feels
Like goin 'after trout.

A feller feels on certain days
Like huntin' game, by jing!
That's when the whitish autumn haze
Hangs over everything.
But when the springtime breeze reveals
The violets about
Why, that's the time a feller feels
Like goin' after trout.

A feller feels when dog days come
Like snoozin' all day long;
The locusts soothe with droning hum,
The birds with drowsy song.
But when on churlish winters' heels,
That rude, ungracious lout,
The springtime comes, a feller feels
Like goin' after trout.

If Only Thou Art True.

If only a single rose is left,
Why should the summer pine?
A blade of grass in a rocky cleft;
A single star to shine.
Why should I sorrow if all be lost,
If only thou art mine?

If only a single bluebell gleams
Bright on the barren heath,
Still of that flower the summer dreams,
Not of his August wreath.
Why should I sorrow if thou art mine,
Love, beyond change and death?

If only once on a wintry day
The sun shines forth in the blue,
He gladdens the groves till they laugh as in May
And dream of the touch of the dew.
Why should I sorrow if all be false,
If only thou are true?

Notable Change of Time.

Philadelphia Record: Now the managers of the transcontinental railways insist that the Panama canal, when completed, will not be able to carry freights so as to injuriously compete with rail traffic. If this be correct, the past arrangement between the railroads and the Pacific Mail Steamship company for the maintenance of exorbitant freight rates on goods carried between Atlantic and Pacific ports was a more outrageous compact than the public had been led to suppose. It was a combination to rob by the extortion of unjust rates under the plea of necessity that did not exist.

There's the Rub.

Washington Post: The attorney general declares that congress has power to fix railway rates. This removes every obstacle except the discovery of the power that will induce congress to exercise its powers.

FLASHES OF FUN.

Philadelphia Ledger: Miss Giggles—Mr. Goodley took me to see the first performance of your play, and I enjoyed it so much.

De Riter—Delighted to hear you say so, Miss Giggles—Yes, we had a two-pound box of fine bon bons between us.

Cleveland Plain Dealer: "A New York man who wanted to get out of an insane asylum said he could sit down and write an editorial for any paper in New York."

"What did the judge do?"

"Remanded him back into custody."

Washington Star: "Is your son industrious?"

"It depends," answered Farmer Cornstalk. "He's liable to take his time doin' chores, but if you ever get him on second base with a good hitter up, he's liable to be about the busiest thing on earth."

Chicago Tribune: "Come, now, you're putting it too strong when you speak of old Slodgers as 'one of the greatest patriots in the country.'"

"No, I'm not. He is. He never tries to dodge his taxes."

Washington Star: "What a pity real detectives are not as brilliant as the story book detectives."

"It wouldn't work," answered the police officer. "They'd all resign from the force and write novels."

Cleveland Leader: Boggs—Clerks and office boys have a queer sense of humor.

Skaggs—Yes?

Boggs—Yesterday my office boy told me that Mr. Beans was waiting to see me. I remarked that I didn't know him, and the whole office force shouted with laughter. And there was no such person either!

Woman's Privileges.

Chicago Journal: She can wear her hat on one ear without being suspected of a convivial disposition.

She can say a thing one day and contradict it the next, and no one will call her a prevaricator.

She can shed tears on the slightest provocation, which will merely prove to people that she is tender-hearted and sympathetic.

She can be as inconsistent as an April sky, and her instability will be thought charming.

She can look openly into every mirror she passes without being accused of more than a natural feminine interest in her appearance.

She can spend a good deal of time considering her clothes and prinking up her person, and who shall say that it is not a proper attitude of her sex to be beautiful?

She can wheedle a man into almost anything by artful methods, and never lose her reputation for artless sincerity.

She can succumb to all the little weaknesses of womankind, such as coquettishness, jealousy, vanity, trickery, inconsistency and infantility, and all these things will be smiled at and condoned as enhancing her femininity.

Whereas if a man did any of these things he would be spelled in capital letters as frivolous, unstable, weak, vain, untruthful, foppish, hypocritical, flirtatious, mean, fake and silly.

O Femininity, what a curious thing thou art that thou shouldst be accounted as covering such a multitude of sins!

CHASING THE OCTOPUS.

Washington Post: A long time ago it was said of a king of France that he marched an army up the hill and then marched it down again, and there is a suspicion in the public mind that the department of justice is acting something like that in its warfare against the trusts. There is little doubt that the department is doing its best and is chasing the octopus with all the speed it is capable of; and doubtless that the king of France was a brave man and a stout captain and believed that the exigencies of the campaign required that he should occupy the hill when he did occupy it and vacate it when he did vacate it. But in warfare and in trust-busting only results count.

And what is the result? An advance in the cost of the beef to the consumer. Right under the noses of the grand jury the octopus levies its exactions on every American appetite and stomach. It not only monopolizes the meat market, but it fixes the price of dairy products, and today determines what you shall pay for fruits tomorrow. It has reached out and gathered in its coffers the illegitimate profits of the oleomargarine tax. All of us remember that beautiful peotry, pastoral and preposterous, with which a certain eloquent trans-Mississippi senator deluged his colleague when the oleomargarine law was considered. It was about the cow, her rights and privileges, and sluah like that. Well, the cow got her rights and her privileges and handed them over to the beef trust, and it cost each American citizen 10 or 15 cents in extortion, above fair profit, every time he bought a pound of creamery butter the past winter. There was millions in it—for the beef trust.

It is difficult to determine whether there was more outrage or humbug in the oleomargarine legislation, and it is even more difficult to conceive it possible that an administration that approved the oleomargarine bill can catch the coon in an octopus chase at all. There was an octopus that it had at its mercy and could have knocked on the head by employing the constitution of the United States as a bludgeon.

It is true that all the eminent octopus-chasers of the land were in favor of the oleomargarine enormity. Possibly there was never before such an olla-podrida of statesmanship as was behind that measure—the plutocrat and the hobo. Republicans, Democrats, Populists; in short, error from all points of the compass, and of all colors and conditions, were at the capitol urging the passage.

They got what they prayed, or rather preyed for. The beef trust got the spoil, and that is the way we chase the octopus in these United States of America. We march up the hill and then march down again.

The Parlor's Passing.

Augusta (Ga.) Chronicle: The Duluth Evening Herald, with, apparently, a touch of sadness in its tone, notes that the march of modernity has led to the passing of the parlor—the parlor of the nation's halcyon heyday and pristine pride of youth. The homes of the people, it maintains, contain no longer rooms that are not to be lived in, nor furniture that is not to be used, except on rare, and generally funereal occasions. The housewife of today no longer reveals with chastened satisfaction a dark and shrouded chamber, the cherished of her heart, and then, with a sigh, turns the key upon its musty dimness for the period, probably, of another year. An, hence, The Herald proclaims that the parlor has passed.

Unfortunately, we can not unreservedly agree with our Northwestern contemporary, for we know that some few relics of the dark ages, such as it refers to are still in existence. The slick horse-hair furniture, that requires acrobatic agility to utilize without sliding to the floor, and that in summer is sheated in calico or cotton, each piece having its own especial garment that is attached by strings at the corners to its mahogany limbs; the "what-not" in one angle of the room with its sea shells and presentation cups and saucers; the glass-covered clusters of wax fruit, more natural than life; and its guitar that, as Mark Twain says, "can play the Spanish Fandango by itself;" all of these are still to be found if one looks hastily and fair.

But that such chambers of horror are becoming rarer is undoubtedly true, and we unite with The Herald in rejoicing over the fact. Our trans-Atlantic cousins are fond of sneering at American aesthetic ism, but the nation is, beyond question, developing something of the kind, and as a result—lo, the parlors of the patriarchs are passing!

'Twas Ever Thus.

The favor of fortune to court,
Its dam and its sire,
Its work on the mire,
And matters of equal import.

His wife went along to the track, she did,
And picked out a winner to beat;
She chose a long shot
Right there on the spot,
Because its name sounded so sweet.

They both of them wagered a wad, they did
And harked to the cry of "They're off!"
Now sickly his smile,
His wife has a pile;
At science he's likely to scoff.

White Sox Lose Game In the Rain, to Calumet.

Small Crowd Welcomes Team Home From Copper Country.

Capt. Artie O'Dea and his nine valiant men and true trooped out to Athletic park yesterday afternoon, through the rain. An hour later they trooped back again through the rain.

That tells the whole tale. It was all the fault of a man named Grimes, who is employed by the Calumet Baseball club, and whose business it is to pitch baseballs across the plate. He attended strictly to business yesterday and the number of times the White Sox hit where the ball wasn't greatly exceeded the number of times they hit where it was. The result was that the Calumet men got four runs and the Duluth men got but two.

Mr. Grimes has some tricks that will bear watching. One of them is to soak the opposing batsman on the head with the ball and render him unconscious. Then he can throw as many strikes as he chooses across the plate. Three Duluth players were given this course of treatment yesterday, and it was eminently successful, although the patients recovered sufficiently to walk home.

The game was witnessed by but a small number of the faithful, who huddled up in the grand stand to keep out of the dampness that trickled down from the clouds, and by the time the bath comedy had run five innings both the spectators and the players were ready to call quits.

"Si" Bennett held down left field in place of Sam Menefee, while Lynch replaced Schafer in right field.

The White Sox had their only look in in the second inning. With McAleese on first, Bennett singled. Grimes got Head in the short ribs with an in shoot, and growing more accurate, caught Smith fairly on the head, "Si" scoring. Weiler went out on a long fly to Kaiser, but Head appeared to be sewed fast to the third bag. Grimes then hit McShane, and Artie O'Dea came to bat with the bases full. He was out on a long fly to Kaiser, however, and the inning closed.

Smith scored in the fourth, after reaching first on a fielder's choice. Weiler hit a hot one at Roth, the short stop, which was well handled, but Roth threw to the bleachers, allowing Smith to come home and Weiler to go to third, where he remained.

Smith worked along very nicely until the fifth and last inning. Thomas started all the trouble with a single. Roth forced him at second, Mutton singled, and Weiler fumbled Laughlins' drive, allowing Roth to score. Vorpagel was an easy out, but Ryan and Pell followed with clean singles, scoring Mutton and Laughlin. The score:

TANK BREAKS.

Trout at Miller Hotel Flop on the Floor.

A peculiar accident happened to the Miller hotel acquarium, about 11 o'clock last evening. The inside plate glass of the large tank containing some eighty-five trout and gold fish suddenly gave way with a loud report and the fish were precipitated to the floor with the flood of water. The night cashier hastily procured tubs of water and the fish were placed in them pending a repair of the tank.

This is said to be the second time that the glass in the tank has given way and the fish had their experience of flopping on the office floor. The collection of trout is said to be one of the finest in the state.

Mr. Rolleston is now in Southern California taking a rest.

WRITER MEETS HER VICTIM

Rita Encounters Lady Warwick, Whom She Recently Scored.

New York, May 15.—A London cable to the Herald says: There was a dramatic moment the other night at the new "Vagabonds' dinner" when Lady Warwick came face to face with Rita, the novelist, who outdoes even Marie Corelli in her denunciation of society's foibles and vices.

In her last book Rita has given a daring, very slightly veiled portrait of the beautiful countess.

Whether or not the cap fits, the countess evidently bears no malice, for after a close scrutiny of the face of the writer, who sat almost immeditely opposite her, she asked the hostess of the evening to present Rita, and with the radiant smile and charm for which she is noted expressed the pleasure it gave her to meet so distinguished a writer.

The Vagabonds who had read Rita's latest, in which all the secrets of the art of the masseuse are given away, including the terrible skinning process which a certain Lady Ripley is said to have undergone, looked on in amused astonishment, but only smiles and compliments were exchanged between the noted beauty, who, whatever process her complexion may have undergone, looked her loveliest, all in her favorite white, with a huge spray of diamonds flashing across the corsage of her white satin gown; a boa of fluffy white feathers around her shoulders and a Juliet net of gold on her fair hair.

Rita, who is petite and dark, with bright, clever eyes and brown hair, was all in red chiffon, with touches of black velvet.

Quite undismayed by adverse criticism is some quarters of her latest novel, Rita, who is known in private life as Mrs. Desmond Humphreys, is apparently thoroughly enjoying her visit to town. With her daughter, a pretty dark-eyed schoolgirl, she is stopping at the Lyceum club in Piccadilly, to which so many American women belong.

She retains a room in the club as her permanent London headquarters, and often runs up to town from her quiet seaside home at Parkstone, near Bournemouth. She is sometimes to be seen in Rotten Row, possibly taking notes for some future denunciation of the foibles of society. Certainly some of the faces to be seen this season suggest that in the writing of the art of make-up in "Queer Lady Judas" Rita has taken her faces from life, and for mere man, who has read her book in spite of the warning in the preface—or rather because of it—there are no secrets left about how complexions are made up.

GETS VERDICT FULL AMOUNT

Jury Awards K. A. McDonald $12,000 Against P. A. Smith.

In district court Saturdayafternoon a jury awarded Kenneth A. McDonald of this city a verdict of $12,058.84 against Patrick A. Smith of Rat Portage, the judgment representing Mr. McDonald's commission, with interest, accruing from the sale of some large tracts of pine timber in St. Louis and Itasca counties. The verdict was in the full amount of the claim.

The case was based on Mr. McDonald's claim that by virtue of an option on the timber lands, he was entitled to $10,000, that amount being in excess of the option price for which the lands were conveyed to Cook & O'Brien. Mr. McDonald claimed that he was made agent of the property through authority given by Mr. Smith, and that he had negotiated the sale of timber to John McAlpine of this city, Mr. Smith refusing to recognize the transaction.

TERRIFIC RACE WITH DEATH.

"Death was fast approaching," writes Ralph F. Fernandez, of Tampa, Fla., describing his fearful race with death, "as a result of liver trouble and heart disease, which had robbed me of sleep and of all interest in life. I had tried many different doctors and several medicines, but got no benefit, until I began to use Electric Bitters. So wonderful was their effect, that in three days I felt like a new man, and today I am cured of all my troubles." Guaranteed at all druggists; price 50c.

SIMON CLARK TO GO.

Will Be Present at Private Car Line Hearing.

Simon Clark of Duluth, representing the National Retail Grocers' association, which has 3,000 grocers' associations affiliated with it, will accompany E. M. Ferguson, president of the Western Fruit Jobbers' association, to Washington tomorrow to be present at the investigation of the senate committee into the private car line evil. The hearing was opened today at Washington, but the Armours will be heard first, so that it will be unnecessary for the Duluth men to be on hand the opening day. All the testimony of both sides will be taken before the committee adjourns. It is expected that the senate committee will report two bills, one for the elimination of the private car lines, and one for providing the interstate commerce commission with greater powers in the matter of rate regulation.

Wieland Gets Contract.

George A. Wieland of this city submitted the lowest bid for furnishing the rock for the rip-rap and pier covering at Ashland. His bid was 79 cents per ton on the basis of about 53,000 tons to be needed. The specifications also call for the removal of cross ties and driftwood. There were six bids opened for the work in the government engineer's office Saturday, the other five running from 96 cents to $1.29 per ton.

FIFTY HOUSES BURNED IN FIRE AT CHIÇAGO.

Chicago, May 15.—Fifty horses were killed in a fire early today in the stables of the Atlas Brewing company. The loss on the building was slight.

In the barn, a two-story brick structure, there were eighty horses, when a small blaze started in the rear of the building. The night watchman ran to the stable and untied as many of the horses as he could before the smoke drove him out. Thus thirty horses were saved.

DRAWBACK TO LAW

Free Textbook System Tends to Discourage Home Study.

Some Observations By County Superintendent of Schools Gilpin.

When the schools in the rural districts of the state open for their next term, all the school districts in St. Louis county, under the supervision of the county superintendent of schools, will be operating under the free text book system.

All but three or four of the rural districts have been operating under this system during the past year and the remaining few will be ready when the schools open for a new term.

County Superintendent of Schools S. W. Gilpin, who has been observing the working of the law providing that districts shall furnish new text books, says that while in many ways it is a very advantageous provision in that every pupil is provided with books whether able or not to purchase his or her own, and because it brings about a better uniformity in the class of text books used, there is one drawback to the free text book system.

In his travels about the districts in the rural communities he has observed that since the free text book plan has been adopted there are fewer school books seen in the homes than when the pupils owned their own. He notes a great falling off in the old custom of taking the school books home at night for the purpose of preparing the lessons for the next day.

"I cannot positively say," comments Mr. Gilpin, "that the free text book idea has checked this tendency for home study, but it has given me the impression that it has been discouraged to a certain extent. It seems that the pupils, since they have it impressed on their minds that they do not own the books, take less interest in taking them home nights to look over the studies for the next day. I believe, however, that the extent to which this practice of dropping the home study is carried depends largely on the sort of teacher presiding over the school. Even if the pupils no longer own their books, I believe it is possible that the teacher can, with a little good judgment and tact, do away with the feeling that the school house and the school books are inseparable.

"There are in the rural districts of St. Louis county many homes where the school books were practically the only books that got into a settler's domicile. Many families who have come into the new agricultural lands of the county and started out to develop the farms have felt that they could not afford to buy books except those that they were practically compelled to buy for their children's use in the district school. Those books were, naturally, somewhat cherished articles, doing service in the school during day and in the home at night, where frequently the whole family, with a few hours to spare during the long winter evenings would take an interest in poring over the school books. Many a farmer having had little or practically no common school education himself who has by reason of his children's school books in the home, been enabled to acquire knowledge, though it may not have been very large, by interesting himself in the lessons that the children were preparing for the next day.

"While occupying the office of county superintendent of schools I shall endeavor in every way that I can to impress on the rural school teachers the idea of encouraging this home study. I believe that text books furnished pupils should be taken good care of, but I also believe that they should reach the homes."

WORK LAGS, BUYS FOUNDRY

How Senator Clark Hastened Progress on Few Home.

New York, May 15.—Never before has a New Yorker bought a great business for the simple purpose of hurrying the building of a house in which to live. Senator Clark on Montana has done that. As far as statistics shows he is the first and only one to do it. Having bought it and having carried out his original purpose, he is now preparing to enlarge that business and will contuinue to control its stock and its policy.

This concern is known as the Bonnard-Henry Bronze company and is located in a big but antiquated structure running from 430 to 436 West Sixteenth street. Its business is the casting of bronze sculpture and bronze architectural designs. Nine-tenths of the people of New York do not know that there is such a place in the city, or if they do know, have not the slightest idea what a highly interesting affair it is.

When the plans for Senator Clark's Fifth avenue house were completed and accepted it was found that on the exterior and interior were to be placed more and finer bronez work than had ever been used to adorn any half dozen New York palaces. To make bronze castings requires a great deal of skill, a great deal of patience, a big force of men, a plant costing hundreds of thousands of dollars and lots of time. Architects told the Montana copper king that he must suffer great inconvenience and annoyance before the last bit of bronze work could be finished. Other work would be in ahead of his, other work would be sandwiched in between his. He must scatter his models around among half a dozen foundries and take his chanes with the rest of the world.

"But I won't," said the multimillionaire. "I will buy a bronze foundry myself. All my bronzes will be done by the same master hand."

So he purchased the Bonnard-Henry plant.

Eugene F. Aucaigne, managing director of Senator Clark's foundry, said: "Many of the celebrated statues which which have been modeled in France have been cast here in our foundry. The great equestrian statue of Washington modeled by Daniel C. French and Edward C. Potter, and presented to the city of Paris by the women of America, was made here. We are preparing to cast an equestrian statute of Gen. McClellan, the models of which have just arrived from Paris. The largest bronze doors which have ever been cast in this country are to be made here for the front entrance of the state capitol at Harrisburg, Pa. Each door is to be cast in one piece—a feat which I believe is unprecedented when you consider the size, 16 feet 3 inches by 11 feet 6 inches."

If the management of "The Burgomaster," which appeared at the Lyceum Saturday evening had made a charge of $1, instead of $1.50 admission, there would have been no complaint to make, but as it was the show was not worth the price asked. "The Burgomaster" is the most tuneful of all of the musical comedies, and can never be wholly a failure if the orchestra can play the music, and the singers can get through it in a fairly good way, but there was a decided weakness in individual ability in the company presenting it Saturday. Oscar Figman is a fairly good Burgomaster, and if one did not have recollections of Cawthorne in the same part, there might be no disappointment. Ruth White, who is exploited chiefly and is the advertised prima donna of the company, makes a stunning looking boy, but beyond that has little to recommend her. She sings her numbers execrably. Louise Brackett was generally pleasing, Charles Sharp made a good Doodle, and Oscar Ragland, as the Harlem Spider, was satisfactory.

Among nearly all of the people there seemed to be a belief that the libretto was of no interest to the audience, and in the songs of the principals it was almost impossible to understand the words.

"WHAT HAPPENED TO JONES."

"What Happened to Jones" is one of the funniest farces George Broadhurst ever produced and that is saying a great deal for Broadhurst has been prolific with comedy successes. When Harry Corson Clarke and his company produce it at the Metropolitan this evening the people of Duluth will see a performance in every way worthy of the clever farce. Mr. Clarke has produced many brilliant comedy successes but is said to fit into none better than this. He finds in the part of Jones a most congenial character and one that gives full scope to his fun making abilities. The members of the company will also all find good places.

"A LITTLE OUTCAST."

"A Little Outcast" will be at the Lyceum Tuesday evening. It is a melodrama said to be the cleanest type, having every essence of human interest and without doubt one of the best things of its kind produced. The piece is brim full of modern amazements and peculiarly fascinating scenes to attract theater-goers, but withal it is a love story, pure and simple, with every trait of loyalty and affection which could be lent to give the play a nobler intent and color. The story, which is a wide departure from the usual style of drama and is marked by a novelty in construction, is built upon the vicissitudes of a young clerk, and passes in swift action from stately mansions to crime infested haunts of New York.

PITTSBURG ORCHESTRA.

Emil Paur, who is appearing in the double capacity of director and soloist with the Pittsburg Orchestra which will be at the Lyceum next Monday, during its coming spring tour under the direction of London G. Charlton, made his first concert appearance in his native city, Czernowitz, Austria, at the age of 8. Three years later he was numbered among the violin pupils of Hellmesberger in Vienna, and while still very young he held an important position among the first violins of the Vienna Royal Opera house. Such a promising beginning would seem to presage a violinist's career, but young Paur had ambitions to become a conductor. His first opportunity for important work in this line may not have been so grewsome as it sounds—the direction of the first performance in Berlin of "The Seven Deadly Sins," an oratorio by Adelbert von Goldschmidt. Paur was very successful with this undertaking, and it led to first permanent engagement as an orchestra conductor at Cassel. Later he spent a year as a pupil and assistant conductor with von Buelow at Hanover, thense he was called to Manheim as director of the Court orchestra, a position he held for nine years, or until 1889, when the call of Nikisch from the Stadt theater to the Bostorr Symphony orchestra made an opening for Paur in Leipsic. In turn he again succeeded Nikisch in Boston, making his American debut in October, 1895. New York claimed Paur after Seidl's death in 1898, and in the fall of that year Paur made his first appearance as director of his own New York orchestra and of the Philharmonic orchestra of that city.

REID LEASES BIG MANSION

New American Ambassador Is to Occupy Dorchester House.

London, May 15.—Negotiations are virtually closed on behalf of the new ambassador, Whitelaw Reid, for leasing Dorchester house, Park Lane, from Captain Holford, at a rental of $30,000 a year. It is believed Mr. Reid intends to try to persuade the United States government to purchase it eventually as a permanent home for the embassy.

It is undoubtedly one of the largest, finest and most famous private houses in London, occupying a wonderfully commanding site. It is built in exact imitation of the best style of Italian palaces, the architect being Lewis Vulliamy, who planned the building in the form of a parallelogram about 105 feet wide by 134 feet in depth. It has a splendid hall and a magnificent white marble staircase. The reception rooms and library are also remarkably fine.

The house contains a valuable collection of pictures, chiefly by old masters.

It is estimated that Ambassador and Mrs. Reid will do great things in the way of entertaining, on which occasions the house will present a scene of great brilliance. The only disadvantage the place has is that the approach is somewhat awkward for carriages.

The young Shahcada of Afghanistan stayed there as a guest of the British government a few years ago, and so much was the house to his liking that the government experienced considerable difficulty in getting him to leave it, at which there was much public amusement. As a matter of fact, he and his large retinue stayed there about three weeks longer than had been arranged for, and their eventful departure was almost in the nature of ejectment. It was then found that the house had got into a disgustingly filthy condition owing to the unpleasant habits of its temporary Oriental tenants.

To lose is often merely not to find—as a business chance or bargain missed, and thus lost, through failure to read the ads.

Wisconsin Athletes Object to Pay For Food While Training.

Madison, Wis., May 15.—Professor C. S. Slichter, faculty supervisor of athletics at the University of Wisconsin, has given to members of the various athletic teams the ultimatum that they must pay for their board at the training table or get off the teams. Graduate Manager George F. Downer has a list of the amounts due on these accounts and he is strictly enforcing the ruling of the faculty supervisor.

The athletes are resisting the demand and declare that they were told when they were "attracted" to the university that if they were good enough to be taken to the training table they would not have to pay for their board, although it was confided to them that it was necessary to have it nominally understood that they were to pay a lower rate than the board cost the association, in order that charges of professionalism might not be made by other universities.

Some time ago, Perry, the football fullback and baseball star, was asked to pay up. He resented the demand and forthwith left the univerity to accept a place on a professional baseball team. Now other athletes declare they will leave if Professor Slichter and Manager Downer persist in presenting the bill and ultimatum.

One of these is "Dick" Remp, the center rush of the baseball eleven. He recently announced his determination to leave on account of the orders of Phil King, coach of the football team, that Remp revise his method of snapping back the ball and take King's method during the spring term and the summer vacation. However, he was induced to remain. Now he is confronted with a board bill which he declared he never had expected to pay.

The big Irish guard on the football team, "Jack" O'Brien, declares that his bill is altogether too large, even though he be inclined to settle. He is charged with $15 and declares he was at the training table only two weeks. It is not suspected that Manager Downer will relent in his demand for the money for it is certain Wisconsin is in danger of losing some strong athletes.

ILLINOIS CITY OFFICIAL

Not Allowed to Spend His Salary Recklessly.

Ashley, Ill., May 15.—George T. Guyman has been appointed city marshal and street commissioner of this city.

The city council has voted him a salary of 50 cents a month, to be paid under certain conditions stipulated and defined in his commission.

Guyman was qualified, filed his bonds, and is now wearing two stars—one designating him as the city marshal and the other as street commissioner.

The first condition affecting the payment of the dual officials' salary is that he do not patronize the saloons. This will probably be easy, as the saloons have all been closed by a vote of the citizens, led by Guyman, thus cutting off the revenue, and the presence of a large debt on the municipal lighting plant necessitates the cutting down of expenses.

Another condition imposed by the pair of commissions is that the new marshal-street-commissioner shall not, during his term of office, frequent any gambling house in the city or in any way spend money paid to him by the city, in supporting illegal institutions.

Drunkenness will not be tolerated, if it be shown that the intoxicants were purchased with moneys drawn from the city treasury.

The official is also pledged to contribute to all church fair and other charities undertaken by the citizens.

TELL IT NOT IN BOSTON.

Puritan Woman Makes Winning at Monte Carlo.

Paris, May 15.—The American colony is greatly amused by a distinguished Boston woman's story of her own fall from grace and from the prim traditions of her Puritan ancestry with the compensation, however, of a large haul at Monte Carlo.

She had determined that nothing could induce her to patronize the seductive tables, but on the train she was tormented by an interior voice calling "seventeen, seventeen." At the tables where she was watching the gambling, the voice was so insistent that she was impotent to resist.

She put a dollar on seventeen and won thirty-five. Again she played seventeen and again won. In ever-mounting fever she staked again and again till:

"I found to my horror I had won close to a thousand francs. People were gazing at me with supernatural dread. I became afraid, tore myself away, and left the terrible place the same afternoon. I now have a handsome silver service as a memorial of my only indulgence in gambling. But tell it not in Boston."

FLIRTING IS PROHIBITED

New Rule Is Adopted By the Chicago Board of Trade.

Chicago, May 15.—Pretty women who gather in the gallery of the Chicago board of trade to flirt with the bulls and the bears and the lambs will get no more responses from the impressionable young men in the pits. The room committee of the board took formal action on flirting Saturday, and announced that hereafter it will not be tolerated.

John H. Jones, chairman of the room committee, who had charge of the launching of the reform, is a confirmed bachelor. A telegraph operator was called into the directors' room, and his was made a test case.

When the gentlemen were all seated, the operator nervous and the committee members very, very solemn, Mr. Jones said:

"We have been informed, sir, that a note was thrown to you from the gallery this afternoon and that you picked up and read the note. We are informed that the message was written in a semi-humorous vein, and that it informed you of the fact that the two women were 'bucket-shoppers' and that they wished to carry away a souvenir so that they might remember the board.

"It is also charged that you smiled sweetly at the women and thereby indicated your willingness to provide the aforesaid souvenir. And then we understand you went to the corner where the hay samples are kept and made a small bale of hay, which you sent to the aforesaid charming women in the gallery. Are these charges true?"

The operator murmured that they were all true. His only defense was that the temptation was great.

It is not made clear whether the members of the committee had seen two women with their own eyes and therefore were able to measure the temptation. At any rate, the committee told the operator to go and flirt no more; that he would be barred from the floor if he ever transgressed again. Later the word was carried to members and operators alike that the ban of the board was on flirting forever more.

CONCERT HALL SINGER BRINGS DOWN ROBBER.

Chicago, May 15.—Eva Dakin, a concert hall singer, shot and killed one of two men who attacked her today and tried to rob her. The man she killed was recognized later by detectives as Charles Bennett. The woman was locked up at the police station, pending an investigation.

The police say witnesses have been found who corroborated the woman's story. Bennett's companion has not been found.

Miss Dakin said she had been singing at a South side concert hall, and was on her way home when Bennett and a companion attacked her, took her pocketbook, and then started to run away. She fired several shots at the retreating assailants, one bullet striking Bennett in the head.

ACCUSED OF BURNING HIS WIFE AND CHILD.

Chicago, May 15.—Accused by his 7-year-old stepdaughter of having killed his wife and infant child by pouring kerosene over their bed as they lay asleep and then setting fire to the bedclothing, Joseph Leiding was arrested yesterday. Leiding, who is a brass finisher by trade, denies the story of the child, and declares that his wife's dress caught on fire while she was using kerosene to start a fire in the kitchen stove. As soon as she saw her dress in flames she ran to the bedroom and tried to smother the fire in the bed clothes. She was unsuccessful, however, and both she and her baby were burned so badly that they died a few hours later.

HANS ACQUITTED.

Ainsworth, Neb., May 15.—The jury in the case of Fred M. Hans, a former railroad detective, charged with first degree murder for the killing of David O. Luce, returned a verdict of not guilty. At a former trial Hans was given a long sentence, but the case was remanded by the supreme court for retrial. Hans killed Luce while trying to arrest the latter on a horse stealing charge. Hans alleged that Luce attempted to kill him with a shotgun.

his editorial proclivities as well. He is editor of the Swedish Lutheran paper, Fosterlandet, published in Chicago and has added much to the tone of that journal. Should Mr. Nyvall accept the call to Duluth, he will take up his work about July 1.

Rev. S. C. Davis, pastor of the First Baptist church, presented his resignation to the congregation at yesterday morning's service. He has decided to accept one of two calls to other congregations which he has received. One is from the First Baptist church at Laramie, Wyoming, and the other is from the First Baptist church at La Junta, Col. He has not decided which to accept as yet.

Mr. Davis' resignation has not been acted upon yet by the congregation but the matter will come up for discussion after the prayer meeting next Thursday evening. Should the resignation be accepted it will become effective July 14, which will complete the pastor's term of three years, he coming here from Cheyenne, Wyo.

Should he leave the city, Mr. Davis will be missed as he is a forceful preacher and as a revivalist has had great effect for the betterment of the city and its people. His work among young men was particularly good.

MORGAN AND THE SULTAN

Smoke Cigars Together and the Financier Is Decorated.

New York, May 15.—J. Pierpont Morgan may not be the richest American, but when he goes to Europe he certainly gets more for his wealth than any other of his countrymen. That is, he meets more kings, emperors, sultans, presidents and grand moguls, and is decorated with more blue ribbons, badges, garters and and medals than all the rest of Wall street combined. No other American meets so many big dignitaries on so nearly equal a footing.

The great financier sailed for Europe on the Baltic March 1.

In England he spent little time, but headed straight for the Mediterranean, where his yacht Corsair awaited him. The first long stop made by the Morgan party was at Rome. There Mr. Morgan got a large medal. A few days later, April 19, Emanuel, the king of Italy, received the financier in private audience and thanked him heartily for the return of the Ascoli cope.

The king of Italy decorated Mr. Morgan with the greatest honor he can bestow on a foreigner—the great cordon of Saints Mauritius and Lazarus, which makes the recipient an official cousin of the king. All this happened a year ago.

As soon as he reached Italy this year honors of a personal kind began to pile on him, the others having been official. The pope now received him graciously, a medal was struck for him and King Emanuel gave a private audence to the man who he had made his cousin. Wherever he went in Italy or in Sicily the populace rose up en masse, and with hats off cried out "Welcome, Signor Morgan. Hail the good Signor Morgan."

Now comes the news that the sultan of Turkey has followed the example of his royal brother in Italy. A few weeks ago Mr. Morgan, on the deck of the Corsair, floated across the Bosporus and anchored in the shadow of the seven hills.

Next day the newspapers of the world told of how Abdul Hamid had extended the right hand of fellowship to J. Pierpont Morgan, had smoked black cigars with him, and before he left had decorated him with the grand cordon of the Osmanli order, and given to him a priceless vase from the imperial porcelain factory.

WOMAN DIES WITHOUT REVEALING IDENTITY.

Newburg, N. Y., May 15.—Mrs. Henrietta Robinson, aged 89, who was known as the veiled murderess, died at the Mattewan state hospital yesterday. She was convicted of the murder of Timothy Lanagan and Katherine Lubee in Troy, in 1853. During the trial she wore a heavy veil and said that rather than remove the veil she would have any verdict pronounced. At the close of the trial she drew the veil for an instant and smiling to the the jury, again drew it. She was sentenced to be hanged on June 19, 1853. Her sentence was afterward commuted. She was sent to the Auburn state hospital for the insane in 1853 and later transferred to Mattewan.

When a few days ago it was certain she must die, the physicians endeavored to have her reveal her identity, which she had kept hidden since her commitment. She refused, saying that she had kept the secret for fifty years and might as well let it die with her. Only once in her long confinement did she ever reveal anything about herself, and then she told a physician that she came from the English royal family.

MOROS KILL U. S. SOLDIERS

Fierce Fighting Going on on the Island of Jolo.

Manila, May 15.—Fierce fighting has been going on the past two weeks on the Island of Jolo between the outlaw Moro chief, Pala, with 600 well-armed followers and the troops under the personal command of Maj. Gen. Leonard Wood. Pala's losses thus far are 300 killed, while those of Gen. Wood are 7 killed and 19 wounded. Pala and his remaining followers, in accordance with Moro tradition, prefer death to capture.

Gen. Wood, with detachments from the Fourteenth cavalry, the Seventeenth, Twenty-second and Twenty-third infantry, and constabulary scouts, have driven Pala and his followers into a swamp, which has been surrounded.

Pala was a noted slave-trader and warrior when the Americans occupied the islands. Later he escaped with his followers to the Island of Pula Sekar, near Borneo. One of Pala's leaders deserted and took refuge in the British settlement at Lahad. Pala discovering his whereabouts, landed with a following and demanded of the British magistrate that he turn the deserter over to him. The demand was not complied with and Pala ordered a massacre. Twenty-five persons, including several British, were killed. Pala escaped to the Island of Jolo and organized the present uprising.

DIETZ WINS IN DRIVE CONTEST

Company Said to Have Paid Him $12,000 For Peace.

Ladysmith, Wis., May 15.—Four deputy United States marshals returned from Cameron dam Saturday, and it is rumored that a settlement has been reached between John F. Dietz, who has been holding the dam closed, and the Mississippi River Logging company, under which the truce prevails. It is reported that the logging company has agreed to pay Dietz $12,000 for the permission to run their 20,000,000 feet of pine logs through Cameron dam.

This rumor is supported by the report that men have been sent to the dam to drive the logs. A full crew of several score of men was sent to the dam at the time that the deputies went there—about two weeks ago—but these men have come back in squads during the past week. If a new crew has gone up, as reported, in the absence of deputies, it is apparent that the report of an amicable agreement is true.

The deputies who came through Ladysmith Saturday were the last of the large number that went through here for the dam two weeks ago.

A prominent logger who has been on the ground, estimates that the losses to the logging company will be $100,000 on damage to the logs, $60,000 expenses for deputies and driving crews, who have been at the Cameron dam for weeks at a time on various occasions, and $7,000 in excess of Dietz's offer last year—a total of $167,000. This is claimed to be a very conservative estimate, others placing the total loss and expense at at least $200,000.

A SERIOUS MISTAKE.

Don't make the serious mistake of neglecting the signs of a simple indigestion.

You must know that even such a seemingly unimportant matter as wind on your stomach is much more serious than it seems.

It is a gas, the result of the decay of the food you have eaten, which is actually lying inside you, rotting instead of digesting, away.

Now, of course, you can easily appreciate the horrible danger of allowing a mass of festering food to lie in your stomach and taint all the sources of your life and health.

For, after putrefaction (instead of digestion) has turned this food into a liquid (poisonous) form, your glands and other organs of assmilation suck it up and distribute it through your blood current into every part of your body.

You see these glands have no power of distinguishing the bad from the good in a case like that.

They suck up all the stuff they can get, and take it to the liver and kidneys, leaving it to these organs to purify the whole reeking mass.

And these delicate organs then overwork themselves trying to clean out the poison.

So then you have kidney or liver trouble.

And what they fail to get out, goes somewhere else, and poisons that part—may go to your brain and give you a headache, or to your big toe and give you a gout or rheumatism.

And so on.

All because, when you found a slight sign of indigestion, you didn't take the antidote—Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets.

You see, the whole proposition just simmers down to this.

It depends on yourself whether to be sick or well.

One way to be sure, never to have any of the troubles which always follow in the train of an attack of indigestion, is to—Diet.

Eat little. Eat nothing that you know gives you any distress during digestion.

Another way, not quite so strenuous, is to eat what your appetite craves for, and still your stomach's distress with Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets.

Perhaps a combination of both plans would give the best of all round results.

But the main thing to remember is this: Never neglect indigestion, for if you do, you will surely live to regret it.

Another important thing is that no medicine of any kind will do you the same good, for all forms of indigestion, from the simplest to the complicated, that Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets will.

They are not cathartic.

They are scientific.

Nine Nations

Now Use Liquozone. Won't You Try It -- Free?

Millions of people, of nine different nations, are constant users of Liquozone. Some are using it to get well; some to keep well. Some to cure germ diseases; some as a tonic. No medicine was ever so widely employed. These users are everywhere; your neighbors and friends are among them. And half the people you meet—wherever you are—know someone whom Liquozone has cured.

If you need help, please ask some of these users what Liquozone does. Don't blindly take medicine for what medicine cannot do. Drugs never kill germs. For your own sake, ask about Liquozone; then let us buy you a full-size bottle to try.

We Paid $100,000

For the American rights to Liquozone. We did this after testing the product for two years, through physicians and hospitals, after proving, in thousands of difficult cases, that Liquozone destroys the cause of any germ disease.

Liquozone has, for more than 20 years, been the constant subject of scientific and chemical research. It is not made by compounding drugs, nor with alcohol. Its virtues are derived solely from gas—largely oxygen gas—by a process requiring immense apparatus and 14 days' time. The result is a liquid that does what oxygen does. It is a nerve food and blood food—the most helpful thing in the world to you. Its effects are exhilarating, vitalizing, purifying. Yet it is a germicide so certain that we publish on every bottle an offer of $1,000 for a disease germ that it cannot kill. The reason is that germs are vegetables; and Liquozone—like excess of oxygen—is deadly to vegetal matter.

There lies the great value of Liquozone. It is the only way known to kill germs in the body without killing the tissue, too. Any drug that kills germs is a poison and it cannot be taken internally. Every physician knows that medicine is almost helpless in any germ disease.

Germ Diseases.

These are the known germ diseases. All that medicine can do for these troubles is to help Nature overcome the germs, and such results are indirect and uncertain. Liquozone attacks the germs wherever they are. And when the germs which cause a disease are destroyed, the disease must end, and forever. That is inevitable.

BANKER SNYDER RETURNS.

Alleged Embezzler of $125,000 In Iowa Again.

Cedar Rapids, Iowa, May 15.—E. E. Snyder, the Olin banker who disappeared in March last, returned to Iowa Saturday. Snyder was arrested in St. Louis charged with embezzling $125,000.

Snyder was the founder of a private bank at Olin, Iowa, a small town, twenty years ago. He had deposits of $143,000 when the bank failed to open last January, but announced that everything would be straightened out within a few days. Then it was discovered that the bank was totally wrecked, with liabilities of $143,000, which includes deposits and school funds. In March the grand jury indicated Snyder for alleged fradulent banking and embezzlement but he and his wife had disappeared in the meantime and could not be located.

His failure, it was said, was due to unwise investments, particularly in railroads.

SAVED BY DYNAMITE.

Sometimes, a flaming city is saved by dynamiting a space that the fire can't cross. Sometimes, a cough hangs on so long, you feel as if nothing but dynamite would cure it. Z. T. Coughs and Colds, which eased her cough, gave her sleep, and finally cured her." Strictly scientific cure for bronchitis and La Grippe. At all druggists, price 50c and $1.00; guaranteed. SAVE CHILDREN FROM TROUBLE

Insane Father In Indiana Attempts to Murder Four.

Hammond, Ind., May 15.—With the arrest here of Joseph Spenner, insane, charged with attempting to murder his four children, is revealed a pitiful tale of trouble and misfortune.

Within a year five of his children have died, his wife has become insane, and he, too, has lost his mind. His attempts upon the lives of his remaining children were explained by his statement that he wanted to save them the trouble of such an eventful life as he had been compelled to live.

Spenner always was a sober, hard working man. A year ago he lost his position in a packing house through a strike, and having a family of nine children, he was compelled to mortgage his home to get the necessaries of life. Sickness invaded the home, five of the children died within a short time, and the mortgage was foreclosed.

The trouble drove his wife insane, and a few weeks ago she was taken to an asylum.

Spenner, who had been acting queerly for several days, decided yesterday that the remaining children were better dead. He made all preparations to kill them, but was prevented by neighbors, who summoned the authorities and had the man arrested.

As a sequel to the train of unfortunate circumstances, Spenner was taken to the same asylum where his wife is confined, and the children, who had to be taken away from home by force, were sent to an orphans' home.

SENATOR IS TOUCHED.

Burton of Kansas Robbed on Chicago Car.

Chicago, May 15.—Senator J. Ralph Burton of Kansas arrived in Chicago Saturday at the Polk street station. With a satchel in each hand he boarded a Dearborn street car. Four men stood behind the senator on the rear platform. They appeared to be in a great state of mental unrest, and were arguing and gesticulating with one another, jostling the Kansan.

"Be calm," advised the senator. "Quiet yourselves, my friends. There is nothing to be excited about."

At Jackson boulevard the four left the car. They were calm and quiet, and Senator Burton was sure his advice has been of profit to them.

When the conductor asked for his fare a few minutes later and he discovered that his pocketbook was gone, other feelings possessed him. He expressed them.

The postoffice authorities later informed the senator that the wallet had been found in a mail box at State and Polk streets. Curernncy to the amount of $55 had been taken and two notes aggregating $1,700 had been left, together with his railroad passes.

ROW OVER BATHTUB

Causes Heated Discussion In Episcopal Convention.

Washington, May 15.—The placing of a $700 bath tub in the residence of the bishop of Washington for the use of the archbishop of Canterbury during his visit in Washington last year, and incidentally for the use of the bishop after the archbishop had departed, caused a heated discussion in the Episcopal convention here.

The controversy arose over the manner in which the funds for the bath tub had been appropriated. The cash was paid from the diocesan endowment fund by the board of trustees, a method which was criticized by W. H. Singleton, treasurer of the diocese.

Singleton said the money should have been paid to the treasury, and then out of the net income.

PREACHER OUT OF JOB.

His Sermon Too Frank and Causes Blushes.

Denver, Col., May 15.—Because his views on the origin of the sin in the garden of Eden were expounded in words too broad to please certain members of his congregation, Rev. G. A. W. Gage, pastor of the Simpson Methodist church, is now without a charge and the church is seeking a new minister.

When Mr. Gage spoke the words which stirred the church to its foundations six women quietly arose from their seats and walked out. The remainder of the congregation stayed, but it is said that many a woman's cheeks flushed, and that some of the men agrily realized that their wives and daughters had been subjected to an unpleasant ordeal.

The theme of the sermon was "The Church." Just what was said will probably never be set down.

"I should not think of repeating it," said five members of the official board. It is told in general terms, however, that in dealing with the modern problems of wine rooms, dance hall and other social evils, Mr. Gage traced the entire trouble back to the days of Adam and Eve.

Two days after the sermon had been delivered the official board met and the presiding elder agreed to send the preacher to another church.

SAYS BIRD MISSTATED

Cowan Replies to Statements Before Commerce Committee.

Fort Worth, Tex., May 15.—Sam H. Cowan of Fort Worth, general attorney of the Texas Cattle Raisers' association, and general attorney of the newly organized Stock Growers' association, gave out a reply to A. C. Bird, traffic manager of the Gould lines, who was before the senate committee on interstate commerce Saturday. He says in part:

"His statement that what I had said in arguments before the senate and house committees were "based largely, if not altogether, upon the allegations in the cattle case" is not true, as is shown by the committee reports. They were based partly on facts developed by the testimony in the case where I represented the interstate commerce commission in their investigation of the advances made in the rates on class goods and commodities to Texas from St. Louis and other Eastern and Northern points."

Continuing he says: "He tries to establish that cattle rates are too low by comparing the value of the commodity with the rate, yet he testified at Chicago that no such basis should control when he was trying to sustain a higher rate on cattle for a stock shipper a distance of 350 miles from Western Iowa to Chicago, than he gave to the packers for a car of dressed meat worth twice as much in the same train from Omaha, 500 miles.

"The rates on his road from Scott City to St. Louis on cattle, 700 miles, is 22½ cents, a fair rate; the rate from Dallas, 685 miles, over his road, is 42½ cents. They increased the Texas rate by combination. Kansas cattle are more valuable than Texas cattle, yet the Texas rate is 30 per cent higher, with a density of traffic per mile of line 40 per cent greater than from Texas. His rate from Sheridan Lake, Colo., is 23½ cents on cattle to Kansas City, 500 miles; from Fort Worth, 506 miles, 36½ cents; the Colorado cattle are the most valuable. Is our rate just, considering that in five years they have advanced rates, 25 cents. I say no man who so contends is a safe man to make rates for the public.

"If you will see his statement before the house committee, you will find he admits to having no basis of making rates."

Further along, Mr. Cowan says: "Now if the Fort Worth car of cattle is worth as he states $618, and a Kansas or Colorado load is worth 33 per cent more, which is the fact, I want him to tell somebody, since he charges 13 per cent of the Fort Worth cattle to haul them, why we are not entitled to having it done for the same per cent as the Kansas man, that is 8 per cent of their value for the same distance. Of course nobody bases rates on the value and never did. It is merely one circumstance and cuts little ice."

SIBLEY AND WRIGHT.

Beltrami County Commissioners Suspended By Governor.

St. Paul, May 15.—F. O. Sibley and Wesley Wright, the two county commissioners of Beltrami county whose acts have been the subject of an official investigation, were temporarily relieved of their duties Saturday night by Governor John A. Johnson.

The officials were suspended on the recommendation of Attorney General E. T. Young and as a result of information received from Bemidji that the county commissioners were about to elect a successor to H. J. Loud, former county attorney, who resigned in the midst of similar charges to those preferred against the two county commissioners.

FROM GIRLHOOD TO WOMANHOOD

Mothers Should Watch the Development of Their Daughters—Interesting Experiences of Misses Borman and Mills.

Every mother possesses information which is of vital interest to her young daughter.

Too often this is never imparted or is withheld until serious harm has resulted to the growing girl through her ignorance of nature's mysterious and wonderful laws and penalties.

Girls' over-sensitiveness and modesty often puzzle their mothers and baffle physicians, as they so often withhold their confidence from their mothers and conceal the symptoms which ought to be told to their physician at this critical period.

When a girl's thoughts become sluggish, with headache, dizziness or a disposition to sleep, pains in back or lower limbs, eyes dim, desire for solitude; when she is a mystery to herself and friends, her mother should come to her aid, and remember that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound will at this time prepare the system for the coming change, and start the menstrual period in a young girl's life without pain or irregularities.

Hundreds of letters from young girls and from mothers, expressing their gratitude for what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has accomplished for them, have been received by the Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., at Lynn, Mass.

Miss Mills has written the two following letters to Mrs. Pinkham, which will be read with interest:

Dear Mrs. Pinkham:— (First Letter.)
"I am but fifteen years of age, am depressed, have dizzy spells, chills, headache and backache, and as I have heard that you can give helpful advice to girls in my condition, I am writing you."—Myrtle Mills, Oquawka, Ill.

Dear Mrs. Pinkham:— (Second Letter.)
"It is with the feeling of utmost gratitude that I write to you to tell you what your valuable medicine has done for me. When I wrote you in regard to my condition I had consulted several doctors, but they failed to understand my case and I did not receive any benefit from their treatment. I followed your advice, and took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and am now healthy and well, and all the distressing symptoms which I had at that time have disappeared."—Myrtle Mills, Oquawka, Ill.

Miss Matilda Borman writes Mrs. Pinkham as follows:

Dear Mrs. Pinkham:—
"Before taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound my monthlies were irregular and painful, and I always had such dreadful headaches.

"But since taking the Compound my headaches have entirely left me, my monthlies are regular, and I am getting strong and well. I am telling all my girl friends what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done for me."—Matilda Borman, Farmington, Iowa.

If you know of any young girl who is sick and needs motherly advice, ask her to address Mrs. Pinkham at Lynn, Mass., and tell her every detail of her symptoms, and to keep nothing back. She will receive advice absolutely free, from a source that has no rival in the experience of woman's ills, and it will, if followed, put her on the right road to a strong, healthy and happy womanhood.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound holds the record for the greatest number of cures of female ills of any medicine that the world has ever known. Why don't you try it?

MISCREANTS WRECK TRAIN

Six Passengers Injured on Santa Fe Road Near Emporia.

Emporia, Kan., May 15.—Santa Fe passenger train No. 17 was ditched by train wreckers a mile east of Emporia yesterday. Six passengers were injured, two fatally.

The fatally injured: James Euger, aged 79, of the Soldiers' home, Leavenworth; Nate Hendricks, cattleman, Roswell, N. M.

This is the fourth attempt in the last four months to wreck passenger trains in the same place. Previous attempts were made by piling ties on the track and were without serious results. This wreck was caused by removing the spikes and fish plates of two rails on the inside of a curve. The engine on No. 17 passed over the loosed rails safely, but the mail car left the track and was dragged 100 yards along the embankment before the train was stopped. The next five cars, two express and baggage cars and smoker and two day coaches went into the ditch across the right side of the track and lodged in a zig-zig line. The end of the baggage car went up in the air high enough to ground the telegraph wires. Two Pullman sleepers remained on the rack. The passengers were asleep when the wreck occurred. A wrecking crew was forwarded at once. A window was broken in the over turned baggage car and of seven men in the car, six were found injured. Three men were seen Saturday night near the Howard branch section house. Yesterday morning the track wrench and claw bar were missing and they were found in a pool of water near the wreck.

MAY DAY RIOTS DID NOT MATERIALIZE.

St. Petersburg, May 15.—The widely heralded May day demonstrations in St. Petersburg were, a complete fiasco, and reports from Moscow and the provinces indicate that order reigned on Sunday generally throughout the entire extent of Russia. Minor disorders are reported at Reval (European Russia), Kishineff and one or two other places, but up to midnight no reports of serious tumults or loss of life have been received, and the attempt of the Social Democrats and Social Revolutionists to signalize May day by great anti-government demonstrations appear to have been a thorough failure.

MRS. JESSIE B. DAVIS DEAD

The Well Known Opera Singer Passes Away Suddenly.

Chicago, May 15.—Jessie Bartlett Davis, the well-known actress, died suddenly at her home in this city yesterday. The cause of her death was heart disease produced by nephritis. She was taken ill on Friday and on Saturday morning became unconscious, from which condition she never recovered. When her physicians first diagnosed her illness as nephritis on Friday, no alarming features were anticipated, but on Saturday she became worse and gradually declined until 5:30 last evening, when she died.

Mrs. Davis first became prominent when she was connected with the Bostonians. Her first role was in "Buttercup," in "Pinafore." After being connected with the Bostonians for ten years, Mrs. Davis severed her connection with that organization in 1901, when she entered vaudeville. Her last engagement in opera was with the Francis Wilson company in "Erminie" last year.

Mrs. Davis was the wife of Will J. Davis, the well-known theatrical manager of this city. She was 46 years old.

MALARIA A Poison Breathed into the System

The air arising from low, marshy places, damp cellars, stagnant ponds and pools and from decaying vegetable matter, as well as the gases from sewers, is loaded with germs of malarial poison. The water we drink, that has not been properly filtered and purified, is also full of these germs and microbes, and as we daily breathe and drink millions of these into the system, to be absorbed by the blood, the entire body begins to feel the effects of the poison. The most common form of Malaria is "chills and fever," but when the blood is thoroughly saturated with the poison it becomes so weak and polluted that abscesses, carbuncles, boils, sores, ulcers and other skin diseases result. Malaria also affects the liver, kidneys, bowels and stomach, producing a chronic state of biliousness that often results in jaundice or some malignant fever. In cases of Malaria the blood must be purified before the body can regain its natural health. S. S. S. contains purifying and tonic properties possessed by no other blood medicine, and is the ideal remedy for the treatment of Malaria. It destroys the germs of the disease and builds up the weakened, polluted circulation. It enters into the blood and forces out every particle of poison and waste matter and adds strength and activity to it. S. S. S. improves the appetite and digestion, tones up the entire system by its alterative and purifying action, and Malaria, with all its bad effects, is permanently driven from the system. Book on the blood and any medical advice, without charge. THE SWIFT SPECIFIC CO., ATLANTA, GA.

RESOLVED TO DIE

In the Workhouse Is the St. Louis "Man Who Was."

For Thirty Three Years He Has Lived With Felons.

St. Louis, Mo., May 15.—Kipling once wrote a story of the "Man Who Was." Critics say his fame rests on that story. Kipling's "Man Who Was" was about as old as "Old Henry"—58 years. After infinite torture, after infinite peril, he had journeyed across the frozen steppes of Siberia, seeking the one thing which the Man Who Was at the workhousce refuses to take—freedom. You remember now Limmason, the man who was of the novel, broke into his old mess, an emaciated madman, who died on the threshold of freedom? He had suffered exile because he had refused to apologize to a Russian colonel before Sebastopol. Because of his pride he was exiled. He became the Man Who Was.

This much is known of Hendy Lusky, the Man Who Was at the St. Louis workhouse. When the tide of his strength set strong in his young veins he was fined $10. It is believed that a magistrate of the old regime known as the "Terrible Judge," inflicted the fine. The offense was trivial, perhaps, the use of loud words on the street.

Henry Lusky was a brewer. He worked beside Adam Lemp. He could have paid the fine instantly. Now comes the remarkable parallel between the Man Who Was of fiction and the Man Who Was at the St. Louis workhouse. Lusky refused to pay that fine. He refused to ask that it should be remitted. Either act he believed would be an apology.

So for thirty-three years he has lived with felons. He has lived among them, not of them. In less than a month thirty-three years ago Henry Lusky's sentence expired. It was spring. The balmy air which blew clean and with some of the winter's cold in it breathed of liberty. It told its tale of the coming of spring. It spoke of hope. To the prisoners it whispered of delights to come, the joy of liberty, the pleasure of freedom. It cooled many a fevered brow in the quarry where men mined stones with gyves on their feet. In sheltered spots in the workhouse yard green grass sprouted. Buds graced the apple trees. Life's summer time had begun. Why, a released prisoner would not have to work. The river would supply his fish. The ground was almost war menough to sleep on.

In the prison yard the whisper ran from bearded lips to boys too young to grow a hair upon their face: "Henry goes out today." Some prisoners watched him unkindly. He had not associated with them. They had seen him do all his prison tasks silently and well. Guards had used him as a criterion. They spurred unwilling prisoners to work like Henry. Why don't you toil as he does" they said. So while all the guards were glad that the day of Henry's freedom had arrived some prisoners envied him.

"I ain't a-goin'," Henry told some prisoners who offered congratulations. "Gammon," they said, for in those days the term "hot air" was unknown. The prison bell chimed the hour. "Ten o'clock." The prisoners said, "Henry will leave now."

"Come on, Henry, your time is up," called the guard. Lusky never replied. He was breaking stone. His hammer fell like that of an auctioneer. "Going, going, going," it said time after time. Noon came and Henry Lusky marched to the prisoners' table and ate the prisoners' fare. Shadows lengthened in the prison quarry and he still was breaking stone.

That night, the night when he might have been a free man, he slept in a prison cell. Next day, the day after, day after day, Henry Lusky lived a prisoner's life. Free, he spurned freedom. In his brain the thought reiterated itself: "If I go it will be an apology to the judge." The spring grew old. The summer waned. Winter came. Then a new spring. Still Henry Lusky refused to leave the workhouse. He never told the superintendents his reason for remaining. They were content to allow him to stay. His work thrice paid for the food he ate.

In time he was called "Old Henry." He was taken from the workhouse quarry and made a "trusty"—that is, a prisoner who can be sent beyond the the walls, one who it is known will not leave the workhouse. He would do any kind of work, no matter how hard, how repugnant, within the walls. He would not leave the prison gate.

New guards, new superintendents came. "Old Henry's" very name was forgotten. He became the Man Who Was. Supt. Scully doesn't know his last name. It is probable that the other superintendents who preceded him did not, and never knew "Old Henry's" last name. Guard Patrick Ryan, who has been at the workhouse for years, alone knows "Old Henry's" name and a fragment of his history. Ryan knows that the man was a brewer and worked with Adam Lemp.

Lemp died recently worth $4,500,000. The Man Who Was had the same chance. But for his pride he might have earned a fortune and a name in St. Louis. Rather than pay $10, rather than acknowledge that he had acted wrongly, this workhouse enigma has let pass the opportunity of a lifetime. Neither the guards nor "Old Henry" know the full measure of his strength. He has lived outdoors during most of the thirty-three years of his workhouse days. What was the use to lock up a man who refused to leave.

In winter he sleeps on a cot in a cool place. In summer he makes his bed in a wheelbarrow, which he moves from place to place to catch the river breeze.

Pounding rock has given him great gnarled biceps. Working in the garden has gifted him with rare agility. Walking over the yard swinging a scythe has increased his reach and added grace to a not ungainly figure. There is hardly a man of any age in the workhouse his equal in personal prowess.

Like some monarch of the jungle, confident of his strength, "Old Henry" has slept in his barrow. Men go mad at times, in the workhouse. Desperate prisoners, bent on escaping, might regard him as a guardian of the place. To these dangers he is indifferent.

The Man Who Was an inmate of the workhouse is the most independent man in St. Louis. He has two pet aversions—women and visitors with cameras. He will not speak to women. When women prisoners try to talk to him they make the attempt once, only once. "Old Henry" stops and looks at them. The menace of that look quells the greatest shrew that the workhouse has ever held.

"Old Henry" runs from a camera. He talks as he flees. Not many visitors care to repeat what "Old Henry" says to them. Superintendent Scully has tried to get "Old Henry" to leave the workhouse, if only for a day. He hopes that if the Man Who Was went uptown his interest in life might be stirred. He offered to take "Old Henry" to the World's fair. "Old Henry" pleaded that his clothes were unsuited. Superintendent Scully procedured a new suit. "Old Henry" would not leave the prison walls. Once, and only once, "Old Henry" went with a guard to a saloon a block from the workhouse. He drank a bottle of beer, then went back to the rock walls and cells. His idea of St. Louis is founded on the optical impressions made thirty-three years ago. Then the Lindel hotel was the great building of the town. Eads bridge was not thought of. Horse cars ran a little way on Broadway and Olive street. Men walked upstairs. Elevators were unknown. A sulky with its trotting horse was the swiftest vehicle on the downtown streets. Skyscrapers were unthought of. Steamboats lined the levee far as the eye could reach. Kansas was the far West. Indians were still potent foes. Grant was president. Hayes, Garfield, Arthur, Cleveland, McKinley, presidents who have made history while "Old Henry" stuck to his prison cell, were to come. Roosevelt was a stripling, fighting disease with exercise.

There was then scare a millionaire in St. Louis. Germany has just invaded France. Africa was a black man's country. Wooden ships formed the navies of the world. Nearly all St. Louis lay east of Grand avenue. If "Old Henry" had slept with Rip Van Winkle for thirty-three years he would have been as wise as he is today.

Guard Ryan is his best friend. But he does not talk to the guard. He obeys him, anticipates his wishes, but talks never. Supt. Scully studied "Old Henry." In time he found a job which is to the old man's liking, one that his morose, exact nature has fitted him for "Old Henry" distributes the prisoners' food in the men's dining room. A piece of meat, so large, so many potatoes, exactly this much corn, precisely that much salt, a piece of bread so large, just enough coffee to fill the quart cup to the first ring. He never measures the food save with his eye. Repeated tests with scales has proven that "Old Henry's" eye is almost absolutely accurate. He plays no favorites. He takes pelasure in his work. He will do it until he dies. Often he has told Guard Ryan that he would never leave the workhouse.

TheMan Who Was is a striking figure. He is more than six feet in height. He has a great, powerful frame, crowned with a powerful face, great gleaming eyes hid under heavy gray eyebrows. His mustache is that of a soldier of the Old Guard.

Why this man has immolated himself in prison for more than three decades is a mystery, one that those who know him best believe he will never tell. He never speaks of friends, of family. He works faithfully, earning far more than his keep.

He is the St. Louis man who was, whose own life story is stranger than the vivid deram of an imaginative novelist. In the novel the regiment turned out, the White Hussar squadron walked with the wall of the "Dead March" in their ears, while they buried Lieut. Limmason, the man who was, with military honors.

Some day the grave diggers in potters' field will hastily hide, under four feet of sodden clay, the body and the mystery of the St. Louis workhouse Man Who Was. Even his nickname will be forgotten and felons will haul stone in the old wheelbarrow where he is wont to sleep and dream of his buried identity.

JEFFRIES GOES WEST.

Will Locate In California to Regain Health.

Chicago, May 15.—James J. Jeffries started for California last night in an effort to try and regain his health. Jeffries is going to Los Angeles, where he intends building a home. In the future it is his intention to devote his time to several valuable mining claims which he and one of his brothers possess in Arizona.

Before leaving for the Pacific coast Jeffries said: "Thank God I am through with the boxing game. I have suffered more pain during the last few days than in all my fights put together. Understand I am not physically down and out, simply full of malaria and rheumatism, ailments that are foreign to a man of my strength and physique, but I have decided to retire from the prize ring. I have two reasons for taking this course. My present physical condition is one and the other is because there seems to be no one in sight to meet me, capable of giving the public a run for its money."

Billy Delaney, Jeffries' manager, will retire along with the champion.

DISASTER TO ALL

Auto Boats In Race Either Sunk or Disabled.

One Is Missing and Also Her Convoy, a Destroyer.

Toulon, May 15.—The auto-boat race from Algiers to Toulon has ended unfortunately, all of the boats participating in the second stage of the run from Port Mahon to this port being either sunk or disabled, owing to a heavy storm, when still many miles from the finish. The arrangements for escorting the craft, however, were efficiently ordered, and so far as known there has been no loss of life.

The seven racers left Port Mahon at 4 o'clock Sunday morning. A torpedo boat destroyer accompanied each auto-boat, while two cruisers followed. The sea was somewhat rough at the start, and soon became worse. The competing boats were unable to withstand the violence of the storm, and requested the warships to tow them. Shortly afterward the Mercedes C. P., sank, men from the torpedo boast destroyer Hallebarde rescuing her crew. The cruiser La Hire hoisted the F. I. A. T. and her crew aboard. The Camille was abandoned, the destroyer Dard saving her crew. The Heracles II is adrift, but her crew is on board the destroyer Sarbacane. The Malgre-Tout sank and her crew was taken on board the destroyer, Pertrusane, saving the crew.

There is no news concerning the Quand-Meme, about which there is considerable anxiety. Her crew, consisting of seven men, including the Duke De Cases. The cruisers Desai and Kleber are searching for the vessel.

Accounts furnished by officers of the destroyers, which have arrived here with the wrecked auto-boats' crews, showed that the storm which overtook the frail crafts shortly after their departure from Port Mahon was of a terrible intensity, the waves attaining a height of twenty-five feet. It was impossible to keep the flotilla in tow, keel hawsers breaking repeatedly owing to the sea's fury and the destroyers themselves being in imminent danger. In several instances they were compelled to cast off tow lines in order to avoid sinking themselves. Some of the competitors, however, persisted in racing until they were swamped. Sometimes, too, on account of the mountainous waves, they were lost from their consort's view. The cruisers Deisa and Kleiber, though much buffeted by the tempest, kept up constant wireless communication with the convoying destroyers, standing by in order to render assistance. The condition of the racers' crew bears out the statements regarding their awful experiences. All were thoroughly exhausted and scarcely able to reply to inquiries. They consider themselves fortunate to have escaped with their lives. Many of them had their clothes torn to ribbons and some are bruised, while a member of the Malgre-Touts crew had a leg broken.

When they were landed at the Toulon quay by the destroyers a great gathering of sympathizers awaited them, the event having attracted sportsmen of many nations to the finishing point, owing to the international character of the race, which included French, German, Italian, British and American boats. The latter two, however, did not take part in the race, owing to their late arrival.

Anxiety regarding the fate of the auto-boat Quand Memo is growing in intensity, more especially as her convoying destroyer, Arbalette, is also unaccounted for. The cruisers Kleiber and Deisa returned to harbor last evening after a vain search, being obliged to seek shelter from a terrific hurricane, accompanied by torrential rain.

PEOPLE OF LAWTON BUILD TORNADO CAVES.

Lawton, Okla., May 15.—It is estimated from reports received from various towns in the "new country" that 5,000 caves are being dug. City officials and town boards are urging this and some of them have passed ordinances requiring it.

At Hinton, Okla., the following official notice has been published.

"On nights when clouds look at all dangerous, a sentry will be stationed in the bell tower, provided with a repeating shot gun. If there is apparent danger he will ring the bell and fire a number of shots in quick succession. Also any person who sees a storm coming when the sentry is not stationed will be expected to fire a gun."

H. W. OLIVER'S HOLDINGS

The Executors' Statement Shows Ownership of Bisbee Stocks.

The Iron Age of Cleveland, in its issue this week, gives the report of the executors of the estate of Henry W. Oliver. It shows on hand in stocks and bonds, and exclusive of real estate, nearly $15,000,000. The holdings of stocks in the Bonanza circle of copper mines will be of especial interest to the people of Duluth. They are given as follows: Calumet & Arizona, 19,797 shares, value $1,187,820; Calumet & Pittsburg, 28,165 shares, value, $281,650; Lake Superior & Pittsburg, 17,250 shares, value $127,500; Pittsburg & Duluth, 11,625 shares, value $69,750.

The valuations given the stocks are based upon the amount they cost Mr. Oliver, as nearly as can be judged, not the market value. Calumet & Arizona figures up considerably higher than the original price of the shares, while the others do not, but it is understood that Mr. Oliver added heavily to his original holdings by buying in the open market even when the prices were high.

His Chemung Iron company holdings are put in at $4,000,000. It has been reported that Chester A. Congdon of Duluth holds a share equal with that of the Oliver estate, which also has 11,000 shares of the Harvey Iron company, owner of the Zenith mine.

ITALIANS ARE BUNCOED

Woman Fleeces Them Out of $40,000 In Boston.

Boston, May 15.—A woman who claimed to be Carlotta, the wife of Maximillian, formerly emperor of Mexico, and brother of Francis Joseph, present emperor of Austria, has, according to the Herald, left the city after securing some $40,000 from members of the Italian colony on the pretense that she was the rightful claimant of the Austrian throne.

"She is," the Herald says, "being sought by over 100 residents of the North end district, who for almost eight years have been paying her money to enable her, as they supposed, to gain possession of the Austrian throne upon which event taking place she promised that those who helped her would be made ministers and noblemen and be given vast estates. One woman, the wife of a prominent Italian, gave her $3,000 on the promise that she should be made a duchess. An organ grinder contributed a few hundred dollars, all his savings, on the understanding that he should be made court musician. Hundreds contributed hunderds on similar assurances.

"Many Italian residents secretly visited her at her royal headquarters, a handsomely furnished room in a dwelling house on the corner of two South end streets, where the psuedo queen sat on an imposing throne, resplendent in red cloth and tinsel and graciously allowed them to kiss her hand on the ocasions on which they brought her tribute money. At each side of the throne stood courtiers and a bodyguard who clanked stage arms.

"Mysterious secrets such as would overthrow the present Austrian ruler were credited to this woman. When she appeared in Boston eight years ago, it was mysteriously whispered among the few in the North end that Carlotta, sister-in-law of Emperor Francis Joseph, was in Boston in disguise, having escaped from Brussels, where she had for many years been confined in an asylum.

"Italians are fairly familiar with Austrian history and when they were told that Carlotta had come here to collect a few faithful followers on whom she could rely, and enough money to return to Austria and use in connection with her all-powerful secrets, and that those who aided her would bask, when she gained the throne, in her royal favor, they believed their fortunes were made.

"Carlotta's aides in this vast enterprise were a number of select and dashing young men of various nationalities, among them was one Moriarity, who represented himself to be the Crown Prince Rudolph, the eldest son of Emperor Francis Joseph, who in January, 1889, shot himself.

"Recently the Italians were getting rather suspicious and began to hint opend that Carlotta and the henchmen were delaying matters. Recent visits to the throne room disclosed that the woman had left."

BRIEF TELEGRAMS.

Marching with draped banners and muffled drums, more than 2,000 union men followed the remains of a strike victim, George S. Pierce, from his late home in Chicago to the union station Sunday. The body was taken out on the Pennsylvania railway to Louisville for burial.

Matilda Buettgen, 21 years old, and Charles Henderson, aged 17, were drowned in Lake Michigan Sunday at the foot of Morse avenue, when a 20-foot yacht in which they were sailing capsized. Edward Holleran and Dan Moisher, who were also in the yacht, were rescued by the life-saving crew.

The strike of the 14,000 agricultural laborers in Porto Rico has ended, according to a cablegram received by President Gompers of the American Federation of Labor from Santiago iglesis, the organizer of the federation.

Four more of the persons injured in Wednesday night's storm at Snyder died Sunday, Miss Miz, Mr. Paulson, John McCart and Miss Buser, bringing the total number of known dead to 117. A number of persons are missing and several of the injured are in a critical condition.

A triple tragedy occurred at Memphis, Tenn., Sunday, when Thomas McCall, a night watchman for the Illinois Central railway, shot and killed Dith Ferguson and Hal Williamson. The murderer then turned the weapon upon himself, firing a bullet into his head. McCall is said to have been jealous of Williamson's attentions to the woman.

Richard Croker, Jr., arrived at Newton, Kan., Sunday. The body of his brother was shipped to New York at midnight. Mr. Croker and two New York friends accompanied the body. Mr. Croker stated that whether or not an autopsy will be performed will depend entirely upon the wishes of the mother. Mr. Croker identified the clothing found here as that of his brother.

YOUNG ROCKEFELLER'S HEALTH IS VERY POOR.

New York, May 15.—John D. Rockefeller, Jr., greeted his Bible class yesterday after several months' absence, and bade them farewell until the fall. He explained that the condition of his health would not permit him to resume his duties as leader for the rest of the season.

The World will say tomorrow: "The World was informed last night by a gentelman close to young Mr. Rockefeller and his interests, that he is suffering from a general break-down, incident to overwork. It was said that months ago he discovered that his health was not equal to so many business cares and religious duties, and the determination was then made, prior to his trip to Europe, which he began by starting for the south of France and Italy on Dec. 7, 1904, that slowly he would withdraw from many of his activities."

BULLISH MARKETS IN THE NORTHWEST

Heavy Advances Made In Wheat at Duluth and Minneapolis.

Chicago and Southwest Fall to Follow—Shorts Getting Hurt.

Duluth Board of Trade, May 15.—Wheat continued its sensational course in Northwestern markets today with Chicago and the Southwest lagging. Duluth July was a feature of the market, making an advance of 3¼c, as compared with ⅞c in Minneapolis, and closing even with prices in the latter market. During the closing minutes of the session the Duluth July was selling higher than Minneapolis. In Chicago the July fell ¼-⅜c, in New York it was ⅜c higher, in St. Louis ⅜c lower and in Kansas City ⅛-¼c lower. The May option closed 4c higher in Duluth, 3⅜c higher in Minneapolis, ¼c lower in Chicago, 1½c higher in New York, ⅝c higher in St. Louis, and ¾c lower in Kansas City. Minneapolis May is now ranging about 8c higher than Chicago, while not many weeks ago Chicago was ranging something like a dozen cents or more higher than Minneapolis. Manipulation is held to be responsible for the situation that now exists. Shorts in Minneapolis are being punished and some of the former longs at Chicago are credited with being the ones who are short, they having sold in Minneapolis to get out of the deal in Chicago. The condition as to supplies that has developed has aided those who are pushing the prices up. Today's decrease in the visible was an evidence of what shorts are getting.

The Liverpool market closed ⅜@⅝d higher, London ½d higher, Paris ½@¾c higher, Antwerp ⅜c higher, and Berlin ½c higher. Duluth exporters today sold some Manitoba wheat for export.

World's shipments of wheat last week aggregated 9,184,000 bus., against 10,944,000 bus. the previous week and 10,356,000 bus. last year. The amount o npassage last week increased 1,120,000 bus.

Car receipts at Duluth were 3 against 4 last year, and at Minneapolis 158 against 113 last year, making a total for the Northwest of 161 against 117 last year. Chicago received 2 against 12 last year.

Primary receipts of wheat were 238,000 bus, last year 218,291 bus. Shipments 378,256 bus, last year 214,897 bus. Clearances of wheat and flour aggregated 18,000 bus.

The visible supply of wheat last week decreased 2,165,000 bus and is now 24,170,000 bus, against 28,668,000 bus last year.

Corn in the Liverpool market closed ¼c to ¾d higher. In the Chicago market July corn closed ⅝-¾c higher. July oats closed ¼-⅜c higher. Primary receipts of corn were 184,760 bus, last year 390,000 bus. Shipments 346,368 bus, last year 583,150 bus. Clearances of corn were 261,000 bus. The visible supply of corn last week decreased 2,801,000 bus, and is now 6,103,000 bus, against 6,195,000 bus last year. World's shipments of corn last week were 3,416,000 bus, against 3,022,000 bus the previous week and 2,888,000 bus last year. The amount on passage increased 487,000 bus.

In the Duluth market the trading in wheat was not large in volume, though prices were strong. The May option advanced 4½c to $1.07 and closed 4c up at $1.06½. The July option opened ½c higher at $1.00, and sold steadily upward, touching $1.02⅝ at 12:40. The close was at $1.02⅝, a gain for the day of 3¼c. The September option closed ¼c lower at 87⅛c, after selling up to 88⅜c.

Cash prices were based on May price for No. 1 northern with No. 2 northern at about 4½c under. Durum wheat advanced 1c.

Flax was dull and slightly weaker. May sold ½c up to $1.44 and closed at $1.43. July and September closed unchanged and October was ¼c lower at $1.23½, after selling at $1.24.

Oats to arrive advanced ½c, on track ⅝c.

THE CHICAGO MARKET.

Cool Weather Has Weakening Influence on Wheat.

Chicago, May 15.—Clear cool weather had a weakening influence on wheat here today, sentiment in the pit being generally bearish. In addition to weather conditions, a large gain in the amount of breadstuff on ocean passage had considerable effect on the market. As a result of higher prices at Liverpool, the market here at the opening showed a flash of strength, July being ½c lower to ½c higher at 87⅜@88c. Offerings from small holders, however, were liberal, and, the market quickly reacted, July selling off to 86¾c. Later the price rallied to 87¼c. Minneapolis, Duluth and Chicago reported receipts of 163 cars against 135 cars last week and 129 cars a year ago.

The disposition to take profits in the July option was manifested throughout the entire session, a feature of trading being the selling of July and the buying of September. The market closed weak, with July off 1⅜@1c at 87½@¾c.

Notwithstanding numerous bearish influences, the corn market had a comparatively steady tone, higher prices at Liverpool having a strengthening effect. An increase in the world's shipments and in the amount afloat were bear fctors. Excellent weather also tended to induce selling. July opened ¼c lower to ⅛@¼c higher at 47⅜@47¾c to 47½c. After selling off to 47⅛@⅜c the price rallied to 47¼@47⅝c. Local receipts 63 cars with 3 of contract grade.

Later the market became strong on active buying by shorts and cash houses. The close was at the highest point of the day, with July up ⅝@¾c at 58c.

Sentiment in the oats pit was a trifle easier as a result of good weather, July opened unchanged at 29⅝c and sold off to 29¼@⅜c. Local receipts were 60 cars.

Provisions were steady on moderate buying of September lard and ribs by packers. July pork and lard were each up 2½c at $12.42½ and $7.30 respectively. Ribs were a shade higher at $7.22½.

GRAIN GOSSIP.

Logan & Bryan, Chicago: Wheat—The market opened with a rush this morning, commission houses being active on both sides of the market. Throughout most of the session prices maintained a very firm level, but later in the day much nervousness developed at the closing prices. Trade was on an enormous scale. Higher cables were largely responsible for much of the early strength and the late easing off was caused by heavy profit-taking, first on the theory that this is the third day up and sharply higher and also that the short interest has pretty well covered. As we said Saturday we have had a good bulge and the short interest has been pretty well eliminated. Profit-taking at this level or higher must be expected. On dips we feel the market will do to buy and also on strong spots we feel wheat sold can be taken back at a profit. Think it is a two-sided market and look for a good trading market.

Corn—The opening of this market gave no indication of sharply higher prices that were to come later. The cash situation showed some improvement today. The large decrease in the visible favored the bull side and combined with small receipts and no indication of increasing at the moment, helped the bullish sentiment. The market is strong.

Oats—Except in the May this market did not respond to the bullish news. Throughout the session market ruled quiet. The action of today's market, while strong, was nevertheless disappointing.

Provisions—Trade in this pit was on rather a small scale but considering the lower hog prices the speculative market did not get at all badly. Sentiment is somewhat more bearish. Conditions as we view them are unchanged. It still looks like a scalping market.

Chicago Record Herald: Heavy rains in the corn belt last week set back planting and marketing season by at least a week. The weather continues a live factor, in fact, the most influential one if it can delay the competition of planting and preventing of shipping. If history repeats itself the trade will have to wait another week to see any important gain the receipts kept under 100 cars daily until May 21, when they began to gain rapidly. The coming week may bring some interesting developments. The advance in prices of the May future last week indicates a possible demonstration against the shorts this week if the deal is to be abandoned and an effort to calm the shorts if a squeeze is finally to be attempted. The latter seems not at all improbable, as there is in addition to a rather large local short interest, a fairly large and certainly stubborn and strong foreign short interest. Continued wet weather might also make the quantity of corn delivered here rather light, and thus make the weekly shorts weel worth gunning for. The proportion of contract corn in the current arrivals will be watched with interest. There is a line of about 1,000,000 bushels of contract corn held here that has not yet been delivered on May contracts. Its disposition is important. It was taken in at high prices on December deliveries and has been carried stubbornly at a stiff loss since.

* * *

Edwards, Wood & Co.: Wheat—The weather conditions were more favorable generally, and the forecast promises fair weather for the whole map tomorrow. The crop prospects are decidedly bearish, and argument is made that even with a big crop, prices will hull fairly high because of the empty bins and elevators and light stocks of grain the world over. Then, too, neither the winter nor spring crops are as yet assured, and way things could arise between now and the harvest time to materially reduce estimates. It must be borne in mind, however, that we have had a big advance, and that a moderate reaction should be due, and on quick bulges wheat may be safely sold for a turn.

STRENGTH SHOWN

By the Stock Market But Closing Rather Heavy.

Bulk of Activity In St. Paul and Union Pacific.

New York, May 15.—The majority of stocks made small gains over Saturday on the first sales, but there were a few scattered losses. Rubber Goods rose a point and then reacted to a fraction under Saturday. Wabash preferred advanced ¾. St. Louis Southwestern preferred declined ⅝ and Amalgamated Copper as much.

Railroad stocks showed a tendency to move independently of the industrial specialties. This was illustrated by the hardening in the Standard stocks, while Copper, Consolidated Gas, People's Gas, Rubber Goods, United States Rubber and Corn Products preferred were forced down 1 to 1½. Southern Pacific, the local Traction stocks, Tennesse Coal, National Lead and Republic Steel and Pittsburg Coal preferred gained 1 to 2½, Republic Steel preferred 5½.

Gains of a point or more were made by Reading, L. & N., Canadian Pacific, Wisconsin Central preferred, Kansas & Texas preferred, Copper, Locomotive and a few others. Detroit United Railroads rose 3½ and Vulcan Detlming preferred 2¾. The demand exhausted itself during the second hour and left the market very dull and with prices slipping off. Ann Arbor lost 5½ and St. Joseph & Grand Island second preferred 3¼. Burlington joint fours were in active demand. Prices of bonds were generally steady at noon.

After Union Pacific and St. Paul had been listed at their best prices of 124¾ and 172, respectively, the general market commenced to harden in sympathy. The local traction stocks returned to their highest and Consolidated Gas rose over 2 points, People's Gas, which had been sold early, was in increased demand and cored a gain of a point. Great Northern preferred reasted 4 points.

Trading was of a desultory character and wide movements in special stocks exerted little effect on the general market. The undertone in general was firm. Consolidated Gas touched 190, a rise of 4¼ and Baltimore & Ohio also got up 1. On the other hand St. Louis Southwestern preferred and United States Rubber dropped 2.

Brooklyn Transit made its a dvance 2¼ and Metropolitan Securities 2, but profit-taking affected the whole market during the late dealings. Consolidated Gas reacted 2½. Sloss-Sheffield Steel lost 1½ and Twin City Rapid Transit 2¼. Northern Pacific lost all but a point of its gain and reactions ran to a point in several active stocks. St. Paul was run up 2 points in the final dealings, but the closing generally was rather heavy.

STOCK GOSSIP.

Logan & Bryan to Paine, Webber & Co.: The market closed strong but dull. The bulk of activity and most of the strength came in St. Paul and Union Pacific. The former stock the buying has been of good character on the theory that the road will participate in the final cleaning up of the Northwest railroad territory. The action of the market shows considerable strength. We feel that the buying side is the right one on setbacks. Good railroad stocks bought on recessions will make the money for the buyer.

* * *

Grier to Baker: We think there should be a few points on the long side of the market in Union Pacific, Southern Pacific and other stocks. The bond market, which is a good indication of the situation seems to be brighter.

* * *

Dick Brothers to Paine, Webber & Co.: Market very dull. No important news. At the close specialties like Smelters, Locomotive, Lead, Sugar, etc., advanced and Amalgamated was a strong feature. Market was rather feverish and irregular at the close.

Time money, easy and dull; sixty days and ninety days, 3¼ per cent; six months, 3¼ @3½ per cent. Prime mercantile paper, 3¾@4½ per cent. Bar silver, 57¾c. Mexican dollars, 44½c. Government bonds, steady; railroad bonds, irregular.

THE COTTON MARKET.

New York, May 15.—The cotton market opened very firm at an advance of 5 to 9 points on active covering and buying orders from both the South and Europe, promoted by firm Liverpool cables, and further private reports claiming damage from too much rain in various sections of the belt, although the early weather map showed fairly favorable conditions for over Sunday, with no general precipitations. Leading bulls were said to be selling at the advance and prices after working up to a net gain of about 9@10 points ruler irregular, but showed a generally steady tone.

Cotton spot closed quiet, 5 points up; middling uplands, 8.25; middling gulf, 8.45. Sales, 4,800 bales. Futures closed steady; May, 7.86; June, 7.70; July, 7.80; August, 7.81; September, 7.82; October, 7.91; November, 7.93; December, 7.93; January, 8.00; February, 8.04; March, 8.08.

COPPER GOSSIP.

Boston to Paine, Webber & Co.: The market today showed a continued strength all through the list, the general market being the next active stock in Boston. The buying came from several different houses, but apparently either for a pool or some big trader. Old Dominion continues to show strength and will sell higher. Osceola and Range were dull. The talk is again very bullish on Amalgamated Copper and traders are said to be buying all the copper stocks and expect to see higher prices before the first of July.

H. VAN BLARCOM DIES.

Ely's Former Municipal Judge Is Dead.

Judge H. Van Blarcom died at his home in Ely last evening after an illness that has lasted all winter. The cause of his death was diabetes, which first became noticeable last fall. Last Tuesday he was compelled to take to his bed, and he died late last evening.

Judge Van Blarcom was for many years municipal judge, and was known to his friends as the last genuine Democrat left in Ely.

He leaves a wife and two daughters, one of whom has been teaching in Hibbing.

HORSE AND FOUR MEN

Rescue 300-Pound Woman From a Well.

Norristown, Pa., May 16.—With the assistance of four men and a horse, Mrs. Selva Muncher, who weighs nearly 300 pounds, was saved from downing here Saturday.

Mrs. Muncher resides on the river road. While she was pumping water for the cattle the floor over the well gave way and she dropped into eight feet of water. A rope was suspended over the side of the wall and she clung to it to keep her head above water.

The woman's cries attracted the attention of Frank Williams. Calling three other men and securing a horse, Williams dropped a noose over the woman's head and under her arms, and then, with a long, strong pull she was dragged to safety. Mrs. Muncher was in the water nearly an hour and was almost exhausted.

OIL TRUST

Keeps Up Fight on Ohio Independent Dealer.

Oberlin, Ohio, May 15.—The Standard Oil company is waging its fight against S. G. Gibson, an independent oil dealer, in earnest. Another cut of half a cent is reported on all oil sold from Standard retail wagons here. The Standard Oil company has also reported Gibson to the state fire marshal at Columbus, causing him to remove tanks which he has established near his house. Gibson says he is selling more oil than he can handle and will put on another wagon June 1.

Saturday he received a letter from a Standard Oil company dealer in Sturgis, S. D., reading: "I am now desirous of corresponding with dealers independent of the Standard Oil company in my office to fight the combine. Wish you all the success you can have, and wish that you would give us any pointers you can in connection with your fight."

Gibson peddles oil by wagon, yet the trust fights him.

CROWDED CAR

Luckily Prevented From Taking Awful Plunge.

Cleveland, Ohio, May 15.—Twenty-five passengers on a Lake Shore electric car escaped death or injury only by accident Saturday, when the derailed car caught as it was about to plunge from the Rocky river bridge into the stream below.

In some way the forward trucks jumped the tracks. The front wheels ran over the guard rails, and hung in mid-air over the side of the bridge.

The panic-stricken passengers began a wild scramble for the rear door, but before most of them had time to gain the platform and jump the car came to a stop with a jerk. The flange of the forward wheels had caught the opposite rail in such a way as to prevent the car from leaving the bridge.

Passengers and crew escaped by way of the rear platform practically uninjured. Two leaped from windows. At the point where the car stopped the bridge is about twenty-five feet above the water.

There is a tax on carelessness—and it cannot be "sworn off." When you buy something in the poorest market, because you failed to read the ads. you pay such a tax.

RELEASES REND

Hoodoo Steamer Gets Off Rocks With Little Damage.

Hoped That She Will Now Be Free From Bad Luck.

The steamer W. P. Rend, recently on the rocks at Manitou island, Lake Superior, was pulled off Saturday by the wrecker Favorite and towed into Marquette. She left yesterday for Chicago, accompanied by the wrecking tug and will there be put in dry dock for repairs.

The Rend, with all her hoodoo, has gotten off the ricks without much injury and it is hoped by vessel men that the bad luck is broken and that Col. Rend, who owns the boat, will now be able to get back some of the money he has lost in her.

It is likely to be several weeks before the Rend will be seen here.

MANY COME AND GO.

Considerable Coal Comes Up the Lakes.

Since Saturday a very large number of boats arrived light for ore and a great many have departed with cargoes of that commodity. Only one boat arrived with merchandise, while only four departed loaded with package freight. A considerable amount of coal came up the lakes since Saturday, however, more than has come up any two days this season before.

MEDICAL STUDENT

Recognizes His Chum on the Dissecting Table.

Des Moines, Iowa, May 15.—When S. W. Hagen discovered that the body which he was about to assist in dissecting was that of an old friend he dropped his knife and saw and fell in a dead faint. The corpse had been shipped to the Still Osteopathy college from a poor farm.

In company with the college staff and a number of other students, Hagen was about to begin work. It was Hagen who pulled the cloth from the face of the corpse. After recovering from his swoon, Hagen explained to his companions that the body was that of R. W. Landsfield, of Jefferson, Mo., with whom he had chummed and attended school in earlier years. Of late they had lost track of each other.

Hagen is mystified concerning the ill fortune which sent his friend to the almshouse. He has not yet recovered from the agitation over the mysterious fate which should send the body into his own presence.

HIS CORK LEGS,

He Claims, Are Held By His Wife.

Wheeling, W. V., May 15.—George Beaucroft, a business man of West Liberty, who lost one of his legs in a railroad accident several years ago, has entered suit, through his father, as agent, against his wife for the recovery of a pair of cork legs, which, he alleges, the wife, from whom he has been temporarily separated, is withholding from him.

Several weeks ago Beaucroft left this city for Pittsburg, taking with him only a pair of crutches. Since then he has written to his wife, now residing in this city, repeatedly for his legs, but it is said she has refused to send them to him.

TWO BURNED TO DEATH.

Winfield, Kas., May 15.—William Buchels and wife, Germans, living at Udall, were burned to death early today in a fire started apparently from an exploding lamp, destroying their home. Buchels was 90 years old and his wife was 88. The woman was blind.

RAILROAD NEWS

Last Day of the Low Colonist Rates to the West.

Demand For Tickets Has Not Been Very Heavy.

This is the last day of the low colonist rates from Duluth to Western and Northwestern points, and consequently there is quite an active demand for tickets. The rates have been in effect since March 1, but the business resulting from them has not been very good. If anything, it was below the average, and the demand was not nearly so active, it is claimed, as was the case last spring.

This fact is said to be largely due to the different labor conditions now existing. A year ago work was not very plentiful in the territory immediately tributary to Duluth, and the men coming in out of the woods were, many of them, compelled to look to the West for employment during the summer, and so took advantage of the colonist rates to Western points.

Things are much different this spring, however. The Western labor market is flooded, while through Northern Wisconsin, Minnesota and the Dakotas there is so much work that some difficulty has been experienced in supplying men for all the jobs. Wages are fair and the labor is to be had under satisfactory conditions. Most of it is railroad work. As a result of this situation men are coming into this section of the country instead of leaving it, and the low rate tickets to points farther west are not in active demand among the workmen. What have been sold were mostly purchased by homeseekers and farmers going into the West to establish their homes.

Next fall the low rates to Western points will again be in effect, from Sept. 15 to the middle or last of October.

STRANGE CONTRAST.

Foreign Countries Have No Standard Coupler.

The Railway Age notes a strange contrast between American and European countries, in the reports of automatic couplers to be read at the International Railway congress. In this country the equipment of cars with interchangeable automatic couplers is so complete that the roads are now giving notice to connecting lines that they will not accept cars unless they are properly fitted with appliances covered by the safety appliance act.

In foreign countries no standard automatic coupler has been adopted, and each of the larger countries is experimenting with some device which is different from its neighbors. The use of heavier locomotives and larger cars on European railways is resulting in a strong demand for automatic couplers, and the visit of the members of the congress to America, where one standard coupler is in universal use, will doubtless lead to its extensive use abroad.

HAPPENINGS IN DAKOTAS

SOUTH DAKOTA.

Sioux Falls—A mistake in grasping a bottle of strychnine instead of morphine cost the life of Mrs. Margaret Green, aged 42, matron of the boys' dormitory at the state school for the deaf, in this city. Mrs. Green was also a nurse at the institution and had access to the medicine closet. She was ailing and went for the purpose of taking a hyperdermic injection of morphine, but by mistake took the strychnine, and was dead in ten minutes. She came here from some point in Iowa, where a sister resides.

After an exciting chase and a fierce hand-to-hand fight with a big gray wolf, Charles Persson, a Sully county ranchman, succeeded in cutting the throat of the animal with a jack-knife and ending his life.

Persson was accompanied by a dog when he sighted the wolf, which for months had been preying upon the herds and flocks of the settlers in that part of the state and frequently had eluded parties of men who set out to hunt it down.

The man immediately gave chase, and after a hot pursuit extending over several miles, succeeded in overtaking the animal. He is an expert lasso thrower, and after several unsuccessful throws, the coils of the lariet dropped over the brute's head. The animal thus was brought to bay, and the ranchman, after a hard struggle, cut its throat. The animal measured about six feet from tip to tip, and was the largest of its kind ever captured or killed in that part of the state.

Pierre—The state capitol commission has contracted with a Minneapolis firm for plans for the new capitol building in this state. This firm furnished the plans for the Montana building. The architects for the latter have their detailed plans completed by the middle of next month, after which the commission will be in position to advertise for bids for contracts. The building is to be 231 feet in length, two stories and high basement, and the top of the tower is to be 165 feet from the first floor. Only the east wing of the building will be completed under present conditions, but the plans are for the completed building. The intention is to use boulders from the Missouri bluffs for foundation stone and South Dakota materials to as large an extent as possible in the whole building.

The reports of land offices which were made to the state auditor a year ago showed that in round numbers 300,000 acres of land had been added to the tax rolls through final proof. The reports for this year will not show so great an acreage by about 100,000 acres, the new lands coming in by proof being about 400,000 acres. This increasee annually makes a decided difference in the real estate assessment roll in a course of a few years.

NORTH DAKOTA.

Grand Forks—George Kenyon, a laborer of Walhalla, fell into a hole near the approach to the Imperial elevator and was drowned. The hole was dug by the elevator agent in order to secure earth to fill up the approaches as they were washed away. It became filled with water in the recent rain, and it is presumed that Kenyon in walking toward home in the dark fell in, perhaps stunning himself in the fall, and drowned before regaining consciousness. There were no marks of violence on the body and the coroner's inquest resulted in a verict of accidental drowning.

C. D. Lord, C. A. Jeglum, Karl J. Farup, George E. Towle and L. L. Larson, Park River capitalists, have organized three banks for new towns on the Soo. The First National Bank of Sarles will be at Sarles, seventeen miles west of Park River; the State Bank of Fairdale will be located at Kinloss postoffice, also in Walsh county, and the State Bank of Lankin at Lankin, thirteen miles southwest of Park River.

Fargo—The board of education row took another turn when the new board reconsidered the action of the old board in electing H. R. Turner to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of J. P. Dahlquist. Turner was fired and Hubert Harrington elected. Turner threatens legal action. It is said some of the higher employes of the board are due for decapitation at the next meeting.

GIRL GETS VERDICT

Miss Edith Gibney Wins Suit Against Allegheny Man.

"Human Option" Girl Given $13,950 For Breach of Promise.

Pittsburg, Pa., May 15.—Miss Edith Gibney of St. Louis, the "human option," was awarded $13,950 by the jury in her breach of promise suit in the United States district court against Klause J. Steiner of Allegheny. She sued for $50,000.

Attorneys for the defendant immediately made a motion for a new trial of the case, asking for four days in which to file their reasons. Attorneys for Miss Gibney took a nonsuit in the $50,000 damage suit for conspiracy against the Steiner family. In this suit alienation of affections of defendant, causing him to break his promise to marry, was charged.

Steiner made the novel defense in the suit that there was no contract to marry, but that he held a six months' option on Miss Gibney—that he had the sole right to propose to her in that period—an agreement which has attorneys contended bound him to nothing. As a result of this plea of the defendant Miss Gibney has been generally referred to as the "Human Option."

Miss Gibney, however, swore that there was no option about it. She declared Steiner had unconditionally promised to marry her and introduced many of his letters in evidence, which expressed a consuming passion for his "option." She charged members of his family with alienating his affections and brought suit against them also for $50,000.

Both parties in the suit are prominent, Steiner being the son of Gottlieb Steiner, an iron and steel manufacturer, and Miss Gibney the daughter of one of St. Louis' most prominent women.

The last hours of testimony taking and addresses of the opposing counsel were pectacular. Anna Steiner, sister of the defendant, who was Miss Gibney's roommate and bedfellow while she was a guest at the home of her fiance's people and on which visit it has been alleged the family conspired to separate the pair, was on the stand and gave warm testimony for her brother. She is alleged to have carried tales of the bedroom and dressing room habits of her brother's promised wife to her brother.

"She left hair and dandruff on her comb and brush and dressed in poor taste," was the burden of crime with which Miss Steiner had charged Miss Gibney, to her promised husband, and she admitted on the stand that she had called him into Miss Gibney's room one morning and showed him the comb and brush.

"How did she offend you in dressing?" said Attorney O'Brien.

"Why, she showed no taste at all," replied Miss Steiner.

"On one occasion I knew her to have sixteen different colors on."

When the laugh subsided Attorney O'Brien said:

"Too much green and yellow, I suppose, for you?"

"No, green and yellow did not enter into the combination," said Miss Steiner with spirit.

"Sixteen colors without green or yellow?" shouted the attorney in mock horror, while even the court smiled.

The defense took up the letters of Miss Gibney to Steiner, in which it was claimed that she substantiated the claims of the defense that she herself had broken off the engagement, and here the defense seemed to score heavily, as Judge Buffington later in his charge urged the jury to take special note of one letter written by Miss Gibney, in which she referred pertinently to broken engagements.

This letter was written in St. Louis on March 11, and in part was as follows:

St. Louis, Mo., March 11, 1904.

"My Darling:—You had me guessing this morning when Alice handed me two letters in the same familiar, dear old handwriting. I looked at the dates, and did not know which one to choose first, but, luckily, I really opened the one written first, but before reading the other received its share of attention—just for curiosity to find out 'where I was at.' Then I devoured both sweet messages in close succession, and, Oh, I was so happy.

"Dearest, you write me quite a little treatise on the subject of honor in promises and marriage, and the ingnominy of broken engagements, and, strange to relate, I had the 'stump' at a dinner table last evening on this very subject, on which I expressed myself very strongly, but a little at variance with your views. It came about in this way: In the afternoon, when I was at a social affair, I met a bride of a month who was a great advocate of speedy marriages, and very short engagements. She said: 'Doubtless you have not read the newspaper account of my wedding.' I was nonconcentual, though I really had recalled the incidents very distinctly as she spoke. She then became talkative, and stunned me with information that she was engaged to a gentleman for five weeks, and her present husband came along with an offer of marriage, when she asked to be released from the engagement with the first party and married the second after a four days' engagement. I take it for granted that there was a former acquaintanceship, but as a record for short engagements that certainly takes the lead. She said: 'Really, two months would be the very longest engagement I could ever stand, for I know I would change my mind in a longer period.' That started me on a discussion.

"Fancy a two months' trial when a life sentence is in store for one. Horrible.

"Well, I really do believe in a girl breaking an engagement even at the last moment when she feels she has made a mistake, for I contend that it is better for both parties than a divorce after, which is so often the case. When it comes to point of honor I consider the party more honorable who ends it all rather than marry because of a promise given.

"As to the filthy lucre consideration, the man does not live, nor ever will, who could ever mend my heart by gold. I would rather die than engage in a breach of promise suit, so you are safe dearest. If you ever wish to change your mind, only be good enough to give me the magic two weeks' notice, so I can make my plans for the futre and let my heart petrify. Ha, ha, I am scared. You understand if I choose to break my engagement at any time, my conscience will not even prick me for I would think you were being well rid of me, and I just getting my eyes open. Ha! ha! So much for experience. Dearest, no danger. I have been terribly slow in forming such an alliance, and having indulged in all sorts of theories on the subject, which in your case became practical."

In another letter Miss Gibney laments that she could not be his "aster egg," and the reading of this letter almost put the jury to the bad. It was in part as follows:

"Really, dear, I suppose we are at the mercy of our friends and will have to be real amiable in trouble and disappointments. Then perhaps I was only joking about your doing the visiting in the future. For I did so want to be your 'Easter Angle,' I am not selfish enough to wish that things were otherwise if the few weeks' rest would do your mother some good.

"I want to come, and I want to see you. Oh, so much. But if I have to make a few more engagements and break them, I really believe I will be dubbed a humbug and a fraud by disinterested parties in the case, you see, sweet. Oh, I do so sigh for heaven, of which you are my portion and my allotment, and may my love sustain me in my weakness until we meet again. Your ever loving

"LITTLE GIRL."

The final letter of Steelner to Miss Gibney, in which he demanded that he be released, was next read, and was in part as follows:

"Allegheny, Penn., July 3, 1904.

"My Dear Edith: I am in receint of your letter of the 29th ult. You seem to me to be illy advised on your part to quote against me some of the former remarks I may have made on honor, etc. In view of your present insistance on carrying out of my promise to you, despite your oft-repeated declaration to me, and to others, that you would give me up at once, if I so desired it, and that you would not force yourself upon me to my hindrance.

"No, I have been most lamentably mistaken in you, and you have proven a sorrowful disappointment to me, and hoped for the best, but with my increased knowledge of yourself have firmly and unalterably concluded that I could not trust my future, my life and my happiness in our care, with any degree of assurance whatsoever.

"I have asked you plainly to release me. I ask you again to do so. If you have a single shred of much-talked-of self-respect, independence and dignity left, I give you to employ it by releasing me from an engagement to a girl for whom I can no longer find any love, admiration or desire in my heart. Sincerely,

"KLAUS."

AWAKENING OF CHINA

Rev. Charles Fox Davis Dwells on Power of Nation.

The last lecture in a series of four on the Philippines, Russia, Japan and China, taking the Pacific as the storm-center of the world, was given last evening at the Lester Park Methodist church, by the pastor, Rev. Charles Fox Davis. On China he said in part:

"China, in the eyes of the entire world and particularly Christendom, is the sick man of Asia. She holds the yellow race in bondage of 10 nations and many of the statesmen of the other races are trying to diagnose her case. Thus far they have only tried, and consultation after consultation has not yet brought to a concensus of opinion as to what ails her, and they are a little in doubt as to what to recommend as a prescription for her future national health, or whether she would take it if they prescribed for her. The Russian surgeon had started to force his prescription upon her and in his own way to operate and was doing what he thought to be very successful work, but the Japanese doctors have stepped in and called a halt on Russian surgery, and is driving the Russian surgeons and their methods of operation on land at a respectable distance, and are waiting to give a warm reception to the indignant Russian surgeons who are coming by the water route to continue the operation and, if possible, dissect Japan for daring to stop her. As to whether Japan can repeat with the floating Russian tool chests what she has thus far done to the land forces, the world is anxiously and intensely waiting to see. But as to what the patient China is thinking and doing in the meantime; as to the intention of the supposed yellow invalid herself, the nations do not know, and no other national surgeons can even prognosticate.

"Some have ventured the opinion that the present and past doings of both Russian and Japanese surgeons will arouse the supposedly sick nation from where she has stood for ages as a silent sentinel into a quickening and powerful health and hold the nations in awe. One of the greatest modern Chinese statesmen, Wensiang, is quoted as saying to foreign diplomats: 'You are all too anxious to wake us and start us on a new road, and you will do it; but you will regret it, for, once waking and started, we shall go fast and far, farther than you think, and much faster than you want.'

"Already France sees, according to many of her writers, the yellow peril with the aid of Japan with 120,000,000 trained soldiers in less than a quarter of a century wiping out western nations and civilizations and the mastery of the world in her possession. France may have seen such a picture as it touches her possessions in Indo China, and the reports of her spies in China during the past years returning with much information concerning the new movements there, may have already aroused France to the probabilities of such things. No one, however, acquainted with the great Chinese empire can doubt for a moment but what there would be no stopping if once it got going. Says J. W. Foster, one of the leading authorities on American diplomacy: 'It is scarcely an exaggeration in the presence of its history and attainments to assert that no nation or race of ancient or modern times has stronger claim than the Chinese to be called a great people. The whole history of China proves that it stands out as one of the greatest nations that has ever existed, past or present. Her numbers is proof positive that she can never be wiped out. Numbers mean perpetuity in the history of great nations. Her numbers speak of invasion should she once arouse herself from her stupor.

"As to the fact that China has been charged with the impossibility of raising an army or navy, and the lack of fighting ability in the makeup of the Chinaman, Mr. Davis said: That the Chinaman has not a fighting spirit innate within him, and that it is an impossibility to make him fight; the same thing might have been said about the Slav, the Teuton, Angle and other tribes in the early history of such races. No race can be found but what has the fighting spirit, it merely needs bringing out. The military spirit of the Chinese nation has never been developed, and she is just now making her acquaintance with the drill masters of modern nations who will ultimately train her to perfection. Already the influence of Japan defeating thus far the Russian bear is being felt, and is having an awakening influence upon China as a whole. While her war with Japan disappointed the world as a fighting force, it does not mean that her defeat cannot be turned into future victories. From the latest reports of military critics we are being told that the Chinese have the making of splendid soldiers with proper training and experience. What England has done with thousands of the men of India by way of drill and training, and also what the same nation has done for the Egyptians by way of training the Fellahs, who it is said, can fight like Greeks, some modern nation can do for China, and already Japan is showing her fine Italian hand in the matter."

Briefly touching the customs, language, literature, government, the state of womankind, marriage and divorce, concubinage, family relations, etc., Mr. Davis dealt at length on the superstition of the Chinese which he said was hoary with age. "No nation," said he, "is more deeply imbedded with superstition and gross idolatry than China. That nation will never make much progress until she has thrown it off. In the language of one writer, 'China is literally parboiled in superstition.' There is not a nation on the floating globe that will be harder to handle from this standpoint than China. It is one of her curses that has retarded her progress. Visitors to China, her own statesmen who have thrown off this yoke of superstition admit that it is one of the grave problems of their nation. Every civilized nation on this earth today, in their earlier histories have had to throw superstition in some form or other away ere they could make progress, and have successfully done so, but China seems to be more deeply dyed in it in its worse forms than any nation about which we know anything."

Mr. Davis then summed up the religious situation by saying: "China will never be the nation she can be so long as Buddhism, Confucianism and Taoism have their present sway in the mind and hearts of the Chinese people. Her religions are ethnic and contain not the light and inspiration to quicken and develop a nation's life. The religion of a nation settles her fate. Nations up and down history have never risen higher than the purity and helpfulness of the religion or religions to which they adhere. The facts of history speak louder and more convincingly than argument. Civilization without a pure religion has always debased the race and never improved it. The progressive nations of the earth are nominally Christian nations. That augurs well for the Christian religion.

"I believe that the Christianising of China will do more for that heathen nation than anything else at the present moment. In religion as in everything else it is going to be the survival of the fittest, and the Christianity has nothing to fear when put into the arena of comparative religions. As to whether the gospel of Christ can cleanse China, I take the facts of history as my criterion. If Christianity in the past has cleansed nations from polytheism, idolatry, superstition, and other forms of paganism, it has the vitality to do so again. Buddhism may be the light of Asia, but Christianity is still the light of the world. What Christ and His teachings have done for the Latin races, the Angle, Jute, Saxon, Teuton, and in part for the Slav, it can do for the Mongolian. No greater difficulties confront the Christian religion in China than what it has overcome during its progress of nearly 2,000 years of the past."

MAYOR DUNNE TAKES A FIRM STAND REGARDING STRIKE OF TEAMSTERS

Cabmen Who Refuse to Deliver Passengers Will Lose License.

Spread of Strike Will Mean Calling Out of Militia.

Striking School Children and Their Parents Will Be Arrested.

Chicago, May 16.—Mayor Dunne had a talk with the leaders of the teamsters, and told them if the strike spreads he would order out the militia, as the police could not preserve order. The liverymen and cab companies also had a conference with the mayor, the strike leaders having refused to order cab drivers to deliver their "fares" at the boycotted stores. The mayor said he would revoke the license of any cab driver who disobeyed the city ordinance, which requires the taking of passengers to their destination.

More school children struck on account of the delivery of coal by non-union drivers. The board of education will enforce the compulsory school law and arrest the parents, who, in some cases at least, are believed to be responsible for the action of their children, and will send the truants to the juvenile court.

Chicago, May 16.—Possibility of a tieup of all livery business in Chicago, including funerals, grew more definite at a meeting today of President Shea of the Teamsters' union, W. J. Gibbons, business agent of the Cab and Livery Wagon Drivers' union, and representatives of the Liverymen's and Undertakers' associations. Frank Amberg, a prominent livery owner, left before the other members, declaring that he for one was not going to allow dictation as to where his drivers should carry passengers, and that he would disregard the rule of the unions that no carriages should be allowed to unload passengers at boycotted stores. Other members of the liverymen's committee, A. B. Perrigo, J. O. Sullivan and Harvey Edgerton, remained in conference with Shea and Gibbons for some time in the hope of avoiding a lockout or spread of the drivers' strike.

The employing liverymen vainly endeavored to induce President Shea and his fellow unionists to permit the delivery of passengers at the boycotted stores. The labor leaders flatly refused to deviate from the stand taken against such delivery. Committeeman Amberg of the employers declared after leaving the meeting that he would call a sesion of the Employers' association and insist upon its members doing business with the boycotted houses, even if it was necessary to lockout all employes to do so.

C. P. Shea, president of the International Teamsters' union; Charles Dold, president of the Chicago Federation of Labor, and a number of other labor leaders, held a conference with Mayor Dunne. The labor officials were asked not to spread the strike, but to aid in putting down disorder. They replied that they would not spread the strike, but that they might be powerless to prevent its spread. They also criticised the police department for alleged aiding of non-union men. Mayor Dunne reiterated his previous statement to the effect that if rioting continued, and the strike spreads, he would be compelled to call in state troops.

Mayor Dunne served notice upon the strike leaders that a spread of the strike would probably mean the calling out of the militia. Mayor Dunne talked plainly of the possibilities of the police being unable to preserve peace in case anything approaching a general strike occurred, accompanied, as it probably would be, by a renewal of violence and rioting on a larger scale than heretofore. The officials of the Liverymen's union were also called into the mayor's office and informed that any cabman who refused to deliver passengers to the stores under the union ban would be promptly deprived of their license under which he operates.

Chicago, May 16.—Strikes of school children who have quit desks by hundreds in sympathy with the teamsters' strike are to be dealt with sternly according to President Clayton Mark of the Chicago board of education. The children's strike has followed the use of non-union teamsters by boycotted firms in delivering of coal at the public schools. It is alleged that in many cases the parents, rather than the children, are responsible fo rthe strike. Arrest and prosecution is threatened by the board of education as punishment for parents who permit children to go on strike in schools. Many inspectors are to be placed at the disposal of Superintendent of Compulsory Education Bodle to report cases where parents have violated the law. After a conference with Bodine, Supt. Cooley, Trustee R. A. White and Attorney Clayton Mark, president of the board, has issued this statement:

"The law requires parents to keep their children at school. It also requires the children to attend school and obey the rules thereof. The law will be strictly and promptly enforced against the parents for failure to send their children to school and against the children for failure to attend and obey the rules of the school."

George Talman and Henry Coles, two colored men attacked by a mob of strike sympathizers at Fourteenth and Stone streets today, were rescued by the police. The negroes had been recognized as having driven teams for the Employers' Teaming company, and were severely beaten. The police used their clubs vigorously in dispersing the crowd.

More than 100 messenger boys, employed by the Postal Telegraph company, paraded the streets today. The boy strikers occupied themselves chiefly in shouting at non-union teamsters.

Patrick McMahon, president of the Terra Cotta, Sand and Brick Teamsters union, has practically recovered from a blow on the head from a "blackjack" supposedly administered by "sluggers" hired by another faction of the teamsters. McMahon says he will continue to fight against the policy of President Shea in the present strike as he had been doing. Although he was on the lookout for a personal attack two assailants executed their work upon him in his own doorway.

Big consignments of new strike breakers arrived in Chicago today. Three hundred white and colored men came from St. Louis. They were recruited in Louisville, Evansville, and other river towns. The men were marched to the barns of the Chicago Teaming company, Jackson boulevard and Franklin street. Another large gang came from Cincinnati, consisting of white men entirely. Nearly a score of the whites deserted after they reached the city, declaring they were not told that there was a strike on here. T. Baker, one of the deserters, complained that the two passenger cars in which they were brought to Chicago were locked during the entire trip.

DENSE FOG DELAYS YACHTS' DEPARTURE ACROSS ATLANTIC

Big and Little Fellows Are All Ready For Start on Long Race.

Great Interest Taken In International Event For Kaiser's Cup.

New York, May 16.—Eleven yachts flying the flags of the nations, and varying in size from an eighty-five ton schooner to a 648 ton ship, were prepared to start today from the Sandy Hook Lightship at 2:15 p. m. for a race of about 3,000 miles across the Atlantic ocean to the Lizards on the coast of England for a cup and three prizes offered by the German emperor. Subsequently some of the yachts entered in the race will sail also in the race from Dover to Heligoland for another cup offered by Emperor William and one at least will take part in the regatta at Kiel, Germany.

The race, which will start today is notable for the variety of build and rig of the vessels taking part in it, for the great distance to be sailed and possibly severe weather that may be encountered, and from the fact that it affords a test of heavily built ocean-going craft. Yachtmen regard it as a move toward the substitution of a more seaworthy type of craft in international races in the place of the racing machines which have contested for the America's cup.

The yachts entered for today's race are:

The Valhalla, 648 tons, 239½ feet long, owned by the Earl of Crawford of the Royal Yacht squadron of England.

The bark Apache 358 tons, 158 feet long, owned by Edmund Randolph, New York Yacht club.

The topsail schooner Sunbeam, 227 tons, 154.7 feet long, Lord Brassey, Royal Yacht squadron of England.

Three masted schooner Utowana, 267 tons, 155 feet long, Allison V. Armour, New York Yacht club.

Three masted schooner Atlantic 266 tons, 135 feet long, Wilson Marshall, New York Yacht club.

Two masted schooner Hamburg, 185 tons, 116 feet long, owned by a German syndicate, entered from the Norddeutscher Regatta verein.

Two masted schooner Thistle, 235 tons, 110 feet long, Robert E Tod, Atlantic Yacht club.

Two masted schooner Endymion, 116 tons, 101 feet long, George Lauder, Jr., Indian Harbor Yacht club.

Yawl, Ailsa, 116 tons, 89 feet long, Henry S. Redmond, New York Yacht club.

Two masted schooner Fleur-de-lys, 86 tons, 86½ feet long, Dr. Lewis A. Stimson, New York Yacht club.

Rarely has a more varied fleet in size, rig or type, of design been assembled in one fleet to race in the same event. The stately British clipper ship Valhalla, whose towering spars spread aloft a cloud of canvas, is seven times as large as her smallest competitor the little Yankee schooner Fleur-de-lys, yet the larger craft gave no time alowance in favor of the smaller. The first vessel to cross the imaginary line at the Lizard's lighthouse will win the emperor's cup and an ocean blue ribbon which in the estimation of many yachtmen will eventually rival in importance the famed America's cup.

Ordinarily five of the vessels—the Valhalla, Sunbeam, Apache, Utowana and Atlyantic use auxiliary steam power, but for the race their propellers have been unshipped.

Added interest is given to the race by the participation of the Endymion, the holder of the yachting record from Sandy Hook to the Lizard of 13 days and 20 hours.

The faith and hopes of many American yachtsmen were pinned to the big American schooner Atlantic and her skipper, Capt. Charles Barr, to whose clever seamanship more than one victory in the defense of the America's cup has been in part attributed. Given strong head winds and fairly high seas, the Atlantic is expected to be among the leaders, while the Valhalla is dangerous in case of gales from astern. In light head winds the little Ailsa might show her heels to the more powerful craft. The German schoner is regarded as a worthy competitor under all sorts of conditions.

The course is approximately 3,000 miles long and the yachts are expected to consume two to three weeks in covering the distance. In the choice of the northern or southern route the captain may exercise his judgment and knowledge of ocean winds and currents.

Whatever the North Atlantic has in store during the next two weeks for the big yachts, at dawn this morning the weather indications showed nothing of a boisterous character, near Sandy Hook lightship. The sea was smooth, the air soft and balmy, and while a heavy mist hung about lower New York bay, it was slowly being wafted out to sea by a southwesterly breeze that gave every indication of strengthening considerably before noon.

Such a breeze was regarded with favor by those on the yachts, as it flourished the hope of a smtar fight for position at the start and a quick run along the Long Island shore and the Southern New England coast to the first turning point at Nantucket lightship, 196 miles from the start. Light sails were therefore overhauled, and auxiliary spars, like foremast yards, studding sail and spinnaker booms unlashed and partially rigged for the setting of such kites. In fact, it looked this morning as if all the yachts would take leave of this country enveloped in a cloud of canvas. The off-shore breeze was particularly favorable for the great square riggers of the fleet, the English boats, Valhalla and Sunbeam, and the American Apache, and the big three-masted schooners Atlantic and Utowana.

Six hours before the time set for the start the breeze had blown the fog well out to sea, and at the same time had worked more to the west and strengthened.

Early in the morning five of the racers were anchored in the Horseshoe at Sandy Hook. Launches were running back and forth from the dock to the yachts, while leaded tugs were arriving from the city bringing the last stores.

In the fleet was anchored a number of steam yachts, while others arrived during the forenoon.

As the morning drew to a close the conditions became dubious. The wind worked round into the northeast, the fog again shut down over the bay, and an hour before noon it was so thick in the immediate neighborhood of the start that it was impossible to see a mile.

While at anchor in the lower bay this morning, the yacht Fleur De Lis, was run into by a scow and about thirty feet of her rail was torn away. This necessitated the return of the boat to the Erie basin where slight repairs were made. Dr. Stimson, her owner, however, said the accident would not delay the start of the race, nor prevent his yacht from participating.

At noon the wind was northeast, of eight knots strength. The fog was very dense. At 1:45 the wind was southeast, blowing fresh. The fog was still very thick. At that time there seemed to be no prospect of a start at 2:15 p. m. The fog enveloped the Jersey coast so completely that it was impossible to see a hundred feet. Under these conditions it looked doubtful if the yachts would attempt to go outside of Sandy Hook.

Highlands, N. J., May 16.—At 2 o'clock the hour set for the preparatory signal the fog off the Jersey coast was so dense that it was impossible to see more than a few hundred feet. It was piling up on shore in a breeze of over ten knots an hour. But for the fog the conditions for starting the race were better than at any previous hour. With the easterly wind the yachts had a prospect in case the weather clear of a long reach to the Nantucket lightship.

REPORT AGAIN DENIED.

St. Petersburg, May 16.—The Russian press is considerably exercised over the reports of Emperor William's recent speech at Strassburg, Alsace-Lorraine, criticising the Russian officers at the front and the German ambassador Count Von Alvensleben has taken pains to issue an official denial of the accuracy of the reports.

WILHELMINA CONFISCATED.

Nagasaki, May 16.—The Dutch steamer Wilhelmina captured by a Japanese torpedo boat while on her way to Vladivostok with cardiff coal, has been declared confiscated by the prize court at Sasebo.

A VERDICT SOON

The Defense In the Hoch Trial Rests Its Case.

Experts Are Called to Rebut Testimony For Defense.

Chicago, May 16.—The defense in the trial of Johann Hoch, charged with wife murder, rested its case today. It is expected that a verdict will be reached before Saturday. Prof. Walter S. Haines, testified regarding a certain syringe used by Hoch. After an examination of the instrument Prof. Haines said he was not prepared to say that it had contained arsenic nor was he prepared to say that arsenic was not there. Prof. Haines was called to the stand to rebut testimony of Dr. Kolisher, the expert for the defense, in regard to the symptoms of arsenical poisoning. Dr. Moyer, Professors Delafontaine, Hectocno, Haines all denied that the symptoms given by Dr. Kolisher as necessary to a death by arsenical poisoning need be present in the corpse of a person who had died by poison administered a short time before death.

BOWEN FILES HIS ANSWER

To the Charges Made By Assistant Secretary Loomis.

Washington, May 16. — Minister Bowen called on Secretary Taft today and filed his statement in reply to Assistant Secretary Loomis' charges and also bearing upon the charges against Mr. Loomis which he trasmitted to the officials here. Mr. Bowen informed Secretary Taft of the existence, on file in the state department, of certain papers in the case. The papers were sent for and were turned over to Mr. Bowen for consideration. He will return these papers in a short time with a statement showing their significance. It seems these papers were sent to the state department some time ago. Thir exact nature is not known, but it is understood they are copies of certain papers found by Mr. Bowen at Caracas connected with the charges afloat there.

LORD SELBOURNE REACHES CAPE TOWN.

Capetown, Cape Colony, May 16.—Lord Selborne, former first lord of the British admiralty and the successor of Lord Milner as high commissioner in South Africa, arrived here today and received an enthusiastic welcome. The town and shipping were decorated with flags and salutes were fired from the forts and warships.

Replying to the mayor's address of welcome, Lord Selborne said he desired to help all those who wished for the peace, prosperity and progress of the country. He would not shrink from taking his share in the common task entrusted to them.

THE SIDE THAT IS NOT CONSIDERED

The larger portion of the business of life insurance in America is transacted by three companies, the Mutual Life, the New York Life and the Equitable Life Assurance society. Here is the result of their stewardship from the date of their commencing business up to Jan. 1, 1905, taken from the official reports of these institutions, and verified by the state departments to which these reports are made:

Total paid policy-holders by the three companies	$1,597,896,299
Held for future payments	1,250,978,491
Total benefit to policy-holders	$2,848,874,790
The policy-holders have paid	2,725,255,768
Accumulated for the benefit of policy-holders, over and above the money received from them	$123,619,022

It will be seen by the above figures that these companies have returned to the policy-holders, or hold in trust for them, every dollar that the insured have paid in premiums, and $123,619,000 in addition which they have accumulated for the benefit of the policy-holders. No other business in the world can equal this record.

These institutions are built to endure. No man lives and no institution was ever created beyond criticism. A great many people are of the opinion that even the Creater might have displayed greater intelligence in His work, and proceed to criticise it, but there never will be a safer or more satisfactory method of providing protection for the family than these life insurance companies afford.

TROOPS DISPERSE MOB.

Warsaw, May 16.—A gathering of Russian and Jew Socialists on Nalewki street was dispersed at midnight by a volley from an infantry patrol. The police previously had fruitlessly tried to disperse the demonstrators and finally summoned a military patrol. The latter fired at the crowd wounding a few persons slightly.

ORIENTALS ARE EXCITED OVER ALLEGED SEIZURE OF HAICHOU BY GERMANS

Reported to Have Taken Possession and Raised Flag.

Another Report Says That Germans Are Simply Surveying.

Japs Fear Germany Is Trying to Extend Territory.

Tokio, May 16, 11 a. m.—It is reported that Germany has dispatched a force of troops and occupied Haichou, in the southern portion of the province of Shan Tung, where they raised and saluted the German flag. Haichou is on an extensive bay north of the old channel of the Hoang river. Germany's object and intentions are not clear. It is suggested that she is seeking an extension of her interests in China and is taking advantage of the present political conditions, but explanations may eventually celar up the situation. It is feared that any changes in the existing status quo of China, coupled with the recent Indo China incident, may seriously complicate the war situation.

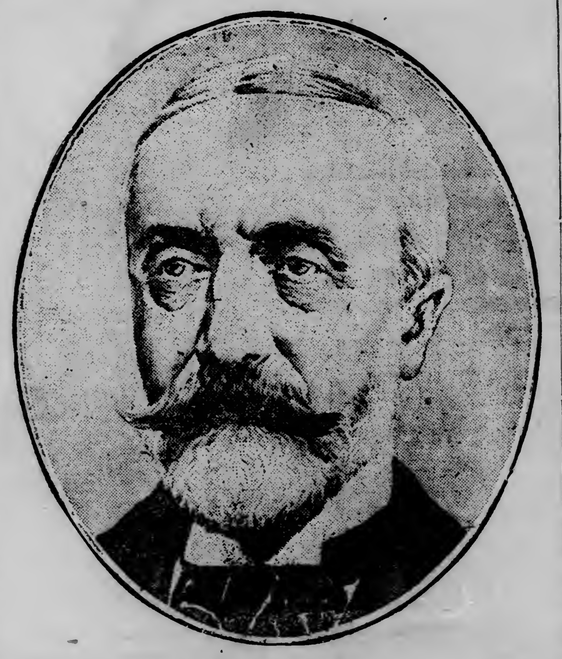
Shanghai, May 16.—The rumored landing of German troops at Haichou and Kiangsu, near the southern border of the province of Shangtun, is very doubtful. The rumor possibly orginated from the presence of a German gunboat in the harbor on a surveying expedition.

Berlin, May 16.—The foreign office replying to an inquiry of the Associated Press regarding the excitement at Tokio over the report that German troops had occupied Haichou, in the southern part of the Shantung peninsula, says the report is wholly incorrect and one of several reports designed to make it appear that Germany is attempting in Shantung what Russia did in Manchuria. The German government is doing nothing in Shantung outside of fulfilling her treaty agreement with China, which fact has been communicated to both the Washington and Tokio governments. The foreign office regards these reports as spread to mislead the opinion of the world concerning Germany's aims and acts.

Tokio, May 16, 3 p. m.—It is semi-officially announced that the Japanese government has received conflicting reports relating to the Haichou incident, one being to the effeect that the Germans occupied the place and raised and saluted their flag and another to the effect that the Germans were merely engaged in surveying. Pending the receipt of full and correct information the government here refrains from discussing the matter.

BARON DE ROSEN IS TO SUCCEED CASSINI

President Is Notified and the Appointment Is Agreeable.



BARON DE ROSEN.

Washington, May 16.—Count Cassini, the Russian ambassador has officially informed the Washington government of the appointment of Baron de Rosen as ambassador to the United States. He has advised his government that the appointment is entirely agreeable to the president.

MOVEMENTS OF THE RUSSIAN FLEET ARE NOW KEPT SECRET

Even the Admiralty Does Not Know Location of Rojestvensky.

May Pass Into the Pacific Ocean By Passage North of Luzon.

St. Petersburg, May 16.—The naval game in the Far East is watched with intense interest but the admiralty is able to throw but little light on the situation. It gives no confirmation of the Tokio report that Admiral Rojestvensky returned to Hon Kohe bay. The Russian admiral is keeping his movements and plans secret, not communicating even with the home authorities. The many wild reports emanating from Tokio are attributed to the agitated state of mind of the Japanese over the result of the coming battle. The story that sailors from the crews of the interned Russian ships at Shanghai are being sent to complete the complement of Rojestvensky's fleet is nonsense. The admiralty considers there is no harm now in divulging the fact that Rojestvensky's ships are over-manned instead of under-manned as when they left Libau there was still hope that Chilean and Argentine warships could be purchased and portions of the crews designed for them were carried on board the Russian fleet. Many naval men incline to the opinion that Rojestvensky will pass out of the China sea into the Pacific through the Ballintang channel north of the island of Luzon, Philippines and give Formosa a wide berth instead of sailing through the 200 mile stretch of the straits of Formosa in which the Russians might be subject to a torpedo boat attack.

Another division of reinforcements for Rojestvensky is almost ready at Cronstadt and will be sent out under the command of Rear Admiral Parenago. It will consist of two fine new battleships, the Slava and the Emperor Alexander II, two cruisers, a torpedo cruiser, a gunboat, a transport and several minor units. The division is now engaged in speed trials and manouvering off Cronstadt. The appearance of this reserve division in the Far East in the course of the summer should the hostile fleets suffer equally in the coming battle is counted upon to give Russia the necessary decisive preponderance upon the sea. The possession of this division naval men believe may ultimately prove Russia's salvation.

DAVIS RETURNS FROM PANAMA

New York, May 16.—Gen. G. W. Davis, the retiring governor of the Panama canal zone, and his two daughters, arrived here today on the steamer Allianca, from Colon. Gen. Davis has been suffering with malaria fever, but he declined to leave the canal zone pending the arrival of his successor, Governor Magoon, until formally ordered to do so by Secretary Taft. He resisted the advice of physicians to leave some time ago, fearing that his sudden departure at the time when health conditions were adverse would be misunderstood.

Gen. Davis said today that he received great benefit from the voyage. The malaria had practically disappeared, and he believed that after a short rest he will be fully recovered from his indisposition.

The Allianca also brought about twenty-five employes of the canal commission. Some of them had been on the isthmus eight months, and were returning home in the regular order, while others left the canal zone because of the health conditions there.

The body of Robert R. West, auditor of the Panama canal commission, who died of yellow fever on May 7, was brought here on the Allianca.

IMPRISONED BY FLOODS

Families In Nebraska Rescued With Boats and Wagons.

Norfolk, Neb., May 16.—There was a further rise of five inches last night of the already swollen Elkhorn river here, flooding the East side and causing a general exodus of families in that part of the city. Eight families were imprisoned by the surging flood, today, and it was necessary to rescue them with boats and wagons. The north fork of the Elkhorn river, which naturally is a narrow stream, is now a mile wide.

Des Moines, Iowa, May 16.—Residents of the lowlands are patrolling the levees along the Des Moines river to forestall any break of the rapidly rising river which showed a rise of nearly two feet last night. The government gauge now registers 9.2 feet within a few inches of the danger mark. The territory threatened was submerged two years ago, thousands of families being driven out. A force of men was set to work today by the board of public works strengthening the levees and protecting the threatened section.

MARK TWAIN

Eager to Break Few Railroad Officials' Legs.

New York, May 16.—Miss Madelaine Sinsheimer, the last of the human wreckage of the grade crossing trolley car disaster in Newark two years ago, has been taken to a private hospital in Philadelphia. Nine of her schoolmates were killed and many others hurt when the car full of high school pupils was struck by the train. She alone has lingered on, bedridden.

It was during the early days of her sickness Miss Sinsheimer took to reading Mark Twains' books. About that time the humorist was in New York and her brother called on him to ask him to write his name for her in one of his books. Mark Twain heard her story and wrote both a "sentiment" and a letter. In the book he inscribed:

"One of the most remarkable differences between a lie and a cat is that a cat has only nine lives."

In the letter he said: "I wish I could take you, sound and whole, out of your bed and break the legs of those officials and put them in it—to stay there."

A SLAUGHTER OF INNOCENTS

Bloody Record By Automobiles Since First of Year.

New York, May 16.—No longer need the juggernaut of Pagan India hang its head in shame. Its horrors are mild in comparison with the slaughter of the innocents by the modern juggernaut of the auto in this Christian land of America. Since Jan. 1 the automobile accidents in New York and vicinity have numbered 793. Of these forty-three were in the week just elapsed. In sixty-two cases men, women and children were done to death. From the whole number may be selected between fifty and seventy which have rendered their victims permanent cripples.

And yet no guilty owner or driver of a murderous automobile has been punished for manslaughter. The severest penalty has been a moderate fine and many have even escaped paying this blood money.

Of the sixty-two fatal accidents fifty-three of them took place when the owner of the automobile was in the car. It is an awful list which presents these facts, but the record is just the bare truth. In twenty-seven of those fatal cases the owner was at the wheel. Those twenty-seven cases were represented by twenty-three members of licensed clubs which offer their standing as an objection to explanations adverse to automobile interests.

There have been every now and again accidents which are aggravated by the utmost heartlessness. The other day a man was run down in Brooklyn by an automobile in which in addition to two men were two women. One of the women shrieked out "Get on, Harry, you have killed him," and the automobile sped, leaving the victim dead on the ground.

New York, however, has no monopoly of such occurences, as reports from other cities plainly show.

JUGGLE THE FIGURES.

Commissioner Garfield Deceived By the Meat Packers.

Omaha, May 16.—That the packers, by a peculiar method of bookkeeping and by juggled figures, deceived Commissioner Garfield into the belief that the profit on a beef steer did not exceed ninety-eight cents, is the published statement of a confidential man in a South Omaha packing concern. The actual profit, he declared, is $8.

Comparative tables are given, showing the debit and credit accounts on a bunch of seventy-one cattle actually sold in South Omaha on Friday. The first table shows the figures as they appear on the packers' books, and in the second table the figures are revised to show the actual values. The differences appear in charge of labor, which is declared in the second table to be seventy-five cents per carcass, instead of $2.75, as in the first, and in credits for the by-products.

According to the packers' figures, the offal is credited at twenty-five cent per carcass, whereas the man declares "one beef liver alone is worth more than the credit allowed for all the offal."

Hides are credited in the first table at $4, which on Saturday's market were $11 per hundred, he declared. The "butter fat and tallow are really worth nearly $1 per carcass more than credited."

RAILROAD RATES

Conclusions Reached By the International Railway Congress.

American and Foreign Practice In Conduct of Railroads.

Washington, May 16.—Two parties of foreign delegates to the International Railway congress, which closed its seventh session here Saturday, left Washington Sunday night on tours of the United States. The parties include about 300 delegates and occupies four special trains. One party will reach New York, May 23, after having visited Altoona, Pittsburg, Cleveland, Buffalo, Niagara Falls, Schenectady and Boston. The other is due in New York the 27th, stopping on its way at Altoona, Pittsburg, Cincinnati, St. Louis, Chicago, Niagara Falls, Montreal, Saratoga, Schenectady and Albany. The foreign delegates, who include representatives of many European and other governments and railways, are traveling in the United States as guests of the American Railway association.

The session of the International Railway congress just closed is considered the most successful the organization has ever held. The purposes of this association of transportation men, embracing practically every railway in the world, are somewhat different from those of the American Railway association, in that its meetings are intended primarily for the interchange of ideas through discussion, and it ordinarily does not make specific recommendations. The "official conclusions" from the discussion, are adopted by the congress by vote.

The most widely interesting to the public of these conclusions in view of the present discussion of the subject in this country is that relating to railway rates on which, after a prolonged discussion in which every country in which railways are operated was represented, the congress unanimously expressed its conclusions as follows:

"Tariffs should be based on commercial principles, taking into account the special conditions which bear upon the commercial value of the services rendered. With the reservation that rates shall be charged without arbitrary discrimination to all shippers alike under like conditions, the making of rates should as far as possible have all the elasticity necessary to permit the development of the traffic and to produce the greatest results to the public, and to the railroads themselves."

These conclusions were ratified at the close of the session, after President Roosevelt's speeches had been a natural topic of discussion, and two days of Secretary Taft's address on the subject of freight rates at the big banquet of the congress at the New Willard.

Much of the time of the various meetings was devoted to a consideration of the comparative advantages and disadvantages of American and foreign practice in the mechanical and operating departments of railroads. A subject of general importance was involved in the conclusions regarding methods of treating railway sleepers chemically, or otherwise, to protect them against deterioration and destruction by wear and by the elements, and in that way to lessen present demands upon the country's forest supply. It was determined that some method of preserving sleepers was desirable, and as the problem is a pressing one in all countries, particularly in the tropics, it was urged that careful records of experimentation should be kept with the ultimate purpose of determining the best treatment under various conditions.

With regard to locomotives, the statement is made that "the power of locomotives is more limited in Europe than in America, owing to the lower allowance of weight per axle. European engineers generally agree in thinking that compounding admits of the construction of engines giving a maximum of power and economy." The introduction of American locomotives in Europe, and European locomotives in America has had the advantage of making known on both sides some interesting details of construction, particularly the light weight of the parts of European locomotives, and the lubricating devices employed on American locomotives.

Progress has been no more rapid in any department of railroading in recent years than in the equipment of passenger cars. Particular attention was devoted by the congress to the subject of light and ventilation, and the methods employed for greater safety and comfort were described in several reports, special comment being made on the satisfactory employment of systems of electric lighting on different railroads, and the advantage of electricity for intermittent lighting, such as is required on lines where there are frequent tunnels, and for operating driving fans.

There is a tendency to extend the use of steam heating in many countries, the congress found. To obtain sufficient heat for long trains and for times when the temperature is particularly low, it is deemed advisable to use special pipes or to mix compressed air with the steam. Modern methods of ventilating railway trains also came up for consideration, particularly the system now in use on several American railways, by which cold air is circulated through the cars, forcing the close air ahead of it and finally letting it out at the top of the car.

About automatic block signal apparatus, such as is so generally employed for protection on the railway of the United States, the conclusions are: "That automatic signaling properly designed and installed, be recognized as a suitable means of protecting trains and switching movements. The congress notes there has been much improvement and extension in automatic signaling since the last congress, and that those who have used it have found it effective for their purposes. The congress is not prepared to recommend automatic signaling for general installation to supercede existing systems, but they consider there are cases where this system may present general advantages." This qualification is caused by a desire of some of the foreign representatives to adhere to the manual signal system employed on European railroads, where low wages make it economical to have flagmen stationed at short distances along the line rather than automatic mechanical devices.

From their discussion of the methods of handling and protecting baggage and express parcels here and abroad, which vary greatly in different localities, it is the opinion of the congress fter hearing a large number of reports on the methods pursued in America and Europe, and elsewhere, "that the arranugements at present adopted by the different countries best meet their varied requirements, and there are no grounds for recommending any particular system."

Something of the problem that presents itself in every American city where extensive suburban transit is necessary as well as to all railway managers was considered by one section of the congress, which declared:

"To be in the highest degree remunerative the traffic must be handled rapidly, by simple and inexpensive methods, and with the minimum working organization necessary for the purpose. All necessary measures should be taken to accelerate the movement of passengers and start the trains promptly. In this way the expenditure of energy required to regain time lost is conserved, and the promptness with which the service is conducted communicates itself to the passengers, who quickly learn to move more rapidly."

One of the striking differences in railway practice in the United States and abroad came out in the discussion of branch roads, on "light railways," as the Europeans call them. Here they are built by private enterprise and are dependent on the business they can get for their support and profitable operation. In some cases they have been constructed to assist in the development of territory which was at the time not able to give them paying traffic and so were simply a load for stockholders to carry at first. In Europe, branch lines which carry little traffic frequently demand state aid to support them, and are granted more liberal terms than those afforded main lines, in order that they may exist.

"Light railways merit in the highest degree the attention of public authorities," the congress concludes. "Their construction makes it possible to encourage the progress and development of districts which have previously remained in the background and it is accordingly not only the interest, but the duty of the governments to a ssist them. It is desirable, therefore, not to adhere to old types, and old methods of construction, operation and regulation, bit to introduce every facility possible, adaptable to local needs and available resources. It is also desirable that state governments and local authorities should accord to light railways, either under the form of subsidies, relation of requirements or other methods of assistance, the support which they need, both for construction and for operation, so that all parts of the country may be adequately served."

The congress added that inasmuch as branch roads, when they are really tributary to the main lines, are unquestionably of desirable facilities on the part of the main lines are fully justified.

"To congress expresses the wish," the report continues, "that the present tendency of legislation to establish more liberal regulation for lines with small traffic, and light trains may become more general, and that the efforts of the management to equip their light traffic lines with a more economical organization, which promise to give remarkable results, be continued."

The movement toward the electrification of certain American railway lines lends additional interest to the consideration by the delegates of automotors. The congress declares that experimentation with this novel vehicle should be continued. "It may be expected," the conclusions say, "that from now on automobile cars and automotors hauling trailers will constitute a valuable means of transportation, which on some lines will have a great future. Owing to the saving in the number of employes required, the probable reduction in cost of maintenance, the material reduction in the cost of traction and better utilization of rolling stock, and the smaller extent of station installations required, it will be possible materially to reduce the cost of working lines with little traffic, and will in the cases of other lines, result in as was the first dike of piling, which the storm destroyed, the idea being to have the new one out far enough to protect the entire concrete work until the new pier is completed. The pile dike did not extend out as far as the end of the proposed new pier, the plans having been to extend it as was found necessary during the progress of the work.

The recent storms did not tear up all the piling that was driven this spring in the protection dike. There still remains a long section extending out into the lake from the shore, parallel to the old south pier, which will form the side of the dike, and which is not exposed to the force of storms.

The sand-filled cribs will form the outer end of the dike, wing-shaped with one 200-foot section extending out in the lake at an angle from a point outside the old pier and meeting another 200-foot section angled from the end of the pile dike. The protection dike will not, therefore, present a 400-foot front for the waves to break against, but will form a sort of "V" shaped obstruction, with the point meeting the incoming waves.

The water where the cribs are to be sunk and filled with sand is about 22 to 24 feet deep. The height of the cribs above the water, and their width, has not yet been determined by the government engineers, but it is understood that the work will be of so substantial a nature that its permanency will be guaranteed so long as the new pier is building.

It is expected that the work of constructing the cribs will start very shortly, as soon as the timber for that purpose arrives. The work will entail some delay to the pier work, but it is figured that the added protection it will give to the concrete construction work, during periods when the lake is kicked up by severe storms, will more than compensate for the preliminary trouble taken, as there will be practically no delay on account of bad weather.

"THE OLD DELIGHT"

Before Coffee Did It's Work.

When you get from food that power which keeps the heart beating high, full and regularly, and the nerves firm and steady, you may say with Monte Cristo, "The World is mine!"

All things that may be attained by human endeavor are possible to you.

But if you will fill the stomach with drugs instead of food, you get only an unnatural stimulation which leaves you in worse condition than you were before. Coffee is a drug. In time that sort of thing wears on you and wrecks the whole nervous system. Sure, sure, sure! A lady of Mamaroneck, N. Y., tells how she became a nervous wreck through the use of coffee:

"I had been a sufferer," she says, "from nervous indigestion for a number of years and doctored for the same without result. I was in part to blame for although the physician forbade me the coffee, and limited me to a small allowance of tea, I failed to obey him, and continued to use coffee until I became a nervous wreck. My digestion got to be so poor that I was unable to eat scarcely anything. I became very much depressed and discouraged over my condition, for I had no hope of relief, until a little more than a year ago a friend recommended Postum Food Coffee.

"I was greatly surprised to find that the new beverage acted almost immediately and most favorably upon my nerves. It certainly is a nerve builder, at least it has been in my case. In an incredibly short time my nervous indigestion disappeared entirely, and with it has gone the depression and 'blues' that follow in its train.

"I am careful to boil Postum Coffee from 20 to 30 minutes—then, using either boiled or condensed milk, or cream, the latter preferred, I have as delicious a beverage as the old coffee at its best, and never feel anything but pleasant effects from its use, and the old delight of being well." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

There's a reason.

PLAN NEW DIKE

Sand-Filled Cribbing Will Protect Concrete Pier Work.

Government Will Not Replace Piles Removed By Storm.

The government will not reconstruct that portion of the pile protection dike which was destroyed at the Superior entry concrete work, by the recent northeast storms on Lake Superior.

It has been decided by Maj. Charles L. Potter, engineer in charge of this district, that a protection dike of a more substantial and permanent nature is necessary to guard against accident to the concrete work, when it is started. To secure this a strong crib, filled with sand, will form the outer dike, most exposed to the force of the waves during a storm.

The plans for the work, which are being made by Assistant United States Engineer Coleman, under the direction of Maj. Potter, call for about 400 feet of heavy crib work sunk to the bed of the lake and rising to several feet above the water level mark. It will be located 500 feet out in the lake from the lighthouse end of the old south pier at the entry.

MOODY TO RETIRE

And Taft Become Attorney General, Says Rumor.

Washington, May 16.—There is a ruomor that Attorney General Moody is to retire from the cabinet in the fall, to resume his private law practice in Boston, and that the president will name Secretary Taft as his successor. There is a sentimental reason for this. Secretary Taft's father served first as secretary of war, and later as attorney general, and his son would, therefore, be glad to fill this same position. But of more weight than the sentimental reason is the practical reason for such a change.

Taft today is potentially the strongest man mentioned for the Republican nomination in 1908, and if the president desires Taft to be the next president, he could not indicate that desire more strongly than by placing Taft in a position where he could add greatly to his already large prestige.

If Chief Justice Fuller were to retire from the supreme bench prior to 1908, there would be an opportunity to name Taft for that position. The chances are, however, that Taft, while preferring a judicial career, would not feel inclined to put the presidency aside.

In addition to talk of Moody's retirement, it may be stated that Secretary Morton is to retire in the fall. Secretary Shaw will retire next February, when he will have served four years.

Secretary Hay has written the president, the letter having been received yesterday, that he has fully recoverd his health and will sail for home June 7. This sets at rest for the present talk of a vacancy in the state department.

BAPTIST CONVENTION.

Churches of North and South Meet Together.

St. Louis, May 16.—The General Baptist convention, participated in by the Baptists of the North and South and marking their first joint meeting since anti-bellum days, began here today, being presided over by E. W. Stephen of Columbia, Mo., the newly elected president of the Southern Baptist conference.

More than 1,000 visitors have arrived to attend the National Baptists anniversaries of 1905, of which celebration today's convention is a part, and it is expected that 2,000 more will arrive within the next two days. The general convention, which will conclude May 23, will be comprised of meetings of the following various organizations:

Home Missionary union, Woman's Foreign Missionary society, American Baptist Historical society and American Baptist Publication society.

Today's session was of a preliminary character and mostly devoted to the presentation of reports and general discussions. Then followed the closing session of the Woman's Baptist Mome Mission society which convened in opening session last night.

E. WARREN TOOLE DYING.

Montana Govenor Watches By Bedside of Brother.

Helena, Mont., May 16.—The condition of E. Warren Toole is alarming; no hope is held out for his recovery. Governor J. K. Toole has maintained an almost constant vigil at his bedside for nearly a week, the two brothers being greatly attached, and neither desiring to leave the other's presence. It is reported today that the end is not far off.

Mr. Toole has been confined to his apartments for more than a month with a complication of ailments, the most serious of which is an affliction of the stomach. Although a man of splendid physique, he has been yielding gradually to the ravages of the attacks, until hope has been virtually abandoned.

E. Warren Toole is regarded as one of Montana's most brilliant lawyers, and his loss will be a serious blow, not only to his relatives and friends, but to the bar of the state. Governor Toole announces that he will be unable to entertain the governor of Idaho and party, who will reach Helena this week for the purpose of examining Montana's statehouse, it being their evident intention to pattern the new Idaho capitol therefrom.

By the very narrow margin of a few feet were the lives of four children saved through the presence of mind of a 10-year-old boy. The children, all sons of Albert Nordstrom, had started for a drive. As they approached the Great Northern tracks an engine and caboose hove in sight.

Realizing that it would be impossible for the engineer to stop, and that he could not get across before the train arrived, the boy managed to bring his horse to a stop. The engine cut off the horse's forefeet and demolished the vehicle, but the children escaped unharmed. The horse was then shot.

NEW HEARING

Sought In a Noted Montana Mining Case.

Helena, Mont., May 15.—Counsel for Miles Finlen, nominal plaintiff in the celebrated Helena mining case, has applied to the supreme court for a re-hearing, assigning six reasons. Included in these are the following:

On the ground that the court misapprehended the offer of proof on the part of the plaintiff and also the effect of the court's ruling upon the credibility of evidence actually received by the court as well as the effect of the exclusion of such evidence upon the right of the appellant to introduce evidence charging the respondent, Heinze, with personal knowledge and responsibility for the acts of John MacGinnis and Ada Brackett, it being asserted that MacGinnis hired Ada Brackett nominally as a stenographer, but in reality to use her influence and wiles with Judge E. A. Harney while trying the case.

Further, that the court misapprehended the effect of evidence bearing upon the question whether it was agreed between the parties that Heinze should pay to Finlen $7,000 in one year after the purchase should be made and the deed conveyance received and $27,000 two years after such time, causing the court erroneously to find that such an agreement was made and supported by a preponderance of evidence.

Also that the court misconstrued the testimony of Finlen as to a complete agreement for the transfer and that the court likewise was mistaken in the force and effect of the testimony of F. Augustus Heinze relative to the agreement with respect to the payment of $54,000.

Heinze has ten days in which to make answer, after which the court will take the matter under advisement.

LIQUID VENEER

WHAT IS IT?

It is a new discovery that enables housekeepers to completely renew the whole interior of their homes by going over the woodwork, furniture, piano, etc., with a cloth moistened in the preparation. It is not a furniture polish, neither is it a varnish, but a carefully and scientifically prepared specialty that acts as food for the surface to which it is applied, bringing out all its former brightness and gloss. It cleans as well as renews, and is easy to apply. No brush, no can, or former experience is required. There is no drying to wait for.

It sells at 50 cents a bottle, and a bottle is enough to renovate the ordinary home. It is sold by grocers, druggists, hardware and furniture dealers.

A sample bottle free for your dealer's name and address.

The following extract from a letter from Mrs Burton St. John of Tientsin, China, who is well known here, will be of much interest to many in Duluth:

"Mr. Krause of our mission just came home from a long job he has had of loading lumber, and I think you would be interested to hear something of his figures. This lumber was brought from the United States, about two years ago, to be used in our building here, for it is much better and cheaper than the native lumber. It has been stored in our yards till now, and they want it in Peking, so it is just shipped. What I want to tell you is how much it is costing. There were five carloads of it, and these were 20-ton cars. There are 40-ton cars in China, but these are all busy just now bringing in the tribute rice for the government. As some of the lumber was longer than the cars, two extra little cars were employed to put in between, not to take any of the lumber, but the boards jutted out over them. For loading these cars, from our yard to the station, and putting on the cars, Mr. Krause had to pay $20 a car, and the man wanted $10 for the two little cars that were under the long pieces of lumber, but he didn't get it. The freight was $45 a car, and $7.50 apiece for the little ones. The duty to get it out of Tientsin was $12.50 a car, and it will probably cost about $70 to get the lumber unloaded at Peking. The lumber had to be loaded one day, and go off the next morning, so there had to be a watchman over night, and he got $1. The railway company is not responsible for any freight they take, so whenever any is sent a man has to go along with it, and this man's expenses were probably about $7. To sum up:

Loading	$100 00
Freight	240 00
Duty	62 50
To unload	70 00
Watchman, etc.	8 00
Total	$472 50

"Dividing this by two, to get the gold rate, you have $236 gold that it cost merely to send five small carloads of lumber from here to Pekin. And Mr. Krause spent a great deal of energy to get it down as low as this. You do not wonder that houses here are built of brick instead of frame, do you?"

Last evening the musicale given under the auspices of the women of the Unitarian church, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. P. S. Anneke, was a most pleasant affair. Because of the absence from the city of F. G. Bradbury the numbers by the Beethoven club were not given, but solos by Mrs. Marie Geist Erd and Gerard Tonning were given instead. The vocal numbers were given by Miss Grayce Frantes Turner and Philip Gordon Brown, and readings were given by Mrs. Carlo Fisher, who is the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Tonning. The evening was a most successful one.

KEEPS HER SERVANTS.

Rules Followed By Woman Who Does So.

Here are a few rules given by a woman who enjoys a reputation for never having trouble with her numerous servants and retaining them in her service for years, says the Brooklyn Eagle.

She pays good wages; that is, she pays as liberally as she can afford, and is always punctual in payment.

She allows her servants a reasonable share of all the dainties served the family and is liberal in the matter of their food, maintaining that good work cannot be done on an empty stomach.

She rarely criticises, but when reproof is needed gives it with firmness and without fear, but kindly.

Praise is always given when due; she thinks it well to acknowledge good service and encourage it.

She allows reasonable time for outings and to attend church. And she does not require service when a girl is taking her afternoon off.

She allows her maids time to keep their clothes in order and requires them to be neat, cleanly and orderly about their sleeping apartments.

She is never familiar, only evinces a kindly interest in the general welfare without becoming in any way involved in the family affairs of any one of her servants.

If a matter goes wrong, she takes time to investigate before reproving and never scolds or rebukes when angry.

If necessary to dismiss a servant, she never does so when in a temper, but waits until she can control herself, so as to command respect.

She will not allow her maids to gossip about her neighbors' affairs, nor to make remarks about one member of the family to another.

She will not allow her children to be rude or insolent to the servants, nor will she allow too reat familiarity.

And her servants remain with her decades and are devoted to her.

A GIRL'S HEART

By Frank H. Sweet.

(Copyright, 1905, by Daily Story Pub. Co.)

The girl was beautiful; she was sweet and womanly, and when he looked into her eyes there was no future nor past nor world around. Two weeks went by, and he knew and acknowledged that he was in love; another week, and he was ready to undertake anything, to sacrifice anything, to win her.

That was the way he felt one evening as he sat by their campfire, gazing dreamily at the flames which circled and flared about the blackening logs. They had just returned from the little mountain cabin. At length he turned.

"I thought at first, Jim," he said with a side glance at his guide, "that maybe there might be something between you and Meta."

Jim turned his face so that it was in the shadow.

"There was," he answered. "I let her off this afternoon."

"We've been engaged four years," Jim went on stolidly, "ever since she was 14 an' me 20."

Mr. Burke sprang to his feet, and then sat down again and gazed helplessly at his companion.

"But why—why did you not tell me?" he demanded.

"There wasn't any reason," simply. "At first I left you with her because I knew 'twould be pleasanter, an' you was my guest. Then, after I see how things were going, I kept off because I—well, I'd done engaged Meta when she was only 14, an' when she'd scarcely seen any man except me an' likely didn't know herself. You was fine appearin' an' had ways that girls like, an—an' I wanted Meta to have a fair chance. If she liked you better than me it would be all right an' show I'd been wrong from the first."

He raised his head proudly. "If I had my way," he said slowly, "an' there was a woman I loved, I'd bring the best man in the world an' give him a fair chance to win her. I wouldn't care to have a girl, an' think maybe there was a man somewhere in the world she could like better than me. 'Twouldn't be fair to either of us."

Still Mr. Burke did not speak. He was looking at his guide, helpless even to frame an answer to what so vitally concerned himself.

"Things being as they are," Jim went on after a long pause, "an' the month being up that we agreed on, I reckon I'll be leavin' you tomorrow, Mr. Burke. There's Tobe Rob'son up in the mountain knows as much as me, an' he'll be glad for a job of guidin'."

"But why—" Mr. Burke began, and then stopped.

"I feel to be gettin' off a spell," Jim said gravely. "I've stayed here in the mountains too long."

There was something in the resolutely strong voice that brought Mr. Burke to his feet and carried him to the other side of the fire.

"You will do nothing of the kind, Jim," he cried sharply. "I'm the interloper who has broken up your Eden. I will leave in the morning—tonight—and never come back."

Jim looked at him, wonderingly.

"What good will that do," he asked, "if Meta loves you better than me?"

Mr. Burke started, and in spite of his concern for Jim a quick glow came to his face. If Meta loved him! He returned to the log and to his contemplation of the fire.

"What makes you think she loves—me, Jim?" he asked, hesitatingly.

"I ain't sayin' she does," dryly; "only when I offered to break the engagement she just threw up her head and nodded like she was relieved. She didn't speak, but the signs was strong enough for me to go west on."

He stared at the fire a moment, and then rose to his feet.

"What's the use of you an' me talkin', Mr. Burke?" he said, wearily. "If she loves you better than me, it's all right; I don't want her. But if she loved me best," a sudden ring of pain in his voice, "you an' all the world couldn't get her from me. Now let's turn in."

The next morning he was up and had breakfast ready almost before it was light enough to discern the tree holes. After it was eaten and he had put the camp in order he made his own simple preparations for departure.

"Now, I reckon I'll go down by Meta's a few minutes an' tell her goodbye," he said. "S'pose we walk down together. I heard you say yesterday that you were going to call this mornin' an' bring a book."

Mr. Burke hesitated and drew back a little.

"Perhaps you would rather go alone," he suggested.

Jim's eyes met his squarely.

"It would be easier," he assented; "but I'm not looking for easy things now. At first I felt I couldn't go at all, again; but that would be weak. We'll go down together."

Meta was standing in the cabin doorway when they appeared. Jim, steady-voiced and pale, and Mr. Burke hesitating a little in the background. Something in their eyes, in their attitude made her step forward impulsively.

"Why, what's the matter, Jim?" she asked anxiously.

"Nothin', only I've stopped by a minute to say goodbye. I'm going west. An' Mr. Burke here was to bring a book, so he came along. Is your pa handy so I can say goodbue to him, too?"

"Going west? What for?"

"Oh, I—I—well, the mountain's a narrow place for a man, Meta, an' I'm startin' out to see things. Maybe I'll find something special that's waitin' for me to do."

"Then you don't expect to come back?"

Jim's face lost some of its grimness. Even he recognized pain in the voice. But it was natural, they had known each other from childhood. Of course she would be sorry for him to go.

"N—no, Meta," he answered slowly; "if I go I'll never come back. I couldn't."

But Mr. Burke had thought he recognized something more.

"Wait," he said sharply. "It may be there is some mistake here, that should be righted now. Jim's going away because he loves you, Meta; and I—I am to stay because I love you, too, and have thought—hoped——"

The girl took an involuntary step forward, then she paused, her face whitening.

"Jim and I have been engaged four years," she said, "and yesterday he asked me to let him off. He has been changing lately, and—and trying to keep away from me. Of course, I agreed."

"Meta!"

It was only a word, but it brought the color back to the girl's face in a flood, and caused Mr. Burke, after one startled glance at the two, to drop his head upon his breast and return to camp.

HAPPENINGS IN DAKOTAS

Insurance Company Fights Hard Against Paying Fire Loss.

NORT DAKOTA.

Grand Forks—Application has been made for the removal of the case of Hanson, Newgaard & Hanson against the Home Insurance company of New York from the district court of Richland county to the United States district court.

The action was brought to recover $2,500, representing an insurance policy on a stock of goods at Milnor, recently destroyed by fire. The company refuses payment on the ground that the loss was not as great as the firm represented; that the firm did not comply with the terms of the policy in keeping an invoice of the stock carried; that the members of the firm are guilty of fraud in fixing the amount of the loss sustained.

After July 1 a new law goes into effect in North Dakota which will preclude insurance companies from transferring actions from a district court to any United States court. The new law provides that if any insurance company organized in another state and authorized to do business in this state, shall remove or make application to remove into any court of the United States any action begun in any court of the state, on ac laim or cause arising out of business done in the state, the commissioner of insurance shall revoke the license of such company, prohibiting it from doing any business in the state for three years.

Andrew Neville, a Great Northern brakeman, who was caught betwen the bumpers of two flat cars in a worktrain at Ada Saturday noon, died before reaching the hospital here yesterday. He was 24 and single, and a brother of Michale Neville, Northern Pacific ticket agent in this city.

Fargo—That there is little probability of peace on the Fargo board of education was demonstrated by the premptory manner in which the majority of the board fired H. R. Turner. At the meeting of the old board J. P. Dahlquist, who is to remove from the city, tendered his resignation and just a few minutes before the expiration of the life of the old organization, H. R. Turner was elected.

The new board is organized by another element to that which has controled for three years, and the members asserted that the old board had no authority to transact new business at the time Dahlquist's resignation was accepted and that Turner's election was illegal. After removing him from the board, Herbert Harrington was selected to fill the vacancy. Turner is an attorney and insists he will fight the matter in the courts.

In the interval following the expulsion of Turner, Secretary Rupert persisted in calling Turner's name after being instructed not to, and he is slated for slaughter at the next meeting.

Crary—John Berg, charged with abandoning his wife and several children, at West Superior, was arrested by Under Sheriff McKinnon at Crary, and agreed to accompany the sheriff without the formality of a requisition.

Edgeley—One hundred and fifty laborers on the Northern Pacific extension struck for higher wages. Several miles of track have been laid and three bridges constructed. A new crew was ordered from the Twin Cities.

Rugby—Fire destroyed a livery stable and damaged the Imperial Lumber company's stock.

SOUTH DAKOTA.

Deadwood—Harris Franklin, who purchased the herd of the Levi Leiter estate several months ago, consisting of 15,000 head of cattle, has sold half the number at a profit of $60,000. He reached a proposition recently to sell the entire herd at a profit of about $4 a head, but sold only half. Mr. Franklin believes the coming season will be the best one experienced by Western cattlemen in many years.

The business men are determined that a new courthouse will be built this summer in this city. In order to settle the question in law whether or not the county commissioners have a right to build a courthouse without submitting the matter to a vote of the county, a friendly suit has been brought which will be taken to the supreme court. All the possible points that might be brought up by enemies to the proposed plan will be contested and decided upon before the building is started. The commissioners have about $54,000 to start with and would submit to the voters of the county the question of issuing about $20,000 only in bonds. The points at issue in court are new to the state.

Huron—Information has been received by Col. John H. King, attorney in the famous O'Brien county, Iowa, land case, to the effect that the United States court has decided another of the cases in his favor, which means another victory for the settlers. More than half a million dollars are involved. The principles upon which the decision is based are the same as presented by Mr. King when he took up the cases several years ago.

The state fair board will hold a meeting here on the 23rd, when plans for the proposed buildings on the association grounds will be passed upon and contracts for their construction awarded.

Fred S. Hollis and Ella Waterbery, both of Miller, were united in marriage here.

Lead—Firemen of Pierre will visit the Black Hills the first of June. They will visit all the principal cities in the Hills and a special program of entertainment is being arranged.

Vermillion—The annual tournament of the South Dakota Sportsman's association will be held in this city May 31 and June 1 and 2. Local gunners are making great preparations for the event.. Gun and ammunition firms are taking great interest in the tournament, and will send some of their best men to help the work along. It is expected that not less than thirty professionals will shoot through the entire series, though they will have no chance at the money.

DOINGS IN MICHIGAN

Two Men Have Narrow Escape From Death at Ironwood.

Ironwood, Mich., May 16.—(Special to The Herald.)—M. G. McGeehan of Hurley, Wis., and James A. Sullivan of this city, met with a serious accident while out driving. They were driving up Suffolk street, when something frightened their horses causing them to run away, throwing the occupants of the buggy out. Mr. McGeehan had a rib broken and is thought to be injured internally and Mr. Sullivan received a number of bruises about the body. How the men escaped with their lives is said to be miraculous, as they were thrown on a very rocky lot near the Norrie mine.

Menominee—The bill amending the charter of the city of Menominee has passed both houses of the legislature. It provides that the term of the mayor shall be two instead of one year, and does away with previous salary limitations. Under the amended charter the council may at its discretion fix the salary of the mayor at not to exceed $500 a year and the salaries of aldermen at not to exceed $150.

At the coming session of the circuit court at Menominee the contest election cases of Joseph Erdlitz and Stephen Packer for the office of sheriff will be heard. Erdlitz alleges that a number of ballots without the inspectors initials were counted for Packer. If the court declares the ballots illegal, Erdlitz will have a majority. Such an outcome would also result in forcing John Sties to vacate the office of judge of probate as he received his majority in the disputed percincts.

Escanaba—Leonard Metivier, 7-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Metivier of North Escanaba, was drowned this week while playing on a log boom in the Escanaba river. He with several other boys, was amusing himself at the river. Some one proposed that they cross on the log boom. They made one trip successfully, but in racing back young Metivier endeavored to pass one of his companions and was thrown into the water. He was unable to swim and quickly sunk from sight. The body was recovered the following day.

Gladstone—Property owners at Gladstone failed to give the required majority for aproval of bonds to the amount of $15,000 for the erection of an addition to the central school building. Out of a total of 143 votes cast at the election seventy-five were for and sixty-eight against the bond issue. The opposition to the issue is said to be due to a belief that the amount of the bond issue was too large; also to opposition to the policy of centralizing the school facilities of the town. Many people think that the school board should plan to erect ward buildings instead of incrcasing the size of the central school.

Sault Ste. Marie—Two warrants for the arrest of Alderman Forest were issued at the Soo this week, the charge being selling liquor to a minor, also keeping his saloon open after hours May 1. The complainant is Ferdinand Freimuth. The complainant is one of the men who fought the location of Forest's saloon at its present site, and there has been a good deal of feeling between the men. It is expected that the cases will both be strenuously fought. Alderman Forest is the man who recently combined with the Democratic members of the Soo council to give the Soo a complete set of Democratic office holders, with the exception of those elected at the general election.

NEW HAVEN PASTORS

Express Their Views on the Rockefeller Gift.

New Haven, Conn., May 16.—In a letter acknowledging the receipt from the committee of protesting ministers of documents bearing upon the recent acceptance of the Rockefeller donation to the American board of commissioners of foreign missions, the pastors of Congregational churches in New Haven, with the exception of Rev. Artemus J. Haynes of the United church, have jointly given expression to their views in the matter. The pastors in their letter say that while reluctant to express their views some extraordinary statements of the protestants call for an answer. They deplore any unnecessary and harsh criticism of missionary societies. Further they say that they are among those who have agreed to the acceptance of the gift, but have not in any declaration of their views manifested what the committee calls any "tendency" to "palliate, excuse, exculpate" anything that may be shown to be wrong in the business methods of any corporation. On the contrary, the pastors assert, they have not neglected suitable opportunities of testifying against any recognized double standards of private and public morals, or against any recognized form of industrial or social evil regardless of what individuals might be present in their congregations, and without anxious thought for the possible offense to the contributors to the treasuries of our churches.

PAID $3,000 DUTY

On Rich Tapestry Carried in a Shawlstrap.

New York, May 16.—George Croker, who arrived from Liverpool aboard the White Star liner Cedric, had a bundle done up in a shawl-strap. When asked what it contained, he said it was just a bit of tapestry that he wanted to pay duty on. On his own declaration the assessors decided that the duty on the tapestry, which is two feet wide and twenty-eight feet long, and of the age of Louis XIV., would amount to $3,000. Mr. Crocker said he had bought it for about $8,000. He paid the duty and took the bundle along.

STORY OF INSANE MAN

About a Murder Proves to Be True.

Butte, Mont., May 16.—Joseph Granberry, who was tried in Judge Dolan's court on a charge of insanity a few days ago and sent to the Warm Springs asylum a mental and physical wreck, told the court that he had committed murder in Birmingham, Ala., several years ago.

His statements were thought to be but the ravings of a crazy man, but dispatches from the South confirm Granberry's tale. While driving an ice wagon in Birmingham in 1888, Granberry was grossly insulted by a negro named Tom Lewis. He struck at the negro several times with the lectongs, when other negroes came to the first man's assistance. They set upon Granberry, who drew a pistol and fired, killing his first assailant and wounding two others. He gave a bond of $1,000, but this was afterwards forfeited and he disappeared in the West.

The indictment against Granberry at Birmingham was quashed two years ago. Men who remember the murder say that self-defense could have been easily established.

APPEALS FOR AID

In Caring For Penniless Victims of Cancer.

New York, May 16.—Rose Hawthorne Lathrop, daughter of Nathaniel Hawthorne, who gave up friends and a social career to devote her life to nursing the poor who are suffering from incurable cancer, and who established the St. Rose's free home in Cherry street, has issued a unique appeal for aid in her work.

From the small beginning in Cherry street, Mrs. Lathrop and the little band she has gathered around her, known as the "servants of relief," has extended the work so that now up in the northern part of Westchester county they have established the Rosary Hill home, which is the last earthly place of those doomed to die by the dread disease. Mrs. Lathrop addressed her appeal to "society people" who give largely to charity or hire others to do charitable work, but she asks them to change the order of things and devote their own lives to the work she is doing. Men and women alike are appealed to.

HEINZE LOSES.

In Suit Over the So-Called Parrot Vein.

Helena, Mont., May 16.—Judge H. W. H. Hunt modified and made permanent yesterday the injunction granted at the behest of Nipper Consolidated Copper company restraining the Parrot company from operating below the 1,000 foot level. The decision is a virtual victory for the Amalgamated as against Heinze.

Judge Hunt held that the Anaconda vein is probably the oldest in the district, but that it has a fault, and the extension is what is known as the Parrot vein. This vein is crossed at the fault by the Nipper, or so-called blue vein, which has its cross in the Nipper claim. Therefore, the injunction is modified so that the Parrot company may continue to extract ore from the fault vein, but not from the blue vein.

Judge Hunt holds that the Nipper company has failed to make a sufficient case to justify the granting of the permanent injunction prayed for.

SENT TO THE POORHOUSE

Though His Daughters Are Worth Many Thousands.

Omaha, Neb., May 16.—Gottlieb Fellmeth, an octogenarian, has been sent to the Douglas county poor farm by his daughters, who are worth hundreds of thousands of dollars.

"He's no kin of ours," they say. "When we were infants he abandoned us, and now that he is as helpless as we were then he deserves no other treatment. Let him go to the poorhouse."

Thirty-one years ago at Menominee Falls, Wis., Fellmeth's wife died, leaving him with four little girls, the oldest only 5. Fellmeth gave the children to a Milwaukee charitable institution.

Minnie Fellmeth, the oldest, took care of her sisters as soon as she was old enough to work, and later married a man of wealth. She is now Mrs. Minnie Marine of Menomonie Falls. Her husband is a banker.

EXTENSION OF JEWS' RIGHTS

Will Include the Complete Removal of Time Limit.

St. Petersburg, May 16.—The Associated Press learns that the basis of the project for the extension of the rights of Jews now under discussion by the committee of ministers is the complete removal of the time limit of residence of Jewish merchants of the first and second class in the large cities of Russia (the period is now restricted to three months annually), and the extension of the unrestricted right of residence of Jewish artisans.

According to the Russ, the complete project of the Bouligan rescript commission provides, as anticipated, for a consultative assembly on the lines of the Shipoff program, with four estates modelled on those of the Finnish diet—the nobles, the clergy, the burghers and the peasants. M. Bouligan will now, according to the same authority, call in the marshals of the nobility, presidents of the executives committees of the zemstvos and mayors of cities to secure their views.

A FRIEND OF BOWEN

Tells President and Secretary Taft About Venezuelan Conditions.

Washington, May 16.—Some important subjects were considered today by the cabinet at its semi-weekly meeting, the principal one being the Loomis-Bowen case. Early in the day Minister Bowen presented to Secretary Taft his response to the statement of Mr. Loomis. Before Secretary Taft reached the White House to attend the cabinet meeting a request reached him from Mr. Bowen for certain papers bearing upon the controversy which were in the state department. These were furnished to him with the understanding that he would make an additional statement regarding the facts disclosed in the papers. That statement has not reached Secretary Taft yet and no definite action will be taken in the case until Mr. Bowen's added statement shall have been received and submitted to Secretary Loomis and his answer laid before Secretary Taft.

During the day Mr. Bowen called at the White House and through Secretary Loeb, sent a note to Secretary Taft. The note simply indicated the presence at the executive office of Senor Pastor y Mora, a friend of Mr. Bowen, whom the minister desired should talk with the president and Secretary Taft. Soon afterwards Senor Mora, had a conference with the president and Secretary Taft, the talk lasting some time. Senor Mora did not disclose the details of the interview, but it is known that, having at one time been connected with the asphalt company in Caracas, he was enabled to throw some light on the present situation. When Secretary Taft left the White House he said that no determination of the case had been reached and none would be until the facts from both sides had been developed. He indicated this might require several days.

RE-ELECTED ENGINEER

Ralph Gets Position, Although Governor Votes Against Him.

St. Paul, May 16.—(Special to The Herald.) — George A. Ralph of Crookston was today re-elected state drainage engineer by the state drainage board, consisting of Governor Johnson, Secretary of State Hanson and State Auditor Iverson. Governor Johnson voted in the negative and said his stand was actuated by the report of the public examiner, which charged Ralph with a duplication of accounts. He said he wanted it understood that he could not aid in giving any man a public office with such a charge hanging over him.

By a unanimous vote of the board, John Abercrombie of Alexandria was appointed topographical engineer at a salary of $150 a month and traveling expenses. Ralph will receive the same salary.

RIVERS RISING.

High Waters Doing Considerable Damage at La Crosse.

La Crosse, Wis., May 16.—Heavy and steady rains of the past week are raising Wisconsin and Minnesota rivers to the danger point. The Mississippi here has risen four feet in four days and is still going up rapidly. The greatest damage is expected along the banks of the La Crosse and Black rivers in Wisconsin and the Root river in Minnesota, where much valuable property is located along the banks.

A large part of the north side of the city of La Crosse will be flooded if the river rises another foot. Railway tracks along the Root and La Crosse rivers have been washed out, a washout causing the wreck of a Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul passenger train near West Salem. No one was injured.

ANTI-SALOON BILL KILLED BY WISCONSIN SENATE.

Madison, Wis., May 16.—The state assembly today killed the Thayer bill providing for barring saloons from residence districts. The assembly, however, adopted a substitute providing for a referendum. The senate made the railroad rate bill a special order for Thursday after Senator Stevens offered an amendment providing for an elective instead of an appointive commission. Five new bills were introduced in the assembly, one providing for strengthening the state board of assessments powers relative to corporations.

SKULL IS BROKEN

Five Year Old Boy Falls Into Chester Creek.

Was Riding In Cart On East Superior Street Sidewalk.

While propelling himself on a little express wagon along the sidewalk on East Superior street in front of the residence of G. G. Hartley, Kenelm, the little 5-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. J. J. C. Davis of Chester Terrace, rolled down the steep embankment and fell into Chester creek, striking his head on the rough stones in the bed of the creek.

The lad was immediately picked up and taken to St. Mary's hospital, where Dr. Magie and the lad's uncle Dr. G. W. Davis, were awaiting his arrival.

At 3 o'clock the physicians were still in the operating room with the boy, and it was not known whether or not he would recover.

The accident, which happened shortly after 1:30 p. m., was witnessed by a number of people. The boy had been riding along the sidewalk in his cart, when he suddenly seemed to lose control of the steering apparatus, and veering off the sidewalk at almost right angles, rolled down the steep bank and struck his head upon the stones at the bottom.

The boy suffered another serious accident about a year ago. While playing with some other children, he narrowly escaped losing the sight of his right eye, which was badly cut.

The place where the boy was injured has often been noted as dangerous by the residents of East Superior street. Between the homes of G. G. Hartley and H. M. Peyton there is a steep embankment, at the bottom of which is the creek. The space between the embankment and the sidewalk is very small, and on a dark night, if a person should step off the sidewalk at this spot, it would be difficult for him to save himself from falling the entire distance to the bottom.

MEETS AT ATLANTA

Annual Gathering of the National Manufacturers' Association.

Address of President D. M. Parry of Indianapolis Given.

Atlanta, Ga., May 16.—The tenth annual gathering of the national manufacturers of the United States representing more than three-quarters of the thirteen billions of invested capital of this country, assembled in the Grand Opera house today. The annual address of President D. M. Parry of Indianapolis was first in order.

The address of President Parry was taken up largely with the consideration of the labor question, interstate commerce legislation, reciprocity and what he declared to be a strong tendency towards Socialism. In the first portion of his remarks he made an appeal for the maintenance of individual and property rights as laid down by the constitution of the country. He took the ground that the functions of the government should be limited strictly to certain specific public ends, and that what evils have developed as a result of concentration of capital in industrial enterprises should be corrected through application of the police power of the government and not by resort to socialistic innovations.

"The agitation for the supplying of private control over capital," he said, "appears to disclose two distinct methods for the accomplishment of its objects. One is that of confiscation—the passage of legislative enactment and the adoption of other means to reduce profits and to limit private management of capital. The other is that of acquiring government control through purchase from the present individual owners.

"That form of socialistic endeavor which seeks government control of capital by purchase is at present limited to the acquirement of public utilities. Attempts in the line of municipal ownership have for the most part resulted unfavorably to the claims made by its advocates. Government cannot manage capitalistic enterprises as economically or as efficiently as private owners. A large increase in the number of its employes is certain to threaten the domination of our democratic government by an office-holding class, and the corruption of politics under private ownership of corporations would be as nothing compared to the corruption that would most likely exist under government ownership.

"While the enlargement of the scope and power of government by the purchase and management of certain enterprises has found considerable support among the people, yet I believe the sentiment favorable to socialistic measures involving the confiscation of profits and the limitation of private management of capital is the more widespread and dangerous. Without making special reference to the aim of the avowed socialist, we have organized labor and its sympathizers supporting the idea that organizations of men may dictate to a large extent the management of enterprises which they do not own, determining the rate of wages and fixing the hours of employment. Another illustration of this kind of socialistic sentiment is manifested in the present agitation to have the government fix railroad rates."

Mr. Parry favored the non-partisan organization of the substantial and law-abiding citizenship in order that they may exercise their proper influence in public affairs and counteract the work of the socialist and demagogue.

Taking up the labor situation, Mr. Parry said:

"Organized labor was less strenuous in the past year in its socialistic endeavors than in the several years preceeding. There were a number of notable strikes, and smaller strikes were numerous, but they were almost uniformly failures from the union standpoint. The open shop was the outcome of most of these struggles. At a low estimate fully 1,500 concerns employing labor changed from the closed to the open shop.

"The efforts of organized labor to secure the passage of laws abridging individual freedom of action met with complete failure at the national capital during the recent session of congress, as also did a number of attempts to secure laws of a socialistic character from various legislatures. This was due to the aroused activity of manufacturers and employers in these states.

"With strikes less numerous, the laws better obeyed and enforced, and the power of labor lobbies considerably checked, the value of this association's activity on the labor question is emphatically demonstrated. The policy taken by the association in demanding a full recognition from organized labor of the individualistic principles of our government is the only policy which will establish and maintain industrial peace. Peace is utterly impossible so long as it is attempted to make the rights of employer and employe the subject of dickering and trials of strength."

In discussing the pending interstate commerce legislation, Mr. Parry applied the principles of individualism and competition, as he did all through his speech. He declared that the question of rebates did not properly enter into the discussion of the Esch-Townsend bill, as the leaders in the movement in its behalf themselves declare that the present laws are fully adequate to meet that evil. The issue raised by the proposed bill, he said, is whether the government through a commission shall establish inelastic legal rates to take the place of the rates now fixed by competition. He quoted a recent interview of Representative Stevens of Minnesota, one of the members of the house committee on interstate commerce, going to show, he said, that the substitution of a system of inelastic rates for the rates determined by competition would result in great injury to industry in many sections of the country. He said that the commission or any political body that might be created would yield to the most clamorous demand, and that, as a result, the rates between different localities would be more inequitable than the rates now fixed by competition between these localities. In maintaining that competitive conditions are still potent in regulating rates, he said:

"The attempt is made to make it appear that the railroad rates are so high that the shippers and the general public can no longer stand the extortion, but must have relief from congress. Now, the simple incontrovertible fact is that the railroad rates in this country are far cheaper than anywhere else in the world. These rates in general are one-third lower than those of Great Britain and France, and one-half lower than those of Germany, where the railroads are owned and operated by the government. An examination of rates in the past also shows there has been an almost continuous tendency downward. In 1870 the rates were three times what they are now.

"As under the continued working of free competitive conditions rates may be expected gradually to decline, it remains for the advocates of the inelastic socialistic rates to show why any change from competitive conditions is desirable, and whether socialistic rate-making would insure lower rates in the future. The complaints coming from shippers against the railroads are almost wholly complaints of discrimination in favor of other shippers.

The complaints coming from shippers against the railroads are almost wholly complaints of discrimination in favor of other shippers. What the shippers want in this country is impartial treatment rather than arbitrary reduction of rates. The principle of impartial treatment of the public must be enforced. It might be wise when it is found that a secret lower rate or rebate has been granted to any shipper that such rate be made the open rate for say one year, as though the rate were part of the published classification.

"Unjust discriminations between localities and kinds of traffic ought to be susceptible to correction through the application of the public powers of the government, the same as unjust discriminations between individuals. There is no valid reason for asserting that one kind of discrimination can be corrected by punitive legislation, and that another kind can only be reached by the socialistic method of fixing rates."

As to the tariff and reciprocity, Mr. Parry said:

"To my mind there are some features in the present tariff situation that opens the serious question the wisdom of the present 'stand pat' policy. The foreign demand for our agricultural products appears to be declining, and the exportation of manufactured commodities is not nearly so great as it should be. How in the face of unfavorable foreign traffic we can materially develop the market abroad is difficult to see, unless through the adoption of the more liberal tariff policy on our own part we secure compensating concessions in the tariff schedule of these countries whose markets we seek.

"Reciprocity would be a wiser course than tariff revision. I do not think the situation calls for radical treatment, but rather for the adoption of conservative policy looking more to the opening up than to the 'bottling up' of our commerce."

The report of Treasurer Francis H. Stillman of New York showed the receipts since the last annual report to March 31, 1905, to have been $156,138, with an unexpended balance at that time of $7,873.

The report of Secretary Marshall Cushing of New York reviewed at great length the work of the association under various descriptive heads. Reference was made to the defeat of "bad legislation" in congress, particularly of the anti-injunction and eight-hour bills.

Ludwig Nissen of New York spoke on the governmental relation of public franchises. The address was largely devoted to a discussion of the un-Americanism of government ownership of public utilities.

MANY BIDDERS EXPECTED FOR CHADWICK PROPERTY.

Cleveland, May 16.—Many bidders from Cleveland and other cities are expected to be here Thursday morning to attend the sale of the Chadwick homestead at Euclid aveuc and Genesee street, by Trustee Loeser. Riga, European Russia, May 16.—Two policemen were killed by known persons Monday, at midnight, near Guisenberg park. A bomb was thrown at a police patrol with the result that a police commissioner was wounded and a policeman was killed. VALUABLE CANVAS FOUND.

Heidelburg, May 16.—A life-size bust picture, by Abrecht Duerer, of the Savior Crowned With Thorns, has been found in the house of an obscure resident of Offenburg. The canvas bears Duerer's monogram, and the date, 1524. Emperor William, during his recent visit to Karlsrhue, went with the grand duke of Baden to see the picture. Professor Hans Thoma, the artist and director of the hall of art at Karlsruhe, is one of those who pronounce the picture to be a genuine Duerer.

GOLL BOUND OVER.

Milwaukee, May 16.—Henry G. Goll, former assistant cashier of the First National bank, who is charged with embezlement of $100,000 from that institution, today waived preliminary examination and was bound over to the United States district court on a $10,000 bond. The complaint in Goll's case is identical with that of Frank G. Bigelow, former president of the bank.

THE PREACHER'S CARDS.

Pious Man Takes Sinful Ones, Tainted Money.

The old colonel had been away several days, and when the Owingsville, Ky., correspondent of the New York Telegraph went down to see him the colonel fell on his neck.

"Yes," the colonel said, "I've been away. Down to New Orleans for mine, watching the nimble pieces of horseflesh. And say, there was just the hottest old poker game down there you ever saw or heard tell of, by gum.

"When I registered at the best-looking shack I could find I began looking around. Not finding even so much as a smell of anything doing in the poker line, I decided to ask questions. You see I had not been in a real poker game for some time, and every once in a while I would rub my hand along the outside of my vest to see if the four thousand green one-dollar bills were still there intact. They were there generally until I entered this game.

"I couldn't find hide nor hair of poker, and finally I approached the hotel clerk with a jolly, which seemed to annoy him a bit. The clerk, after thinking a minute, answered in the phraseology of the day that he reckoned that, seeing I was his long-missd friend for whom he had been looking ever since the penitentiary let loose the last bunch of convicts, he guessed he could steer me to a place similar to that I had mentioned.

"We climbed 33 steps and at last found ourselves at the very top of the house. There were several other fellows in the room, and when the hotel clerk had introduced me, we had some conversation about the crops, alligators and other things they raise down in that country. Finally there entered the most meekish looking feller you ever saw. I wish I could have roped him and brought him back here. His face was long and narrow, and his eyes had a way of turning up toward the ceiling, as if he expected an angel to come through and get him. He carried his hand clasped on his stomach somewhere, and in the hands he carried a black hook with red borders and a rubber band around it. He was dressed in a black suit, with a long preacher's coat, and we immediately judged him to be a preacher that had strayed among a lot of sheep that were slightly dark. We greeted him as brother and he thanked us—though for what I do not know.

"One of the fellers finally said: 'As this is something of a dull day hereabouts, suppose we pass the time away by indulging in a little innocent amusement?' The response was immediate. We hauled a little table out into the room, took our places and began playing after some preliminary skirmishing around. The preacher feller asked us in a quavering voice if we hay any objection of his remaining and witnessing the sinful game that he had heard of all his life, but never had seen. We assured him that the party never would be complete without his presence.

"We played an hour or two, and then one of the fellers dropped out, saying he had promised to take his family to ride and couldn't wait to play any more. We were sorry he had lost all his money so soon. I counted my winnings and found that they amounted to $1,100. I felt somewhat good upon viewing that pile of welcome green things.

"After this feller had gone, the preacher man trots up to the table and says: 'Gentlemen, all, I have picked up one or two points about this sinful game while I have been watching you, and would like to play a little if you have no objection to kinder teaching me along a little. I have not been provided with much filthy lucre by my flock, but I have seven or eight quarters and pleayunes that I would like to wager.'

"As one man we turned and told him it would pain us to a heavy extent if he did not play with us. So he took a chair.

"Well, by much explaining, we got him to see the most important points of the game, and in an hour or two had a very good little old play going. The preacher had won a dollar or two, and had likewise dropped some of his dimes onto our sides of the table. The play went on, and we still had to explain some things to the preacher.

"At last there was a big wad of money on the table, and everybody boosting the pot for all it was worth. I glanced at the preacher feller, and there was a look on his face that was childlike and bland. He was smiling in a satisfied way at his cards, and when his time came he said: 'If I had another one of them little red things I would have four cards that I would bet on some.'

"Well, we looked at our hands and concluded that he had some harmless cards that would not do any harm. So we consoled with him. Next deal, however, he said, 'Ah, here she is.' Every feller there had made up his mind to boost that pot and take everything the preacher had.

"I lifted the receptacle with a thousand for I had what would be called a good hand, being an ace high straight flush of spades. The other fellers lifted it twelve hundred apiece, and I sweetened her again. Then the other fellows laid down. They had nothing, so far as I could see, that would induce them to put up so much money, but it was their property, and I hated to take it away from them. Then I laid down my little old straight flush and reached for the money. But there was an arm clothed in ministerial black in front of me, and a timid voice said: 'Wait a minute, brother, I don't know much about the game, but wouldn't this bunch of cards take that piece of green cheese there?'

"And that derned preacher laid down slowly, one by one, the ace of diamonds, the king of diamonds, the queen of diamonds, the jack of diamonds and ten of diamonds. We looked at that royal flush a minute and then I glanced down to where my little measly old spade flush was lying. Then, as one man, we arose and said, 'We congratulate you, brother. The little pasteboards you have there shore does take the pile.'

"Then we bowed to him and left. There was no further use for me in that town, so I packed my handkerchief and went to the desk to pay my bill. My friend, the clerk, was there, and as I paid up I noticed a grin on his countenance. Then that darned little one-mule clerk looked me over and said:

"'Cunnel, next time you get gay with a hotel clerk, first make sure that said clerk knows no one who can play preacher and likewise play cards.'

"And then I shook the dust of the city from my feet."

LARCENY CASE IS ON TRIAL

John Fisher and David Daniels Charged With Clothing Theft.

John Fisher, who with David Daniels was indicted for grand larceny in the first degree, was on trial before Judge Ensign, this morning. His case was not completed when the court took the noon recess.

Fisher and Daniels are the two young men accused of having broken into the clothing store of the Menter & Rosenbloom company, at 20 West Superior street, the night of prll 4, and stolen several top coats valued at $50, some rain coats valued at $30 and several pairs of trousers valued at $2.50 a pair.

The information against the young men is that they broke into the building by forcing a transom, secured the clothing and attempted to dispose of it to a second hand dealer on Lake avenue for about $15. The suspicions of the dealer were aroused and he communicated them to the police, following which Fisher and Daniels were said to have been arrested in their room in a local hotel, with the alleged stolen goods in their possession.

J. H. Kliss, manager of the clothing store, who identified the goods found on the two men as belonging to his store, and the second hand dealer were the witnesses called for the state this morning. Fisher is defended by Judge John Martin of Virginia.

HALF DAY OFF.

Young Men's League Starts Movement For It.

The members of the Young Men's league of the First Baptist church have begun a movement to secure a Saturday half holiday for the clerks in the retail stores of the city, and with this object in view will ask the co-operation of the city administration and the various benevolent societies in the city. At a meeting held last evening the following resolution was adopted:

"Resolved, that it is the sense of this body that the weekly half holiday now granted to employes of the wholesale houses during the summer months be extended to retail clerks and others wherever possible.

"It is desirable, firstly, because health and happiness require open air exercise and athletic recreation, such as baseball, golf, tennis and other sports, which many young men and women are not permitted to enjoy under existing conditions.

"Secondly, in behalf of the hundreds of Christian people in the city, we earnestly request the mayor, the press, baseball managers, athletic clubs, women's clubs and others to co-operate with us in bringing influence to bear upon employers for the general observance of a half holiday on Saturday afternoons, during the months of June, July and August, for the benefit of all employes who are unable to enjoy the Saturday half holiday now in vogue, because of business restrictions."

BOTH SIDES OF IT

Strike of Painters at Deatherage's Shop Is on.

Proprietor Claims One Thing and Union Men Another.

Six painters and paperhangers employed by I. Deatherage on Central avenue, West Duluth, are on strike because a non-union man was employed in the shop. Mr. Deatherage claims that the employment of the non-union man was unavoidable. He agrees that he signed the rules of the union, which provide that none but union men shall be employed when obtainable. Mr. Deatherage claims that a sufficient number of union men could not be obtained, and that the union is acting unreasonably.

The union men claim differently. They claim that the non-union man over whom the quarrel is about agreed some time ago to join the union and signed an application, telling Mr. Deatherage to pay the dues and charge the amount against his wages. This Mr. Deatherage, so say the union men, refused to do, and the matter has been in abeyance for some time. Some other interesting things have since been found out about this non-union man since that time, according to the statement printed below and made by T. G. Freshney, business agent for the union.

The arbitration committee agreed upon between the union and the bosses, consisting of two union men and two bosses, met last evening and talked over the matter. Mr. Deatherage was present and stated his case. The committee voted unanimously to the effect that the union was right in walking out, and that the only way for Mr. Deatherage to fix the matter up would be to accede to the demands of the union. Mr. Deatherage has not made known his intent. His former employes are all working. Mr. Freshney, the union's business agent, made the following statement concerning the case:

"In reply to a news item in this morning's paper regarding the walk-out at Deatherage's paint shop at West Duluth, we have this to say: On March 29 a non-union man employed by Mr. Deatherage filed out an application to join the union, and instructed Deatherage in writing to pay the fee and charge it to his account. Up to this date Deatherage has emphatically refused to do so. Deatherage has signed the rules of the union, which state that the intent is to employ none but members of local union No. 106 when possible to secure them. This non-union man now refuses to join the union; therefore it was the duty of all union men to refuse to work with him.

"Out of forty-three union shops in the city, this is the only one that attempts to work a non-union man. Within a few days it has been discovered that this non-union man left the trade of painting two years ago when a member of the union and accepted a job as strike-breaker, working as a machinist at the Clyde Iron works during the strike. Therefore when Deatherage demands that the union shall recognize a strike-breaker the union withdraws its men until the said 'scab' leaves the shop. This action is in line with the rules of all men employed on buildings. Deatherage has agreed to abide by the decision of an arbitration board in all matters in dispute. The dispute in question has been arbitrated, and the decision is that the union men shall not work with this notorious dauber."

HIGH NUTRITION.

The Kind of Sugar That is Good for a Person—Malta-Vita Carries its Own Sweetening.

Do you know why you should eat Malta-Vita for breakfast every morning?

There are a good many reasons why you should eat it three times a day.

Malta-Vita has qualities not found in any other food, and these are of importance to you if you want to be well and happy. You know it's hard to be happy unless you are well.

Malta-Vita contains the highest possible degree of nutritious food and demands the least possible digestive effort on the part of the stomach.

If your stomach is weak and your digestion poor that will intercst you.

Malta-Vita is made just right.

To begin with, it is made from the very best white wheat that grows. After this wheat is cleaned and secured, cooked through and through and matured in fresh, pure air (there is no other kind of air in the Malta-Vita factory) it is mixed with the finest malt extract that was ever made.

And after the malted wheat is rolled into little flakes, it is baked in intense heat, each flake becoming crisp—the crispest, most nourishig food in the world.

You understand, of course, that the thorough cooking and steaming of the wheat gelatinizes its starch, and the malt extract, a powerful digestive agent, quickly converts this into Maltose (malt sugar). Malt sugar is great food, and the weakest stomach digests and assimilates it without effort. That is why Malta-Vita is soo good for sick folks or folks who have weak stomachs.

One of the foremost educators in Ohio recently said: "For ten years I suffered almost everything in the way of pain and misery and was unfit for business from the worst form of indigestion and constipation. If I would change my regular routine of daily life by making a visit, or regular business or pleasure trip, or by eating at a strange table, I would suffer indescribable agony from sick headache, lasting sometimes two or three days. There were but very few weeks during the ten years past that I did not have an attack of sick headache. About a year ago my grocer called my attention to Malta-Vita as a new berakfast food. I had already tried several other foods, with but little relief. I tried Malta-Vita and have eaten it almost every day since—sometimes three times a day. I have taken very little medicine, and my constipation is almost wholly removed. If I have a light attack of sick headache once in two months, I count it frequent. I am constrained to give my diet the credit."

Malta-Vita is appetizing in the morning, at noon and at night. It puts the tingle of new life into sluggish blood, builds up bone and muscle, refreshes the brain and nerves.

And Malta-Vita is so good to eat! One dish of it, with a little cream or fruit, will start the day just right for you. It is the perfect food for children and grown folks.

Malta-Vita—so delicious that it melts in the mouth, so crisp, so refreshing, so satisfying—is 10 cents now at all grocers. Same high quality, same big package as when sold for 15 cents.

The liver of the cod fish produces oil that is a wonderful flesh builder. No fat or oil can compare with it in that respect. To get the best out of it, it must be emulsified and made like cream. Getting Impatient.

A letter was read from City Clerk Cheadle at the council meeting last evening from E. A. Blanchard, superintendent of the Northern Pacific road on this division, in which the latter reminded the council of the city's promise to build a street bridge over the Jenswold street subway. The city promised to have a bridge over the subway before last September and as yet nothing is done.

Mr. Blanchard said in his letter "we cannot let the matter drag along any longer." The fund out of which the money for the bridge is to come is not in the best condition either. It was referred to the bridge committee.

Getting Plans Ready.

The city engineer has begun work on the plans and specifications of the new reservoir which will be constructed on Lloyd's addition to West Duluth. The reservoir will contain ten million gallons of water and will cover two blocks of ground, being 200 feet wide and 37 feet deep. The wall at the top will the 16 feet wide. The reservoir will be 299 feet above the level of the lake so that water will be delivered by gravity.

CONGRATULATE BANK.

Deputy Bank Examiners O'Hearn and Devine from St. Paul have just finished an examination of the Western State bank's condition and have congratulated the officers on the showing the bank has made during its first year of business. Most banks of the same size, they said, go behind during the first year or two, but they find that the Western State bank has shown a clean profit of a comfortable amount.

WANT A "LIMITED."

The street railway company has now before it two propositions for a "West Duluth Limited" in the evening. Some weeks ago Alderman Barnes introduced a resolution to have a limited put on between the hours of five and six in the evening. At the council meeting last night Alderman McEwen introduced a resolution to put on a limited between 6:12 and 6:32. It's up to the street railway company now and will likely be decided upon soon.

KEYNOTE GIVEN

Of the Rate Issue By Governor Cummins of Iowa.

Statement to Senators Strikes at Heart of Problem.

Chicago, May 16.—Walter Wellman says in a Washington special to the Record-Herald: The best statement that has as yet been made concerning the vast importance and true character of the irrepressible conflict that is now on between the people of the United States, led by President Roosevelt on one side and the railroad interests, represented by many able managers and lawyers, on the other, was the one made before the senate committee on interstate commerce by Governor Cummins of Iowa. Governor Cummins' statement was so clear and comprehensive and strikes so directly to the heart of the whole question that it is more than worth while to ascertain precisely what he did say. His testimony before the committee created something of a sensation among its members and the railroad lawyers who attend its hearings. Actually he was the first witness on the side of the people who brought out the truth and who stated that truth in language vivid and unmistakable. According to Governor Cummins this is far more than a struggle over the shadings of a few rates, over whether this shipper or that shall be compelled to pay a few cents more or less for the hauling of his goods. It is a conflict over a principle wide and deep—so wide and deep that in the language of the Iowa governor it involves possession by the railways of a power more potential than that of congress itself, greater than the taxing power, greater than the protective tariff and probably greater than any other power that can possibly be wielded in our country.

* * *

This power is the power which now lodges in the hands of the men who control the great railway systems to say whether one state or another shall prosper, or in what degree, or what manner; whether one shall be a manufacturing state and another purely agricultural; whether one region shall be able to carry on production to which it is naturally adapted, while another region, equally well adapted, shall not be permitted to do so; in short, whether the decree of a railway magnate in fixing rates shall assume a potentiality higher than that of natural law itself.

Governor Cummins does not deny that this power must exist somewhere. It is a power like sovereignty or the taxing power which must be exercised in some manner. It is an inevitable incident of our industrial civilization. But he does deny—most emphatically—that it is a power which can be safely left untrammeled and unrestricted in the hands of the comparatively few men who now control the railway systems of the United States. He does not deny, either, that what may be called the first use of that power may well be left in the hands of the managers of the railways. They may be permitted to exercise it according to their lights and needs, up to a certain stage. But when that stage is passed, when use of the power becomes an abuse, when there are signs that it is to degenerate into tyranny, there should be a higher power in the will of the people themselves, in the state, in the federal government, in the law which may be appealed to, which may restrain, which may operate as a check and balance.

As may be easily imagined this sort of statement of the case came as a revelation to many members of the committee. It was something new in their experience. Hitherto the clever railway lawyers had had things all their own way before the committee. Here was the other side of the case—the people's side. And here, too, was a foeman worthy their steel. The result was that Governor Cummins was put under cross-examination by the railroad lawyers on and in attendance upon the committee and for five hours the battle of wits raged over the committee table. The Iowa statesman held his own to the end, and for the first time since these somewhat one-sided hearings began—hearings intended to shatter the popular argument and to entrench the railroads more firmly in the house of their senatorial friends—the railroad people were nervous as to what the result may be when the case in its new form is appealed to the public judgment.

* * *

The most noteworthy passages of Governor Cummins' testimony before the committee were the following, which are quoted from the official records:

"If there had been in my mind a lingering doubt about the wisdom of conferring the proposed authority upon the commission, the statements which have been made before your committee by men connected with the railway companies would have dispelled it completely. Over and over again it has been repeated to you that rates are not made with reference to any known principle. Distance is little considered, the cost of service is little consulted. These railway men have with great candor declared that rates have been made, and will continue to be made, with reference only to their view of the welfare of the territory which their lines supply. That means that the rates have been and will be so adjusted as to afford the largest revenue to the railway companies. It means that the railway companies have exercised the power, and insist upon its continuance, to take away the natural advantages of one state or locality or city and confer them upon another state, locality or city. It means that railways have assumed the prerogative of determining the kind and extent of traffic that shall be carried on between different parts of the country. It means an artificial business life, based upon the discretion and judgment of railway companies.

"I admit that a distance tariff throughout the country would be inadvisable. I concede that the cost of service must be sometimes subordinated to the public good, but I deny that the railway companies should exercise a power so vast that if left untrammeled the authority of congress sinks into insignificance when compared with it. It is just as repugnant to the principals of good government that the railway companies should thus lift up and depress communities as it would be to allow every producer in the United States to fix for himself the duty levied upon the import of a like product.

"The constitution of our country forbids the levying of duties in commerce between the states, and yet we permit the railway companies to do an equivalent thing when they fix rates founded only upon their desire to stimulate one kind of traffic and destroy another kind—rates which equalize advantages between competitive communities, which turn business from the natural channels of commerce into artificial ones.

* * *

"Do not misunderstand me. It may be thought wise to ignore distance, discard cost of service and treat our country as though it were a single point, so that each producer could reach every market on even terms with every other producer, and each distributer could reach his customer on even terms with all his competitors. I am not a disciple of that theory of transportation, but I do not argue the question. I only say that if it is the purpose to develop the country in that way the vast arbitrary power involved in such a scheme must be exercised by the government and not by the railways. I grant that when this duty is undertaken you set in motion a tremendous force, but it is easier to control the rate than to operate the railway, and to me it is clear that if congress does not, in some form, make the rate it will in the end take the railways. In our state we prefer the first of the alternatives."

"GET RICH" SCHEME

Severely Scored By Judge Lochren In Decision Against Company.

Case of Minneapolis Concern Against Postmaster of That City.

St. Paul, May 16.—(Special to The Herald.)—United States District Attorney Haupt today received a copy of the oral opinion recently delivered by Judge Lochren in United States district court at Minneapolis in the case of the Hathorn Mutual Commission company against Postmaster W. D. Hale of Minenapolis to restrain the postmaster from preventing the delivery of mail addressed to the company and from refusing to pay money orders drawn in its favor.

Judge Lochren dismissed the bill of the plaintiffs on the ground that the company was engaged in fraudulent business.

The company is classed by the district attorney's office as a "get rich" concern of the first water and one which is doing a gigantic business all over the United States.

The men interested in the Hathorn company are Arthur Z. Hathorn, S. W. Devere, E. D. Ziesel and N. A. Sprong, all of whom are under indictment by the federal grand jury on charges of using the mails to defraud.

The concern has been doing an enormous business, according to Mr. Haupt, and was fairly reaping a harvest of money until its mail was stopped and even now, Mr. Haupt is of the opinion that it is receiving mail through a "dummy."

The company has had fraud orders issued against it and has always reappeared under a new name. It was once known as the Devere Diamond company, but a fraud order stopped its business and the Hathorn Mutual Commission company was the result, always operating under the same plan, according to the allegations of the federal officials.

The scheme of the company was to issue certificates at $80 which would be worth $160 some time. The payments were to be made $5 down and $1.25 per week until the full $80 was paid. Of the weekly payments 85 cents was to go into the redemption fund, 15 cents to the company's own use and the remaining part of the $80 for the purpose of carrying on the business. As often as there might be $160 in the redemption fund, the lowest certificate older would draw that amount. It was alleged by the government that in ten years the company in order to pay all its contracts must have a membership of 118,500,000. With these paying $80 the receipts would have been $9,500,000,000, and still it would not have one cent with which to pay the $19,000,000 due the contract holders and would detain as its share $5,500,000,000.

Judge Lochren in his opinion says:

"It is claimed from evidence in the case and from the contract and application and from other papers furnished to the applicants describing the scheme that there is no deceit practiced on persons sought to be enlisted in the scheme. But it does not follow that it is proper and legitimate because there is no deceit. If the scheme is such as to lead a man to believe he is going to get something for nothing or considerable more than he puts in, the gullibility of some persons might induce them to enter into such scheme although a careful consideration of an intelligent person of honest impulses would keep him clear of it."

"There is no doubt that this scheme is not a legitimate business. It induces persons to join it with the hope that the amount of money they turn in will be greatly increased and doubled, knowing or being advised that the money is not to be invested in any kind of business by which it may aid in producing anything. It seems to me that under a decision of the supreme court this scheme must be classed as a lottery. It is perfectly evident that there is nothing for the benefit of the world—for anybody—produced by business of this kind. But it is equally evident that the result of it finally must be that a great many of the victims who put their money into it must eventually lose it. The whole idea is fradulent, a means for promoters to get money that they have no right to from patrons who are fooled. They get what the victims lose. It seems to me that if there is any class of schemes that ought to be prohibited from the mails of the United States and deserve punishment, it is that class certainly as much as lotteries. It will not do to say that people who become victims do so with their eyes open and knowing just what their chances are."

An appeal to the United States supreme court was allowed.

RECEIVER ASKED

For National Electric Company of Milwaukee.

Milwaukee, May 16.—A petition was filed in the United States district court today asking for appointment of the receiver for the National Electric company. The petition represents that the company is indebted to the petitioners, three Milwaukee concerns, in a sum exceeding $1,000, and that within four months preceding the date of petition the company committed an act of bankruptcy in that it admitted in writting its inability to pay its debts and its willingness to be adjudged a bankrupt on that ground.

The National Electric company is one of the largest concerns of its kind in the country. Frank G. Bigelow, prior to his downfall, was prominently connected with the company. The movement for a receiver, it is said, is is preliminary to a thorough re-organization of the company. John I. Biggs was elected president of the company recently.

STATE LAND SALES.

The Herald feels like enthusing a little over the announcement by State Auditor Iverson that he is going to hold some big sales of state lands in Northern Minnesota. For this means much to Duluth and the country round about it, and these will be the first sales in several years. The Herald has frequently criticised the action of the state land department in holding up these sales of state land, and thereby keeping the development of Northern Minnesota back, and it is as ready now to commend the state auditor for his decision to hold large sales this fall.

The announcement is to the effect that the state will sell from 50,000 to 100,000 acres of land at the various sales that will be held in September or October. The maximum allowed by law in any one year is 100,000 acres, and Mr. Iverson exhibits an admirable fearlessness about approaching the maximum if the results make it profitable. Among the counties affected will be St. Louis, Aitkin, Carlton, Beltrami, Crow Wing, Hubbard and possibly Polk and Wadena. The state auditor announces that much of the land to be offered will be located in settled districts, within a few miles of railroads, school houses and churches, and if the sales are well advertised the returns should be large. As the legislature has provided financial means for suitable advertising, no doubt every effort to promote the sales will be made by the state auditor's office.

Under chapter 209 of the laws of 1905, introduced by Representative A. L. Cole of Walker and made a law by the last legislature, these sales will have a different character from any past sales, and the results will be of greater benefit to the state. Conditions attach to each sale that will prevent large areas of land from going into the hands of speculators, and will practically require that each buyer become a settler. No sales of lands granted to the state by the federal government may exceed 320 acres to each purchaser, and the buyers must agree to perform within five years one of the following three conditions: They must fence for pasture 25 per cent of the land they buy, and convert it into pasture lands; they must cultivate 5 per cent of the land; or they must build a house upon the land and live in it twelve months.

THE KOCH TRIAL.

The Koch trial, for a second time, has ended in that travesty upon justice, a mistrial by the failure of the jury to agree. It is announced there will be a third trial, a third attempt to secure a positive finding by a jury on the guilt or innocence of Kosh.

The result is not at all surprising. For one thing, the evidence is almost purely circumstantial, and it is the hardest thing in the world to get twelve men to agree upon a hanging case when the evidence for the state is of that character. The apparent absence of any motive whatever is a stumbling block in the pathway of the state, also. If the state were able to prove a motive, this, taken in connection with the circumstantial evidence, would make it look much darker for the defense. The absence of a motive makes it doubtful whether any amount of evidence of that nature will result in a conviction.

A third reason for the mistrial is the evident existence of the bitterest and deepest kind of public feeling over the case, not only in New Ulm, the scene of the tragedy, but in other communities in that section of the state, including Mankato, the scene of the second trial. The people seem to be divided somewhere near equally, one portion profoundly convinced that Koch killed the murdered man, and the other side as firmly of the belief that he did not. Public sentiment so intense can hardly help making itself felt upon the jury, and no doubt that body is divided something the same way the communities are.

A disagreement in a criminal case is always vexatious, and in a case where a life is involved it is worse than that. The defendant has a right to a declaration of his guilt or innocence from the jury. The state, too, whose province it is to ascertain the guilt or innocence of the accused—not to convict regardless of the facts, as many prosecutors seem to think—has also a right to a positive decision. After the expense and worry of a long trial, a disagreement is depressing and discouraging to both sides, but so long as there are juries made up of nothing stronger than ordinary human nature, there will always be disagreements.

THE JUDGE AND NAN.

At first blush it would seem that Judge Vernon M. Davis of the supreme court of New York might be in better business than in making a semi-public announcement of his views on the Nan Patterson murder case, especially as he presided over the first two trials of the show girl, and his views come, therefore, with something of the air of authority. It is true that his remarks were made at a club dinner, and very likely the judge did not intend that they should be blazoned forth to the world as they have been.

Anyway, the public appears to have had enough of Nan Patterson for the present, though of course it is not her fault that it has had so much of her, as she did not seek the three trials that have made her such a prominent figure. But however that may be, the public is exhibiting signs that it is experiencing a satiety of Nan, and it will not be particularly grateful to the judge for giving it a fresh instalment.

At the same time, the judge's opinion is worth something to those that have not made up their minds about the case. He was present during the two trials, could observe the demeanor of the witnesses, especially of the defendant herself, and is supposedly not so subject to the influences of passion and prejudice as jurors are likely to be. Therefore, when he says Nan Patterson lied, his views are entitled to some weight with whoever there may be that cares whether she did or not. "I feel sure," said the judge, "that most people believe that the pistol that killed Caesar Young was held by Nan Patterson; was discharged by her; was bought by J. Morgan Smith in an attempt to get money from Young for the support of the common family." Then he intimates that the pistol was discharged in a struggle between the two, and that had Nan Patterson told the truth she would have been acquitted.

As to the public view, no doubt the judge is correct; most people do think that the Patterson woman held the revolver that killed Young, whether the killing was accidental or intentional. But three trials without either conviction or acquittal have earned the case the right to pass from public view. There are thousands of Caesar Youngs with their thousands of Nan Pattersons. If some of them have learned a lesson from the fate of their New York prototypes, the case has been worth while.

BUT GOD DISPOSES.

An example of what one man can do unaided and alone is afforded by the career of Samuel S. Shubert, the young theatrical manager who was killed in the Harrisburg railroad wreck last week. He died at the age of 31, manager of thirteen theaters in this country and two in London, at the height of his career. He had planned an aggressive campaign against the theatrical trust, and had matters just about where he could declare his independence and give the trust the most formidable competition it has yet had.

Ten years ago Sam Shubert clerked in a Syracuse shoe store days, and handed out programs evenings in one of the theaters. A year later he had made his start by taking out a Hoyt play, and from that point his advance was rapid. A theater in Syracuse, another in New York, and one after another he added to the holdings of his firm's theaters all over the country. He was on his way to Pittsburg to secure another when the Harrisburg wreck terminated his busy career.

The story is a unique instance of the power of one man's energy and push. Shubert had built large plans for the future, and had just begun to realize the hopes he had formed of a circuit that would make him independent of the trust. He was not the only one interested in such a consummation. Surely the public was much more deeply interested than he was, and though somebody will doubtless arise to take his place in the fight, there will be general regret that this opponent of the trust has been removed from the field of battle.

There is more than the usual touch of tragedy in this result of the Harrisburg horror. This man was cut off in the heyday of his youth and usefulness, and his rosy plans were shattered by the hand of death. Truly, "Man proposes but God disposes."

UNCLE SAM'S PALACE.

It would cause the shade of Benjamin Franklin to sit up and take notice if it happened to run across a description of the new American embassy in Paris. Our early ambassador to the French court would be apt to compare the accommodations of today with those that were afforded him when he was in Paris during the trying times of the American revolution, and if he knows what a change has taken place he could argue from that change alone much of the change that has taken place in the wealth and power and habits of the republic since he helped to make it possible.

For the new American embassy, 12 Quai de Billy, Paris, is a veritable palace. Here is part of a recent description of the home of the American ambassador: "The walls of the vestibule are of white and green marble and are hung with Louis XV tapestries. The ceiling of the vestibule is vaulted and is frescoed with a representation of Aurora. A marble stair-case leads to a suite of salons overlooking the Seine. These are decorated in ebony and gold with frescoed ceilings, one representing Venus in a chariot conducted by cupids and another Glory crowning Music. The dining hall has an old Flemish fireplace, topped with Louise Abbema's Salon picture, "Diana and the Hounds." The festival salon is a vast apartment sixty feet square. The walls are covered with tapestries and four frescoes portray the Nibelungen Legend. It is also used as a picture gallery and is where Mr. McCormick's collection of portraits of Napoleon, Washington, William the Great and many others is hung. Napoleon's portrait has the post of honor."

Very likely the royalty that Ben Franklin associated with did not have much better quarters than these, or more royal. And very likely, too, the author of "Poor Richard's Maxims" would agree that there is nothing more fitting than that the representative of a sovereign people should have royal housing.

Hotel Gossip.

"The passenger traffic on the lake boats this summer will depend largely upon weather conditions," said A. R. Graves of Cleveland, at the Spalding. "A continuation of the present disagreeable spell through what are generally considered the warm months would prove disastrous to the steamship lines which make a specialty of carrying passengers.

"But with good weather, this season should be a record breaker in the number of people carried on the lake vessels, owing to the Lewis and Clark exposition at Portland. Vessel men are hoping the long period of rain and wind now will exhaust the weather man to such an extent that he will furnish nothing but sunshine and occasional showers during what remains of the season. In this event a good share of the travel to the West will be via the lakes, where, if the weather is cold and otherwise unpleasant, the railroads will get the lion's share, and the boats will have a hard job to make any profit at all.

"This ought to be a good season for local hotels, which will help various other lines of business, for the usual number of tourists will be increased by those going to the exposition. Quite a lot of interest in the fair is manifested in the East, and there is every reason to believe that the attendance, from that section of the country, at least, will be satisfactory."

"I am at present engaged on a government work which will prove of interest to lumbermen and railroad men," said H. H. Chapman of the United States forestry department of Washington at the St. Louis. "I am assigned to discover as nearly as possible the amount of timber in Minnesota and Wisconsin available for making railroad ties. I have not yet completed my observations, but roughly speaking would estimate that in ten years the supply will begin to diminish, and in fifteen years will have become pretty well worked out.

"The time is not so very far distant, therefore, when the railroads in this part of the country will have to look to points farther west for the timber used for ties, or adopt a substitute. Experiments have been made with steel ties, and with concrete ties strengthened by steel rods, and these are among the possible substitutes. Then, it is possible that the roads may soon adopt some system of preserving the wooden ties to greater periods than now. Experiments showing that this is practicable have been made.

"I formerly had charge of the state experimental farm near Grand Rapids, Minn."

"The forestry reserve work at Cass Lake apnears to be progressing in a satisfactory manner," said Eugene S. Bruce, inspector of the United States forest service, at the St. Louis. "I have just come from the Cass Lake district, where I inspected the forest reserve work, and am now on my way to the Black Hills reserve, and the reserve on the Big Horn in Wyoming. At the two latter places I am to report on the advisability of allowing the sale of timber for ties. Applications have been made for 50,000,000 feet of tie timber on the Black Hills reserve, and for 165,000,000 feet on the other."

"The weather has not been very agreeable in the Twin Cities this spring, but, taken as a whole, I think it was above what you had here in Duluth, according to what I have heard since my arrival here," said Joseph Trempe of St. Paul at the McKay. "The fact that St. Paul is so much farther from the lake gives us a better choice of spring weather ordinarily than you get here, but I am not so sure that as much can be said of the summer brand. Last Sunday, for example, was all that could be desired in the Twin Cities, while here in Duluth you had rain, clouds and a cold wind off the lake."

More Ornamental Than Useful.

Chicago Chronicle: As all the gun foundries of Europe continue to work day and night, the peace tribunal at the Hague may as well turn off the gas, put up the shutters and post the usual notice on the door announcing an indefinite suspension of business. If Feeble, Don't Read This.

Brooklyn Eagle: A bald-headed man entered a New York hotel the other day and registered thus:

"Mc, London, Eng."

The clerk looked at the entry and politely asked him to write the rest of his name.

"That is all the name I have," said the guest.

The clerk looked at him dubiously for a moment, then thought he remembered his face.

At his earliest leisure the clerk looked up the registry of two years ago and found the following entry in the same handwriting:

"Harry McComb, Jr., M. P., London, Eng."

When next the guest came to the counter the clerk showed the old register to him.

"You wrote that, didn't you?"

"Yes," the guest admitted.

"Then why did you say that 'Mc' is your full name now?"

"Well, I'll tell you," said the guest. "You see, when I was here before I was a member of parliament, but I am not now. So I have no right to use the 'M. P.' My father died a year ago, so, of course, I do not use the 'Jr.' any more. Then, last fall, I had a fever and all my hair fell out; so, being no longer 'Harry,' I have no use for the 'Comb,' and there you are. There's nothing left but the 'Mc,' you see."

Thought It Must Be.

Boston Herald: Hannibal Hamlin, for many years a United States senator from Maine, and vice president during the Civil war, was wont to tell the following story on himself:

An Englishman by the name of Pearson, while passing along the main street in Bangor, stepped into a hole in the sidewalk, and, falling, broke his leg. He brought suit against the city for $1,000, and engaged Hamlin as counsel.

Hamlin won his case, but the city appealed to the supreme court. Here, also, the decision was for Hamlin's client.

After settling up the claim, Hamlin sent for his client and handed him $1.

"What's this?" asked the Englishman.

"That's your damages, after taking out my fee, the cost of appeal, and several other expenses," said Hamlin.

The Englishman looked at the dollar and then at Hamlin. "What's the matter with this," he said; "is it bad?"

Said By the Babes.

A lady and her little daughter were walking through a fashionable street when they came to a portion of the street strewn with straw, so as to deaden the noise of vehicles passing a certain house.

"What's that for, ma?" said the child, to which the mother replied, "That lady who lives in that house, my dear, has had a little baby girl sent her." The child thought a moment, looked at the quantity of straw, and said: "Awfully well packed, wasn't she, ma?"

First Great Sea Captain.

Springfield Republican: A controversy has already been begun as to whether Paul Jones was actually "the father of the American navy," and the honor of the title is claimed rather for John Barry of Philadelphia, who was appointed by the marine committee of the colonial congress to be captain of the Lexington, the first armed cruiser of the colonies, with which he made the first capture of a British vessel, the Edward. It is not necessary to call Jones "the father" of the navy or of anything else, for his actual achievements are clear and the title is only a sounding phrase. But as a matter of fact, a pretty fair arguments might be made for Jones' right to the title on the strength of his very remarkable reports, made to congress on the request of that body, in regard to the vessels of which it was the wisest to compose our navy, and in regard to our naval organization. There were many better patriots in the navy than Jones, and so if a title must be given him, let it be that of which there can be no question and which deals solely with efficiency, namely, "our first great sea captain," for that he was—and possibly greater, too, in sheer ability, than any that has come after him.

His One Idea.

Francis Wilson, at a wedding breakfast in New York, talked about the strange effects of love.

"I used to know," he said, "a young law clerk. No steadier and more reliable workman than this young clerk existed. Like a machine, he rose at 7 in the morning and retired at 10 at night, and like a machine he executed all his employer's tasks with silent speed and accuracy.

"Then it happened that a beautiful girl moved into the house next door to his, and he fell in love with her.

"And now behold the strange effects of love.

"'Jenkins, said the clerk's employer one morning, 'have you finished drawing up the briefs of Hoskin and Maybury?'

"'Yes, ducky,' the young man answered dreamily."

THE WAYS ARE GREEN.

The ways are green with the gladdening sheen
Of the young year's fairest daughter.
Oh, the shadows that fleet o'er the springling wheat!
Oh, the magic of running water!
The spirit of spring is in everything.
The banners of spring are streaming,
We march to a tune from the flfes of June,
And life's a dream worth dreaming.

It's all very well to sit and spell
At the lesson there's no gainsaying;
But what the deuce are wont and use
When the whole mad world's a-Maying!
When the meadow glows and the orchard snows
And the air's with love-motes teeming,
When fancies break, and the senses wake,
Oh, life's a dream worth dreaming!

What Nature has writ with her lusty wit
Is worded so wisely and kindly,
That whoever has dipped in her manuscript
Must up and follow her blindly.
Now the summer prime is her blithest rhyme
In the being and the seeming,
And they that have heard the overword
Know life's a dream worth dreaming.

MINNESOTA OPINIONS.

Hibbing Tribune: A campaign has been started against the blind pigs in and aorund Eveleth. It is a commendable procedure and should spread to the other range towns. St. Cloud Journal-Press: T. H. Shevlin, the lumber king of the Northwest, says he prefers to do business with the traffic managers of the railroads rather than with the government. No doubt. How about the lumbermen who have to compete with the genial Thomas?

Madison Independent-Press: Ex-Governor Van Sant may not think he is out of politics, but the people of the state know that he is.

Walker Pilot: The state fair association has commenced to bleed the country press. Can hardly blame the fair directors though when the newspapers are so willing to stand for it.

Long Prairie Democrat: We hear much about good men going wrong, but you may write it down in your diary that the good man who goes wrong is in reality a bad man who has just been found out.

St. Peter Free Press: While reciprocal demurrage was beaten at the last session it is far from being dead. The question is of vital interest to the small shipper and to the farmer and will be very much alive at the next session. In the meantime it should be agitated until the people thoroughly understand the proposition. After that it will be an easy matter to pass the needed legislation.

The Next Question.

Fargo Forum: The reports of the assessors at Duluth show that over $1,000,000 of improvements made last year were concealed from the building inspector. Now the additional question comes up as to how much more was concealed from the assessor.

DEFENDS HONOR

A. E. Humphreys Fights at Denver In Answer to Accusations.

Sensational Encounter Takes Place at Meeting of Mining Men.

Denver papers of last week tell the story of a sensational fight that took place at a meeting of mining men in that city, one of the principals in the encounter being A. E. Humphreys, whom nearly all Duluthians will remember as one of the men active in the mining development of the Mesaba range in the early days. The Denver Republican reports the scrap in this fashion:

"A fierce, determined and bloody rough and tumble fight took place in the office of Charles S. Thomas, former governor, yesterday, between A. E. Humphreys, the millionaire mine owner of Denver and Creede, and J. C. Ralphsnyder of Fairmont, West Virginia, a prominent lawyer of that state. It took place at a meeting of the stockholders of the Union Mines company of Creede. It was the preliminary to a litigation that promises to furnish the sensation of the year.

"The encounter was of such a long nature that some of the stockholders present became alarmed and Mr. Thomas, a man of peace and having always the law in view, and with a horror of the police court, telaphoned for police assistance. When the officers arrived they were met at the door of the office by Mart Matrous, one of those present holding a proxy, who informed them that a mistake had been made in calling for the police, and, being a former policeman himself, his word was accepted and the scandal suppressed.

"There were present at the meeting C. S. Thomas, president of the United Mines company and chairman of the meeting; W. P. Malburn, secretary; W. H. Bryant, Mart Watrous, A. E. Humphreys, J. J. Brown, Charles Burns, Ben Brown, L. B. Brown and J. C. Ralphsnyder.

"Trouble had been brewing in the company for quite awhile. There is a majority faction and a minority faction. The latter has been accusing the majority of unfair dealing, of doing the 'merger act' a la Wall street.

"The storm broke yesterday at the meeting. The principal bone of contention was the consolidation of the Humphreys Mill & Tunnel company with the United Mines company.

"It was also charged by Mr. Ralphsnyder, speaking for himself and the minority stockholders that money that belonged to the United Mines company had been wrongly converted by the majority. This set Mr. Humphreys, one of the heaviest holders, on his ear. He resented the imputation.

"For answer, the West Virginian said that was not the worst of the charges that would be made against certain persons connected with the company.

"Mr. Humphreys demanded that Mr. Ralphsnyder take back the accusations, but the latter positively declined; hot words passed, and in a few seconds the two were lashing out.

"Round one ended with honors even. Several of the people present wanted to act as peacemakers, but the principals would not have them. Ugly words had passed and they were determined to wipe out the insults, or fancied insults.

"Again the two went at each other, knocking over tables and books and inflicting more damage than is usually given and received in such impromptu affairs. Mr. Thomas sought to place himself between the combatants, but he was warned off. The mining men really formed a ring. They thought if the two were permitted to pummel each other, the litigation that Mr. Ralphsnyder came here to undertake might be dropped. When the third round was at its height the telephone was used to call the police.

"At the close the Virginian had a cut under his ear. At first it was believed someone had used a knife, but second inspection proved the wound to have been made by a finger nail of some length. Mr. Humphreys was the worst off at the finish and had his countenance as well as his laundry ruffled. For the rest of the meeting Mr. Waldrous acted as sergeant-at-arms.

"The meeting decided to consolidate and take in the leasing company that is owned by the majority faction of the stockholders and the Humphreys, Mill & Tunnel company. Recently the parent company has been doing well and the stock has gone up in the market. The minority is claiming that the minor companies taken over and owned by the majority faction were watered before they were taken in and that an injustice had been done the minority.

"The United Mines company owns the Cleopatra, New Discovery, Happy Thought and Argenta properties. The company is the principal one in the camp.

"No charges were made or will be made against Mr. Humphreys. He got into the fight defending his friends on the board who have been charged with a freezing out process. It is promised that a suit will be instituted in the federal court over the Creede corporation within a few days.

"Mr. Humphreys was much exercised over the affair.

"'I won't allow anyone to assail my honor without doing something about it,' he said. 'As for the books of the allied companies, they are open for the inspection of anybody, and I will agree to pay $50 to the company for every dollar that can be shown to have been wrongfully paid out.'"

FIGHT ON STREET IMPROVEMENTS

Superior and Second Street Owners Both Claim First Attention.

Council Orders Both But Postpones Decision on Priority.

The council last evening:
Ordered the paving of West Superior and Second streets.
Received request for permit to operate dancing pavilion in Lincoln park.
Declined to allow any more saloons to be established on Fourth street.
Authorized the health commissioner to advertise for bids for a garbage crematory.

The council meeting last evening was the scene of a little skirmish between the aldermen from the West end and the aldermen from the central part of the city and the East end, which resulted in a draw, the decision being postponed for one week.

The skirmish was caused by the question of paving Second street and West Superior street. Petitions for the paving of Second street from Sixth avenue west to Seventh avenue east, and for paving Mesaba and Piedmont avenues and Superior street from Eighth avenue west to Twenty-sixth avenue west, were both reported on favorably by the board of public works, and the council ordered both improvements to be made. The Second street contract is about a $50,000 job and the West Superior street contract about a $100,000 job.

Alderman Moore then precipitated the scrap by moving that the Second street contract be ordered done first. He stated that he made this motion because he believed that if the Second street improvement were made first both contracts could be completed this year, but that otherwise the Second street contract would have to go over. The reason for this, according to his claim, was that some of the assessments against railroad property along the line of the West Superior street improvement will have to be paid for from the permanent improvement fund, and this cannot be done until after the November settlement. This would impoverish the revolving fund until that time and the Second street contract would have to be held up.

The West end aldermen vigorously protested against the precedence of the Second street work, claiming that the board had reported that it was impossible to make both improvements this year, and insisting on the West Superior street job as the more important.

The matter was finally laid over one week for a report on the condition of the fund, but meanwhile both improvements have been ordered and preliminary work in both will be rushed along.

It is since pointed out, however, that the aldermen made a mistake in supposing that the assessments for the railroad property would be paid for from the general fund, and this fact will doubtless be discovered when the matter is looked up. Section 359 of the charter reads as follows:

"The amounts which would otherwise be assessable against public property or property exempt from assessment for local improvements shall be paid out of the general fund of the city."

Alderman Wilson said that if he found both improvements could not be made, he was in favor of pushing the West end improvement first, but that he believed that both could be done this year.

With the object of making both improvements this year if possible, Alderman Moore moved that it be taken as the sense of the council that no more small contracts be ordered until the two improvements in question were disposed of.

"The small sewer contracts can be done any time," said Mr. Moore. "They can be let late in the fall just as well as now, while these big contracts have to be let as soon as possible in order to be completed this year."

W. J. Chestock applied for a license to operate a dancing pavilion, roller skating rink and refreshment booth adjoining Lincoln park. He stated that the building which Mrs. L. A. Cox proposed to erect on the site of the old pavilion would be used for dancing, roller skating, band concerts, indoor baseball, and basket ball, while adjoining it would be a refreshment booth where light lunches and ice cream would be served.

He stated that President Haven had been misinformed when he stated that 90 per cent of the residents of the West end were opposed to the pavilion.

"I have made a canvass of the situation," he said, "and it is my opinion that 90 per cent of the residents are either in favor of the dancing pavilion or are indifferent concerning it.

"I would have a lease of five years on the building and I could not afford to allow the pavilion to be run in such a manner as to cause my license to be revoked, even though my inclination should be to do so."

Mrs. Cox, the owner of the ground, also called attention to the fact that the council had granted a license for a pavilion in Lester Park, and the fact that the park board had refused to buy her property at a fair valuation, but had rendered it valueless for any other purpose.

The matter was referred to the committee on police and license.

On a motion by Alderman Moore the council declared itself opposed to the transfer of a saloon license from Superior street to 411 West Fourth street.

The council has been in receipt of a number of petitions from the residents of Fourth street, protesting against the granting of any more liquor licenses for that district, declaring that it was being turned into a "Bowery." Henry Schuman made application for a transfer of a license, now covering a saloon on Superior street. The aldermen declared themselves opposed to the transfer on the following division:

Yeas—Aldermen Barnes, Chesney, Getchell, Harker, Lyle, Moore, Ribenack, Wilson and Haven, 9.

Nays—Aldermen McEwen, Olson, Schaffer, Tessman, Trevilion and Waugh, 6.

Alderman Mueller asked to be excused from voting.

The application of Frank Lillis for a license to conduct a theater at 17 and 19 Second avenue west, was referred to the committee on police and license for a report.

Health Commissioner Murray was authorized to advertise for bids for the erection of a garbage crematory in Duluth.

The report of the garbage commission recommending a site for the crematory on Railroad street, was received. The site recommended comprises lots 1 to 8 inclusive, of block 25, and lot 17, of block 24, Bay Front division. It gives a frontage of 200 feet on Railroad street, with an average depth of 165 feet.

* * *

The health commissioner was also authorized to arrange for the establishment of a branch of the state laboratory in Duluth for the analysis of diphtheria and tuberculosis cultures.

* * *

On a motion by Aldermen Barnes and McEwen, the street railway company was requested to put an extra double truck car on the West Duluth line between the hours of 6:12 and 6:32 p. m., to accommodate the rush of traffic at that time of the day.

An opinion was requested from the city attorney as to whether the water and light department has the right to occupy streets or avenues in building the new reservoir at West Duluth.

MARKET IS ACTIVE

Good Demand For Copper With Prices Continuing Unchanged.

Copper Shares Are Stagnant With Public Holding Aloof.

Copper prices are unchanged according to George L. Walker's weekly letter, but there is more activity in the market. Foreigners are again buying liberally and this has tended to create a firmer feeling in the market. Copper shares still continue dull with the public holding aloof from the market. Walker says:

"Copper is firmer and more active at unchanged prices. Lake is 15 to 15⅜ cents and electrolytic is 15 to 15¼ cents per pound. Quite a number of sales have been made this week at 15 cents and a shade better. Foreign consumers are again buying quite heavily, and domestic consumers who have been holding back for a long time, have been forced to come into the market and buy at producers' prices. It is well known in trade circles that a great many consumers are in a position where they must buy copper. Producers, on the other hand, are rich in cash and bare of unsold copper supplies. Their disposition is to hold out for full prices, and they can afford to wait as well as not. China has recently bought from 30,000,000 to 40,000,000 pounds more copper in this market at about 15 cents per pound for export in May, June and July. There has been no falling off in the European demand, and the prospect now is that the exports of 1905 will exceed the remarkable total of 1904.

"One of the several factors that has discouraged the buyers of copper was the recent sale of wire for advance delivery by some manufacturers at prices which represented a 15-cent copper market. Inquiry develops the fact that these manufacturers in effect went short of the metal taking their chances of being able to buy it at a lower price. One wire man is privately quoted as saying that he follows the practice of making such contracts whenever he thinks the metal market likely to decline, and that if he "hits" it right once in three times he gets more than the average business profit on all of the transactions. The tone of the metal market just at the present moment is such as to warrant the belief that the wire men have not 'hit it,' but that they have been 'hit' this time.

"Attention is called to the fact that notwithstanding the constant heaviness of the London speculative metal market, there is excellent buying of copper in this market for export. It is believed that London quotations are being depressed by the buyers. A trade authority says that as soon as the largest producing and selling interest wishes American consumers to come into the market and supply their advance wants it will bring them in by bidding up the London metal market and forcing the foreign short interest to cover.

"The remarkable strength of the copper situation can only be appreciated when it is known that production is very much heavier than ever before, and that despite this there is a consumption demand for every pound that is coming from the mines at 15 cents per pound.

COPPER SHARES.

"This is a period of general pessimism and speculative dullness. The quietness of the market is due chiefly to the fact that it is low, as the public almost always avoids low markets. It seemingly requires high prices and the accompanying enthusiasm to induce the public to buy stocks. When stocks are low the public withdraws from the market and tries to reason it out that prices should go still lower. The public has not been a factor in the copper share market to any great extent, except as a cash buyer, during the past two years. It still persists in figuring copper share values on the bassi of a 12-cent copper market, and yet there is no prospect that we will have such a market in many years to come, if ever again.

"Business conditions are much better in this country than ever before—so good that there is a scarcity of labor in almost every line of industry. For years we had as a part of the labor problem the question of taking care of the unemployed. Now the problem is to find unemployed labor. Business expansion has even outgrown immigration. Increasing gold production is furnishing the money to sustain and continue this industrial growth; and the crop prospects for the present year are such as to give basis for hope that we shall draw heavily, through our exports, from the wealth of other countries.

"There is unquestionably more money seeking investment now than at any previous time in a generation, and industrial conditions are such as to make securities unusually attractive. Substantially all factors are favorable to stock market activity." The croakings of two or three pessimists and the misdeeds of as many men in high places seem to be all that stands in the way of expanding financial confidence and investment demand. Such things as these constitute a temporary rather than a permanent condition. They will soon be forgotten and the public will again be moved to activity by its continuing and increasing prosperity.

"The coppers are in an ideal position. The constant absorption of Amalgamated, Utah, U. S. Mining, Boston Consolidated, Copper Range, Mohawk, Bingham and other stocks is of a character that must make it clear to everybody that plans are laid for an active and higher market in the coppers in the very near future. The people who are buying these stocks are not guessing on the future. They know what conditions are and what is likely to happen in the financial world. The public has an opportunity now to buy coppers with the insiders and the big men."

PLEADINGS OF NO AVAIL

Jury Convicts Ettinger Woman Summarily After Short Trial.

Convicted of the crime of grand larceny in the second degree, on two separate counts, Rose Ettinger, the young woman accused of taking several hundred dollars in money and a quantity of jewelry from the Acme hotel, on Lake avenue, has been remanded to jail to a wait sentence.

Her trial, which was held after 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon, was almost a record-breaker in the way of dispatch in disposing of a criminal case. By 5 o'clock the jury had returned the verdict.

Three witnesses were examined for the state, one of whom, Sergeant Osborn, of the police department at Superior, told of the Ettinger woman's attempt to throw away some of the stolen property after she was arrested.

The young woman attempted no tangible defense interrupting the proceedings many times by her expression "Honest to God, judge, I did not steal them. I bought them with my own money."

She kept insisting that she bought the property from another girl by the name of Mary Schaefer, but inquiry could draw forth no satisfactory information as to whom Mary Schaefer was or where she could be found.

Since her committment to the county jail to a wait the action of the grand jury, Rose Ettinger was detected in the act of attempting to give the appearance of ursage to a large piece of new silk, by putting the cloth in the bathtub in the woman's department at the jail. It is believed that she lifted the silk from some dry goods store and was afraid that it would in some way endanger her chances of acquittal if found in her possession.

Samuel Lando, the diminutive Jewish junk peddler who was tried yesterday for stealing a $10 watch from a woodsman, while the two men were occupying the same apartment at a Bowery lodging house, was found guilty of grand larceny in the second degree. Lando was also remanded for sentence.

The murder trial of Peter Lenich and Juj Louger, will begin tomorrow. Both men are accused of the murder of Peter Korceran, who was fatally stabbed in the street at Dvelteh, April 18, following a drunken brawl.

HYGIENIC VALUE OF THE McCRAY REFRIGERATORS

The pre-eminent hygienic value of the McCray Refrigerator places it above all others. In addition it offers every real merit of other refrigerators and many that belong to it alone. It offers one-third to one-half more cooling space than any other. The insulation is absolutely the best; the inside never sweats and is always (even in the ice chamber) perfectly dry and odorless.

Hundreds of physicians and health institutions, after long trial, have given our system highest praise. The Battle Creek Sanitarium of Battle Creek, Mich., a large institution known the world over as very strict as to hygienic principles and rules, writes them as follows: "We have had in use for some time two of your cooling rooms, and they have given the best of satisfaction. We would not know how to suggest any improvements that would make the cooling rooms any more suitable to us. Your refrigerators have proven to be economical in saving ice, thoroughly sanitary, and in many ways are superior to ordinary cooling room."

The McCray Refrigerator will last a life-time and will save its cost in ice in a short time. It is sold entirely on its merits.

JELLIES AND PRESERVES

State Food Commissioner Tells How They Are Adulterated.

St. Paul, May 16.—The state dairy and food commissioner has issued the following bulletin:

The sale of jellies, jams and preserves in this state is regulated by a law which compels the proper labeling of all the different grades. In the first place it must be remembered that these articles may be adulterated and still be sold legally within the state. Jelly is deemed adulterated:

1. If any substance or substances, or any other jelly, shall have been mixed with it so as to lower or depreciate its quality, strength or purity.

2. If any inferior or cheaper substance or substances have been substituted wholly or in part for it.

3. If any valuable or necessary constituent or ingredient has been wholly or in part abstracted from it.

4. If it is an imitation of or sold or represented for sale under the name of any other substance or article.

5. If it is treated in any manner whereby damage or inferiority is concealed, or if by any means it is made to apear better or of greater value than it really is.

6. If it contains any added substance or ingredient which is poisonous or injurious to health.

Any jelly which is not adulterated within the meaning of the above definitions may be sold as pure. All jellies which are adulterated must bear upon the label the words "Mixture" and "Adulterated." This however does not permit the sale of any jelly containing ingredients injurious to health, as the general law prohibits such ingredients in all food products.

Every one is undoubtedly familiar with the cheap jelly which is on sale in every grocery in the state. This article consists largely of glucose or corn syrup and is not an objectionable article of food. The law simply provides that its presence in the jelly must be made known by the label referred to.

Fruit jams and preserves in order to be sold as pure must consist wholly of pure fruit and granulated sugar. If other ingredients (glucose being the popular adulterant) are contained in the article it must be labelled "mixed and adulterated." Very seldom do we find anything of an injurious nature in these adulterated jellies, jams and preserves, and where we do find thm prosecution promptly follows.

The person who purchases this cheap jelly is securing a wholesome article and gets just what he pays for.

The effort of some manufacturers to coin high sounding names for their cheap goods can be well illustrated by calling attention to those reported from our chemists. Below are reports of those received from our chemists in the past two weeks which are the most glaring:

Lab. No. 265. Cane Drips, Shields Sorghum Co., St. Paul. Illegal. Sample consists chiefly of commercial glucose.

Lab. No. 248. Maple Cane. C. W. Goyer & Co., Memphis, Tenn. Illegal. Sample is a glucose mixture.

Lab. No. 45. Strained Honey, "Purity" brand. E. G. Dailey Co., Detroit, Mich. Illegal. Sample consists largely of commercial glucose.

Lab. No. 166. Strawberry preserves. Letts, Spencer, Smith Co., Mason City, Iowa. Sample is a glucose mixture colored with coal tar dye.

Lab. No. 269. Sorghum "Pure Tennessee" brand. D. R. Scully Syrup Co., Chicago. Illegal. Sample contains commercial glucose.

EDWARD K. SLATER,
Commissioner.

Dynamite Tears Out Eye.

Through an accidental explosion of dynamite, Charles Anderson, a farmer residing at Poplar, a Wisconsin station a short distance out of Superior, on the Omaha road, had one eye torn out of the socket, the other severely injured, and sustained other bodily injuries. Anderson was dynamiting stumps on his farm and was carrying the explosive in a pail. In lighting a match a portion of the burning sulphur flew off and ignited the paper about the dynamite. Anderson dropped the pail and attempted to get away, but the explosive was quicker and fragments of the pail struck him in the face.

White Sox Win First Game of Hibbing Series.

Lynch and Eymons Have Pitchers' Battle In Rain.

Hibbing, May 16.—(Special to The Herald.)—In a game played in a driving rain storm, the Duluth White Sox defeated the Hibbing team here yesterday afternoon by the score of 6 to 5. Over 400 fans braved the weather to witness the contest.

Lynch and Symons both pitched good ball, but Lynch had fortune with him and while the White Sox secured less hits than did the home team, they came at more opportune moments. Both pitchers had one bad inning, in which four runs were scored.

Both teams fielded well in spite of the wet field, and the game proved to be an interesting one for the fans who faced the rain. The score:

Duluth	0	0 0 4 0 0 1 0 1	6 6 3
Hibbing	0	0 0 0 4 0 0 0 1	5 8 4

The two teams are playing again this afternoon. Freeman will pitch for Hibbing and Dennis Potts will be in the box for the leaguers.

"WHAT HAPPENED TO JONES."

Harry Corson Clarke Presents Laughable Farce.

CAST:

Jones	Harry Corson Clarke
Ebenezer Goodly	Henry Stingley
Antony Goodly, D.D.	William McBride
Richard Heatherly	James Morrison
Thomas Holder	William Harris
William Bigbee	William Harris
Cissy	Margaret Dale Owen
Mrs. Goodly	Olive Fliteau
Marjorie	Rachel Crown
Alvina Starlight	Myra Ketcham
Helma	Sada Talbot

Rather a small house greeted Harry Corson Clarke at the Metropolitan theater last evening, when, with his strong supporting company, he appeared in "What Happened to Jones." The performance will be repeated tonight, tomorrow afternoon and night. The several parts were well handled, and the production, as is always the case, was productive of much laughter.

Before the curtain went up on the first act Mr. Clarke announced that, owing to the indisposition of Sterling Whitney, the part of Richard Heatherly, the lover of Marjorie, would be read by James Morrison. The latter was about as satisfactory as was possible under the circumstances, although working under great disadvantage.

Mr. Clarke as Jones acquitted himself well. He was as funny as could be desired. Henry Stingley did very well as Ebenezer Goodly, and William McBride was solemn and comical as the bishop. No criticism can be offered on the work of Olive Fliteau as Ebenezer's wife, and Rachel Crown was charming as Marjorie, her daughter. Myra Ketcham was clever as Alvina Starlight, and Margaret Dale Owen made a very attractive Cissy.

"A LITTLE OUTCAST."

Tonight at the Lyceum "A Little Outcast" will be presented. An exchange says of the company:

"Walter Harmon, in the role of Paul Weston, does excellent work. He is an actor who has power united with finesse and a style which commands itself for its simplicity and directness. Petite Dolly Dupree is featured as "Bob" the newsboy, a role which she plays so archly and untheatrically that every little newsboy in the country is her sworn friend. Millicent Evans, Chas. Crane, Harry Morton and many other favorites are also in the cast. A newsboys' quintet, composed of small urchins with marvelous voices, is a pleasing feature."

MADAME GADSKI.

"The mere singing of notes is not sufficient to make a singer great in the eyes of the world," says the Musical Review. "Heart and soul must combine to support a beautiful voice. Herein Gadski stands on a par with Lili Lehmann. Indeed, the great diva herself pronounced Mme. Gadski her legitimate successor. With all the advantages that a successful singer is only to eager to have, Mme. Gadski is still in the prime of youth. Her artistic career is just in its zenith. Her strength and usefulness is just at a stage where she is able to give us all the magnificence of her strong personality. A woman of stirring temperament, an artist to the manor born, an interpreter of the German lieder, the like of which has seldom appeared here. Mme. Gadski is bound to gather around her students, music lovers and musicians."

Madame Gadski is to appear at the Lyceum with the Pittsburgh Orchestra next Monday.

HIS MOTHER'S DEATH

Revealed to Young Man By a Dream.

Bridgeport, Conn., May 16.—William Craw, a 19-year-old patient in the Bridgeport hospital, has amazed the surgeons by a mysterious faculty of "seeing things" in dreams before they happen or about the time they happen. Mrs. Rosa Jeyson, a sister of the young man, who is recovering from the loss of a leg in a railroad accident, called on him. His mother died after he was taken to the hospital and his sister feared to break the news.

"Mother had another of those bad spells last night," she said.

"Why, mother is dead now," said the young man sadly. Then he told of a dream. "I knew she was dead last night when I had a dream at 10 o'clock," he said. The boy's mother died at 10 o'clock, the hour he had the dream.

HAS RIGHT OF WAY

New Railroad Has Obtained Practically All of Land Needed.

Protest to Council Rather Late—Chance to Lose Paving.

Marion Douglas had a communication before the city council last evening to the effect that he represented all of the property owners south of Michigan street west, and protested as such against the Lake Superior & Southeastern road crossing Michigan street at Twenty-fourth and Thirty-third avenues, claiming that it will be necessary in such case for those having their homes below Michigan street to cross railroad tracks in going to or coming from business, schools, etc. According to the desire expressed in this letter, it is hoped that the railroad company will continue on a straight line clear to Fortieth avenue west.

So far as the railroad is concerned, it is rather late for such a protest, for the reason that practically all of the right-of-way to the ore dock is bought up now. There are one or two pieces west of Twenty-fourth avenue west which still remain to be purchased, but deals for these will shortly be closed.

As to the dangers people living below the street will have in crossing the track, the railroad people give assurances that there will be no more danger than in crossing a street railway track, nor quite as much, for no cars will be left standing there, nor will any be shunted there. The switching will all take place in the yards, which will be established at Sixteenth avenue west, below Michigan street, and in the other and larger yards somewhere not yet given out at West Duluth. All Bay front residents will have to look out for, will be thet rains; not switching engines.

Another matter which came up in the council meeting last evening, and which is of interest to the West end, was W. J. Chestock's application for a license to operate a dancing pavilion adjoining Lincoln park. He promised that it would be run right, and that none of the objectionable features to which the council has heretofore protested will be allowed. The applicant referred to President Haven's statement that 90 per cent of the neighboring residents are against a pavilion, and said that Mr. Haven is mistaken, and that 90 per cent of the neighboring residents are willing or indifferent. The matter was referred.

NEED THE PAVING.

Fear West Superior Street May Be Shelved.

Because of the lack of funds to take care of all the paving proposed for this year, there is a chance that West Superior street, from Eighth to Twenty-fourth avenues will be overlooked. The matter came up in the council last evening, and while the board of public works was instructed to advertise for bids for several pavement jobs, among them the West end proposition, it was admitted that one of them would have to be abandoned, and it is now a question of which one.

Alderman Moore, in a minority report, said that while a majority of the street committee favored the West end project first, he urged that Second street, from Sixth avenue west to Seventh avenue east, should be paved, believing that the money for the improvement would be paid in rapidly, making the revolving fund available for money to pave the West end later this year.

Alderman Schaffer fought this idea, and said that West Superior street is the most important in the city, being the business thoroughfare between Duluth and Superior and between the center of the city and the West end and West Duluth.

GIRLS ENTERTAIN

At Swedish Mission Church Thursday Night.

On Thursday evening next the Girls' society of the Swedish Mission church will give a basket social at the church. The society is known as the "Bee Hive" of the church, which is at Twenty-first avenue west and Second street, and the girls have been as busy as bees all winter, proving a great help in church and Sunday school work. The evening's entertainment will open at 8 o'clock and will begin with a scriptural reading and a prayer. Then the following program will be given:

Farmers Prosperous.

A. Thoren of the West end went to Grand Lake on Sunday to visit the Sunday schools there and visit some friends who live on farms near there. Mr. Thoren says he finds the Sunday school work kept up in fine shape and also found that the farmers around there are feeling content and seem to be prosperous. The farmers are busy these days, says Mr. Thoren, clearing off the land and seeding the parts already cleared. The land in that vicinity he considers as of a high grade and the farmers who have taken it up are well satisfied with the prospects.

Birth Record.

The birth record of the West end still keeps up. Sons have just been born to Messrs. and Mesdames Oscar Arhchambault of 2613 Railroad street, Joseph Laundry of 1520 West Superior street, and Adolph Peterson of 2724 Helm street. Daughters have been born to Messrs. and Mesdames Paul Jensen of 3008 West Third street, Alfred Oulette of 1416 West First street, and Alfred Erickson of 3126 West Third street.

West End Shortrails.

Mrs. John J. Moe will leave next Saturday for Norway, where she will spend the summer visiting her relatives.

Mrs. Gross of Minneapolis is visiting her mother, Mrs. Aronson of West Tenth street and Twenty-third avenue.

A musical program of considerable interest will be given next Friday evening by the Sunday school of the Norwegian-Danish M. E. church at the church.

Barney Martin of Munising, Mich., is the new night clerk at the Esmond hotel.

Mrs. R. E. Hanson of 1909 West Third street is at St. Mary's hospital, where she was operated on a few days ago by Dr. Oredson. She is well on the way to recovery at this time.

Dr. David Seashore of Lake Prairie, Minn., was at the West end yesterday looking around with a view to settling here.

The Baptist Sunday school teachers will meet Friday evening with A. Thoren, 226 Twentieth avenue west.

The congregation of Bethany church will meet a week from tonight to decide upon a call to Rev. Nyvall of Moorhead.

BOOM GIVES AWAY.

Brives Held Back By Accident to Namakan Company.

International Falls, Minn., May 16.—The large boom of the Namakan Logging company at Rainy river, fifty-five miles west of here, gave way Sunday and the company immediately wired Gert Colburn, who has charge of its operations, to send crews to the Little and Big Fork rivers and hold up the drives in those streams until the break could be repaired. There were several million feet of logs in the boom.

A report has been received from St. Paul to the effect that an assistant is to be furnished John A. Holler, the collector of customs here. In the winter months one man is able to handle the business properly, as all passengers and freight from the Canadian side of the river are landed at the ferry docks, directly in front of the collector's choice. In the season of navigation, however, when the boats plying on Rainy river and Rainy lake are also bringing passengers and freight into town, one man cannot look after the business.

CHURCH TRUST MEETS FAVOR

Of Rockefeller, who Commends His New York Pastor.

New York, May 16.—John D. Rockefeller said Sunday the Standard Oil company, by its success in consolidating many small companies into a great trust, had set a good example for the churches. Rev. Dr. Johnson, the pastor of the Fifth Avenue Baptist church, preached a long sermon on the importance of doing away with creeds and dogmas, and the organization of a great universal church, where all Christians can worship the one living God.

After the service Dr. Johnson joined the group gathered about Mr. Rockefeller. The latter grasped him by the hand and congratulated him on his sermon. "Doctor," he said, "I enjoyed your sermon very much."

"Thank you," replied Dr. Johnson. "Do you know, Mr. Rockefeller, I think it is the message of the church today. It has got to come, otherwise the churches will be swept aside in the march of progress."

"Excuse me for speaking sharply," said Mr. Rockefeller, "but when we first began work in consolidating the competitive system, every body said: 'You cannot do it; it can't be done.' We said: 'It can be done; it must be done; it has got to come,' and today we are vindicated in our judgment, for we can show the world the progress achieved by consolidation and its benefits to civilization. As we become more and more imbued with the spirit of Jesus Christ, individually, I mean, the church will naturally follow in the same channel and tend toward one great end."

John D. Rockefeller, Jr., greeted his Bible class after a five months' absence, and bade them farewell until the fall. He explained that the condition of his health would not permit him to resume his duties as leader for the rest of the season. From the sad tenor of his remarks, it is believed that he contemplates resigning the leadership of the class. During his address Mr. Rockefeller's repeated reference to the will of God in the matter of meeting the class again was taken to indicate a feeling of despondency over the state of his health. After addressing the class, he left the church unobserved.

The Bible class will close for the summer in two weeks.

LAFE YOUNG

Wins In Suit Over State Binding Charges.

Des Moines, Iowa, May 16.—Lafe Young, former state binder, who has been defendant in a suit brought to recover $4,000 alleged overcharges, has won the suit. A jury returned a verdict for him, and the "skiver scandal," famous in Iowa for five years, bids fair to have an end. The case was on trial for a week and Attorney General Mullan fought hard to recover from Mr. Young.

Nothing has been said by Mr. Young, but it is understood his friends regard the winning of the suit as a great moral and political victory. Mr. Young is the leading Iowan in the fight against Governor Cummins and the governor's ideas on the tariff.

A Real Doctor's Prescription

FOR THE DISTRESSING COMPLAINTS AND DISEASES OF WOMEN.

What the Most Eminent Medical Authorities Say of the Ingredients Contained in

Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription,

WHICH ARE:

LADY'S SLIPPER (Cypripedium Pubescens)
BLACK COHOSH (Cimicifuga Racemosa)
UNICORN ROOT (Chamælirium Luteum)
BLUE COHOSH (Caulophyllum Thalictroides)
GOLDEN SEAL (Hydrastis Canadensis)

Lady's Slipper cures cramps, spasms and convulsions, and has a specific action in painful periods, nervous twitchings, chorea and epilepsy. It quiets irritability of the nervous system, and causes the mind to become calm and cheerful. Its effects are most happy in hysteria, melancholia, sleeplessness, nervous headaches, excitability and sensitiveness. It is also a tonic of great power.

Black Cohosh is efficient in overcoming painful or suppressed periods, leucorrhea, ovarian pains, bearing down feelings, and the other diseases of the uterine system; the headaches which accompany them and those of nervous origin. It is employed successfully in the treatment of nervous excitability, St. Vitus's Dance and convulsions. It is an appetizer of particular efficacy, is used in rheumatic and neuralgic troubles, and is a general as well as a uterine tonic.

Unicorn root has distinctive medicinal properties. It imparts tone and vigor to all of the reproductive organs of women, and removes diseased and abnormal conditions. It is of the greatest service in cases of falling or other displacements of the womb, and it unquestionably makes childbirth easy and safe. It is of great benefit in inflammation of the bladder, dyspepsia, nausea and loss of appetite.

Blue Cohosh prepares women for childbirth and makes them more comfortable in mind and body. It prevents miscarriages, causes labor to be easier, shorter and less painful, and diminishes the number of the days of confinement. It stops the nausea and vomiting of pregnancy and can be relied upon to produce good results in painful or suppressed periods, leucorrhea, uterine inflammation, and all the nervous symptoms attending the diseases peculiar to women.

Golden Seal is a valuable tonic which is especially useful in all inflammatory conditions of the mucous membranes exemplified by uterine and vaginal irritations, leucorrhea and bladder troubles. It quickly cures nausea, vomiting, indigestion and dyspepsia, and increases the appetite. It is also a regulator of the functions of the liver and the intestines.

All of these statements can be verified in detail by reference to King's American Dispensatory, Bartholow's, Scudder's and other recent standard works on the medicinal action of the native drugs of North America.

The marvellously curative effects of the special combination of these remedies in one medicine, namely,

Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription

is testified to by the unanimous praises it has received from many thousands of women, each of whom has been restored to health by it, after suffering from some one or more of the diseases peculiar to her sex. DR. PIERCE'S FAVORITE PRESCRIPTION

IS UNIQUE in that it is the ONE MEDICINE FOR WOMEN, the makers of which make confidants of their patients and tell them exactly what they are taking. This Dr. Pierce gladly does, because the remedy has thousands of cures to its credit, and is made by such an intricate process that it cannot be successfully imitated. DR. PIERCE'S FAVORITE PRESCRIPTOIN

IS DISTINCTIVE in that it is made from purely vegetable ingredients, namely, roots gathered in the native woods and which contain the healing principles elaborated by Nature in the earth of the silent forests uncontaminated by civilization's touch. DR. PIERCE'S FAVORITE PRESCRIPTION

IS EXCEPTIONAL in that it contains ABSOLUTELY NO ALCOHOL, and is free from all narcotics and other poisonous principles, and hence can be taken by the maiden, and wife, and the elderly matron and spinster with perfect safety and the assurance that it will never establish a drug habit. DR. PIERCE'S FAVORITE PRESCRIPTION

IS PECULIAR in that it is a remedy devised by a physician with an experience of over one-third of a century in treating women's diseases, and is NOT A PATENT MEDICINE in any sense of the word. It is, however, a household remedy which cures ninety-eight per cent. of the cases for which it is taken, and is so firmly established in popular favor that the carping criticisms and unwarranted denunciations of those who pose as reformers and show their ignorence by acting as amateur advisers of the sick cannot undermine the people's well founded faith in it.

Dr. Pierce's Common Sense Medical Adviser, a non-technical medical book of 1008 pages, profusely illustrated, contains many things of interest to ailing women. All of them should read it. It will be sent free on receipt of stamps to cover mailing—31 cents for cloth and 21 cents for the paper bound volume.

DR. PIERCE'S PLEASANT PELLETS regulate the activities of the liver and bowels safely, painlessly and surely. They are the best laxative known for sick or invalid women.

TREASURY DEFICIT

Will Be Twenty-Five or Thirty Millions This Year.

Operations of the Government Will Not Be Hampered.

FROM THE HERALD WASHINGTON BUREAU.

Washington, May 16.—(Special to The Herald.)—Secretary Shaw and his immediate associates do not take any stock in the discussion going on between newspapers over the growing treasury deficit. Auditor Andrews of the treasury department said today that the deficit of twenty-five or thirty millions which seems absolutely certain, will exist at the close of business on June 30, could go on for another year and at the same in nowise hamper the operations of the government.

At the close of business Thursday last the available cash balance in the treasury was $132,339,000. The excess of expenditures over receipts on that same day for the present fiscal year with a month and a half still to run, was $36,135,000.

At the close of the fiscal year 1904, the deficit was, in round figures, $41,000,000. But that deficit was brought about by the payment of $50,000,000 for the Panama canal and a loan of $4,600,000 to the St. Louis Louisiana Purchase exposition. If this $41,000,000 were deducted from the $54,600,000 paid out for the two items above referred to, there would have been an excess of receipts over expenditures of $13,000,000. But no such enormous amount has been paid out for the fiscal year ended June 30, 1904, and the question therefore naturally arises what has created the deficit of $25,000,000 which seems inevitable for the present fiscal year.

The answer is readily found in a comparison of the receipts from customs and internal revenue of 1904 with those of the present fiscal year. In both of these items there have been a considerable falling off. The falling off in customs is due to the practice of storing imports in bonded warehouses and keeping these goods there until the market demands their withdrawal. It is anticipated that a large percentage of the goods now in the government warehouses will be withdrawn in the next month and that the customs collections will therefore be considerably increased. This is particularly true of the forthcoming withdrawals of sugar. As for the internal revenue receipts it is expected that they will amount to $20,000,000 during June, all of which will pull down the deficit considerably.

For the first time in the history of the Republican party since it has had control of the government a deficit exists in time of peace and it can only be accounted for in the enormous expenditures which congress has authorized. "However, as long as we have gold coin and bullion to the amount of $30,000,000 and gold certificates in the general fund for a like amount," said Auditor Andrews, "we need have no fears for the future. All we need to do is to be a little more careful as to the obligations we incur for the continuance of our magnificent country."

At a luncheon given the other day by the Hon. J. Hampton Moore, chief of the bureau of manufactures. In honor of the delegates to the International Railway congress, the wit and repartee displayed by the guests was the subject of much delightful comment after the repast. Every man present told a story or had something humorous to say of the occasion or of the host whowill send in his resignation as the chief of the manufactures bureau of the department of commerce and labor on Monday to take the presidency of the City Trust company of Philadelphia, to which position he was unanimously elected this week. Among the guests were Assistant Secretary Hays of the department of agriculture, Surgeon General Walter Wyman of the Marine hospital service, Dr. Harvey Wiley, chief of the chemistry bureau; Prof. Willis L. Moore, chief of the weather bureau; O. H. Tittman, chief of the coast and geodetic survey.

As an example of the wit shown by this galaxy of extremely bright men is the following: Dr. Wyman asked Willis Moore, the weather bureau sharp, whether it was true that he appeared in the lobby of his hotel in a full dress suit and top hat whenever the prognostications of the weather bureau were realized, but that when the predictions turned out badly he appeared in his ordinary business suit. Before Prof. Moore had a chance to reply to Dr. Wyman's question, Dr. Wiley said: "Moore must be wearing a very old suit of clothes. I don't know that the weather bureau has made a correct prediction in two years and Moore's clothes must therefore be threadbare."

More than sixteen years ago the movement loking to the erection of a statue to General Phil Sheridan in this city was begun. Mrs. Sheridan, widow of "Little Phil" the famous cavalry leader, built a house on Sheridan circle, hoping that upon its completion its windows might overlook a bronze statue erected in honor of her distinguished husband. The house has long since been completed, a site chosen for the monument and two designs have been submitted, but beyond that the Sheridan statue commission has done absolutely nothing looking to the completion of the project for which it was created.

Secretary Taft realizing that something should be done by the commission called that body together this week with a view of straightening out matters so that work on the statue may be commenced. Mrs. Sheridan was present at the meeting and explained that one reason for the delay rested on the fact that models submitted by artists did not give a life likeness of her husband. It was agreed that new models should be made and it is hoped that within a short time the equestrain statue of General Phil Sheridan will be under way.

In the death of Wallace J. Hills the national government, and especially the treasury department, has lost one of the ablest public servants ever borne upon the federal pay rolls. Mr. Hills had been employed continuously in the treasury department since the close of the Civil war. He began as a laborer at a salary of $35 per month and gradually arose until he reached the grade of chief clerk about six years ago. The chief clerkship of the treasury is one of the most responsible positions under the government. To him is assigned the duty of purchasing practically all the supplies for every federal building from Alaska to Florida and from Maine to California. Not a yard of carpet, a chair or a post-office bag-rack can be bought except through this official. Mr. Hills combined within himself rare executive ability and a thorough knowledge of business affairs and in consequence was exceedingly well qualified to fill the position which he held at the time of his sudden death last Wednesday morning.

He had the full confidence of his superiors and especially of Secretaries Gage and Shaw, the former having appointed him to the chief clerkship. Had he lived a few months longer there is scarcely a doubt but that he would have been promoted to the grade of Assistant Secretary.

Mr. Hills died in New Mexico while on an inspecting tour, and as a consequence the department pays his memory the unusual honor of assuming all the responsibility for the funeral arrangements.

There are undoubtedly many men in the country who could fill Mr. Hills place, but the salary paid by the government is not high enough to make the place attractive to the best men.

The subject of emmigration from the United States will probably occupy almost as much attention in congress next winter as will that of immigration to this country.

It has been customary to laugh at the fears expressed by some of the Western statesmen to the effect that there is danger of a large emigration from the farming regions of the West to the fertile virgin plains of Western Canada. And yet the latest statistics issued by the Canadian minister of the interior indicate that the dominion is drawing practically 40 per cent of its new citizens from the United States. In 1898 the total number of immigrants arriving in Canada was 81,800. Of these 11,618 came to the dominion from England, Ireland, Scotland and Wales, while 9,119 were from the United States. In 1903 the total immigration to Canada was 123,364 and of this number 49,473 went from the United States.

Such men as Senator Hansbrough, of North Dakota, Senator Dietrich, of Nebraska and Senator Nelson of Minnesota, have frequently pointed out that the Western states are losing thousands of their very best citizens who are attracted to the Canadian Northwestern provinces, especially to Manitoba, British Columbia, Assiniboia, Alberta and Saskatchewen through the liberal land laws and the tariff concessions which the dominion authorities have so widely made. Scarcely an American leaves the United States to make a home for himself in Canada who is not fairly well provided with capital. These immigrants are the bone and sinew of the country in which they locate. They are the men who literally made the wilderness productive and who create material prosperity not alone for themselves but for the community in which they locate also. It is safe to say that from a financial standpoint the American emigrant to Canada is worth a hundred times as much as the average immigrant now being unloaded upon the shores of the United States at the rate of 2,000 or more a day. Some one has aptly said that the United States is exchanging its best citizens from the Western states for a mob of organ grinders, bootblacks and peanut peddlers who are flooding the cities of the East and the latest report from the Honorable Clifton Sifton, Canadian minister of the interior seem to prove the correctness of the first part of this assertion at least.

LARGE QUANTITY

Of State Lands to Be Sold This Year.

St. Paul, May 16.—State Auditor S. G. Iverson announced yesterday that he will sell from 50,000 to 100,000 acres of state lands in the northern part of the state next fall. The maximum acreage which the state may sell under the law each year is 100,000, and the state auditor intimates that he may go the limit. The exact dates and places of the sales have not been fixed, but it is understod that they will take place in St. Louis, Aitkin, Carlton, Beltrami, Crow Wing, Hubbard and possibly Polk and Wadena counties. The sales will probably be held in September or October. Mr. Iverson says that much of the land that will be put on sale is located in settled districts, within a few miles of railroads, school houses and churches.

LENS GRINDERS STRIKE.

New York, May 16.—Lens Grinders employed by several New York opticians have gone on strike because of the refusal of the open shops to recognize the union. The grinders are divided into two classes, one grinding the surface and the other grinding the cases of the lenses. Each requires several years of apprenticeship. The employers claim to have a majority of the shops on their side and to be filling the strikers' places rapidly.

MARKETS OF THE WORLD

Will Be Called Upon to Furnish Panama Canal Supplies.

Washington, May 16.—The executive committee of the Isthmain Canal commission yesterday decided to purchase in the markets of the world the material and ships necessary for the building of the canal.

This important decision was reached with some reluctance, because it was appreciated by Secretary Taft and the executive committee that there would surely be an outcry from the interests in this country, the producers of material and the ship owners if the prices were not limited to the American products. But it was decided that the money consideration was so great that it could not be ignored for it was held that in many cases fully 50 per cent more would be charged for material needed in canal construction than the same goods could be procured in Europe. Chief Engineer Wallace, for instance, showed that two ships in addition to those running between New York and Colon and owned by the Panama Railway company would be absolutely necessary to carry the food supplies and material needed for the work. No American ships could be bought at any reasonable price and when it came to building such ships it was found according to Secretary Taft's statement that while he can buy two 2,600 ton ships in Europe for $750,000, it would cost $1,400,000 to build such ships here. And in addition, while the European ship could be had at once, it would take at least eighteen months to secure American boats.

Thus it was decided to buy the ships in Europe, or rather in any port where they could be had cheapest and obtained the quickest. As to material needed for canal construction, the commission decided that by reserving to itself the right to purchase in the world's markets it would at least oblige American manufacturers to give them the benefit of their foreign prices if they wished to sell goods to the commission.

Secretary Taft said that he felt obliged to endorse this project, because having given congress every opportunity to adopt a contrary decision, he felt that the very terms of the canal act provided that it must be constructed at the lowest possible cost.

TRIED TO STOP GAME.

Woman Blocks Play Wrapped In American Flag.

Hutchinson, Minn., May 16.—Arrayed in stylish attire, and with a large American flag wrapped about her, Mrs. L. Slaight, a prominent temperance reformer, made a novel but unsuccessful attempt to stop the progress of a Sunday game of baseball. The Ministers' association and W. C. T. U. had petitioned the authorities to forbid the playing of the game, but upon this being refused, Mrs. Slaight took the matter into her own hands. She had placards printed and posted about the grounds, bearing the words: "To attack the flag of the United States while it is being used in the enforcement of law is, according to the statutes, high treason." Despite this warning the crowd assembled to see the game and the players took their positions. When the umpire called "play ball," Mrs. Slaight majestically marched onto the diamond and took up a position between the pitcher and the batsman. The pitcher attempted to curve the ball around her, but failing in this, another battery was called into requisition, and both pitchers began tossing the ball toward the plate at once, necessitating considerable activity on the part of the reformer. Finally the crowd swarmed onto the field and good-naturedly surrounding the flag-enshrouded woman, forced her off the field. Mrs. Slaight says she intends to call the attention of the federal authorities to the assault upon the flag.

PRINCIPAL ARTICLES

Imported From and Exported to Germany Are Tabulated.

Manufactured Articles Comprise Chief Imports From That Country.

FROM THE HERALD WASHINGTON BUREAU.

Washington, May 16.—(Special to The Herald.)—The numerous requests reaching the department of commerce and labor through its bureau of statistics for more detailed information regarding our commerce with Germany has led that bureau to prepare a series of tables showing the principal articles imported from and exported to Germany during a series of years. Twenty-one articles, or groups of articles, having each a total value of $1,000,000 or over, were imported into the United States from Germany during the past fiscal year, and twenty articles, having a total value of $1,000,000 or over each, were exported to Germany during the same period.

It will be seen from an examination of the tables which follow that manufactured articles, chiefly iron and steel, silk manufactrues, chemicals, cotton goods, earthenware, furs and furskins, and toys, comprise the principal importations into the United States from Germany, and that in each case they show hubstantial increases in the period from 1894 to 1904. Importations of woolen goods, glass and glassware, cement and coffee have decreased, while beet sugar importations have declined from $11,000,000 in 1894 to but $50,509 in 1904, beet sugar having been free of duty in 1894 and dutiable in 1904. Of our exportations to Germany, raw cotton contributes more than one-half of the total, its share in 1904 being $109,000,000 out of a total export of $215,000,000. But few manufactured articles appear in the list of our principal exportations to Germany, copper ingots, refined mineral oil, iron and steel manufactures, wood manufactures, agricultural implements and cotton manufactures comprising the only manufactured articles (with the exception of flour, which is classed by the bureau of sttistics as a produce of agriculture) the exportations of which to Germany amounted to as much as $1,000,000. The exports not classed as manufactures include raw cotton, beef products, provisions, corn, wheat, oil cake, fruits and nuts, fertilizers, lard, hams and other pork products, cottonseed oil and paraffin. The only articles in the table which show decreases in exportations from the United States to Germany are distilled spirits, which decreased from $4,119,733 in 1894 to $321,968 in 1904; oleomargarine, from $2,857,406 in 1894 to $2,287,231 in 1904; seeds, from $1,714,668 in 1894 to $516,877 in 1904, and hams, bacon and pork, which decreased from $1,375,420 in 1894 to $1,295,233 in 1904.

VIEL IS LIFTED.

"Veiled Murderess" Was Lady Elliot of England.

Chicago, May 16.—The veil of mystery, which for more than half a century hid the identity of the "veiled murderess," who died in prison at Mattewan, N. Y., Sunday, has been lifted by the hands of Mrs. Charlotte P. Norris, 1426 Newport avenue, Chicago.

The so-called "veiled murderess" was a class mate of Mrs. Norris, at the famous Emma Willard school, at Troy, N. Y., sixty years ago. The maiden name of the woman, who was a puzzle to the authorities ever since her arrest for murder in 1853, was Charlotte Ward. She married an Englishman of rank, Sir Walter F. Elliott, but she ran away from his home in England two years after the marriage. She came back to America to find the house of her father, a wealthy Canadian merchant, shut against her.

Mrs. Norris, though under no obligation to do so, has kept her secret as to the identity of the veiled murderess, who was convicted of the murder of Timothy Lanagan and Katherine Labee, in Troy, N. Y., fifty-three years ago. The Chicago woman went to Sing Sing prison more than thirty years ago to see Lady Elliott, then a prisoner at that institution. When Mrs. Norris came from her talk with the convict, the prison authorities begged her to tell them who their charge was. She declined, knowing that her old schoolmate did not wish her identity known.

MASS OF SORES

Awful Suffering of Little Boy from an Itching Humour

CURED BY CUTICURA

Not One Square Inch of Skin on His Whole Body Unaffected

"My little son, a boy of five, broke out with an itching rash. Three doctors prescribed for him, but he kept getting worse until we could not dress him any more. They finally advised me to try a certain medicine, but its treatment did no good. At the time I was induced to try Cuticura he was so bad that I had to cut his hair off and put the Cuticura Ointment on him on bandages, as it was impossible to touch him with the bare hand. There was not one square inch of skin on his whole body that was not affected. He was one mass of sores. The bandages used to stick to his skin and in removing them it used to take the skin off with them, and the screams from the poor child were heart-breaking. I began to think that he would never get well, but after the second application of Cuticura Ointment I began to see signs of improvement, and with the third and fourth applications the sores commenced to dry up. His skin peeled off twenty times, but it finally yielded to the treatment. Now I can say that he is entirely cured, and a stronger and healthier boy you never saw than he is to-day." ROBERT WATTAM, 4922 Center Ave., Chicago, Ill., Dec. 30, 1897.

THINKS NAN SHOT YOUNG

Supreme Court Justice Says Former Show Girl Lied.

New York, May 16.—Somewhat to the astonishment of those present at the monthly dinner of the Phi Delta Phi club, an organization of lawyers, Justice Vernon M. Davis of the supreme court of the state of New York, who was the guest of honor, gave his opinion as to the guilt of Nan Patterson while making an argument in defense of Assistant District Attorney Rand.

Justice Davis, who presided at the first two trials of the former chorus girl, said that she had lied from beginning to end, and it was his opinion that the majority of the community now believe that Miss Patterson held the pistol by which Young was shot, and that J. Morgan Smith bought the weapon and gave it to her, charging her at the time with the duty of "scaring" Young.

In the middle of the justice's remarks, the reporters were asked to leave the room, but before they had reached the door they were called back by the speaker, who said that he left it to their discretion as to just what parts of his speech were to be used.

"We have heard a great deal in the public press of late of severe criticism of Mr. Rand, and his conduct of the trial," said the justice. "You can't prosecute a criminal without telling what you believe to be the truth. In the second trial before me the defendant went on the stand and it was quite obvious that she was telling falsehoods from beginning to end. The very air seemed charged with the fact that she was lying. Yet she was a woman. She was young. It was natural that the public should sympathize with her. People seemed to know that she was not telling the truth, and the great public of New York said: 'Why shouldn't she lie? Let her lie. Let her get the benefit of her lies.'

"But today, in the light of the last disagreement, I feel sure that a majority of the people believe that the pistol that killed Caesar Young was held by Nan Patterson, was discharged by her, was bought by J. Morgan Smith, in an attempt to get money from Caesar Young for the support of the combined family.

"I don't mean to say that she took the pistol from the reticule and shot him in the side, but I do believe that she had the pistol and showed it to Young. An argument followed and he took hold of the weapon. In the conversation and consequent struggle the pistol went off and the man was killed.

"I believe, moreover, that had she told the story on the witness stand as it really happened, in other words, had she told the truth, the second jury would have acquitted her."

FOUR NATIONS REPRESENTED

In List of Entries For the Vanderbilt Automobile Race.

New York, May 16.—Entries have practically closed for the Vanderbilt automobile cup race on Long Island this fall. Thirteen American cars have been named and elimination races will be necessary as only five starters will be accepted from any one country.

Four nations are represented in the list.

The American eliminatory trial is to be in the form of a race over a Long Island course early in August. The cup race itself will probably take place in Long Island on Oct. 7. Several routes are under consideration by the cup commission, including the triangular course over which the first Vanderbilt race took place and a twenty-five-mile course further north, which includes more grades than the triangular and over which the contest might be held without controls or neutralized territory.

SECRETS OF BEEF TRUST REVEALED

The Aetna Trading company, it is said, was the means by which the packers supposed to form the beef trust, transacted their secret business.

STABBED BY JEALOUS WOMAN.

Miss Callahan was walking on the street near her home when she was approached by Miss Smith who demanded that she cease receiving attentions from a young man who was a mutual acquaintance. Miss Callahan refused, and the other girl drew a knife and stabbed her in the side. Miss Smith was arrested.

TAKES AN APPEAL

Probate Judge Middlecoff Begins Suit Against County Board.

Commissioners Disallow Court's Claim For Extra Clerk Hire.

Probate Judge J. B. Middlecoff has filed an appeal in district court from the disallowance by the board of county commissioners of his claim for extra clerk hire, the judge appearing as his own attorney.

The action, which is permissible under the law, will be in the nature of a test case to determine the construction of the state law pertaining to clerk hire in probate courts, and to determine whether or not the county board has a right to make an allowance for clerk hire beyond the provisions made by law, providing it becomes necessary for the court to have such assistance.

The particular claim disallowed is that for $89.90 which Judge Middlecoff paid Thomas Clark for copying records and doing other clerical work in his office between Nov. 16 and Dec. 31, 1904, an agreement having been entered into between the court and Mr. Clark to do the work at the rate of $55 per month.

Judge Middlecoff exhibits with his appeal papers a receipt from Mr. Clark for the full amount and recites that his claim for the clerk hire, which he paid out of his own pocket, was disallowed by the county commissioners at the meeting held May 4 last.

In his appeal Judge Middlecoff claims that during the year, 1904, as well as during the present year, 1905, the clerical work required by the statutes to be done in the probate court was more than could be accomplished by the help allowed by the county board of commissioners. He says that during the last six months of 1904 it became necessary to hire aditional help in the office to aid in keeping up the county records of the court, that an exigency existed whereby, on account of the sickness of the judge, the work accumulated for several weeks to such an extent that he was compelled to get an extra clerk, employing Thomas Clark in that capacity.

Judge Middlecoff calls attention to the fact that several times during the past year it has become necessary to have additonal help for a short period of the time to keep up the work of the court and that during such time an additional clerk was employed and the county board allowed the claims, except in the Clark case.

Although the county, through the county attorney's office, has not yet made answer to thea ppeal, it is understood that the commissioners, in disallowing the bill, did so on the ground that the statutes of the state of Minnesota do not make any provision whereby they can legally allow bills presented from the probate court for extra clerk hire.

It is also understood that while the statutes apparently do not make the special provision for additional help in the instance of the probate court, Judge Middlecoff will cite the John Armstrong case, where a decision was rendered by Judge Dibell to the effect that where an exigency arises where it is imperative that certain work be performed, and a person is employed to accomplish it, he has a legal claim against the county and can collect his pay.

The statutes on the subject of clerk hire in probate courts are found in chapter 71 of the general laws of 1902, amending section 4413 of the general laws of 1894.

It is provided that all probate judges whose salary equals or exceeds $1,000 per year may receive a further sum, to be fixed by the board, not exceeding $500, for clerk hire, provided that in counties having a population of 200,000 or more the compensation of the clerk of probate court be $1,500, and an additional sum of $3,300 be allowed for extra clerk hire.

In counties having a population of 80,000 or over, not exceeding 100,000, the salary of the clerk of the court shall be $1,000.

The latter clause in the statutes is the portion which applies to St. Louis county, Ramsey and Hennepin counties, being the only counties in the state that can pay the clerk of probate court a salary of $1,500 and have additional clerk hire in the amount of $3,300. Nothing is said in the chapter mentioned about extra clerk hire for probate courts in counties having a population of over 80,000 and less than 100,000.

ALONE AT NIGHT

Nine Year Old Boy Wanders About the City's Streets.

Is Committed to State School By the Humane Officer.

"I went down to the Svea hotel and the fellow showed me a place where I could sleep," said Joe Voz, a little 9-year-old boy, who was committed to the state school this morning, at the request of Humane Officer Withrow.

Some time ago the boy's mother asked the humane officer to have the lad sent to the state training school, on the charge of incorrigibility. The humane officer investigated the case, and claims he found the boy was neglected, and instead of being incorrigible, was a lad of good character and bright at his studies. His teacher stated that he was a regular attendant at school and was one of the brightest and best boys in the class.

The boy claimed that he had been ordered by his mother to pick up coal from the railroad right-of-way, from which he had been directed to keep away by the railroad detective.

"I was afraid to go home, because I thought she would send me out to pick up coal," he told the humane officer this morning.

He stated that he had been wandering about the city for two days, sleeping wherever he could find a place, and eating what was given to him. The proprietor of the Svea hotel gave the boy a place to sleep, and one or two meals during that time, and this morning the humane officer, hearing of the case, brought the boy before Judge Windom of the municipal court and had an order made out turning the lad over to the custody of the state school for neglected children, at Owatonna.

The boy's father is dead, and his mother resides in the Central house, on Lower Lake avenue.

Marie Falk-Gjertsen.

Miss Gjertsen, who will take part in the May 17 celebration at Steinway hall, under the auspices of the local Sons of Norway, tomorrow evening, comes of a long line of ministers and public speakers. She is a post-graduate of the Manning School of Oratory, where later she taught physical culture, oratory and dramatic art. One of Miss Gjertsen's strongest numbers is "Bergliot," by Bjornson, the greatest poet Norway ever produced. The poem, taken from an old Norsk Saga, deals with an incident in the year 1052, when Christianity was first introduced among the fierce Vikings of that far, frozen North. The shifting and tragic emotions of "Bergliot," on finding her husband, Einar Tamberskjelve, and son, Eindride, murdered by Harald of Stanfordbridge fame, is the subject of this marvelously concise and noble sketch of Bjornson's. It is in this poem that the true dramatic instinct of Miss Gjertsen is at its best, and, as if the Viking blood of her ancestors, surged through her veins, the listener sees and hears but "Bergliot" and forgets the reader.

Miss Gjertsen reads "Bergliot" both in English and Norwegian. The English translation was prepared for her by Rev. Falk-Gjertsen, and is pronounced magnificent.

If the Bjornson poem is impressive, the Grieg music which accompanies it is equally so. The music, originally written for full orchestra, has been arranged for the piano by Grieg himself, and requires the assistance of a professional pianist.

Gidding's New Styles and Splendid Values--the talk of the town!

Women who have Spring clothes to buy can hardly afford to pass this store by at this particular time—for not only are the stocks absolutely new from invoices that arrive daily—purchases made by Mr. Gidding on his recent trip East, and also from their importing makers who have instructions to send the new things as soon as they are out!—but the values are of such a sterling nature as to readily appeal to women of discriminating taste. By that we mean that, notwithstanding the fact that our prices are no higher than you'd expect to pay the ordinary "dry goods" or "department" store for their kinds of garments, the Gidding sort are different, exclusive, and seem to have that "snap" and "style" about them that you could expect to find only at a store of this kind, where a specialty is made of wearbles only, giving our sole attention to this business.

The fact that over forty people are employed in this business alone, occupying 13,250 square feet of floor space—and that to be increased by additional room as soon as the store now being built next door is completed—tells better than words what the people think of our store, our merchandise, and our business methods. But one store in the state does a larger business than we do—and they have been established many years.

We merely mention these facts to acquaint you with things as they actually are. We believe you should know them—for you, after all, are best able to judge as to whether we deserve to grow or not.

We want to give Duluth and the Head of the Lakes a store second to none in the entire West—a store where women can buy things feeling absolutely secure in their styles no matter where they go, East or West—and we believe we have succeeded. Every garment in this stock is absolutely correct in style and designed by makers with a national reputation!

Wherever we are able to save in price through any trade conditions, we pass that saving right along to you. That is why, at the very beginning of the season, we are able to pass along to you bran new, smart styles in Coats, Suits, Wraps, Skirts, Waists and other wearables, at savings of a Fourth, a Third, and in many cases a Half!

Smart New Models in Women's and Misses' Stylishly Tailored Suits

They are a revelation to every woman who takes time to anticipate her wants before "wearing time." As far as we know there is no other collection of new, handsome designs in cloth and silk suits in the city as extensive as the one we show. Not a model or a fabric or a color that we think worthy or which would appeal to our patrons, has been overlooked, and the care and detail exercised have given us a range of styles that is distinctive in themselves. The "one like the other" idea has been done away with until now we show suits that are different from the hackneyed styles so often termed "shoppy," or as one woman put it—these are suits made to be worn by women of discriminating taste and not for show purposes. They're the sort of gowns that your tailor would make and incidentally charge you double the price we ask, and as for fitting—that we guarantee. The models at $25.00 are as distinctive in character and fabric as those at $100. The models at $29.75 are for all practical purposes as good as those at double—and those at $35, $39.75 and $45 are each shown in every model from the chic "frocks and frills" coat with circular skirt, the long-fitted "Boulevard," or "Redingote" effects—in between these are numberless blouse styles—Eton coat effects, etc. These, together with the "Sunburst" and taffeta and cloth strap blouses, gives one over 500 distinct styles to choose from. Following numbers are given in detail:

$25.00 AND $27.50 FOR CHOICE OF FINELY TAILORED SUITS—In English and cloths, serges, mohairs, prunellas, novelty mixtures, cheviots, etc. Practically an unlimited assortment of the select styles in blouse, coat and novelty effects of various kinds, the shades included being all new.

HOMEOPATHISTS MEET.

Thirty-ninth Annual Session Held at St. Paul.

St. Paul, May 15.—(Special to The Herald.)—The thirty-ninth annual session of the Minnesota State Homeopathic institute was opened in the senate chamber of the old capitol today. Owing to the inclemency of the weather the attendance was limited to a few St. Paul and Minneapolis members. The principal feature at the morning session was the discussion of tuberculosis. Dr. B. Leach of St. Paul read a paper entitled "Tuberculosis," which was a thorough discussion of conditions of "the white man's plague." The speaker referred to the great success which had been obtained in the treatment of the disease through such means as proper ventilation, the outdoor life, pure food and care taken in the early stages. An open discussion of tuberculosis followed.

During the afternoon the society listened to an address by Dr. James Gilchrist, professor in the school of medicine in the university of Iowa.

DIES OF PNEUMONIA.

Prominent Union Man Expires at St. Mary's.

Ed Marie, a prominent member of the Painters' union, died last evening just after he had been taken to St. Mary's hospital. Pneumonia was the cause of death, and his wife is now lying at St. Mary's hospital critically ill with the same malady. Mr. Marie was 40 years of age, and leaves, besides his wife, two children, a girl about 10 years of age, and a boy of about 8 years. Their home was at 716 Third avenue east.

The funeral arrangements have not yet been made, but probably will be tonight or tomorrow.

NORTH BUTTE SELLS AT $30

Several Hundred Shares Traded In at That Figure.

North Butte mining stock sold today freely at $30 a share. At that figure 700 to 800 shares were put on the market, but they were quickly absorbed. This satisfied the buying power for the time being, however, and at the close the price was weaker, stock being offered at $29 asked.

The Bisbee "bonanza circle" stocks were also active and firmer. Calumet & Pittsburg was selling at $33 and Lake Superior & Pittsburg at $43, though the closing prices were a little weaker, there being offerings at those prices.

Calumet & Arizona was also firmer and sold during the morning at $100 a share. Junction stiffened up with the others and $72 was paid for it.

There was nothing doing in Pittsburg & Duluth and that stock seems to be deserted. Some of the well informed people regard this as rather peculiar, in view of the fact that it is pretty well understood that this property will be shipping to the smelters within a month or two.

QUESTIONS STIR WITNESS

Young Surgeon In Malpractice Case Resents Cross-Examination.

Additional interest was given the McTaggert-Shipman malpractice case, in district court this morning, when several lively tilts occurred between Theodore Hollister, attorney for Mr. McTaggert, and Dr. Lewis Moore, one of the young surgeons employed by Dr. Shipman and who assisted in the operation for the amputation of McTaggert's limb.

Mr. Hollister, during the the cross-examination asked several questions of a nature calculated to anger the witness and Dr. Moore answered sharply on as many occasions showing that he resented that style of cross-examination. Mr. Hollister remarked that it was more fun than he had had for some time, but the surgeon under fire did not seem to appreciate the fun to any marked degree.

Dr. Moore and Dr. George Ayers, another of Dr. Shipman's associates, who was called just before the noon recess, testified as to the preparation and the operation itself, Dr. Moore being questioned as to the treatment of the limb after the amputation, as he took care of the case following that event.

Two other expert witnesses were called to the stand in behalf of Dr. Shipman this morning. Dr. Stewart and Dr. Braden, both of this city. They testified, in the main, that so far as they heard the testimony of Dr. Shipman, his operation could be considered good surgery and his treatment was perfectly proper.

Dr. Braden said that while he never performed an operation similar to that performed on Mr. McTaggert, he had used nails in cases of fractures of bones. Dr. Braden also testified that he did not sanction the use of catgut sutures to draw the flesh together for healing in cases of amputation for the reason that all material of an animal nature was apt to soften, that in this instance in particular he thought it was better to use a nail instead of a wire suture.

Another point that the defense brought out in Dr. Braden's testimony was that there is almost always more or less corroson where metal is used in surgical work and remains for some time in contact with tissues, whether the latter be healthy or septic.

There is a possibility that the case will reach the jury some time tomorrow.

CAUSES OF DREAMS.

Most of Them Capable of Rational Explorations.

Physicians and scientists generally have recently given much attention to the study of dreams, and the latest contribution to this interesting subject is contained in the researches of Dr. Arthur Jooss, a well known German physician, says the San Francisco Bulletin. Dr. Jooss emphasizes the fact that there is nothing supernatural about our dreams, and the old Middle Age superstition of prophesying by dreams is dismissed by him as absurd.

Dr. Jooss says that children dream least of all and adults dream more between the ages of 20 and 30 than at other periods of life. Women are greater dreamers than men, and for every fifty dreams by a man a woman has seventy-five.

Our dreams come mostly during the early morning hours, when dawn begins to break into the room. Every person has his own individual dreams. The dreams of intelligent and educated persons are altogether different from those of the uneducated, and the dreams of children are of subjects much simpler than those of adults. Generally we dream of past events and those ideas that have held our attention during our waking hours. It is seldom that our dreams are joyful or interspersed with real laughter. Occasionally the same dream repeats itself for several nights. Often we dream of odors so unpleasant that we awake with a nauseated feeling. Our immediate surroundings have much to do with our dreams. We dream of falling into the water or walking about half clad when we have kicked the covers off our bed. A sick person with a bandage around his head often dreams of being scalped by Indians. And an attack of gout in sleep brings dreams of torture by the inquisition, etc. Persons suffering from asthma usually have horrible dreams of choking.

As was known by Aristotle, our dreams are indicative of our mental and physical condition and the coming disease can be easily detected thereby. Those subject to epilepsy dream of falling from heights, being consumed by fire, etc., and the awakening is accompanied by screams. Likewise persons afflicted with neurasthenia are troubled with awful nightmares, especially of foul deeds and wild animals. Hysterical persons dream of black birds, skeletons and disgusting subjects, and the curious part of it is that persons so afflicted are unable to tell next day whether it was really a dream or an actual fact.

Idiots and insane persons dream little or not at all. Those who dream the most are persons who drink alcoholic liquors immoderately, and it is an indication of serious illness if one dreams of rats, mice and loathsome animals. When such dreams come to a drinker they are a warning that must be heeded at once.

Persons suffering from fever dream of falling into space, of being pursued, of running from pursuers without making any headway, of being confined, etc. Strange to say, criminals do not dream. The greater the crime a man has committed the less he dreams. Stories of murderers sleeping a dreamless sleep are not exaggerated, according to Dr. Jooss. This is due to the fact that most criminals have strong nervous constitutions and are not sensitive to outward influences.

There is nothing supernatural about dreams. They are either due to outward influences, impressions or to physical conditions. Everything you dream can be traced to its source. We can only dream of things that have heretofore been in some measure impressed upon our brains. The food we eat, the life we live has much to do with dreamland and Goethe's well known phrase, "Tell me what you eat and I will tell you what you are," can in this instance be paraphrased to read, "Tell me what you dream and I will tell you what you are."

SHARP CONGESTION IN WHEAT MARKETS

Duluth and Minneapolis Do Some Sensational Fluctuation Stunts.

Duluth July Option Gains 7 1-2 Cents In Two Days.

Duluth Board of Trade, May 16.—Duluth and Minneapolis are the whole thing in the wheat markets at the present time and the other exchanges have become tame affairs. Duluth market is badly congested, in fact has become a one man affair. This morning the July opened 3½c up at $1.03 bid, and was bid up to $1.05¾ before a trade could be made. Then it jumped another cent to $1.06¾ before another trade was made. It finally closed at $1.07, which was 4¾c above the closing price of yesterday. In the meantime Minneapolis only gained 1¾c. The Duluth July in two days has advanced 7½c, as compared with 3c in Minneapolis.

What was true of the July was practically true also of the May option. In Duluth it was bid up 3c or more to get a small lot. After opening at $1.06 bid, it jumped to $1.10¼ and then closed at $1.08 with but a single trade recorded. The close was 1½c above that of yesterday. Minneapolis at one time was 7c higher than yesterday being bid up 4½c before a trade was made. The close was 2⅞c higher than yesterday.

In both markets the September option was stronger. Duluth gaining 1⅛c and Minneapolis ¾c.

Chicago May which a short time ago was the center of all interest, is now too dead to kick and closed today 1½c lower, and at one time was 24½c below Minneapolis. The July there closed 1⅝-⅝c higher. The July option closed ½c higher in New York, ⅛-¼c higher in St. Louis and ¼-⅜c higher in Kansas City. May closed ⅛c higher in New York, ⅜c higher in St. Louis and ⅝c higher in Kansas City. Winnipeg closed 1c higher on both options.

The fear that the Northwest is getting too much rain is coming over the trade, especially that the Red River valley is too wet, and that damage is certain to result from it. The uneasiness caused by this was responsible for the strength in the September option in northwestern markets.

The Liverpool market closed 3/@1d higher, Paris ¼c higher to ¼c lower, and Antwerp unchanged.

Bradstreet reported a decrease of 3,259,000 bus., in the world's visible supply of wheat. East of the Rockies there was a decrease of 3,059,000 bus., and in Europe and afloat of 200,000 bus.

Minneapolis reports a decrease of 300,000 bus., in wheat stocks during the first three days of the week.

Car receipts at Duluth were 1, against 10 last year, and at Minneapolis 84, against 41 last year, making a total for the Northwest of 85, against 51 last year. Chicago received 0, against 11 last year.

Primary receipts of wheat were 153,307 bus., last year 196,801. Shipments 184,364 bus., last year 284,391 bus. Clearances of wheat and flour aggregated 54,000 bus.

Corn in the Liverpool market closed 1/@⅛d higher. In the Chicago market July corn closed ⅛c lower. July oats closed a shade lower. Primary receipts of corn were 174,250 bus., last year 281,700 bus. Shipments, 256,933 bus., last year 645,903 bus. Clearances of corn were 141,000 bus.

In the Duluth market cash sales of wheat were practically nothing and prices continue to be quoted on the basis of May price for No. 1 northern. Durum wheat was advanced 1c.

Flax was dull. May advanced 1½c to $1.44½ and then closed unchanged at $1.43. July closed 1c lower at $1.43. September and October were unchanged, the latter after selling ½c up to $1.24.

Oats on track fell ¼c.

Following are the closing prices:

Wheat—To arrive, No. 1 northern, $1.08; on track, No. 1 northern, $1.08; No. 2 northern, $1.03¾ N; durum, No. 1, 89c; No. 2, 88c; May, $1.08; July, $1.07; September, 83c. Flax—To arrive, $1.43; on track, $1.43; May, $1.43; July, $1.43; September, $1.25; October, $1.23½. Oats—To arrive, 36c; on track, 36c. Rye—To arrive, 70c; on track, 70c. Barley—Feed, 29½@41c.

THE CHICAGO MARKET.

Active Demand Causes Higher Prices For Wheat.

Chicago, May 16.—Higher prices prevailed in the wheat pit here today as a result of an active demand from shorts. The buying was due mainly to additional rain in many sections of the United States. Another factor of considerable importance, however, was a report that German troops had occupied a Chinese city. Fears of fresh complications in the war situation resulting from this alleged breach of neutrality induced some shorts to cover. The market was further bullishly affected by the strength of corn. July opened 1⅛@⅜c to ⅞c higher at 87½@87¾c, and advanced to 88¼@88⅜c. Minneapolis, Duluth and Chicago reported receipts of 85 cars, against 75 cars last week and 62 cars a year ago.

After July had advanced to 88¾c, the market lost a large portion of its strength, profit-taking by a prominent holder causing a reaction. Strength at Minneapolis, however, had a supporting effect. The market closed firm with July up ½@⅝c at 87⅞c.

The feature of trading in corn was the congestion of the May delivery. Prospects of a "squeeze" in that option started an urgent demand from shorts, but offerings were extremely small. As a result the price of May advanced nearly 3c above last night's closing quotations. May opened 53c to 2¼c up at 51¼c to 53c and sold up to 53⅝c. July opened up 1¢ to 1¾c at 48¼c to 48¾c and advanced to 48⅝c. Local receipts were 132 cars, none of contract grade.

Before the demand for May was satisfied the price was forced up to 54c. Later a reaction occurred on profit-taking. The market for May, however, still continued bullish. July weakened on selling of May, the price declining from 48¾c to 47⅞c. Final quotations on July were at the lowest point of the day, at 47⅞c, a net loss of 1¢.

Strength of wheat and corn gave a firm tone to the oats market. Trading, however, was light. July opened a shade lower to a shade up at 29½c to 29⅝c and sold up to 29⅝@29¾c. Local receipts were 136 cars.

Provisions were firm, owing to a 10c advance in the price of live hogs. The volume of business was extremely light. July pork was up 2½@5c at $12.52½. Lard was up 5c at $7.35. Ribs were unchanged at $7.25.

Close: Wheat—May, 95c; July, 87¾c; September, 80⅞c. Corn—May, 53c; July, 47⅞c; old, 48¼c; September, 47½c; old, 47¾@47¾c; December, 44⅝c; old, 45¾c. Oats—May, 31¾c; July, 29½c; September, 28¼c. GRAIN GOSSIP.

Logan & Bryan, Chicago: Wheat—After about two hours of a very strong market, nervousness developed and prices took on a sagging tendency, and while the close was materially higher than that of yesterday, the market nevertheless acted as if the edge was off for the time being. Selling has been of a good character, and no great amount has been bought for long account, the bulk of the buying being short covering. We still feel the market has had a reasonable upturn; we still feel it is a two-sided market. The situation seems sound and strength is mainly based on the strong cash situation, but we feel rather cautious about getting too enthusiastic on the big bulge. We rather favor the idea of buying wheat on the setbacks.

Corn—The government weekly report says planting has been impracticable over nearly the whole belt because of heavy rain, with the work greatly delayed. At one time it looked as if the May option would get away from the bull leaders, and they were compelled to take May to hold the market in check. Aside from the May the market looks unchanged. Aggressive action on the part of the bull leaders can easily advance the May, and it is but natural to expect the future months to follow to a certain extent. On pronounced bulges we rather favor the future months for moderate profits. It looks to us like a trading market.

Oats—Bradstreets decrease 2,171,000. Aside from what happens in the May, this market at no time participated in the pronounced strength of other pits. Trade is, on the whole, slow and disappointing. Weakness in other markets, we feel, would be apt to depress oats.

Edwards, Wood & Co.: Wheat—The weather map this morning showed a continuation of the general rains, and the forecast tomorrow indicates only partial relief. This with generally higher opening cables contributed to another higher opening for wheat. The activity was very pronounced in the early trading, and prices for the July option in Minneapolis were advanced 2c above yesterday's closing figures, during the first half hour. We have believed all along that some reaction should be due, but our expectations will probably not be shown on account of ceaseless crop complications from the winter wheat sections together with the claim of too much rain in the Northwest. Concerning the present extremely light stock of supplies, prices could do all kinds of stunts providing anything should happen to even slightly reduce the present crop prospects. It is also claimed that with a bumper crop, we will not see any very low prices. We think that the advance has extended for enough for the present, although we can see nothing at the moment which would check the upward movement.

* * *

Chicago Tribune: There were a number of messages from Minneapolis calling attention to the water logged condition of the Red River valley and to apprehension of damage to the crop. The great strength in prices in that market, however, was presumably due to apprehension on the part of shorts of damage to their pocket books, because of the concentrated holdings of cash May and July wheat in that market. With cash wheat closing there at $1.12½ and May wheat at $1.13, the ownership of the bulk of the contract wheat there by the Pillsbury-Washburn mills does not appear so burdensome as it was when it was taken in.

* * *

Rankin, Chicago: If the weather conditions don't change in the Northwest soon you will hear a howl from there and this September wheat will be oil.

Race For Supremacy.

It is interesting to watch the race for supremacy among Minneapolis-St. Paul-Chicago trains. First place is securely held by the Pioneer Limited and the second place by the Fast Mail. Both trains are entirely owned by the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul railway. There are three other fast trains tia this line from the Twin Cities to Chicago every day, and there is no extra fare to ride on them. Address W. B. Dixon, northwestern passenger agent, St. Paul, for further particulars, lowest rates, etc.

LISTLESS TRADING

In Stocks, Ticker Being Motionless For Long Intervals.

Declines General and the Closing Heavy and Dull.

New York, May 16.—First trading this morning showed a sluggish and irregular movement of prices. Political uneasiness abroad contributed some share of depression. There was a rise of a point in Northern Pacific and a decline of ⅝ in Union Pacific. These were the principal changes. Transactions were on a small scale.

There was not enough demand to sustain the market at the opening figures, and values were shaded still further. Northern Pacific's advance was converted into a loss of 1⅛. Pressure was most effective in the transcontinental stocks and the metal group. Losses ran from 1 to 1¼ in St. Paul, Union Pacific, Canadian Pacific, Minneapolis, St. Paul & Soo, Louisville & Nashville, Baltimore & Ohio, Lead, Consolidated Gas, Smelting, Colorado Fuel, United States Steel preferred, Tennessee Coal, Rpublic Steel preferred, Virginia-Carolina Chemical preferred, Brooklyn Transit and Rubber Goods, preferred. New York Central fell 1¾ and Chicago Great Western preferred and New York Air Brake 2¾.

Offerings diminished, but the lower prices failed to attract any demand and semi-stagnant conditions resulted. Recoveries were the slightest. Northern Pacific extended its decline to 2½. Sugar declined 1⅜ and Locomotive preferred 2½. There was an isolated advance of 1¼ in St. Louis and San Francisco second preferred. Bonds were dull and steady at noon.

Much of the forenoon losses in the well known railroad stocks were made up, but renewed seling drove the market off again. Great Northern preferred moved up a point, while Ontario & Western declined to a similar extent.

Little effect was produced on the general market by a demand for St. Paul which touched 176½. The ticker was motionless for long intervals, reflecting the listless character of the trading.

Selling of the general list under cover of the firmness of St. Paul carried prices to about the lowest. The declines were made in the last hour. Declines in Northwestern amounted to 1½, in Colorado Southern second preferred 1¼ and Kansas & Texas and Smelting preferred 1. St. Paul was marked up again, this time a point over last night, with sustaining effect on the market. Prices did not hold, however, and the closing was heavy and dull.

STOCK GOSSIP.

Logan & Bryan to Paine, Webber & Co.: Market closed somewhat irregular but on the whole with rather a firm tone. Trade has been extremely quiet, in fact dull. Throughout the session St. Paul was easily the leader, holding very firm and strong and seems to be wanted for some purpose. General conditions look unchanged and we continue to feel would buy good railroad stocks on setbacks.

* * *

Dick Brothers to Paine, Webber & Co.: Market has been at a standstill today, with most stocks rather heavy, but with no real weakness or pressure. Rumors of German aggression in China although denied, had some effect, but more important was unfavorable crop news. The only interesting movement was that in St. Paul, where persistent buying brought about a rather sharp advance to 177. Union Pacific and other railroads were rather heavy. The market closed sluggish, but generally firm in tone. The trading was very largely professional.

NEW YORK MONEY.

New York, May 16.—Money on call easy, 2¼@2½ per cent; closing bid, 2; offered at 2¼. Time money was easy and dull. Sixty days and 90 days 3¼ per cent; 6 months, 3¼@3½. Prime mercantile paper 3½@4½ per cent. Sterling exchange steady with actual business in bankers' bills at $4.86.80 @4.86.85 for demand and at $4.84.00@4.84.05 for 60 days; posted rates $4.85½ and $4.87½; commercial bills $4.84¾@4½. Bar silver, 57¾c; Mexican dollars, 44¼c. Government bonds steady; railroad bonds heavy.

THE COTTON MARKET.

New York, May 16.—The cotton market opened steady at a decline of 1@6 points, which was rather better than due on cables. The weather map showed some further rains, but the wet weather appeared to be working eastward, leaving the western belt comparatively dry and warm, and it was also believed that a moderately bullish weekly report at midday had been discounted. But bull leaders here appear to be supporting the marget; selling was not aggressive and prices following the call were generally strong, regaining all but a point or so of the early loss on near months before the end of the first hour, when the market was net unchanged to 2 points lower.

Cotton spot closed quiet, 5 points lower; middling uplands, 8.30; middling gluf, 8.45; sales, 1,707 bales. Futures closed steady; May, 7.78; June, 7.60; July, 7.70; August, 7.70; September, 7.76; October, 7.80; November, 7.83; December, 7.86; January, 7.85; February, 7.94; March, 7.98.

COPPER GOSSIP.

Boston to Paine, Webber & Co.: The market continued dull and without any special feature. Amalgamated held strong around 84 and the general tone of the rest of the coppers was good. The local traders are beginning to realize that all the producing mines must be making large profits, with 15-cent copper and are gradually picking up the stocks everytime they are weak without making any attempt to bid up prices.

LADIES TO MONKEYS.

Change in Styles of the Popular Songs.

"Did you ever notice how popular songs go in cycles?" asked Will R. Winch, assistant manager of the Orpheum, to the Kansas City Star. "I find that I have unconsciously made a study of the pet phrases that go with the songs of any particular period. For instance, there was a long time in which every sentimental song I heard from the stage here had the phrase in some form or other 'Of course you know.' Where the moon usually shines from, but for a time the song writers seemed to think that their efforts would be in vain if they didn't have the moon shining down instead of up. That idea came to supplant the one that preceded it, gradually took first place, dropped back to make way for another and finally disappeared altogether. Usually there are three such phrases in all popular songs; one just coming in, one in full sway and one past its prime and disappearing.

"A fair instance of this is seen in the song 'Sunny Tennessee.' The railroad song had been rampant for some time when this song was written. We had 'My Dad's the Engineer,' 'The Baggage Coach Ahead' and any number of that kind. The train feature was just passing out, as I said, and as a concession to it the hero of the song 'engineered' the 'Speeding on a train that would bring me back again to my sweetheart who was waiting there for me.'

"However, the moon-rising business was in full blast, so in the chorus, 'When the moon rose in its glory, then I told life's sweetest story to the girl I loved in sunny Tennessee.' The moon was 'it' in those days. 'My sweetheart's the man in the moon,' and it was shining bright tonight on my old Kentucky home and on the banks of the Wabash far away. And that brings us to another phase of the Mariooga, Bryon Mawr, Lindsay, Wall, 6; subject, though you never noticed that nothing Fryer, Tower, Twin Sisters, Algonquin, 9; worth singing about until it was far away? 'On the banks of the Wabash far away,' 'Mid the green fields of Virginia far away,' 'In my old Kentucky home, far away,' 'Down upon the Suwannee River, far far away.' But to finish our example. The last line about the girl we loved who sleeps in sunny Tennessee was the forerunner of the geographical gravedigging craze in songs. There was Mary who slept by the banks of the Wabash. Mary who slept in sunny Tennessee, Mary sleeping in the silvery Rio Grande, Rose sleeping in Georgia and the girl I loved out in the Golden West."

"Now that you mention these things," said another of the group, "I remember that just before the passenger train came into the song they all started out on a walk. 'While strolling down the street one eve upon mors pleasure bent,' a man met the girl, who said, 'tell them that you saw me,' while wandering 'in the shadow of the pines.' He left his sweetheart, and while 'strolling along in the city's vast throng on a day that was bitter and cold' he met another girl and she may have seen better days.' Those were the days of the evening girl songs. I suppose that 'day that was bitter and cold' saw the inception of the weather condition songs. 'On a morning bright and clear to my old home I drew near,' just a village down in sunny Tennessee.' And 'Twas a bright and sunny day when a young wife went away from her husband, who had wrung her heart with pain.' She was happy till she met him. That was the beginning of the domestic difficulties idea in songs. 'Your mother, child, left home one night' in 'There'll Come a Time,' and 'though she fled with another she's still my babies' mother,' 'I Love Her Just the Same,' 'I'd Leave My Happy Home for You' transferred the breaking up of home ties to the colored poulation. And hence 'Just take your clothes and go.' 'All coons look alike to me,' 'If you ain't got no money you needn't come around.' For a long period then every mammy was driving her old man away from home. The next thing to expect was the reaction and the logical result was 'Bill Bailey, won't you please come home.'"

"Talking of what to expect," continued the first speaker, "when the coon songs began to change from 'yaller gals named Hannah' to 'jet black ladies' it showed which way 'sentiment was drifting.' I saw that the songs were going down in the anthropological scale and predicted the end. When the negroes were as black as they could get the Zulu song came in. After the Zulu came the Hottentot 'She's My Sweet Forget-Me-Not' and then 'King' of the Cocoanut Grove, 'I'm Lonely Dear Little Chimpanzee I Love You Only.' And now we have the plain monkey song in 'Zanzibar.' The 'honeysuckle and the bee' went still further down in the scale of evolution and marked the change from animal to vegetable kingdom. 'The Star That Loved the Rose' was getting clear back to the nebular hypothesis. It was too etherial for the common mind and did not last. But it was certainly following the evolution theory out to its logical conclusion."

THE IRISH LANGUAGE.

The Irish language has only eighteen letters, says the Indianapolis News. Sometimes each letter is written separately and not jointed together. The chief difficulty in learning Irish is that there are innumerable abbreviations for words and phrases. The Irish language is nonphonetic, the words rarely being a key to the correct pronunciation.

RAILROAD NEWS

Excursion Season Will Soon Open For Head of Lakes.

It Has Already Begun In St. Paul and Minneapolis.

While Minneapolis and St. Paul will doubtless get the lion's share of excursions run into Minnesota by the various railroads, it is expected that the usual number of excursion trains will come to Duluth during the summer. The several conventions to be held here this season will doubtless result in some specials being brought here, and these will be something in the nature of excursions, for very low rates will prevail. Probably three or four special trains will be employed during the Eagles' convention in June.

The excursion season was opened in the Twin Cities Sunday, when five excursions arived there. These were run over the Omaha, Great Western, Rock Island roads and Minneapolis & St. Louis. No dates for excursions into Duluth have as yet been officially announced.

Will Close Offices.

At a meeting of Duluth general railroad agents, held yesterday afternoon in the office of the Milwaukee road, it was agreed that the uptown freight offices should be closed Saturday afternoons at 1 o'clock, from next Saturday, May 20, to Sept. 30. A regular notice to this effect will be mailed to the shipping and jobbing interests of the city. In the passenger departments only one man will be on duty Saturday afternoons in the uptown offices.

They Deny Report.

Officials of the Milwaukee road positively deny that there is any truth to the report that a passenger service between Duluth and Chicago will be established by their road before the end of the present month. Such a service has long been contemplated, but it is asserted that it will probably be some little time, possibly a year or more, before it is established.

Long Island Booklet.

The passenger department of the Long Island railroad has published a very handsome illustrated booklet on Long Island. It is about the size of the Northern Pacific's Wonderland, and is attractively gotten up, being filled with interesting reading matter and illustrations. A list of hotels and boarding houses and all other necessary information is given.

Railroad Notes.

Curtis L. Mosher, who recently resigned from the advertising department of the Northern Pacific road to enter private business in St. Paul, has been appointed special representative of the same road. It is not yet announced what the nature of Mr. Mosher's duties will be. They will be assigned by President Howard Elliott.

Frank E. Gerrish, for many years chief dispatcher of the Northern division of the Great Northern, has been made trainmaster of the same division, with offices at Crookston. His former position will be taken by J. B. Glasgow, now third "trick" dispatcher. J. W. McDonald, operator at Larimore, will succeed Mr. Glasgow.

Reports from Kansas City and Chicago indicate that the Hill interests have secured control of the Kansas City Southern road. Whether the reports are true or not will be shown Wednesday, when the directors of the company will hold a meeting.

Beginning Sunday, a change of time on the Grand Trunk road permits passengers going east from Winnipeg to save six hours and thirty-five minutes on the journey between Winnipeg and Eastern Canadian points, by way of St. Paul and Chicago. The Chicago-Toronto train will leave at 8:15 p. m., instead of 10:30 p. m., as formerly, allowing better connections.

State of Minnesota, County of St. Louis, ss.—
District Court, Eleventh Judicial District.
Great Northern Power Company, Petitioner, vs.
Carl Faelton, Frank E. Morse, Carl Stasny and Frank W. Hale, Respondents.

To the Above Named Respondents, And all other persons, companies, or corporations who have or claim any estate, right, title or interest in, claim to or lien upon any of the several pieces or parcels of land hereinafter described:

You and each of you are hereby notified that the Great Northern Power Company, a corporation created, organized and existing under and by virtue of Title I, of Chapter 34, of the General Statutes of Minnesota for the year 1894, and acts amendatory thereof and supplementary thereto, will, on the 10th day of June, A. D. 1905, at nine thirty o'clock in the forenoon, at a special term then to be held at the Court House in the City of Duluth, in said County, present to the District Court in and for said county a petition, signed and duly verified by its President and Secretary, which petition is now on file in the office of the Clerk of said Court.

The object of said petition is to have the lands hereinafter described condemned for the purpose of enabling the petitioner to construct and operate the dams, canals, pipe lines and electrical transmission lines and other works and improvements in said petition described, and to have the court appoint commissioners to determine the compensation to be paid to the owners of such lands.

Said lands are to be taken for the purpose of constructing, maintaining and operating a dam, reservoir and gate-house; such dam is to be constructed to the height of twelve feet, with suitable gates, across Beaver Creek (the outlet of Rice Lake), in the Southwest quarter of the Southeast quarter of Section Seven (7), Township fifty-one (51) North, of Range Fourteen (14) West, on the westerly side of the Mud-mile Road as now located and travelled across said section and immediately adjoining said road.

The object of the erection of said dam is to raise the level of Rice Lake and create a reservoir for the storage of water—to be drawn off and used in connection with the dam, reservoir and gate-house, to be constructed by petitioner at or near the Village of Thomson in Carlton County, Minnesota,—and a canal from said last mentioned reservoir to a forebay in Sections Nine (9) and ten (10), in Township forty-eight (48) North, of Range Sixteen (16) West, in said Carlton County, and a series of pipe lines from said forebay to a power house to be constructed on the banks of the St. Louis River, in said County, near the center of Section eleven (11) Township forty-eight (48), North of Range Sixteen (16) West. The whole of said works are to be used to supply water to the inhabitants of the territory tributary to such reservoirs and canal, also to provide an improved waterway for public use and for generating and furnishing electricity to the public for light, heat and power.

The lands described in said petition and herein referred to are described as follows:

RICE LAKE RESERVOIR

REVISED CREED

To Be Subject of Fight In the Presbyterian Assembly.

Radical Preachers Say Time Honored Doctrine Cannot Stand.

New York, May 16.—The general assembly of the Presbyterian church, which will meet at Winona Lake, Ind., beginning Thursday, will discuss the overtures made by the presbytery of Nassau, L. I., to drop the Westminster confession of faith and substitute therefor the brief statement of the reformed faith. Between the conservatives and radicals there promises to be a lively discussion.

This was recently adopted by the general assembly as a brief statement, but not as a creed of the church, the old confession, known as the Westminster confession, which contains many doctrines that have caused sharp controversies between clergymen, being retained.

The Rev. Dr. Samuel T. Carter, New York city, last September sent an open letter to the presbytery at Nassau which attracted wide attention. He assailed certain doctrines "received by the church, but not generally believed." The reading of the letter at the Presbyterian meeting in Oyster Bay precipitated a discussion over the statements it contained.

The controversy continued until the next meeting, held in December. It was believed that Dr. Carter might be tried for heresy, but after appearing before the presbytery at Nassau and making an eloquent appeal for the truth and the dropping of misstatements, however time honored, he triumphed in that instead of trying him for heresy the presbytery voted to make overtures to the general assembly to drop the Westminster confession.

A statement has been given out by Dr. Carter, in which he says:

"The general assembly of the Presbyterian church meets in the month of May. The presbytery of Nassau asks it to take the necessary steps toward dropping the Westminster confession and adopting a brief statement of the reformed faith, the simple and kindler creed which has already been endorsed by the church.

"The general assembly can reject the petition more or less courteously. But can it afford to do so? It is important to rid the church of bad creed, but still more important to dispel from the minds of men the gloomy ideas of religion which go with the old creeds and most of all the dreadful dogma of endless torment which has caused such intense suffering.

"The secular press has thus far treated the matter so courteously and sympathetically that I feel it to be a privilege to present my appeal before the public through it. The Westminster confession presents for the worship and allegiance of man a God who, according to the good pleasure of his will has assigned millions of the human race to endless torment before they were born or had done good or ill.

"Of this number a large proportion died in infancy and committed no personal transgression. The whole heathen world formed another large company. By the teachings of the confession Homer and Virgil, Plato and Socrates, Cato and Antonious, Confucius and Guatama are at this moment roasting in the literal flames of hell fire and shall so burn forever and ever.

"Has the Presbyterian church the face to make this declaration to men in this generation? The Westminster confession, in fact, says that God is a monster; modern theology says he is not. In this sentence lies the whole gist of the confession.

"Every fiber of my moral being rises up against this God who dishonors theology; with the utmost fervor of my soul I reject this God of the confession, and as fully as I reject this God, so gladly do I receive the God of the gospel, Jesus Christ.

"The father in the great parable, who runs forth to meet his wretched, but repenting son, falls upon his neck and kisses him. Sham theology is sure to make sham religion. Sham religion is sure to lead to the horrors of the Roman empire and the French revolution, to the eruption of the human volcano.

"It has been well said, 'Repelled light becomes lightning.' Of such a state of affairs as this, Martineau sadly says: 'Will not bad creed, then, be got rid of? Not a bit; and year after year thousands of clergymen will solemnly profess before tens of thousands of assenting people a creed which is false to the heart of them all.'

"This is what they are doing in the Presbyterian church today. The general assembly will do nothing so good as to make an end of it. It is more seriously important than sending missionaries to China. There is no use of sending truth abroad if we live a lie at home."

DECAYED FOOD

Health Department May Stop Practice of Searching the Dumps.

Family Discovered Eating Rotten Vegetables Secured In This Way.

"Notice—Persons are forbidden to remove decayed vegetables from the city dumping grounds."

Such a warning may have to be posted on the dumping grounds of the health department at Ninth avenue west and in the West end, as the result of the practice of digging about in the dumping grounds for rotten vegetables which have been thrown out by the commission houses.

A complaint was recntly made to the health depatment that a certain family in the city made it a custom to bring home such vegetables and cook them for table use. Three other families occupied the same building, and they complained that the stench of the cooking was unbearable.

One of the health inspectors was sent to investigate and he found in the house several rotten cabbages and some decayed meat. He stated this morning, that the cabbages were so rotten that he could thrust his finger through them, but the woman was preparing to cook them and set them out for the family to eat.

"The house where these people lived was quite respectable," said the health inspector this morning. "It was comfortably furnishd and there were no signs of abject poverty. The husband, who is a foreigner, works in one of the lumber mills and makes enough to keep the family in comfort if not in luxury, but his wife makes a practice of going down to the dump every day or two and digging around for half smelled vegetables. She peels off the outside and cooks the remainder. In this case she was not quite so careful in her selection and got some stuff that was a little too strong for the neighbors.

"It is quite a common sight to see women or boys digging around on the dumps, with a long stick with a nail on the end of it. I never paid much attention to them before, but the dumpmen tell me these people actually eat what they get there. Out on the dump in the West end the men have forbidden any person to come around, but the practice is still kept up on the Ninth avenue dumping ground."

INDIGNANT WOMAN

Hugs Him In Street and Gets $72.

New York, May 16.—As William F. Perkins of Boston was walking along Fifth avenue about 1 o'clock Sunday with George B. Briggs, a stock broker, two women turned the corner at Forty-third street in a quick walk and ran into the men. "How dare you, sir, insult a lady on the street?" demanded one of the women.

"Pardon me, madam. You ran into us," Perkins responded.

"But you tried to kiss me and I'm going to call the police," said one of the women as she threw her arms about his neck and held on for a moment.

She did not call for the police, but after releasing her hold hurried down the avenue with her companion. The Boston man was suspicious and felt in his waistcoat pocket for his roll of $72. It was gone. He and the broker started after the women. After a chase of three blocks they caused their arrest. There was found in the pockets of one $72 in denominations answering Perkins' lost roll.

CRAIG FOUND DEAD.

La Crosse, Wis., May 16.—The dead body of James Craig, a well-known old resident who mysteriously disappeared May 4, was found opposite the city yesterday in about a foot of water. On May 4 he started across the wagon bridge on his way to Hokah, Minn., and since then no trace of him could be found until his body was discovered by fishermen. The cause of death is not known, but foul play is suspected. He was 68.

ABSOLUTE DISREGARD FOR NEUTRALITY SHOWN BY RUSSIAN ADMIRAL

French Officer Reports Rojestvensky As Very Independent.

Fails To Find a Russian Ship On His Last Trip Along Annam.

Togo Said To Be Getting Fleet In Position South of Formosa.

Saigon, Cochin-China, May 17.—Admiral De Jonquieres, the French naval commander at Saigon, who has been cruising along the Annam coast on the cruiser Guichen, returned here today. According to the reports gathered concerning the Russian fleet, Admiral Rojestvensky showed absolute disregard of discussions on the subject of neutrality. The Russian commander proceeded as if his position gave him complete independence. He declared that he acted on his own judgment and that criticisms did not change his opinions.

Iron discipline, it is added, was maintained on board the Russian warships.

A correspondent of a Hanoi newspaper who was said to have been off Port Dayt, forty miles north of Kamranh bay, was rescued by a junk and brought here. While on the junk the correspondent saw thirty Russian warships anchored in the bay. The junk later was stopped and boarded by the Russian repair ship Kamtschatka. The boarding officer blindfolded the correspondent and took him on board Rear Admiral Nebogatoff's flagship, where he was closely interrogated. The explanations of the correspondent were found to be satisfactory and he was well treated. The Russian officers said they had not been ashore since February. They expected an engagement to take place soon. The United Russian fleet was then about to start for Vladivostok.

The bottoms of the vessels of Nebogatoff's division, the correspondent asserted, appeared to be foul and the ships were weather beaten.

The entire Russian fleet comprised sixty vessels with a number of auxiliaries.

Tokio, May 17.—In reply to the representations of the Japanese government, the French government has notified the authorities here that Admiral De Jonquieres reported that he had cruised along the coast of Annam May 13 and May 14 for the purpose of ordering the Russian ships to leave the coast should he find any in French waters. The admiral, it is added, did not find any Russian vessels between Cape St. James and Turan. Even so far north as Jowanedy, the most available northern anchorage on the Annam coast, not one Russian ship was observed.

Amoy, China, May 17.—It is believed that part of the Japanese fleet is taking up a position below Formosa, and that Admiral Togo has planned to fight the Russians south of Formosa.

The Japanese get orders from this vicinity at night time.

The state of martial law first declared at Tamsui, Island of Formosa, and subsequently made general throughout the island, has been followed by the appointment of a military executive and the moving of the women and children from the Pescadore islands to Formosa.

FOURTH RUSSIAN FLEET.

St. Petersburg, May 17.—It is announced from Cronstadt that Vice Admiral Birileff, commander-in-chief at the Baltic ports, has ordered the commanders in the Fourth division of Vice Admiral Rojestvensky's fleet to hold their ships in readiness to leave for the Far East by June 14, without fail.

SHIPS SEIZED BY JAPS.

Tokio, May 17.—The British steamer Lincluden was seized by a Japanese warship, May 15, south of Korea.

The French steamer Quang Nam was captured by a warship of Japan on the same date, near the Pescadore islands, straits of Formosa.

The cargoes or destinations of the vessels are not announced.

YACHTS START ON RACE TO ENGLAND

Sandy Hook, May 17.—The ocean race for the cup offered by the German emperor was started at 12:15 p. m.

The boats crossed the starting line in the following order:

Ailsa, 12:14:55; Hildegarde, 12:15:00; Atlantic, 12:15:30; Endymion, 12:16:00; Hamburg, 12:19:00; Thistle, 12:18:00; Fleur De Lys, 12:26:04; Sunbeam, 12:30:00; Apache, 12:34:30; Utowana and Valhalla crossed the line to the windward of the committee boat at 12:15, but both were recalled.

The Utowana crossed at 12:57:30, but the Valhalla went in irons in the light wind while going about and did not cross until 1:25. All the times are unofficial.

New York, May 17.—Weather conditions early today were much more favorable for a start of the yachts in the Trans-Atlantic race than on yesterday. Just before 8 o'clock the wind was blowing eight knots from the northeast, the sky was cloudy and the air clear. At that time it was possible to clearly observe objects ten miles away. The Sandy Hook lightship could be plainly seen from the Highlands of Navesink.

The thick blanket of fog, which made maneuvering about the starting point at Sandy Hook lightship so hazardous yesterday that the committee in charge of the event postponed it, disappeared during the night. The northeaster, which brought on the unfortunate conditions, had subsided to an eight-knot breeze.

The weather, however, still remained cloudy and sullen, as if loath to let the yachts leave these shores without some sort of a preliminary tussle with a regular North Atlantic storm.

Yesterday's early conditions, which were so favorable to the square riggers of the fleet, were reversed today. The prospects of a beat on the wind, or a close reach down the Long Island shore, was quite to the liking of the schooners of the fleet, and especially to those on board the yawl Ailsa, which is considered the fastest of any of the yachts on the wind. Preparations, therefore were begun this morning on board all the yachts anchored in Sandy Hook bay for a day of windward work, and one or two of the racers unshipped their foreyards, which had been rigged yesterday in anticipation of a beam breeze and the setting of large, light sails.

The race is to be started across an imaginary line between a committee tug and the Sandy Hook lightship. The committee boat flies the burgee of the Imperial Yacht club under whose auspices the race is to be sailed. On the committee, are representatives of the Imperial German navy, the United States navy and the New York Yacht club Time will be taken from the sounding of the starting gun until the signal at the Lizard light is flashed by the winning boat. At the finish line will be anchored the German cruiser Pfeil to assist the yachts in locating the light in event of fog.

At 12:15 the time arranged for the sending of the yachts across the line, the wind on shore had hauled to about the same quarter as yesterday and had brought back with it the great masses of fog which had caused yesterday's postponement. The wind was south of east and the fog was increasing, which cut off all view of the ocean.

An hour after the time set for the start the wind was from the east, although it frequently shifted a few points north or south of that direction. The fog at times cleared away only to return again.

Contract With Mills of Itself Restraint of Trade.

Milwaukee, May 17.—Special Assistant Attorney General Kellogg of St. Paul, Minn., who is taking testimony in the case of the government versus the General Paper company on the allegation that it is a trust, today succeeded in obtaining the form of contracts between the mills and the General Paper company, which he looks upon as valuable information to the government, in that the contract in itself is a restraint of trade. The contract states that the paper mill adjoining the General Paper company agrees that for a period of five years from the date of contract that the General Paper company is constituted and shall be sole sales agent for the sale of any and all grades of paper manufactured by the mill entering into the contract.

DES MOINES IN DANGER FROM HIGH WATER.

Des Moines, May 17.—Heavy rains in the vicinity of Boone have caused a rise of nearly two feet in the Des Moines river. This up river volume of water is expected to reach Des Moines tonight, adding to the six-inch rise of last night and throwing the surface close to the danger line. A force of men in the employ of the city, worked all night strengthening the levees. Another force is patrolling the river banks today ferreting out the weak places.

T. T. Lovelace, formerly of Kansas City. TOO MANY POTATOES.

Big Slump Occurs In Prices In Maine.

Presque Isle, Me., May 17.—More than 3,000,000 bushels of sound and plump potatoes are lying in the storehouses and cellars of Aroostook county, unsold and with no prospect of being sold this season.

Last fall at harvest time buyers were offering 50 cents a bushel for the crop as it came from the ground, but the farmers remembered the previous spring when potatoes sould from $1.60 to $1.75 a barrel, and held on and waited for a rise. Today Thomas H. Phair, who owns more than thirty starch factories in the county, is running every one at full capacity, and can purchase all the potatoes he can handle for from 15 to 17 cents a bushel.

Last October a farmer could put ten bushels of potatoes into a one horse wagon and take them to the nearest village and exchange them for a barrel of flour. Now he must make two trips and carry twenty-five bushels of potatoes to each load before he can carry away a barrel of the same kind of flour.

Not at any time since the county was opened up to the white settlers have potatoes been so plentiful and cheap. The custom house inspectors who watch the 250 miles of border between Maine and the maritime provinces are sitting back in their offices, smoking pipes and telling stories of old times, fully convinced that no subject of King Edward VII. will try to smuggle potatoes across the border for the sake of selling them for 15 cents a bushel.

The peculiar feature about the situation is that every farmer is engaging fertilizers in larger amounts than usual, and is planning to plant still wider areas to potatoes the coming season. The total crop in the county last season was something phenomenal, exceeding 11,000,000 bushels.

If all the land that is to be planted to potatoes this year gives an average pield the harvest next fall will exceed 15,000,000 bushels. Scores of farmers are mortgaging their places to raise money for the purchasing of fertilizers.

"We have been hit hard," said one of the heavy losers, "and now we are going to use some hair from the same dog to cure the bite."

THE CZAR IS SINCERE

His Rescript Giving Poles Greater Freedom Removes Skepticism.

Many Vexatious Restrictive Laws In Poland Are Removed.

St. Petersburg, May 17.—There is little room for skepticism as to the genuiness of the broad policy of imperial reform after the remarkable steps sanctioned by Emperor Nicholas in the imperial rescript issued yesterday, modifying the restrictive decrees in nine of the Western governments of Russia, and giving the Poles greater freedom for acquiring farming lands and purchasing landed properties and industrial premises, and giving permission to introduce the Polish and Lithuanian languages in the primary and secondary schools, where the majority of the inhabitants are non-Russian. Almost at one sweep the whole burden of the vexatious restrictive laws in Poland and the Baltic provinces have been removed, and the privileges for which the natives have been fighting for years are restored, the assemblies of the Polish nobles are re-established and all the harsh administrative measures introduced at the time of the policy of reaction and Russification are abolished, unless later, for purposes of state after the recommendation of the council of state, they receive imperial sanction. As a natural sequence of freedom of religion the oppressive prohibition of the purchase of land by Catholic peasants is abolished. In effect the measures sanctioned amount to an entire reversal of Russian policy in ancient Poland and the Baltic provinces.

In Poland, by confining the land holding to persons of Polish extraction strictly by inheritance by descent, and not even by testament, it was designed to force the Poles either to become orthodox Russians, or drive them into Poland proper. The hardships thus entailed were innumerable. The property of deceased Poles was sold to Russians by forced sale and at ridiculous prices. A famous case was that of the Polish estates of the late Prince Von Hohenlohe, the German imperial chancellor, for which a special ukase was necessary in order to permit the sale.

It is pointed out that in order to avoid delay in the matter of the introduction of the Polish and Lithuanian languages, the emperor specifically directed the formulation of the necessary regulations and laws within six months.

These measures, it is understood, will be followed by the introduction of local self-government through the zemstvo system. The steps taken will undoubtedly have immense influence upon the population of Poland and will practically meet the demands of the rational reformers who really recognize that the restoration of the kingdom of Poland is an idle and visonary dream.

The committee of ministers has gone no further with the Jewish question than to grant freedom of residence to the artisan class. The question in its entirety is of such great importance that it has been decided to refer it to the coming general assembly. This practically is a decision to defer it to the will of the representatives of the people, being the first public recognition that the government intends to be guided by its action.

The emperor's action has produced a splendid impression among the reform elements which are expressing the highest satisfaction. As the announcement was not published in the Official Gazette until this morning, however, the newspapers contain no comment.

LINERS IN TROUBLE.

Caronia Is Aground Off Sandy Hook Beacon.

New York, April 17.—At 8 o'clock today, the Cunard liner Caronia, which sailed yesterday afternoon for Liverpool with a distinguished passenger list, was still aground opposite the Sandy Hook beacon. Two tugs worked for a long time in an effort to pull the liner off the bank but the attempt was unsuccessful. No damage to the ships is feared as the bottom in that part of the channel is soft sand. Another attempt will be made at the next high tide at 6:30 p. m.

Liverpool, May 17.—The officers of the White Star liner Oceanic which arrived here today from New York, May 10, say that the mishap to the Baltic of the same line, (which was announced from Queenstown last night was in wireless communication with the Oceanic) occurred May 14 and necessitated a delay of only six hours. A small part of her machinery was affected and no further delay was expected.

ALL EYES TURNED ON PRESIDENT GOMPERS TO END CHICAGO STRIKE

Great Labor Leader Consults With Mayor and Local Leaders.

Has No Authority To Act But Will Advise the Disputants.

Cab Drivers Will Deliver Passengers To Boycotted Houses.

Chicago, May 17.—Samuel Gompers, president of the American Federation of Labor, was the central figure in the Teamsters' strike situation today. His presence in Chicago was regarded as offering hope of peace, but the cry of the strikers was still for arbitration which the employers had resolutely refused as to garment workers in whose behalf the teamsters quit work six weeks ago.

Mr. Gompers met the labor leaders today in his rooms at the Briggs house. Just before going into this conference he said:

"I am not in a position to say what will or will not be done. I will say, however, that I have no intention of interfering unless I am commissioned by President Shea and his colleagues to do so."

That President Gompers came to Chicago at the solicitation of both the business men and the teamsters officials to act in the capacity of peacemaker was the statement of the national labor chief himself today: "My mission to Chicago," he said, "is to try to be helpful in bringing about an adjustment of the strike. I came here at the solicitation of one of the Chicago newspapers which sent me through its Washington correspondent ten days ago, a long telegram setting forth that the situation in Chicago was very keen. I was urged to come and use my influence to restore peace. The telegram stated that I enjoyed the confidence of both sides, the employers as well as the unions. I placed the telegram in the hands of Mr. Shea and the result was that several telegrams passed back and forth between Mr. Shea and myself and on Monday last, we had a long talk over the long distance telephone. Mr. Shea expressed the belief that I might be helpful in bringing about an adjustment of this strike and so I came."

Mr. Gompers said that the telegram referred to, as coming from a newspaper, was signed John C. Eastman of the Chicago Journal.

"I wish to say," he added, "that the suggestions set forth in the dispatch were supplemented by a few prominent business men, who also believed that I could be helpful in settling the difficulties. I am not here to call the strike off or on. I'm not in charge of the strike and don't expect to be. I'm here to be helpful if I can. Is there a parallel between this strike and the recent New York subway strike? There is none. That strike was called contrary to the national union law. The Chicago strike, the national officers inform me, is regular in every way. I would not say that it has been conducted well or otherwise."

Mr. Gompers declined to say whether he would seek a conference with the Employers' association, and declined to discuss this phase of the situation in any way. When asked if he would seek a conference with Attorney Levy Mayer, representing the Employers' association, Mr. Gompers declined to reply.

Attorney Mayer, when asked whether a conference had been arranged for between the Employers' association or himself and Mr. Gompers, said:

"I have just returned from a professional engagement in New York. I have been away for two days and am now in court, to which I came direct from the train. I have had no opportunity to confer with the Employers' association and I do not know whether they have in any way heard from Mr. Gompers. We shall not seek a conference with him."

President Gompers called upon Mayor Dunne today, the meeting having been arranged by William Bowes, a Chicago merchant and a personal friend of Mr. Gompers.

Mr. Gompers left the mayor's office after a ten-minutes' conference. "The mayor and I had a pleasant talk," he replied smilingly, when asked what was done. "Were you asked to stop the spread of the strike?"

"I do not do things," he said, "I advise."

President Gompers assured Mayor Dunne that he would use every honorable effort to bring about a speedy settlement of the strike to the best interests of all concerned, although admitting that he was without authority to act. Immediately after leaving the mayor's office, Mr. Gompers conferred with Alderman Dever, chairman of the mayor's peace committee.

A truce is in prospect between the livery owners and the union. Officials of the drivers' organization are said to have decided not to force the issue with the employers. A. B. Perrigo, president of the Joint Liverymen's association, said that the drivers had decided not to carry out the boycott plan against department stores and other strike-affected houses, but to permit passengers to be carried anywhere they might designate. A meeting of the executive board of the Cab and Carriage Drivers' union tonight is expected to ratify this action and bring about a settlement, so far as the livery business is concerned.

Delegates of the Socialist party of Chicago has adopted resolutions, expressing sympathy for the garment workers, and commending the sympathetic strike of the teamsters to aid the garment workers "In preventing the return, in all its hideousness, of the sweat shop and its whole train of evils." The resolutions also urge workers not to forget at future elections to place men in power who will "administer all the affairs in their interest."

This afternoon it became known that President Gompers had set in motion the peace machinery of the National Civic Federation in an effort to bring about an adjustment of the trouble. Before the national labor chief left Washington he was in communication with August Belmont and other leaders of the Civic federation. Through them he has made arrangements to reach the prominent Chicagoans who are in a position to bring great influence to bear on the Chicago Employers' association. Franklin MacVeagh, who is directly concerned in the strike because the teamsters employed by his firm of which he is the head, walked out when they were asked to deliver goods to the boycotted firms, and James H. Eckels are the Chicago members of the National Civic federation.

A conference held by Mr. Gompers last night, when he was summoned from the Briggs house by messengers who arrived in a private carriage bearing the insignia "M," is believed to have been with Mr. MacVeagh. Mr. Gompers refused to admit that he had seen Mr. MacVeagh, and that the latter could not be reached here today.

President Shea of the teamsters this afternoon said:

"I'm still standing pat. Gompers has no authority to call off the strike if he wanted to."

Two colored strike breakers, Jesse Ballinger and James Jones, one of whom is believed to have fired a shot that resulted in the death of an 8-year-old school boy, Enoch Carlson, were arrested today. Both negroes desperately resisted the police. They are employes of the Peabody Coal company, which has been active in attempting with non-union negro teamsters to deliver coal at the public schools and has been resisted by strikes of hundreds of pupils at the schools. The shooting of Carlson followed the jeering of colored non-union men by a number of boys who were playing ball in a vacant lot.

Until the ardor of the school children has cooled no more deliveries of "non-union" coal will be made at the public school buildings unless absolutely necessary. This announcement is made by officials of the board of education, who believe that "an ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure." The decision to stop the deliveries of coal by non-union drivers was reached after the compulsory education department had put down strikes at six schools and after disturbances had been caused at seven other schools.

BATTLE ON SHIP

Three Men Are Drowned and Several Injured In Labor Riot.

Tacoma Longshoremen Attack Crew of Men Brough From Seattle.

Tacoma, Wash., May 17—A desperate battle has occurred on the decks of the steamer Centennial, in which several men were slightly injured and three are thought to have been drowned. The Centennial from San Francisco, via Seattle, brought from the latter port a gang of eighteen men to work the ship's cargo here. Owing to the existing trouble between the Sailors' union and the Longshoremen's union, Capt. Pierce had been threatened with a boycott by the sailors if he employed Tacoma longshoremen, and hence had hired a crew at Seattle.

When the steamer arrived in port about 200 longshoremen boarded her, armed with clubs, billies, pistols and other weapons. The Seattle men were beaten wherever found, and some thirty shots were fired before order was restored.

A PERMANENT ORGANIZATION

Effected By Baptists of the North and South.

St. Louis, May 17.—The first hour of today's session of the general convention of the Baptists, North and South, was given to devotional exercises. The report of the committee of nine, appointed at a conference in New York last January, recommending permanent organization, was then read by Chairman E. M. Thresher of Ohio. A general discussion followed.

Rev. Dr. Edward Judson of New York was introduced after the discussion had progressed for some time and made a motion that the report be adopted.

The motion was seconded by Rev. Dr. W. E. Hatcher of Virginia.

Immediately upon the conclusion of Dr. Hatchers' speech the convention burst into the singing of "All Hail the Power of Jesus Name." The report of the committee recommending permanent organization was then read and adopted. The name of the organization is designated as the general convention of Baptists of North America. The geographical scope of the organization is to be North America and its islands. There is to be a president, three vice-presidents, a secretary and a treasurer. Churches, local, state and territorial organizations are to have representation. It is to have no authority except that exercised by the weight of its opinion. It is not to interfere with the affairs of either of the existing organizations. The next meeting is to be held in 1906 and after that they are to be held triennially.

Received Callers On 90th Birthday

Mrs. Phebe Amelia Pratt Observes 90th Anniversary of Her Birth at Her Home in Chelsea, Mass.

MRS. PRATT.

Says She Is In Excellent Health and Feels as Vigorous as a Girl. Due to the Use of Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey.

Mrs. Phebe Amelia Pratt, widow of William Pratt, yesterday celebrated her ninetieth birthday anniversary at her home, 166 Broadway, Chelsea. A reception was held from two to six, during which the old lady received numerous callers and was the recipient of many presents. She was assisted in receiving by Mr. and Mrs. George Pratt, of Stoughton; Mr. and Mrs. Charles H. Pratt, of Chelsea; Mrs. Eugene Pratt, two of her grandchildren, Chester and William Pratt, of Chelsea, and Ida and Mabel Pratt, of Stoughton.

The reception was planned by her relatives and the members of the First Baptist Church of Chelsea, of which she is a member.

During the summer Mrs. Pratt wrote:—"Gentlemen:—I am now almost 91 years of age and am in excellent health, owing to the use of Duffy's Malt Whiskey. Catarrh of the throat troubled me for four years, and I tried many remedies, without any benefit, until a friend induced me to try Duffy's Malt Whiskey.

My general condition was very poor also until I used Duffy's, but I am very glad to state that since using this grand medicine the catarrh has left me, my general health is better than it has been for years, and I know that it has prolonged my life. I most certainly would not be without it."

This letter of Mrs. Pratt was taken at random from among thousands received from men and women who gratefully thank Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey for their wonderful freedom from disease and for their marvelous old age. More are published in a booklet, which you may have free by writing.

DOINGS IN MICHIGAN

Twelve Year Old Boy Instantly Killed at Menominee.

Menominee—Emil Debeck, 12 years old, was instantly killed by a Northwestern gravel train. He was on his way home from school and attempted to steal a ride, but fell between the wheels. His body was horribly mangled. The train did not stop, although the accident was witnessed by the train men.

Sault Ste. Marie—Arthur Vaughan and Ernest McClelland left a few days ago to fish on Lake Superior. They have not been seen since by friends and are believed to have been caught in a storm and drowned. They were in a small boat and stopped at a house on Batchawana bay, left a lunch and said they would call for it at noon, but never returned. Vaughan has a family. A searching party is out looking for the bodies.

Hancock—Drummond island, a large division of land at the entrance of the channels leading from Lake Huron to Lake Superior, is to be the home of a Finnish colony. A party of prospective settlers from Calumet, under the guidance of Miss Maggie Walz, has returned from the island where several days were spent on a visit of inspection.

The conditions were found satisfactory, and as a site for the colony a block of territory lying on the south side of the island and one mile from the Lake Huron shore was selected. The land is owned by the government and already several Calumet Finns have made homestead entries. In every instance the men who have filed are heads of families, and with a few exceptions a ll are at present engaged in mining. Their purpose in locating on the island is to engage in agriculture and fishing, the selection of the lands being largely made with reference to carrying out the latter plan.

Houghton—Rev. A. J. Rezek, pastor of the Catholic church, is writing a history of the diocese of Ste. Marie and Marquette, from the date of the first visit of the Jesuit missionaries down to the present.

Gladstone—By the recent purchase of the holdings of the Ford River Lumber company, comprising about 110,000 acres, the I. Stephenson company has increased its timber area to nearly 250,000 acres.

Capt. Jack O'Connell, a well-known marksman and former plainsman, was stricken with paralysis while walking in a Gladstone street late late week. The stroke affected the right side, making the leg and arm useless. His condition now is reported better.

Escanaba—Albert Edgerly, a Northwestern brakeman at Escanaba, fell under the wheels of a caboose and was instantly killed, his lower limbs being badly mangled. No one saw the accident, so it is not known exactly how it occurred. Edgerly was twenty-four years of age, a single man, and his parents reside at Stephenson.

The third annual meeting of the Young Women's Christian association of Duluth was held last evening at the rooms on West Superior street. The meeting was well attended and was a most interesting one. The president of the association, Miss Roe, presided, and the devotional service, which was led by Mrs. W. S. Horr, opened the meeting. The reports of the general secretary, treasurer and president were read. A vote of thanks was voted Miss L. L. Garvin, treasurer of the association, for her work in keeping the accounts, which demand a great deal of time and labor. A vote of thanks was also given the directors for their interest in the welfare of the association.

Mrs. Wesley Feetham, secretary of the association, spoke of the work that had been accomplished during the past year and of the hopes entertained for more and greater work the coming year. The Y. W. C. A. home, which will be an entire building including the home, lunch and rest rooms, gymnasium and all the other departments that come under a modern association, is the project which is just now most talked of and hoped for by the members. Mrs. Feetham spoke of the home and told of the plan adopted the first of the year by the directors. Fifty per cent of the net proceeds of the lunch room is laid aside each month for the home. This is the first money raised or secured for the purpose and it is considered most appropriate that the very first funds should be directly from the members of the association. If the lunch room is on as good paying a basis this year and last, $500 will be in the bank at the end of the year for the home. It was voted also that the finance committee be instructed to provide mite boxes for the members that any stray pennies might be placed in these boxes and opened at the end of the year.

Five members of the board of directors were re-elected as follows: Mrs. W. S. Bishop, Mrs. C. H. Merritt, Mrs. W. C. Agnew, Mrs. F. C. Bowman and Mrs. J. A. Watterworth. One new member, Mrs. J. A. Kirkwood, was also elected. The term of these directors is two years.

The meeting closed with a short talk by Miss Taylor, state secretary, who spoke on the individual responsibility of the members. Miss Taylor spoke of the aims of the association to help the members, physically, intellectually, socially and above all spiritually. If the spiritual life of the member is not reached and influenced by the association life, the thing for which the Y. W. C. A. stands for pre-eminently is being lost sight of. The talk was a most earnest and helpful one.

Miss Taylor, who has been in the city since Saturday, left last evening for Minneapolis. While in the city she was the guest of Mrs. W. C. Agnew.

NOTHING TO DO.

Many Girls With Several Years of Idleness.

A brand new "Plan for Girls With Nothing to Do"—not the working girls and the poor girls for whom so much effort is expended, but the well-to-do girls who have money and time, but nothing to do with it—is blocked out in the current issue of Charities by Elsie Clews Parsons.

Mrs. Parsons writes about "that growing class of young women who do not marry for a period of time of from five to ten years after they leave school or college. These girls are up to the age of 16, 18 or 22, are laboriously educated in school, and a certain proportion of them in college, to habits of work, and then, school or college days passed, they are cut adrift with the habit of doing, but with nothing to do.

"In many cases, particularly in the case of the boarding school or college girl, the girl's family urge with much reasonableness that she has been away so much that it is time for her to stay at home and cultivate closer relations with her family and acquaintances. Whether she has been away or not, it is held that 'coming out' will take all her time and energy, moreover, besides paying calls, etc., with her mother.

"She may help the latter around the house, in shopping, etc. For a year or two the girl may adopt, although more or less questionably, this plan of life. 'Helping around the house' she finds means being interrupted in whatever she may be doing at any hour of the day to do what she feels could have been done better at another time, and probably by another person, so that she 'helps' more or less grudgingly. Paying calls she frankly says she 'detests.' At the end of a year or two, even the 'parties' she enjoyed when she 'came out' begin to pall.

"At this point she probably takes a a club at a social settlement and becomes a 'friendly visitor,' or joins one of the numerous inconsequential 'classes' designated for the unoccupied.

"We need only turn to a record of colonial days to learn how different was the domestic of our great-grandmothers. Today, home handicrafts are as antique as the stage coach or flint gun.

"An up-to-date apartment home is run on very different principles from a colonial home. In the latter the women of the family—wife and daughters—had much to do; to do it properly they had to be systematically employed in both supervisory and manual capacities.

The apartment house, with its system of semi-communal domestic labor and the department store, with its cheap ready-made goods, have greatly diminished the activities of the individual household. In bygone days from apprenticeship in household art a girl passed, as a rule, directly into the management of her own household.

"How is it with parents who clearly realize the conditions of a problem, and whose only wish is to solve it for the good of their daughters? Their daughter, graduated from school or college, will not in all probability marry for a period of from five to eight years.

"They know that in view of the complexity of her environment she may not be sufficiently mature before she is 24 or 26, to choose a husband wisely. Naturally, until then they wish her to live at home. The idea of social helpfulness very likely has combined with that of social amusement in her life and in many little ways with her parents in their philanthropic and civic activities."

Grass Dried Linen.

To have "grass dried linen" is one of the latest domestic extravagances, says the New York Sun. It has been handed along by word of mouth from one to another who appreciate a good thing and there has been neither need nor inclination to cheapen it by advertising. It was the happy idea of a man who fell heir to one of those New England farms that you cannot rent, sell or give away. But the first view of the situation showed that his farm would bring him to speedy bankruptcy if he were to attempt to run it agriculturally. It had plenty of water and broad, wind-swept meadows where the sun beat all day long. This gave him his idea. From a city friend he cajoled a lot of what housekeepers call the "big pieces" of the family wash. When the sheets and tablecloths and sevi-ettes came home it was not so much that they were clean—that is elemental laundry work, though rarely attained—but they had the breath of country air and the smell of grass. From this beginning the trade has grown until that Massachusetts farm is paying better than it ever did under a system of rotation of crops.

THE SHADOW ON THE SNOW

By Anita Silvani.

(Copyright, 1905, by Daily Story Pub. Co.)

People often wonder that I do not like to see snow, the beautiful, soft, white snow, that covers the earth with its mantle of purity, but when I tell all that the snow brings back to me and the terrors it wakes into life again no one will wonder at my nervous dread of a winter's night and my dislike to the silently falling snow, which deadens the sound of every footstep.

As a girl I lived in the country with my uncle Richard Avonmore, a childless widower, whose wife had died in the first few years of their married life, and though I never heard all the story, I understood that her death was due to a terrible shock she had got in hearing suddenly of some disgrace or crime connected with her only brother. My uncle lived as a lonely and melancholy recluse after that, till the deaths of both my parents led him to offer a home to me, his orphan niece, and the affection between us soon became great.

I was about 17 when one afternoon early in December I was amusing myself sitting on the top of the library steps and dipping into one old book after another. The grey dusk had crept over the garden as I sat there and the one candle I had put beside me on the library ladder threw a flickering light into the long, low oak-panelled old room, and as a slight noise at the window caused me to look round I saw the figure of a man in an Inverness cape and with a traveling cap drawn down over his ears, outlined against the misty background of the garden while the light of my candle fell upon his face, which was pressed against the glass.

Ah! what a face it was! So evil in expression! So wolfish in the hungry envy with which the comforts of the room inspired him! His sunken cheeks were covered by a short growth of bristly beard, and his hollow eyes glittered with unnatural brightness like those of an opium eater, but it was no drug that gave the horrible wild beast ferocity to those haggard features, only some all-absorbing passion which had become as the very soul of the man could do that. For whom or what were those hungry eyes seeking?

For one brief minute the man at the window looked into my eyes and I looked back into his, spellbound and dumb like a bird fascinated by the gaze of a snake. Then I gave a great cry and in my fright tumbled off the ladder.

The face at the window vanished, and my uncle hurried in. His face grew pale as I told him what I had seen, and he said: "Gertrude, you are a sensible girl—do not speak of this man to anyone. Do not say you have seen him. Shut the shutters and with them shut out all memory of that face." He was so agitated, so different from his usual calm self, that I could only stare at him and mutter feebly, "Yes, uncle—Oh, yes!"

The next day the first snow of winter fell, and by night when it had ceased falling and the moon shone out the garden was like a fairy scene, and I sat at my bedroom window in the dark, looking out at it, for I felt too restless to go to bed, and night had brought back to me the fear which haunted me as I thought of the face I had seen.

I was watching the sharply defined shadows of the gable roofs and tall chimney stacks which the moonlight threw upon the gravel walk before the house, and then I saw another shadow—the shadow of a man—the shadow of that very man in the Inverness cape whom I had seen the evening before. It was thrown upon the snowy ground as though he stood near the corner of the west wing, and though he was hidden the moon threw his shadow beyond the wall of the house. He seemed to have a long knife in his hands and to be feeling the sharpness of the blade. Then he moved away and I sprang up and hurried downstairs to warn my uncle, whom I knew to be still in the dining room.

The house was a large, rambling old mansion and our neighborhood was so peaceful the servants were often careless as to fastening windows at night. As my flying feet reached the library door I saw that it stood open, and I could feel the cold breeze blow in from the window. The terrible, paralyzing fear which had made me dumb before came over me again, and I had paused irresolute and unable to pass. That moment was fatal to me. Had I rushed on I would have escaped; had I cried out someone would have heard, but I was dumb, and my feet were like leaden weights. The next moment the man had sprung upon me like one of the thugs of India, and something was round my neck and I was dragged, half-choked into the room. I wonder I did not die from fear then and there.

The man gagged me and bound me, and stuck me up in a chair, a limp, helpless bundle, while he locked the door.

"One," he chuckled softly. "One!" and very neatly caught. I shall have him next!" He stood glaring at me and muttering to himself in high glee. Then he said:

"Do you know who I am? Where I come from?"

I shook my head.

"Well, then, I come from a prison cell, where I have spent twenty years—all my youth!—all the days I meant should be so full of pleasure—and all that time Dick Avonmore has been spending old Jaspar's money—the money I killed old Jaspar to gain. They say you are Dick's heiress, but you shall never have my money. I will kill you first, and then him!"

He shook me by the shoulder and put his savage face so close to mine that his hot breath fanned my cheek, and I saw that the eyes which looked into mine were the eyes of a mad man.

"I am Jaspar Carnworth. I was brought up as old Jaspar's heir, but he was an old dottard and did not understand that youth must have its pleasures and we quarreled often. He made no use of his money and to me it meant salvation! Salvation from all my debts and duns—I could not get one sixpence to save my soul—no! not even when I begged on my knees for it. He laughed his miserly little laugh and told me to go and be hanged. Then I grabbed him to shake the miserable life out of him, and he fell off the chair and hit his head and lay stunned and the thought came to me to dash his head harder on the corner of the iron fender and so kill him outright. I thought I was his heir, but he had made a new will and left all his money to my sister, Dick Avonmore's wife. Curse old Jaspar! Curse them all!"

His voice rose above the whisper in which he had poured out his speech, and the sound seemed to startle him and recall him to where he was, for, like all who have lived in solitary confinement, the sound of the voice comes with a shock.

"They tried me for murder, and the judge sentenced me to die, but there was a doubt if old Jaspar had not fallen himself, and I had friends, and so they changed it to imprisonment for life. At first it was hell to be in that prison and I was like a devil. Then I found I got all one can gain by being quiet and I got cunning. I was like an abject slave to those prison warders, for I found they could help me to get out sooner, and I nursed my plans in secret and practiced how to catch people and strangle them and cut their throats, and every day and every hour I marked off, made a step nearer my release. Do you think I will let you or Dick have that money that I have wanted and toiled for for twenty years in prison, and come out again to claim? Do you know what it is to commit a crime and commit it all in vain! In vain!"

Again his voice rose and he stood clenching and unclenching his hands with the gesture of passionate self-repression of the helpless prisoner who has learnt in jail the lesson of his own impotence. The bitterest drop in the cup of his disappointment was the thought that he had sinned and differed only to enrich another. Remorse he had none; could old Jaspar have come to life again he would have killed him as ruthlessly as before. I closed my eyes with a shudder to shut out his distorted, evil face.

It was awful to be within reach of that sleeping household and not be able to make one person hear me, and as the madman went down on all fours upon the floor hunting for the knife, which he had fortunately dropped in the darker part of the room when he heard me coming downstairs, I made a frantic effort for freedom and twisted myself, round so violently that I fell with a crash, chair and all, upon the floor.

Snarling like a wild beast, the man sprang at me, trying to strangle me, and at that moment there were voices at the window, and two of the grooms who fortunately for me were returning home late from the village inn, and who had noticed the open window, sprang in and I saw my assailant borne down, fighting and scratching and snarling and biting like a wild cat, and then my over-tired nerves gave way and I fainted.

I have never spent a winter in the old house since. When autumn comes I go to some bright land of summer, where there is nothing to recall to me the face of the man whose shadow I had seen upon the snow.

TONIGHT'S ATTRACTIONS.

METROPOLITAN—Harry Corson Clarke in "What Happened to Jones."

COMING ATTRACTIONS.

LYCEUM—Monday, May 22, Pittsburg Orchestra and Madame Gadski.

"A LITTLE OUTCAST."

Pleases Large Audience at the Lyceum.

CAST:

Paul Weston ..... Walter Harmon
William Harcourt ..... Delancey Barclay
George De Voe ..... Harry E. Rowe
Teddy Forest ..... Charles L. Crane
Hungry Dick Higgins ..... Harry Morton
Red Darly ..... Roy Myers
James Bagley ..... Clay Morris
William Gallagher ..... Willie Riley
Ping Lee ..... George Taylor
Ping Pong ..... Master W. Riley
Madeline Harcourt .. Miss Millicent Evans
Ethel Byron ..... Miss L. Whitecliff
Maggie Foley ..... Miss Mabel Shaw
Little Nell ..... Little Lillian
Bob ..... Miss Dolly Dupree

"A Little Outcast" made good at the Lyceum theater last evening before an appreciative audience, which nearly filled the house. The play has several novel features, and the people taking part in it averaged up very well. Judging by the applause, the audience was well pleased with the production.

Miss Dolly Dupree as Bob, the outcast, made a likeable little newsboy, and displayed considerable ability as an actress. Her every appearance was met by applause. Bob plays an important part in righting the wrongs of one Paul Weston, a part well handled by Walter Harmon. Delancey Barclay was satisfactory as William Harcourt, and Harry Morton did well as Hungry Dick Higgins.

"WHAT HAPPENED TO JONES."

Last evening Harry Corson Clarke again presented "What Happened to Jones" at the Metropolitan. Mr. Clarke considers the part of Jones one of his very best and has played it with fine results everywhere he has been. The farce is a very funny one and makes laughter all of the time. The members of the company are well placed. This evening it will be given its final production.

RARE MUSICAL TREAT.

The treat in music that will be accorded the people of Dulut next Monday evening at the Lyceum will be one of exceeding rarity. To hear the great Johanna Gadski would alone be enough to look for in one evening of entertainment, but to have also the Pittsburg orchestra, one of the greatest musical organizations of the country, should make music-lovers prepare to let their enthusiasm run riot. Of Gadski there is need to say little. Any number of Duluthians heard her during her connection with the Grau and Conreid opera companies, and all rank her with Melba, Nordica and Sembrich—one of the greatest of the world's singers.

Emil Paur is among the leaders who can be truly called great, and it is conceded that America has none who can outrank him. He is said to be the best paid leader in the country and his orchestra the highest salaried. The orchestra costs the people of Pittsburg a large amount, but they take a deep pride in it, and it is fast winning the name in the Old World that the Theodore Thomas orchestra attained, even though the Pittsburg organization is much younger.

HAPPENINGS IN DAKOTAS

Man Who Pulls Gun Shot Through Legs at Williston.

NORTH DAKOTA.

Williston—A shooting incident occurred here as the result of an argument between Captain Bailey and W. H. Browning in an eating house, in the course of which Bailey is alleged to have struck Browning, who, it is said, pulled his gun and fired, the bullet grazing Bailey's temple. Chief of Police Markell placed Browning under arrest, and says that while conducting him to jail Browning broke away. Markell fired three shots over him and after commanding him to halt shot to hit. The bullet passed through both of Browning's legs.

Medora—The last reports of the murder and suicide in this county are as follows:

It is said that White and Sacket had visited a saloon in the outlying districts of the county, and returning from there they met a man named Anderson, who had a herd of sheep grazing near White's range. White requested Anderson to move the sheep elswhere.

Anderson replied that as the sheep were lambing, it would be impracticable to move them at that time. White then asked Sacket to assist him in moving them; Sacket refused and at the same time put his hand behind him, as White thought, to pull his gun, but it afterwards appeared he only intended to get a drink from a bottle of whiskey. White, thinking he intended shooting, drew his gun and shot Sacket dead. Anderson then disarmed White, who went to his half-brother's, Joe Bilyeu's place, and told what he had done, saying that he intended going to town and giving himself up to the authorities. He did start for town.

In the meantime, his wife and her sister-in-law went to a neighbor's house to remain until the return of their husbands. White for some reason changed his mind and returned to Bilyeu's, and finding no one at home, wrote a note bidding him family "good-bye" and then killed himself with a revolver.

When the family returned, the note, a razor and a bottle of strychnine were found upon the table, indicating he had meditated upon the manner of taking his life.

White leaves a young wife to whom he was recntly married.

Fargo—Bondsmen of J. R. Goodajahn, Great Northern express agent in Moorhead, made good his $130 shortage and the company will not prosecute.

The effort of Charles E. Galehouse to contest the claim of John Solberg, an insane patient, has been stopped by a ruling of the commissioner. If it is found impossible for Solberg to make proof the entry will be held for cancellation and the homestead entry will then be open to any applicant.

The union station project is again revived as a result of the work of the Northern Pacific in doubletracking the Fargo and Moorhead yards. It is said the Great Northern passengers will be run into the Northern Pacific station and that suitable changes will be made to accomodate the extra service.

Devils Lake—The Indians at Fort Totten reservation were paid by the government for their land which they relinquished last fall. Each adult received $84 and each child will receive his share when he becomes 21. These Indians are now citizens of the United States. About $50,000 was paid to them, and about three-fourths of the land which was opened for settlement last fall has been filed upon.

SOUTH DAKOTA.

Deadwood—Eastern capital, it is said, is negotiating for a large tract of oil ground across the border line in Wyoming. For years a first-class grade of lubricating oil has been taken from wells and springs, the tests that have been made by Prof. Charles W. Drew of Minneapolis and Prof. E. E. Slosson of the school of mines of Laramie, Wyo., showing an unusual purity in the oil. After being refined, the tests show that the oil is adapted for high-speed dynamos and even for watches. Several holes have been put down in the district, but as yet not deep enough to find the oil sand.

The St. Joseph hospital, recently finished by the Benedictine Sisters, has been formally opened. This is one of the most complete hospitals in the West and has been furnished largely by donations from Lead and Deadwood. A new annex was added, costing $30,000.

Aberdeen—The deals for real estate which will give the Great Northern a right-of-way to within a block of Main street are completed and the money paid over. It required more than $50,000 to complete the purchases.

Arlington—M. M. Prindle, aged 66 years, was found dead in bed by his daughter, Mrs. G. A. Steed, with whom he lived. He had been sick with rheumatism for a few days, but not seriously. Three daughters survive him.

Spearfish—It is ostimated by the keeper of the Spearfish hatchery that 3,500,000 young trout will be distributed in the district this season. The government is making extensive improvements at the hatchery.

Rapid City—One hundred thousand pounds of wood were this week sold to a Philadelphia company from the range, at 22 cents a pound. This price is considered good for the opening of the season.

THE SPANISH COAST.

"Everywhere that I have seen it, the coast of Spain is an iron-bound beach with a rough sea breaking," writes a traveler. "Whether on the Atlantic or the Mediterranean shore, whether on the Biscayan or the Andalusian coast, there seems to ever a heavy surf booming along the Spanish beach. Here on the extreme north there were the same somber mountains that he had once seen when coasting between Gibraltar and Marseilles; here we saw the same stern landscape and the same gaunt cliffs crowned with watch towers, sad-colored like the cliffs and seeming to be stony growths out of the rocks themselves."

IMPERTINENT SPARROW.

The impertinence of the sparrow was recently exemplified at the Philadelphia zoological garden, says the Pittsburg Dispatch. One of these birds that win admiration by their very audacity was seated beside the big bearded vulture in the latter's cage. He had already flown off with one of the downy feathers he had picked up on the floor. It evidently occurred to him to prefer a fresh feather. Pursuant to this scheme, he moved up closer and closer, the savage-looking bird from Asia paying no attention to him. Its next move was to look covetously at the soft breast feathers of its host. It chose a nice, downy one, stretched up and plucked it out with a clever jerk. Then off it went. The big bird was too surprised to stir.

REPUTED TREASURE

Of Gold Dust and Currency Searched For.

Denver, Col., May 17.—A reputed treasure of gold dust and currency buried in the mountains just off the old South Park stage line, is at present engaging the attention of a number of men who are diligently scouring the hills. A dispatch from Baileys, on the South Park line, says that several strangers have arrived there for the express purpose of searching for the booty of stage robbers, hidden forty years ago.

In 1864 James Reynolds, a Confederate captain, became leader of a guerilla band similar to Quantrell's. The gang held up and robbed what was called the "Buckskin" coach on the old South Park trail, and secured $40,000. Its members were attacked on the following day. One man was killed and Capt. Reynolds and five of his men were captured. But two escaped, and they, it is said, buried the treasure at a point near the scene of the battle and were never afterwards able to find it.

EXPENSIVE BEARD

Erick Perkia Asks Damages For Whiskers Summarily Removed.

Sues President of Village of Floodwood For Assault.

The sum of $250 for a handful of whiskers plucked from beneath his chin, is asked by Erick Perkia of Floodwood.

The whiskers are in the municipal court today as an exhibit in the case of Erick Perkia against J. W. New, the president of the village of Floodwood.

It is only an inoffensive looking bunch of reddish brown hair, but the plaintiff estimates that the pain of removing them in this summary manner was worth at least $250.

Perkia also asks an additional $250 for certain abuses and wounds which he claims were inflicted upon him by the defendant.

According to the bill of complaint, Mr. New assaulted the plaintiff without provocation, on the evening of September 14, 1904, and brutally maltreated him. He followed this up an hour later with another assault, during which the whiskers were removed.

But the story told by Mr. New is widely different. He states that he was leaving his house about 5 o'clock on the evening in question, when Perkia passed the door in a state of intoxication, and commenced calling him vile names in the presence of his family and some guests who were at his house. He states that he took only such means as were necessary to compel him to cease his abuse.

Later, after he had reached his store, he claims that Perkia and two other Finns approached him and acted in a threatening manner. The marshal of the village attempted to arrest them and, according to Mr. New's claim, was being overpowered, when he in his capacity as president of the village and peace officer, went to the assistance of the marshal and placed the men under arrest on the charge of being drunk and disorderly.

The case is being tried before a jury in Judge Windom's court room. J. D. Holmes is representing the plaintiff and H. G. Gearhart, the defendant.

THE BURNING MOUNTAIN

In Western Colorado Is a Worthy Entrance To Hades.

New Castle, Colo., May 17.—Away over in the western half of Colorado, a dozen miles from New Castle, is a mountain which lacks only a Dantesque setting to make of it a worthy entrance into Hades. It is called by residents and strangers alike the "Burning Moutain," and no other name has ever been found or applied within the life of several generations.

Some say it was set on fire by the Indians two score of years ago, and others that it caught fire through a coal mine which was once worked there. But just how the Indians could have set a mountain on fire 500 feet under ground, or how it might have caught from a coal mine when that mine is separated from the fire by a thick stratum of vertical stone, are matters for mere conjecture. That the mountain is burning every sense of the visitor who gets within a mile of the place will testify.

On nearly every side of the great hill are evidences of intense destruction. At one point tons upon tons of rock have tumbled into the yawning throat of a huge crater some 300 feet above the base of the mountain, to be burned to finest powder in the intense heat of an abyss of fire. A vast area of the mountain side above the crater is torn into flame tongued scars. The fumes of sulphur are everywhere. All vegetation is dead. Every few weeks, as the combustible substances beneath are consumed, the law of gravitation asserts itself and great bodies of rock come crashing down into the fiery furnace to be slaked and crushed by the next succeeding consignment.

The cracks in the mountain side are in some cases a dozen feet across. The heat from them is almost unbearable at a distance of 100 feet, and it is impossible to hold the hand in any of the smaller crevices for more than a few seconds. At night, from below, the countless fissures look like campfires dotting an otherwise barren waste, but when a view is obtained from the top of other mountains they glow like angry inflamed wounds. Blue streaks of flame shoot across them and vanish. Occasionally there is an accumulation of gas which ignites and fills the entire fissure with a blinding glare of uncanny light while a rumbling roar beneath tells of another rock mass dislodged and tumbled into some raging furnace still further below. A roaring, rushing sound not unlike the draft of some huge house furnace is always heard, and an everlasting mist of sulphur smoke hangs over the whole of the great hill.

The Rio Grande river, whose waters at that point flow with a quiet ease seldom found in mountain streams, runs past just at the base of the mountain, and there are those who predict that some day, in the process of gradual disintegration, fire and water will meet. When that time comes a big black hole in the ground will take the place of the Burning Mountain, and all the surrounding country for several miles will be buried under a hail of rock that nothing can withstand.

RECORD IS BROKEN

Missabe Road Handles 1,399 Car Loads of Ore In One Day.

Contracts For Railroad Work at Proctor—Other News.

The Duluth, Missabe & Northern railroad broke all ore-carrying records on May 9, according to figures received today at the head offices of the company. A total of 1,399 car loads of ore were handled in the one day, and 49,000 tons were moved in the twenty-four hours. This means that about fifty-eight cars an hour, or one almost every minute during the day, discharged their loads at the docks. The shipments over the Missabe will, it is expected, be very heavy this month, possibly breaking all previous records.

The contract for the construction of the foundation of the new railway shops at Proctor, which are to be built for the Missabe this summer, was let yesterday to W. F. King & Co., of Duluth. The contract for the construction of the buildings themselves will be let within the next week or ten days, and the entire work will be completed before fall. Work on the new transfer table at Proctor is practically completed, and the new steel tank there is almost ready for use. The superstructure and tank itself are built entirely of steel, which is something new for this part of the country. The tank is a large one, having a capacity of 100,000 gallons, or about twice that of the ordinary railroad tank.

Two of the new locomotives for this road are expected to arrive from the shops of the American Locomotive company today. Four others will arrive in a few days, and the other six ordered are expected during the first week in July. The engines are larger than those now in use on the Missabe road, and are of the consolidation type, with cylinders 22x28 inches in size. They weigh 170,000 pounds on the drivers and 16,000 pounds on the forward trucks. The capacity of the tenders is 8,000 gallons of water and twelve tons of coal. The tender capacity is the largest in this district.

EXPECT TROUBLE.

Central Passenger Association Holds Meeting.

The meeting of the Central Passenger association, which is being held today, will, it is believed, turn out to be one of the stormiest ever held. The trouble will be over the proposed changing of the Michigan Central from a standard to a differential line between Chicago and New York. As a result a rate war is imminent, the dimensions of which it would be hard to foretell now.

While in the beginning the differential proposition met with opposition from all the Vanderbilt controlled lines, the proposal to put the question to arbitration was opposed originally by the Grand Trunk only. That road refused to vote on the arbitration and the arbitration board was appointed without the Grand Trunk's sanction. The attitude of the Grand Trunk has been sustained since by others of the Eastern differential roads.

According to a report from Cleveland in case the Michigan Central should come under the differential head and offer a rate of $18 from Chicago to New York, the Grand Trunk will begin to slash rates.

E. A. Thayer Promoted.

J. J. Fischer, formerly with the terminal people in Superior, has been appointed to the position of assistant city ticket agent in the Northern Pacific office here, to succeed E. A. Thayer, who has been promoted to the position of city ticket agent in Superior for the same road. P. T. Armigent, formerly city ticket agent in the city across the bay, is now traveling passenger agent.

Excursion to East.

Mart Adson, general agent of the South Shore, says that this summer will be a record-breaking one in the number of excursions to Eastern points. The annual spring excursion over the South Shore to Port Huron, Toledo, Cleveland, Detroit and Buffalo will probably be advertised for the week of June 11, and several others to these points, Boston, New York, Toronto and other Eastern points, will be held during June and July. Very low rates will be in effect.

Low St. Paul Rate.

The roads running from Duluth to St. Paul have announced a special round trip rate of $4.80, on June 13 and 14, on account of the flag celebration, to be held in St. Paul, June 14. Tickets will be good returning June 15.

Great Western Change.

L. S. Cass of Waterloo, Iowa, has been appointed assistant to General Manager S. C. Stickney of the Chicago Great Western road. The appointment became effective yesterday. Mr. Cass will have his office in St. Paul.

RUSSELL SAGE

Strength Gone and Held To Be Hopelessly Ill.

Stories of Eccentricities of the Famous New Yorker.

Chicago, May 17.—William E. Curtis says in a New York special to the Record-Herald: Russell Sage is lying hopelessly ill in his brownstone residence at 632 Fifth avenue, near the corner of Fiftieth street. There is nothing the matter with him except old age, and what the doctors call senile debility. His tough old frame is worn out; his mind is weakening, and his feeble shanks refuse to carry him any longer. But he is nearly 90 years old. Nature is simply asserting itself. His faculties are infirm, but his ruling passion is as strong as it ever was. Although his memory is almost gone, he never forgets the days for the meetings of the boards of directors of which he is a member, and always sends his brother-in-law, Mr. Slocum, downtown to get the $10 gold pieces, to which he is not entitled, but which are paid as fees to the directors who attend. Mr. Sage is not entitled to the fee any more than any other absent director, but he demands it just the same, and his associates are willing to pay it rather than disturb his peace of mind. Mr. Sage is a member of twelve or fifteen corporations. His fees as a director amount to $50 or $60 a week, and although he has a hundred millions or more in stocks and bonds packed away in safe-deposit vaults and drawing interest among twenty or thirty banks, he grasps at them as though they were necessary to keep his flickering light aflame.

• • •

He is a director in all the Gould companies, and up to two or three months ago came downtown every days to meet with the boards. He was so feeble that a servant had to almost carry him in, and five minutes after he was placed in his chair he would fall asleep from weakness and would not awaken until the meeting was over. Mr. Gould told him it was not necessary for him to come downtown for the meetings and promised to send him a typewritten copy of the minutes and the attendance fees if he would remain at home, which he reluctantly consented to do. The next day when the board adjourned his brother-in-law, Mr. Slocum, was waiting in the hall to get the minutes and the money. He was told that they would be sent to Mr. Sage by mail. In the afternoon he returned, saying that Mr. Sage preferred that he should bring the money himself, and he would not leave until he was given a $10 gold piece. Any time a meeting of any of the boards of which Mr. Sage is a member has been held since Mr. Slocum has appeared and remained until he has gotten the money. Mr. Sage is not in such a hurry about the minutes. He is willing to have them sent by mail; but he is not capable of reading them or understanding them if they are read to him. He has lost his grasp upon everything except money; and it is only with the greatest difficulty that he can be induced to sign papers which require his signature. He has always been suspicious of the motives of everyone he has had business with—even of his own employes. Mr. Slocum and Mr. Osborn, who has been his private secretary for more than forty years; his physician, Dr. Munn, and even of his wife. It sometimes takes the combined influence of these people to persuade him to sign a document.

For nearly a year he has had an attendant to go around with him. His family and friends were urging him for several months before he could be presuaded to employ one, and even then he did not consent to do so until it was arranged to place the man on the pay roll of one of the corporations of which he is a director, so that he would not be required to pay him wages.

While many of the stories that are told of Mr. Sage's miserly habits and eccentricities are fictitious, none of them are exaggerations. It would be almost impossible for anyone to imagine a man more economical and stingy than he. Although his income is reckoned at $5,000 a day, at least, and some people think it is twice that amount, he has lived at the rate of $5,000 a year or less, and his personal expenses have not been $100 a year. That is a very liberal estimate. He has two suits of clothes, one for weekdays and the other for Sunday, and he has worn them as long an anybody can remember. He has not bought a new overcoat for fifteen or twenty years, and his hat is quite as old as that if not older. A few years ago he sent for a gentleman who had done him a favor, and in a confidential way said that he was going to reward him with a "tip" that he could work for a profit. Then, to the man's astonishment, Mr. Sage gave him the address of a store on Seventh avenue where he could get shoes for $2 a pair.

To save time, the Western Union Telegraph company serves a free lunch to its operators, and Mr. Sage appeared every day at a certain hour. A seat was kept for him at a certain table up to the last day he came downtown. He never paid fare on the elevated railroad, because he was a director, and the ticket takers had instructions to let him go by without paying. He invariably helped himself to newspapers from the stand at Fiftieth street in the morning when on his way downtown, and did the same at Rector street when he was going home in the afternoon. He has stolen his newspapers for a generation in the same way, of the same men, and they never dared say a word about it. He has always compelled the bootblacks on the elevated stations to shine his shoes for nothing. At first, years ago, they used to remonstrate. He would climb into one of the chairs and wait until they served him. If they demanded pay he would threaten to have them put off the platform.

The omnibus drivers and cabmen on Fifth avenue point out a crack across the top pane of glass in one of his parlor windows which, they say, has been there for twenty-one years. The story goes that Mrs. Sage negotiated with a glazier to replace it with a whole pane for $12. Mr. Sage would not pay more than $10. The glazier would not yield, and the deadlock has continued for almost a quarter of a century.

He has a quiet little country place down on Long Island, with a good deal of lawn, but he does not keep the turf shaved down like his neighbors. He lets the grass grow until it is high enough to make good hay, and then sells it for $3 to a livery stablekeeper in the vicinity.

• • •

People who have been associated with him can tell yarns like this by the hour. Mr. Sage and his wife are members of the Fifth Avenue Presbyterian church. As long as he was able to get out they attended service regularly, and he always put a $5 bill in the plate. He subscribes $5 and $10 a year to various benevolent purposes, and on one occasion he gave $50 to a mission. That burst of generosity created a great sensation. Some of his friends did not believe the story. One of them was so rash as to bet $500 that it was not true. Mr. Sage declined to discuss the subject and the dispute was referred to the pastor of the church, who assured the inquirers solemnly that Mr. Sage had actually given him $50 for a certain charity. Whereupon the incredulous one wanted to bet that the bill was counterfeit.

The only large sum of money Mr. Sage ever gave away was the sum of $120,000 which was expended in the erection of the Sage Hall, a memorial to his first wife in connection with the Emma Willard seminary at Troy, N. Y. The first Mrs. Sage was one of the earliest graduates of that famous school. Mr. Sage is also a native of Troy. He began his career there as a clerk in a store, and in 1839 he was proprietor of a wholesale grocery and was running a couple of freight boats on the Hudson between Troy and New York. Sixty-three years ago last fall he was elected county treasurer and was an alderman at the same time. Fifty-two years ago he was a member of congress from the Troy district and served for eight years. He was a member of the committee on ways and means. At the close of his congressional term he settled in New York City and has lived there ever since. He was one of the promoters of the first telegraph company and of Cyrus Field's cable across the Atlantic. He was a member of the syndicate which built the first railroad in the State of New York, between Schenectady and Troy. He was associated with the construction and development of several of the transcontinental roads and the big trunk lines of the Northwest, and often boasted that he had built individually, and with his own money, at least 5,000 miles of railway, which, he claims, is more than any other man has ever built without financial assistance.

Mr. Sage is supposed to be worth $100,000,000 in stocks and bonds, which are stowed away in the vaults of nine different safe deposit companies. He has accounts with many banks, and always insists upon being paid interest on his deposits. It is estimated that he has $10,000,000 loaned out on securities. His business goes right along, notwithstanding his illness, being in charge of Mr. Osborn, his secretary, and Mr. Slocum, his brother-in-law. They are the only people who know anything about his affairs; they are the only people he trusts at all, and he has always been very suspicious of them. But he had to trust somebody.

For years, as he has grown old, people have been wondering what will become of his money. He has never had any children and has no relatives except Mrs. Sage and her brother. She is a good woman—highly esteemed and beloved by everyone who knows her—and her life has been a martyrdom. Her husband has been as stingy to her as he has been to everybody else, and she has been compelled to save and scrape and economize like the wife of a mechanic.

"GAS GRAB" KILLED.

Better Bid Received By the Philadelphia Councils.

Philadelphia, May 17.—Twenty million dollars in cash, $1,250,000 annually for seventy-five years, and loans aggregating $40,000,000 more have been offered to the city of Philadelphia by E. B. Smith & Co., bankers, and the North American for a seventy-five-year lease of the city gas works, which the Republican machine planned to lease to the United Gas Improvement company for the same period for $25,000,000.

This offer, made to councils, defeated the plans of the Republican ring, as the offer is regarded as so obviously superior to that of the United Gas Improvement company that it is not believed the machine will dare to defy public sentiment by accepting the latter's proposition. But it is not believed the machine will take away the lease from the Improvement company, and the attempted 'grab' probably will be dropped altogether for the present.

The Smith offer is to pay the city $20,000,000 down and to guarantee an annual rental of at least $1,250,000, whereas the present company pays but $650,000. To save the city from immediate bankruptcy, the new bidders also offer to lend the city $25,000,000 at 5 per cent.

In addition, the North American offers to lend $15,000,000 at 5 per cent if the new bid is accepted. Under either company the city would get gas free for municipal lighting and consumers would pay $1 per 1,000 feet, but the Smith company points out that under certain conditions consumers may get gas at 80 cents.

E. B. Smith said the syndicate his firm represents is composed of New York capitalists.

VICE CONSULATE FOR SCANDINAVIANS

Mayor Cullum Negotiating For Swedish and Norwegian Representative.

Agitation of Four Years Coming to Successful Termination.

If plans which are now being pushed by Mayor Cullum and the city administration are successful, the 16,000 Scandinavians in Duluth will have an authorized representative of the government of Norway and Sweden located in this city, with the title and powers of a vice consul.

At the present time the only government which has a representative in Duluth, is the British empire. Henry Taylor is the authorized English representative in Duluth.

In spite of the large number of Scandinavians at the Head of the Lakes, however, the government of Norway and Sweden has never maintained a consul at this port.

The matter has been under consideration by Mayor Cullum for several months, and he has been working to secure such a representative.

"Matters now look hopeful enough so that they can be made public," he said this morning. "I have had considerable correspondence in regard to the establishment of a vice consulate here, and I believe conditions are such now that we can hope for a successful termination of the negotiations in the near future.

"I have talked the matter over more or less with a number of prominent Scandinavians in the city and I would like to have others who are interested in the matter call and see me and give me their opinions on what they want. I have no choice for the man who is to fill the office, and I would like to get the opinions of the Scandinavian residents of the city who will be the ones chiefly interested, although the matter is one which affects the entire city as it denotes that Duluth is now a port of sufficient importance to warrant the establishment of a vice consulate.

"At the present time all matters which would come under the jurisdiction of a consul in Duluth, have to be referred to St. Paul where the nearest representative of the government of Norway and Sweden is located. Owing to the large number of Scandinavian people in this city and the importance of Duluth as a lake port, we are as much entitled to a vice consulate as St. Paul.

"It is of great importance that the wishes of the Scandinavians in the city be clearly known, and if they will allow me to make a suggestion it would be that they present to me by petition their wishes in the matter, and I will endeavor to have them carried out to the best of my ability."

For four years past there has been more or less agitation for the establishment of a Swedish and Norwegian vice consulate in Duluth, but with little or no success, until it was taken up by Mayor Cullum last winter, and judging from the statement made by him this morning, it appears that the hopes of the Scandinavian people in this respect are about to be realized.

West Duluth

HAS LIVED HERE

Edward C. O'Brien, In Disgrace at University, Known Here.

Strike at Deatherage Shop Is Still on—Other News.

Edward C. O'Brien, the young man who was editor of the Gopher, the Minnesota university official paper, and who has just been expelled from the university for appropriating funds belonging to the paper, is a West Duluth boy and is well known here. His mother has lived in West Duluth for years, but of late has been living in Minneapolis in order that her son might be at home while attending the university. Both Mrs. O'Brien and her son were in Duluth and West Duluth last night, but could not be found today. It is believed that they went to Minneapolis again this morning.

The action of the young man is much condemned here, but great sympathy is felt for his mother as it is said she sacrificed herself to a great extent in order that he might attain his ambition of getting through college and the law school. The young man may not yet be out of the depths, it is feared, for it is understood that the university authorities are bringing the matter before the Hennepin county grand jury.

STRIKE STILL GOING.

Mr. Deatherage Gives His Version of Affairs.

The strike of painters and paperhangers at I. Deatherage's shop is in statu quo. Since the meeting night before last neither side has made overtures for peace and each side seems disposed to stick it out. It is now a question of which will weaken first. Mr. Deatherage said this morning that the statement issued by the unions is wrong as to any seeming stubbornness on his part in paying the dues of the non-union man when the latter agreed to join the union. Mr. Deatherage claims that after the man, Gaspard, by name, gave Mr. Deatherage an order to pay the dues to the union and charge the same against his wages. Gaspard imediately countermanded the order and that that is the reason why the dues were not paid according to the order.

Mr. Deatherage claims that the union has violated its agreement with him and that the first overtures for peace must come from the union. He says he is willing to make peace if the union is disposed to do what is fair, but will not permit the union to get him in a hole and keep him there. He has four men at work at present and is taking care of his contracts, he says. Mr. Deatherage says if the union does not want to do the fair thing the only proceeding for him to take is to run an open shop as he is now doing.

Mr. Gaspard, the non-union man over whom the strike occurred, told The Herald this morning that the statement of the union to the effect that he is a strike breaker is untrue. He says that he did not go to the Clyde Iron works, as charged, to help break the strike, but entered the employ of that company some time after the strike had occurred and while the place was an open shop. He claims that when the painters' union wanted him to join recently they wanted $25 initiation fee, which he could not afford to pay because of sickness in his family. He had previously been a member of the union and offered to pay up his back dues, amounting to something like $12.50. This they would not take so that, he claims is why he did not join the union again. He admits giving an order for the $25 to Mr. Deatherage, but says that when he got thinking it over and considering his other financial obligations he reconsidered his action and countermanded the order. It was then that he offered to pay up his back dues.

NOT IN GOOD CONDITION.

St. Paul Road Would Bother Automobiles.

Louis Mark, formerly a resident of West Duluth, arrived last night from St. Paul, having driven the whole way. He brought six horses with him to West Duluth and made a good many horse trades on the way up. Mr. Mark left St. Paul three weeks ago tomorrow and took the road by easy stages all the way up. He says the road, for the most part, is in pretty good condition, but there are one or two bad spots caused by the recent rainy weather. He was asked what he thought would be the chances of an automobile getting through, as the Duluth Automobile club has figured some on making a trip to St. Paul. Mr. Mark said that at present, and likely for some time to come, there are some places in the road that would bother an auto to get over. He says, however, that a little later on, when the dry weather gets in its work that the road will be in excellent condition for an automobile run.

PLEASING PROGRAM.

The program given last evening at Gilley's hall, under the auspices of Division No. 4, A. O. H., was a delightfully pleasant one and was thoroughly enjoyed by all who attended. There were fully 250 present, many going from Duluth and Superior. The principal speaker of the evening was Rev. John F. Kelly of New York, and the subject of his address was "Hibernians in America and Hibernianism in General." His talk was instructive and entertaining. He paid a tribute to Father Feehely, who is about to go abroad, to which all responded heartily.

Father Feehely made a touching farewell address, which moved all present, and was accorded a reception that was very flattering.

Lester Whalen, 9 years old, captured the audience with a violin solo, during which he was accompanied on the piano by Miss Bartley.

Miss Alva Galway received hearty applause at the conclusion of her piano solo, and 8-year-old Mollie Doyle, who also gave a piano solo, was given much evidence of approval. Seven-year-old Page Cashin recited Eugene Field's poem, "Jes' 'Fore Christmas I'm As Good As I Can Be" in a manner that brought a storm of applause. Miss Edith Cashin sang in a sweet soprano voice, and Miss Kate Cashin recited "A Mother's Plea for Her Son" in a very effective manner. Miss Julia Doyle was accompanist on the piano for the various musical numbers. Each number was encored, but because of the limited time, no encores were responded to. The Daughters of Erin provided refreshments for all present, and served in excellent style. The Daughters will give a similar entertainment on June 16.

AGAINST IT

West End Ministers and Business Men Protest Against Pavilion.

Will Petition Council and Send Delegation to City Fathers.

A meeting of ministers and business men took place yesterday afternoon at the West End to take steps to prevent the granting of a permit for a dancing pavilion at Lincoln Park, which proposition is now before a council committee. The application is made by W. J. Chestock, who guarantees to run the place properly.

The West end people who met yesterday, feel, however, that while no proposition to allow the selling of liquor, that evil will creep in as it usually does in such cases, and even if liquor were not sold on the grounds, liquor would be brought there and an undesirable class of people would be attracted to the place, thereby driving out the better class of people of the West end for whose benefit and pleasure the park was laid out by the city. The parties who met yesterday afternoon took steps to circulate petitions to the council to refuse the permit and these will be sent around today and between now and the time the council meets again at which time the petitions will be presented. It is also likely that a delegation from the West end will wait on the council and voice a protest against the issuance of such permit as is asked for.

In this morning's News Tribune an article appears which gives the impression that the application for a permit is an application to sell liquor as well. This is erroneous as the sale of liquor has not been mentioned in connection with the matter until its probability was discussed at yesterday's meeting.

HOMESTEAD CANCELLED.

Fred and George Woods Lose Their Right.

A decision received yesterday at the local land office from the general land office in Washington denies the right of Fred. Wood to a homestead in lots 8 and 9, in 1-52-15, on the ground that the land was in the first indemnity belt of the Northern Pacific land grant. Wood applied for the land under the homestead law in 1898 and settled on the land and has since sold it to his father George Wood.

The Woods claimed that the land has been cleared of timber, the Nelson Lumber company, to whom the Northern Pacific sold the land in 1899, getting the full value of its payment in timber, and that the Woods have made extensive improvements since that time.

The evidence on the other side showed that the Woods were offered a chance to select a homestead on some other tract, but failed to do so. The general land office orders the homestead entry to be cancelled.

Recalls Boom Days.

Roger S. Lerch, a deputy sheriff of this county and a former livery stable keeper in Duluth, has filed a voluntary petition in bankruptcy in United States court. He schedules his debts at $1,389.55 and his assets at $2,66, of which $2,000 is an insurance policy on his life. Property claimed to be exempt foot up to $275.

Among the scheduled assets are some echoes of the boom of the later '80's in the shape of two notes for $50 each, given by J. F. Merriam and one for $195 given by James A. Boggs, both well known in Duluth at that time. The notes were given in 1890, each to run for six months.

Re-opens Case.

H. H. Hoyt, who has just returned from a business trip to Michigan, reports that the secretary of the interior has granted the motion for a review of the suit of Eaton against the Northern Pacific road, involving Northern Pacific land claimed to have been applied for prior to Jan. 1, 1898. The department has held against Eaton, but now that the case has been re-opened Mr. Hoyt fully expects to win. The decision in the case will affect a large number of similar applications.

American Exchange Bank Staff Present Watch to J. C. Hunter.

James C. Hunter, former cashier of the American Exchange bank of this city, who resigned his position May 1 to become manager of the Atikokan Iron company, was presented with a handsome testimonial of regard from the bank staff yesterday, in the form of a Swiss watch and chain. The presentation was entirely informal and was made in behalf of the other bank employes by J. D. Mahoney.

Mr. Hunter expressed his appreciation of the kindly regard of his former associates demonstrated in so substantial a manner. The watch contains in engraving the following words:

"Presented to James C. Hunter, cashier of the American Exchange bank, by the staff on his retirement after twenty-five years' service. May 1, 1905."

MUST PROVIDE FOR CHILDREN

Michael Anderson of Floodwood Given Another Opportunity.

Five children belonging to Michael Anderson of Floodwood, and ranging in ages from 3 to 13 years, were brought before Probate Judge Middlecoff, yesterday afternoon at the instance of County Commissioners Kauppi and Sundeen for an investigation with a view of sending them to the Children's home. It was claimed that the children were not receiving proper care from their parents.

Anderson is one of the two settlers arrested for interfering with the log driving operations of the Floodwood River Improvement company, and who was released recently from the county jail on bond.

The hearing developed that the children are poorly fed and clothed and that they have been living in poverty and squalor. Anderson pleaded that he had been unable to take care of them while he was in jail here, but gave his word that they will have everything they need as soon as he is able to return to work.

An idea of the manner of living of the Anderson family was given the county authorities when the deputy sheriffs returned from Floodwood, where they were called to arrest the settlers. The officers declared that the conditions about the Anderson home were about the worst they had ever experienced.

Relying on Anderson's promise to do better by his children the court premitted them to be returned to their home.

MAY BUILD HOME.

Kitchi Gammi Club Considering Plan.

The directors of the Kitchi Gammi club have under consideration the establishment of a new and permanent home for the club. While information on the subject is entirely unofficial in character, it is said that a number of sites for a club house are being examined, with a view of erecting, if the club decides to build, a handsome structure that will be a credit to the organization and to the city.

The lease to the present quarters, at the corner of Third avenue east and First street, will expire June 1 next. It is understood that the club will continue to occupy the same quarters for at least another year, pending a decision and action as to a new club house.

ARREST OF SYLVESTER,

Former County Auditor of Beltrami County, Is Demanded.

Bemidji, Minn., May 17.—County Commissioner Wesley Wright yesterday made a demand upon County Attorney Loud for a warrant for the arrest of D. L. Sylvester, formerly county auditor of Beltrami county, upon the charge of having converted to his own use $160 which Mr. Wright paid into the county on behalf of F. W. Rhoda in connection with the settlement of the county's claim against the defunct Merchant's bank.

At the time that the settlement with the bank was made and the release to the bank was signed by the county officials, Mr. Wright paid over to the county auditor, Mr. Sylvester, $160, the same being a payment for F. W. Rhoda, Mr. Rhoda having agreed to assume a part of the obligation. The amount was paid into Mr. Sylvester's hands in cash but there is no record of the county ever having received it. Mr. Wright wants to know what Mr. Sylvester did with the money.

In case Mr. Sylvester cannot be found his bondsmen, a bonding company, will be asked to reimburse the county. Mr. Sylvester's whereabouts are not definitely known but he is supposed to be somewhere in the West.

IS FOUND GUILTY.

John Fisher Convicted For Grand Larceny.

John Fisher, one of the two men indicted for grand larceny in the second degree in connection with the theft of a quantity of clothing from a credit clothing store at 201 West Superior street, was yesterday afternoon found guilty of the charge, the jury being out less than an hour.

David Daniels, who was arrested and indicted with Fisher, will not be tried until later in the term, the trial of Peter Lenich and Luj Loujer, for murder, beginning this morning.

DRUNKENNESS A TERRIBLE DISEASE.

In every large city the mission superintendents are brought closely into contact with the terrible results of drunkenness, and realize what a fearful curse it is to humanity. W. C. McMichael, superintendent of the People's Mission in Washington, says: "I am superintendent of the People's Mission, a recognized Christian organization that is doing a world of good. One of our people who had been drinking a pint of whiskey a day for a great many years was put on Orrine, and I am happy to say that a cure was effected within ten days from the time the first dose was given, and he is now restored to perfect sobriety. I have no way to thank you for the valuable specific for this terrible disease, drunkenness."

Orrine No. 1 is given secretly in any food or drink, while No. 2 is for those who are willing to be cured. Either form is $1 per package. Orrine is a guaranteed cure for the liquor habit, and is sold and recommended by F. W. Kugler, 108 West Superior street, Duluth.

RED LAKE FALLS LOSES

One Point In the County Seat Fight.

Crookston, Minn., May 17.—Judge William Watts has handed down a decision in the famous Red Lake county seat removal case which balks Red Lake Falls citizens in their first attempt to stop the holding of a special election to vote on the question. Red Lake Falls some time ago applied for a temporary injunction restraining the county auditor from considering the petitions for removal which had been secured by Thief River Falls men. It also asked for a hearing to show cause why the motion should not be made permanent. The grounds alleged were irregularities and alleged bribery.

The court holds that the county auditor's duties in the matter are mandatory and not optional and vacates the order to show cause and dismiss the injunction. The judge says that the auditor must act whether the petition is legal or not. He is but a judge of its face, the commissioners being the judges as to its legality.

The county auditor of Red Lake county will have to call a special meeting of the Red Lake county board to consider the petition for the removal of the county seat to Thief River Falls, and the board will decide whether or not a special election is compulsory. The petition demands one, and unless it can be proven that fraud has been employed in its preparation the special election will have to be called. Red Lake Falls has other moves to make and the end of the controversy is not yet.

DROWNED AT FARLEY.

River Driver Meets Death In Turtle River.

Bemidji, Minn., May 17.—A young man named Fogelquist, 17 years of age, was drowned Monday afternoon in the Turtle river near Farley, where he was employed as a river driver.

Fogelquist was working with a number of other men on the drive, and while standing on a log he fell off and sank, and although a desperate effort at rescuing the drowning boy was made by all of his companions, he remained under water for fifteen minutes, and when the body was finally recovered life was extinct, and attempts at bringing him back to life were fruitless.

The Fogelquist family lives about two and one-half miles from Farley, and the young man and his older brother were both employed on the drive, the father, Charles Fogelquist, being employed at a wood-cutting camp near Farris.

GIVE BOYS CHANCE

R. C. Sloan Proposes the Once Famous "Pingree Plan."

Advocates Allotment Vacant City Property For Market Gardens.

R. C. Sloan, one of the West end citizens, who is a large owner of property in that section of the city, is a great believer in giving the boys growing up in Duluth an opportunity of expending their surplus energy in ways that may be an advantage to themselves both physically, morally and financially, and which will tend to keep them out of mischief.

Mr. Sloan's idea is something along the line of that of Michigan's former famous governor, H. S. Pingree of Detroit, who won a large share of his popularity among the masses of his city and state by advocating the allotment of vacant city property to the people, on which to raise potatoes His idea was very successfully carried out in Detroit and "Pingree's Potatoe Scheme" is not yet forgotten in the Michigan city.

Mr. Sloan suggests that there are several localities in Duluth where lands are lying unused, and which possess great opportunities to the boys now growing up in Duluth, who, he believes, would be immensely pleased if they could secure a small allotment of the ground for cultivation.

As one instance, Mr. Sloan cites Central Park, that large tract of unused city property which lies, approximately, between First and Eighth streets and Fourteenth and Seventeenth avenues west. At the farther or northern end of the property it extends either way to Thirteenth and Eighteenth avenues west, and is cut by First and Third streets and the boulevard.

"This big plat is well covered with sod overlying plenty of soil," said Mr. Sloan, "and is of no earthly use at the present time except as a cow pasture. Although it is shown on the city maps as a public park there are no improvements such as are found in other parks of the city.

"I am decidedly in favor of dividing this area up among some of the enterprising and ambitious boys of this city, giving each a certain allotment of land and encouraging him along the lines of gardening for a profit to himself. I can see no reason why the scheme is not practicable. It might be argued that the boys could not afford the expense of preparing the ground for their gardens. I would anticipate this by saying that the city is full of work teams that are not all busy all the time and I feel safe in predicting that were such a scheme to be tried that the business men and public-spirited citizens would come forward with subscriptions ample enough to cover the cost of plowing up the ground.

"My idea would not be to go ahead and carefully fix up the plots of ground after they were plowed. That is where the boys would shine. Let them take the roughly plowed ground, let some of the commercial or other organizations of the city offer prizes for the best kept up garden, for the garden giving the best general results and special prizes for the best results in raising certain products.

"I am assured that if the plan were given a trial the result would be something surprising to the citizens of Duluth.

"During his coming long summer vacation, what better inducement could be offered the growing boy with a certain amount of surplus energy, which he must in some way find a vent, than to give him a small tract of land and tell him 'now see what you can do with that.'

"This ground in Duluth is not all rock and the locality to which I have referred has an ample covering of good soil, soil that will raise splendid crops of garden truck.

"There is another view of the question. Think of the families in the cities with ablebodied boys growing up who would be only too glad of an opportunity of getting a piece of land to cultivate and raise vegetables to replenish the family larder which so often is so bare of the necessities of life. This would not be charity in the usual sense of the word, or if it were charity, it would certainly be of the best sort."

BURGESS PENNYPACKER

Declares War on the Pennsylvania Republican Machine.

Philadelphia, May 17.—The burgess of Westchester, Charles H. Pennypacker, cousin of Governor Pennypacker, a libel law enthusiast and bug expert, proposes to corral a mighty host on July 4, descend upon Harrisburg, drawing up a new Declaration of Independence, send his cousin scuttling out of his gubernatorial job, and put to rout "that octopus which is sapping the life blood of the people," the Republican machine.

Burgess Pennypacker, in whom the Pennypacker eccentricities run as riotously as they do in his cousin, Samuel, rose at the evening session of the yearly meeting of Friends to shoot his bolt at the gang. He converted it into a war camp, redhot for fight.

"Talk and talk and talk," said he; talk of ideal politics in a cemetery. But thee cannot fight one organization until thee makes another just as big to fight it. What this meeting must do is to call a meeting and issue an address to all people, Friends and others, too, regardless of religion, or politics, or previous condition or servitude. Form them into a strong organization.

"We must issue a call for a big convention. I myself will lead the people to Harrisburg, and there form a new gospel of independence, liberty, virtue, and drive out the hucksters and spoilsmen from the party. Over the capitol we should place this placard: 'Cash paid for country produce.'"

"Hurray," shouted the Friends.

INDIANA PHYSICIAN

Sues Bride of Six Weeks For Divorce.

Washington, Ind., May 17.—Robert Woods, a prominent young physician of this city, has filed suit for divorce from the woman who became his bride six weeks ago. He married Miss Stella Rogers, an Indianapolis oculist, last month, and in his complaint he alleges that he merely entered into the marriage contract to avoid being killed by her father.

He claims she invited him to call on her, and when he did so her father covered him with a revolver, compelling him to get a marriage license and marry her, although he was under no legal or moral obligation to do so.

THE CONVERSATIONAL ART.

When the conversation lags you should bowl a lob, and you should always have the lob ready, says the London Chronicle. It is perfectly easy. Suddenly there came a silence. It matters nothing what you say, so long as it can be hit to the boundary. Turn to your neighbor at the stricken dinner table and say (but you must have it quite ready), "I think you have an aunt." She must smack it back. "Yes," she replies. "So have I," you answer enthusiastically. "Now, talking of aunts——" here comes your story about your aunt, and the situation is saved. It is all the same if she has no aunt. "There I have the advantage of you," you reply. Story as before. Anyone can mug up a story about an aunt; but you must have it ready to plug up the gap.

HIS STREET PARADE.

Gillilan, the man who wrote "Oh Again, On Again, Gone Again, Finnegan," was lecturing out in Dakota recently and struck one town while a blizzard was doing stunts in the place. His train was late and he barely had time to reach the "opry house" at the appointed hour. Grabbing his dress suit out of its case he started for the theater, intending to change his costume there. The wind blew furiously and the tails of his dress suit flapped in the gale. As he passed a couple of natives he heard one of them say: "That's the funny man that's goin' to lecture tonight. He may have a good show, but I don't think much of his street parade, huh?"

A HEALTH RESORT.

Of course we who breath the tonic air of Northern Minnesota know that we live in a territory especially gifted by nature with the best climatic properties of healing. Most of us have come from other climates and have had a chance to make comparisons, and therefore know from our own experience that we now live in a "healthy" country. Figures, however, that speak loudly in support of our belief, are useful to support our claims when we want to make them to those who have not had our experience.

For instance, in a recent digest of some figures furnished in the 1900 census, Duluth makes a remarkable showing. The death rate per thousand people for 129 cities of the United States is given, and there are but nine that show a lower death rate than Duluth, and one, Brockton, Mass., that shows the same. The Duluth death rate was 13.2 per 1,000. This table covers a number of principal diseases, including measles, diphtheria and croup, influenza, typhoid fever, diarrheal diseases, consumption, cancer and tumor, heart disease and dropsy, pneumonia and nervous diseases.

Only one city out of the entire 129 showed a death rate from influenza lower than that of Duluth, which was 1.9 per 100,000. The showing on typhoid fever was not so good, there being eighty-eight cities with a lower death rate from this disease than Duluth; but in this connection it should be remembered that almost all of the typhoid fever cases treated in Duluth in recent years have been brought in from outside of the city, coming from lumber camps and newer communities that yet lack proper sanitary regulations.

Only two cities show a smaller death rate from consumption, which is 93.2 per 100,000 in Duluth, and runs up to 444 in San Antonio, Tex. The high death rate in San Antonio, of course, is due to the fact that many patients seek relief there when it is too late.

Fifty-six cities show a lower death rate from pneumonia than Duluth's 156.1 per 100,000, but of course many of these are Southern cities where the mild winters preclude such diseases. Among Northern cities Duluth's rate is extremely low.

Climate has much to do with nervous diseases, and in this line Duluth's showing is good. Her rate per 100,000 is 121.8, and only five cities make a better showing. Only seven have a lower rate on diphtheria and croup, which is 15.2 per 100,000 in Duluth.

So in addition to her many other strong points, Duluth does all that climate can do to keep her people well and strong.

EXPENSIVE SERVICE.

One of the curious anomalies of our government's housekeeping expenses is the way it continues to pay the railroads and steamboats two prices for carrying mail.

This country pays more for transportation of mail, according to a writer in Public Opinion, than all the other countries of the world put together. In the last year for which comparative figures are available, 1901, the United States paid for railroad transportation of mail alone $38,500,000. All the other countries of the world put together only paid $37,000,000 for this service, or $1,500,000 less than we paid.

And this in the face of the claims of the railroads that freight and passenger rates in this country have been materially reduced. It is said that these rates are lower here than they are abroad, and yet we pay more for carrying our mail. Express companies, for the same service exactly, pay the railroads about half what the government pays. The nation is still paying the same rates it paid thirty years ago, and often higher rates.

In England, 1 per cent of the earnings of the railroads are for carrying mail, while in the United States the revenue from this source is 3 per cent. This can only mean that this government is paying much higher rates than other governments for the transportation of its mails.

The railroads do not need nursing any more. They have fed upon the bottle of public encouragement until they have grown fat and unwieldy, and yet if it is withdrawn they let out a babyish wail that can be heard for miles. It is difficult to see why this government should continue to pay more than it is worth to have its mails carried, especially when the postal service is run at a loss. The claim is made that the loss is due to the cheap rates for carrying second class mail matter. As a matter of fact, if the railroads got a proper price for their service, and no more, the deficit would disappear, regardless of second class rates.

A NOBLE WORK.

The fraternal organizations which have leaped into such popularity within the past few decades are doing a great deal of good in many ways, but perhaps they have produced nothing more worthy of note than their latest effort in behalf of their unfortunate members. This has taken the form of a "National Fraternal Sanitarium for Consumptives" at Las Vegas, New Mexico, an institution backed by 8,000,000 members of fraternal organizations in this country.

A city of consumptives is to be formed, called Fraternal City, and the experiment is to be conducted on a co-operative basis purely. The Santa Fe railroad has tendered $1,000,000 in cash and the city of Las Vegas gave 10,000 acres of land, on which the sanitarium was located, a few miles west of the city. It is hoped that it will be ready for operation this fall, when $75,000 will have been spent to put the place in readiness for the reception of patients. No attempt will be made to make money, and patients will be cared for as nearly as possible at actual cost.

There can be no question that the experiment will prove a success, and that it will do a world of good. It will provide just what the consumptive needs, pure air, sunshine, wholesome food and intelligent care, and thousands of cures will be the result of careful management. That consumption can be cured if taken at an early stage and properly cared for there is no longer any doubt, and the Las Vegas sanitarium offers hope to its patrons that the consumptive of a few years ago did not conceive to be possible.

The fraternal orders, by providing insurance at reasonable rates and the opportunity of social associations with one's fellows, have already done great work, and that is why they have become popular. Such enlightened experiments as the one mentioned here will add to their usefulness and growth.

MR. PARRY'S THOUGHTS.

D. M. Parry, president of the National Manufacturers' association, made his annual address before the association in convention at Atlanta yesterday, and The Herald last night reported what Mr. Parry thought of the situation. Naturally, Mr. Parry thought just what everybody thought he would think, and there was no surprise in store for anybody in his utterances.

For Mr. Parry, by nursing his wrongs and the wrongs of capital, has tortured himself into a way of thinking this is peculiarly his own. Not exclusively his own, however, for there are other representatives of capital that think much the same way. It is quite natural that they should think that way, and they cannot be blamed for so thinking. Mr. Parry, for an example, worships at the shrine of vested rights, and is horrified at the possibility of the common people presuming to dictate the management of private capital in any degree. According to his way of thinking, the possessor of a public utility, the monopolist of a thing that the people need, is as much a private owner as a man that owns a peanut stand, and the people have no more right to dictate how the monopolist shall conduct his business than they have to tell the peanut man how much he shall charge for peanuts and what he shall pay the small boy that clerks for him.

Mr. Parry shudders, too, at the possibility of public ownership of public utilities, and says that is only a step toward public ownership of everything. Mr. Parry is as full of shudders as an aspen, and has got so addicted to the habit of shuddering that now he shudders at "shadders." In fact, Mr. Parry, who talks so indignantly about demagogues and jacobins, is as fanatic on the side of capital as the veriest demagogue in existence could be on the side of the people. And the two extremes have this thing in common—that they might argue till they are black in the face, and they will not command the least bit of attention among those who know their condition, because they are intemperate in language and thought, and their frantic efforts overreach themselves.

THE FIELD SURVEY.

Minnesota people will be surprised to hear that according to one J. W. Cooper of St. Paul, who has been giving the senate interstate commerce committee the sort of testimony it wants on the rate question, they do not want federal rate regulation.

Hotel Gossip.

"The raising of pheasants of different varieties is coming to be quite a fad in this country," said O. H. Johnson of Minneapolis, at the McKay. "I have a number of the birds at home, and they are an interesting lot. Mine are the English ring neck variety, the same kind that the state game and fish commission is experimenting with for game purposes.

"These English birds, so-called, make a good game bird and offer excellent sport to the gunner. There is every reason to believe that the efforts of the state in the way of propogating the pheasants in different parts of Minnesota will meet with success. This variety is among the hardiest of birds, and thrives finely in our climate and surroundings. They are prolific breeders, and if protected for a period of years will before long take the places of the other game birds which are disappearing in many parts of the state.

"Already a number of the birds have been released in the vicinity of Minneapolis, and they have gotten along nicely. Some of them have been found twenty-five or thirty miles from the point where they were released. In England the pheasants are the leading game bird. Out in Oregon some of the birds were released a few years ago and now in their wild state they are so numerous as to be a pest for the farmer. It is necessary for the state to allow their being killed during a long open season in order to keep them from becoming too plentiful.

"These pheasants are a very pretty bird. Their distinguishing feature is an exceedingly long tail and attractive plumage. The English ring necks are not so brilliantly feathered as certain other varieties, but they are a handsome bird, nevertheless. In habits they are not unlike the ruffled grouse, so far as a choice of surroundings is concerned. They frequent the woods and brush, and are not often found in the open, as are the prairie chickens and pinnated grouse. They make a fine table bird. The game and fish commissioners are deserving of commendation for their attempt to introduce the birds into Minnesota, for, at the present rate of extermination, ruffled grouse will not afford good hunting in some parts of the state many years longer, and already they are practically exterminated in many sections.

"The pheasant fad is attracting much more interest and attention in the East than it is out here in the West, but interest in it is rapidly growing here, and quite a few people are buying the birds. Some kinds of pheasants are quite expensive, while others are cheaper. At the prevailing prices there is profit in raising them, as well as pleasure."

"A man isn't always necessarily honest because he talks Swedish, which, somehow, appears to be regarded as a language used only by honest people," said D. A. Rose of Marquette, at the St. Louis. "Last winter a stranger who spoke Swedish fluently and claimed to be a mining engineer in the employ of a big corporation which was about to develop iron properties in the North of Sweden, put in an appearance in Ishpeming. He was looking for miners to go to Sweden, where they were to receive handsome wages. He had little difficulty in collecting a good sized force, but as he was afraid the men might jump their contracts unless there was something to bind them, he collected $10 or $15 from each member of the party.

"After obtaining several hundred dollars in this manner he moved on to the next town to get a few more skilled mechanics. This was the last seen of him. He gave his name as Drangel. I see by the Michigan papers that the fellow is now in custody in Milwaukee, with excellent prospects of a term in the penitentiary for another crime."

"The Northwest offers many money-making opportunities to the man with small capital to invest," said N. A. Jones of Minneapolis at the Spalding. "There are so many new towns that are growing rapidly, and that have bright futures before them, in this section of the country, that the man looking for a chance to invest his money in a paying proposition can usually, by using a little judgment, find a satisfactory location. More money has been made in real estate than anything else in many of the new towns, but of course everyone is not fitted to be a good real estate man. There is no business, however, which bring in such large and quick profits in a new country that is just being developed, unless it is mining.

"But all of these towns have got to have a variety of business houses, all of which pay when they are run right, unless there are too many of them established in one place, as is sometimes the case."

WORK IN WOMEN'S CLUBS.

St. Louis Globe-Democrat: There is some prejudice, as well as lack of information, in articles occasionally seen on the subject of women's clubs and the movement they represent. The erroneous view taken is that the clubs in some way antagonize the home. Nothing could be further from the truth. No agency is doing more for the home than womens' clubs and in none are the efforts applied more intelligently. The general federation, with which the state federations are in close touch, maintains standing committees, on the labor of children, household economics, education, pure food, civics, library extension and forestry. All these subjects are intimately related to home life. All are of legislative interest; and to set them lucidly before legislative bodies is not only the privilege, but the duty, of citizens, regardless of sex. There is no fear that there will be too many advocates of righteous laws.

Literature and art enter extensively in the labors of the clubs. The general federation maintains that every state will improve physically, intellectually and morally if its capable women work together on the lines indicated. It is the claim of the federation that its purposes have ever looked to the training and protection of children; the enlightenment of young mothers and the solace of mothers whose families have grown up and gone forth into the world; the improved conditions of housekeeping; the sympathetic study of the various lines of business for women, and a broadened acquaintance and interest in life for all members. In many respects there has been an emancipation for women in the last sixty years with evident benefit to all; an emancipation from lingering narrow ideas and injustice, not from what is good and true and estimable in the feminine character.

CLEARED THE ATMOSPHERE

Kansas City Star: The president and Secretary Taft have informed the country that the administration has not changed base on the railway rate proposition. The railroads, the trusts and some of the commercial organizations of the country have been so busy circulating confusing arguments against the extension of the powers of the interstate commerce commission that some of the agitators have succeeded in misleading themselves as to a "change of sentiment." Since the adjournment of congress there has been little talk on the side of the government and the people. Those opposed to regulation have done all the writing, all the speechmaking and all the maneuvering. But now the president and the secretary of war, the latter acting for the time not only as secretary of war, but also as president and secretary of state, have cleared the atmosphere. If the public has been in the least misguided as to the determination of the administration with reference to railway regulation, it now knows that an extra session of congress will be called for its consideration and that the president will do his utmost to bring about reform legislation.

The railway officials might as well realize now as later that they cannot put this question aside. They may get the sympathetic ear of senators and representatives; they may control some of the newspapers; they may obtain the endorsement of some of the commercial bodies; they may send broadcast deceptive literature, calculated to alarm the people over the "disturbance of rates," but they cannot head off the popular and just demand for some authoritative stay against railway abuses. The people have seen that the railroads themselves may not be intrusted always to make fair published rates; they have seen that they may not be intrusted to stand out against discriminations in the way of private rates and other concessions; they have seen that the present laws cannot always be enforced; they have reached the inevitable conclusion that additional legislation is needed, and they believe that it should come in the way of making the interstate commerce commission a tribunal of reference when injustice is charged.

The national government can establish such a check. It is difficult for states to regulate rates, for local disturbances are apt to become general, and often with the result that the state that undertakes to act fairly gets the worst of the deal in the general adjustment. But the federal government can establish or limit a rate and all states can be forced to abide by it without injustice to any one. For the present the important fact before the people is that the question is going to be fought out in congress. There will be no backdown by the administration and the agitation will not "blow over."

When Courtesy Pays.

Saturday Evening Post: The thing which Americans are most backward in learning about courtesy is the one which, if they deserve their reputation, they should be first to appreciate, namely, that it pays.

In one of our big cities a crowded car was lately blocked by a truck from which the driver was unloading a load of empty boxes. The motorman set his brakes, jumped from the platform and rushed up to the truck, followed by the conductor. The passengers smiled in the expectation of a flow of language which would make a Billingsgate fishwife seem like a nursery governess. But the motorman and conductor turned to and helped unload the truck. In a jiffy the way was clear and the car full of passengers bowled on, amazed, but rejoiced.

The newspapers got hold of the incident and related it as a joke. But like most good jokes, it has an excellent moral. This is a world of give and take, and those who give most take most. Those who consider the courtesy due to their fellow passengers generally avoid even the conductor's irritating "Step lively."

Evils of Automobile Speed.

Springfield Republican: As the use of the automobile spreads, all the meanest traits in human kind are placed in evidence. Unhappily this is a dangerous stage on which to display them. The man who injures some one else and runs away is coming in evidence with too much frequency. It also needs no argument that the use of liquor by the driver of an automobile constitutes an extreme peril to the public safety. We have not yet reached the point where this new vehicle, as it takes its place in the life of the country, is sufficiently regulated. Mere indignation will not produce any better results, except as it avails to create a corrective public sentiment. The associations of the automobile must do what they can to remedy these evils, and save the whole of them from public discredit.

Taking a Fresh Hold.

Chicago Inter-Ocean: It is worth mentioning that no sooner had Mr. Cleveland said those things about the women's clubs than the female suffrage movement took a fresh hold upon public attention.

Opportunities for Heroism.

Baltimore American: Peace hath its victories. The art of cooking is to be taught in the army. The soldier who is a bad marksman may, nevertheless, develop into a high-class cook.

Taken From the Columns of Duluth Papers of This Date 1885.

At the council meeting Tuesday night, the village engineer reported that the cost of improving Second street from the point of rocks to Twenty-eighth avenue west would be $34,407, which sum would grade the street fifty-six feet wide. Property owners on Second and Third streets, from Piedmont avenue to Seventeenth avenue west petitioned for the grading of those streets.

MINNESOTA OPINIONS.

Kelliher Journal: Minnesota will this summer make a complete drainage survey of the state, expending $45,000 for this work and constructing ditches. This is good as far as it goes, but the amount should have been four times as large.

Sauk Center Herald: A man who dares not point out the faults and follies of his own political party is not a loyal partisan but a whining sycophant.

Walker Pioneer: Among other weighty affairs awaiting the return of the president may be mentioned Secretary Taft.

Fergus Falls Globe: There will be no public ownership of public utilities until there is public ownership of public officials. And there can be no public ownership of public officials until the public provides for voting out of office men who fail to do the work for which they were elected.

International Falls Press: Northern Itasca county should not be modest about calling the attention of the proper authorities to the great opportunity to convert swamp areas into rich agricultural areas in this section.

Roseau County Times: The Brown's Valley Tribune says there is going to be quite a demand for Minnesota farm lands this season. Canada is not what it is cracked up to be, and the tide is receding. Thus early there is quite considerable inquiry for farm lands in Western Minnesota.

Where She "Stumped" Him.

Cincinnati Enquirer: Mrs. Emma E. Porter of Marysville, sister of Congressman Calderhead, tells a henpecked husband story. Evelyn is the little daughter of a Marshall county family. She is very cowardly. Her father, finding that sympathy only increased this unfortunate tendency, decided to have a serious talk with the little daughter on the subject of her foolish fears.

"Papa," she said at the close of his lecture, "when you see a cow ain't you 'fraid?"

"No; certainly not, Evelyn."

"When you see a horse ain't you 'fraid?"

"No, of course not."

"When you see a dog ain't you 'fraid?"

"No!"—with emphasis.

"When you see a bumblebee ain't you 'fraid?"

"No!"—with scorn.

"Ain't you 'fraid when it thunders?"

"No!" with loud laughter. "Oh, you silly, silly child!"

"Papa," said Evelyn solemnly, "ain't you 'fraid of nothin' in the world but mamma?"

Reflections of a Bachelor.

New York Press: Maybe the reason it is heaven is because there is no servant problem there.

It does seem that nearly always the most fun is in the things that are not good for you.

Anyway, a horse race can't fool you as many different kinds of ways as a woman can.

The first thing a man loses when he gets into public life is his self-respect; then his character seems no loss at all.

Every girl's feet are three sizes smaller than they would be if the shoemaker's marks were three and a half times larger than they are.

Parents, Attention!

Brooklyn Life: The glorious Fourth is coming!

Are your children well developed, strong, vigorous?

Do not let this fact interfere with their celebration of Independence day.

Remember that patriotism should come before physical health.

And how can patriotism be better expressed than by contributing to the manufacturers of fireworks and making as much noise as possible?

"A short life and fiery one" is the motto of every American child on the Fourth. Every child should be provided with a large box of Chinese firecrackers, a cask of torpedoes, a brace of breechloading cannon and a quiver of toy pistols.

Last year we did pretty well, but this year we ought to beat it. Last year about 450 children were maimed, crippled for life or actually killed on the Fourth. This year why not make it double?

Every parent should begin about one month before the Fourth to arouse the enthusiasm of his children. What's a few arms, legs and eyes compared with keeping up the statistics.

The Dollar's Confession.

The solemn organ pealed in state,
The choir melodious sang;
Upon the contribution plate
A silver dollar rang.
The coin was thinking on its past,
And sighed, "Were they acquainted
With me I'd from their midst be cast,
For I am surely 'tainted.'"

The deacon listened as it spoke:
"I've swelled the miser's hoard,
I've fastened on the toiler's yoke
And sharpened many a sword;
I've fed the proud and scorned distress;
I've done the gambler's mission;
All this and more I do confess
With sorrow and contrition."

The honest churchman said: "My fame
Is scant for wit and learning,
But 'tis my duty sure to claim
A brand forth from the burning.
Perhaps you'll find and conquer yet
A nobler destination.
A dollar, like a man, should get A chance at reformation."
—Washington Star.

The Mouse Wouldn't Stay.

New York Times: A prominent Tammany politician has a wife who is a model of all the domestic virtues. Among her other accomplishments is a talent for making home-made bread. One evening recently she had finished setting the batch of dough to rise in the kitchen, when her 6-year-old son came running upstairs crying, "Mamma, mamma! there's a mouse jumped into your bread pan!"

The good woman was much perturbed, and frantically asked, "Did you take him out?"

"No'm, but I done just as good; I threw de cat in, an' she's diggin' after him to beat de band!"

PASSING PLEASANTRIES.

Harper's Bazar: Knicker—Jones and his wife are singing "The Marseillaise."

Bocker—Yes, they are bracing up to discharge the cook.

Philadelphia Ledger: "But," asked the charitable woman, "do you never cast your bread upon the waters?"

"Not now," replied the young housekeeper, proudly; "I might have done that with my first baking, but I'm quite expert now."

Brooklyn Life: The Heiress—What is your idea of a man of honor?

The Count (throwing out his chest)—Eet is von who vill pay hees vine beel and card debts even eef he 'as to marry in order to get zee money.

Philadelphia Press: "Many a married man who might make a fortune is handicapped because his wife demands too much of his attention."

"That's right. Just as soon as fortune begins to flirt with him his wife gets jealous."

Cleveland Leader: Poor Woman—My husband prevented a terrible wreck on your road, but the company has never done anything for him.

Magnate—What? I thought we had rewarded him well. I understand that the conductor took up a generous collection among the passengers for him!

Louisville Courier-Journal: I can not understand ze language," the foreign nobleman complained.

"What's the matter, count?"

"First you say ze young man is a raw youth."

"Yes."

"Zen you say he is half baked."

Right From the Shoulder.

Philadelphia Press: Secretary Taft's shirt-sleeve diplomacy with the railroad men is a sign of approaching warm weather in the transportation region.

There's the Rub.

Chicago Chronicle: It is not so much a question of fixing railroad taxes as one of keeping them fixed. The mere arbitrary figure of a tariff amounts to nothing at all if it is to be cut or rebated or otherwise nullified by some overzealous railway official anxious to get business for his line.

Gentle Art of Chefooing.

Baltimore American: A mystery of the sea deeper and more thrilling than ever told in the most lurid fiction is that of the Japanese training ship, which disappeared with its load of 200 apprentice boys on board, six years ago, and recently was found sunk at Port Arthur, painted as a Russian ship and with no hint as to the fate of its former crew. Imagination has a wide range in the solution of this mystery, and yet it is probable that the wildest conjecture would really fall short of the reality, could the latter be made known.

Rate Legislation a Certainty.

Chicago Chronicle: Railway rate legislation is now so much of a certainty that railroad men are evidently disposed to devote their energies to securing reasonable legislation instead of trying to defeat any legislation at all. The general counsel of a great railroad system puts the situation succicenly when he says that the railroads realize that if they oppose a fair rate bill they are pretty sure to get an unfair one. Of course, there will be argument—and room for it—as to what constitutes a fair bill, but with congress and the railroads disposed to argue the matter on a friendly basis the resulting legislation is likely to be reasonably satisfactory both to the shipping public and to the roads.

Said By the Babes.

Lippincott's: Little Irma had been on an excursion to her father's downtown office and saw for the first time a typewriter in use.

"Oh, mamma," she said on her return home, "don't you know, I saw the funniest sewing machine down to papa's office. It sewed A. B. C's!"

Grain Gamblers Beaten.

Philadelphia Press: No sympathy will be wasted over the failure of the gamblers who have attempted to corner "May wheat." The more complete their downfall the greater will be the joy of the bread-eaters and the bread-winners in every nook and corner of the Union.

The Meters Will Make Good.

Boston Globe: It is reported that it cost the Consolidated Gas Company of New York $500,000 to defeat in the state senate a bill to reduce the price of gas from $1 to 80 cents; but it is understood that the company has made an arrangement with the meters to make good the loss, so the stockholders won't suffer.

PROTESTS RACE

W. H. Hollenbeck Claims His Horse Was Not Beaten.

Fond du Lac Society Shaken to Depths By the Contest.

W. H. Hollenbeck of Fond du Lac claims that his horse has been slandered, and its fair name as a pacer dragged in the mud.

Monday evening The Herald printed a story of a horse race at Fond du Lac which occurred on Sunday between Mr. Hollenbeck's horse and one driven by a well-known attorney. It was stated that the attorney's horse won out.

Mr. Hollenbeck, in a communication to The Herald, states that with the exception of the fact that the race occurred on Saturday instead of on Sunday, that both horses are pacers instead of trotters, and that his horse won instead of the one driven by the attorney, the whole story is perfectly correct and he has no fault to find with it.

Mr. Hollenbeck's first exception was probably well taken. The reporter who wrote the story was informed that it occurred on Sunday, but a few hours make little difference one way or the other.

But on the question of the winner there is a fair chance for an argument, and Mr. Hollenbeck is probably prejudiced. Half the residents of Fond du Lac will say that the attorney, J. H. Brigham, won, while the other half will insist that Mr. Hollenbeck won. There was nothing left for the reporter to do but take the word of one side or else make enemies of both by saying the race was a dead heat. He chose what seemed the lesser evil.

Mr. Hollenbeck claims that Mr. Brigham worked in a "ringer," which he claimed to be a ping, and which proved to be a trotter belonging to a prominent Duluth mining man. He offers Mr. Brigham $25 if the latter will say he turned ahead of him at the finish, and calls attention to the fact that he had a heavier buggy than Mr. Brigham and his wife was with him while Mr. Brigham was alone.

He ends up with an offer to beat Mr. Brigham's horse one-half minute to the mile or forfeit the race. It's hard to see how even an attorney could take a dare like that, and it's evidently up to Mr. Brigham accept the challenge.

If the participants will give fair notice of the race, The Herald will attend and give an unbiased and unprejudiced acount of it without fear or favor, unless the owners should be so unwise as to appoint him stakeholder.

Some arrangement should also be made to decide the winner in case of a close race. If the railroad track were made the finish the judges could tell just the moment the front wheels of the buggy crosed the line, and there could then be no dispute. Another good plan would be to have the river the finish, and then just as soon as the horse's front feet struck the water there would be a splash which could be seen by the judges.

In this way there would be no dispute and no hard feelings over a contested race.

SPORTING NEWS

Duluth Baseball Team Opening League Season At Brainerd.

Dennis Potts Will Pitch First Game Against Combination.

Tomorrow will witness the opening of the Northern league season at Brainerd, Winnipeg and Fargo.

Duluth will play the Brainerd-St. Cloud aggregation at Brainerd, Crookston will meet Fargo and Grand Forks will open the season at Winnipeg.

Elaborate plans have been made for the opening of the season at Brainerd. They include a procession headed by a brass band, speeches by prominent citizens at the park, and the usual throwing of the first ball across the plate by the mayor.

Dennis Potts, Duluth's star twirler, has been saved for the occasion, and he will pitch the first game for Duluth.

The Duluth team arrived in the city this morning from Hibbing and will leave this afternoon for Brainerd.

After completing the Brainerd series the Duluth team will play in Fargo, Crookston and Winnipeg, coming home on June 1, after playing twelve games on the road.

Manager Van Praagh figures that the team should at least break even in the twelve games, as the men have the advantage of several weeks preliminary training over the other teams in the league, and they are in better shape for the opening of the season than any team in the league.

WHITE SOX LOSE.

Hibbing Takes Second Game From League Team.

Hibbing, Minn., May 17.—The heavy hitting of the Hibbing batsmen in the first two innings of yesterday's game resulted in a victory for the home team against the Duluth White Sox.

Rees essayed to pitch for the visitors, but he proved an easy mark for the Hibbing batters and was hammered out of the box in the first inning. Lynch, who replaced him, was hit for four runs in the second inning, but he had the Hibbing men well in hand for the remainder of the game.

The Duluth men made a hard up-hill fight to overcome the lead of seven runs, but Freeman was a little too strong for them.

The weather was cold and a raw wind swept across the field, but in spite of this, both teams played lively ball.

The score:	R	H	E

Hibbing ....3 4 0 0 0 0 0 0 x—7	10	5

TO STROKE CORNELL.

Cuyler Adams Will Row In American Henley.

Cuyler Culver Adams, son of Mr. and Mrs. Cuyler Adams of Duluth, has been chosen stroke of the junior varsity eight of Cornell university to row in the American Henley on May 27.

The American Henley is the most important college race of the year in America, and the honor of stroking one of the crews entered in the event is no small one.

With Mr. Adams as stroke on the Cornell crew and "Al" Cummings pitching winning ball for the Wisconsin varsity team, Duluth athletes are well represented this spring.

TWO THOUSAND A WEEK

The Salary To Be Paid Nan Patterson.

Philadelphia, May 16.—The Inquirer says that Nan Patterson was in this city yesterday and signed a contract to appear on the stage of the Harlem Music hall, New York, at a salary of $2,000 a week. It is said she arrived here in the afternoon and returned to Washington immediately after the negotiations had been closed. Miss Patterson, it is understood, was represented by Attorney Daniel J. O'Reilly. According to the Inquirer she is to appear in an act at the head of six other chorus girls. The length of the engagement is not known.

RECORD FOR WIRELESS DISTANCE IS BROKEN.

San Francisco, May 17.—The Pacific coast record for long distance wireless telegraphing has been broken, it is claimed, by a wireless message received from 315 miles out at sea. The communication came from the government transport Solace, which left this port Monday and was received over the magnetic detector.

The best record made, it is said, at the local station was when conversation was held with the Boston at a distance of 220 miles down the coast some six weeks ago.

A PROFESSOR'S IDEAL OF LIFE

Existence In Bathing Suit On Sandy, Barren Beach.

Chicago, May 17.—Existence in a bathing suit on a sandy, barren beach, far from the turmoil of civilization, without a solitary friend or companion, and with only a deserted fisherman's shack as a shelter from storms, is the condition to which a university of Chicago professor has betaken himself.

Here, where he can live close to nature, where he can avoid mankind, which, on the whole, he declares, is uncongenial, he has decided to take up his abode for the remaining days of his life.

Oskar Ekstein is the name of the Midway professor who has broken the bonds of pedagogical conventionality. Since March 1 he has been living in a small shanty on the lake shore, half a mile north of Windsor park. He is a professor of chemistry, and spends but a small part of his time in the laboratories in the university of Chicago.

Many years he has been contemplating such an existence. Now that he has realized his ideal of life he declares he is happy. He cooks his own food, washes his own clothes, regulates his daily routine to circumstances. He believes in eating when he is hungry and in sleeping when he is sleepy, whether it is noon or midnight.

Clothes are unbearable to him. In his daily life on the beach he wears only bathing trunks. They are much more healthy than the heavy garments of civilian dress, he declares. Every day he spends from one to two hours in the water. The remainder of his time, when not at the university is spent in lounging about the sand sunning himself. Prof. Ekstein was born thirty-five years ago in Munich. He is a graduate of both the universities of Munich and Geneva.

CHARGES AGAINST RALPH

Made In Report of the Public Examiner.

St. Paul, May 17.—The results of Public Examiner P. M. Kerst's investigation of the charges preferred against George A. Ralph, who was yesterday re-elected engineer of the state drainage board, despite Governor Johnson's protest, were made public last night in a report of the public examiner, given out by the governor.

The public examiner charges Mr. Ralph with malfeasance in the performance of his duties as engineer in the construction of ditches in Polk, Red Lake, Marshall and Roseau counties. These charges relate largely to alleged duplication of accounts, presentation of forged bills and overcharges.

The principal charges made by Mr. Kerst follow:

First—That Ralph presented many bills for services of various persons employed as assistant engineers when there was no law authorizing the appointment of an assistant engineer.

Second—That bills were presented for services performed in several places on the same day.

Third—That many bills are presented for work on Sunday and for services when Mr. Ralph was in St. Paul.

Fourth—That many of the bills presented by Ralph are excessive, as in the case where common laborers were given $5 a day.

The public examiner says in one case, "Indications point very strongly at Mr. Ralph as having written the forged names." Again, Mr. Kerst says: "This bill is undoubtedly false." Still again he says: "The charge to the state in this instance must be erroneous." Speaking of the charge that Mr. Ralph forged the names of some of the employes of the board, Kerst says: "The name of McPhaul apparently being in the handwriting of George A. Ralph."

GEN. MILES URGES

Colonial Uniforms For Massachusetts' Militia.

Boston, May 17.—The Massachusetts militia will in future go abroad in cocked hats and knickerbockers. This is not a joke, for Gen. Miles recommends it. A revival of the old Continental uniforms is seriously contemplated.

The entire militia ambulance corps and all can be fitted out at an expense of $35,000 to $40,000. Gen. Miles believes this to be wise, because such uniforms, worn on occasions of parade, "would inspire respect and raise patriotic interest among both troops and citizens."

Other officers, however, do not go so far as Gen. Miles. They admit it would be picturesque, but some of them, especially in the Irish Ninth, fear wearing knee breeches might result in raising the cry of aping monarchical or court customs.

ELECTRIFICATION

Of the Erie Railroad Is Under Consideration.

New York, May 17.—The electrification of another steam railway having New York terminals is under consideration and the contract will probably be almost as large as the New York Central. It is said on the best of authority that the Erie railroad is the road referred to. It has a large suburban business that will have to be protected.

To the east the Long Island railroad is being electrified and to the north the New York Central will soon be running electric trains. The New York Central will run these trains under a two-minute headway and at the rate of seventy-five miles an hour. The result confidently expected is the development of an enormous suburban business to the company.

It is said that the Erie contemplates electrifying most of its New Jersey mileage. It is reported that the plans under consideration contemplate the expenditure of over $10,000,000 almost immediately and an additional sum later on.

The woman who never reads store-advertising is about as wise as the merchant who never advertises—but this is too much like "calling names," so we withdraw the comparison, in deference to the woman.

WILD PARSNIPS.

Two Boys Eat Roots and One Nearly Dies.

Mankato, Minn., May 17.—Robert Alworth, the 11-year-old son of Martin Alworth, and Joseph Russell, the 15-year-old son of Michael Russell, started out for a pasture on Agency Hill Monday afternoon at 4 o'clock, to get Mr. Alworth's cows. While walking through the woods they discovered some wild parsnips. They dug some up and ate them, not knowing that they were poisonous. The boys went on and got the cow and brought her home. Both boys went to their homes for supper. After Alworth had eaten supper, he felt severe pains in his stomach and had to lie down. He soon suffered worse pains and went into spasms. His family became alarmed and sent for two physicians and they worked on him for four hours before they could relieve him. He was stomach pumped twice. He was unconscious all night, but yesterday morning he came to. Young Russell suffered in the same way and both boys had very narrow escapes.

At Brainerd Closed By Public Examiner Kerst.

Brainerd, Minn., May 17.—Public Examiner P. M. Kerst has closed the Northern Pacific bank, a state institution, for the purpose, as stated in a notice posted on the door, "of making a thorough examination of its affairs." The immediate cause for closing the institution, Mr. Kerst stated, was a lack of sufficient cash on hand.

The bank is capitalized at $25,000 and has a surplus of $13,000. Its deposits amounted to $165,000, and its total liabilities to $200,000. It is believed that the closing is only temporary.

The Northern Pacific bank was organized in 1889. Dr. Werner Hemsteed is president and H. D. Treglawny, cashier.

CHURCH WRECKED

By Lightning While Minister Was Preaching.

Richmond, Va., May 17.—While the Rev. W. F. Dunaway was preaching in Cold Spring church at Atleo, near this city, Sunday afternoon on "Christ as a Refuge" the edifice was wrecked by lightning.

With an arm uplifted he declared: "Christ will pilot you through the storm of life," and as the last word of this sentence closed the belfry was struck. The bell was dislodged, and the bolt, following the stovepipe, sped to the center of the church, tearing up several benches and burning holes in two of them. Nearly every one was shocked. The most seriously injured was Gus. B. Hill of Indianapolis, Ind., who had a shoe torn from the left foot.

Hill was formerly a newspaper man in Indianapolis, and followed Peary to the Arctic. His condition is serious.

SAD AND ROMANTIC

Tale of a Young Couple of Connecticut.

Greenwich, Conn., May 17.—Fair Minerva and the warlike Julius are in jail after trying for two days to be married. Julius is charged with horse-stealing and the fair Minerva with trying to wed without her parents' consent when she was only 15 years old.

Minerva is Minerva Willis, raised on a farm near Glenville crossroads. Julius is Julius Tetsloff, also raised on a farm at the crossroads, and 18 years of age.

Miss Minerva's father told her Sunday that he was going to move to South Norwalk. She told Julius. He suggested an elopement. Minerva was willing, but they had no means. They started to walk. When night fell they were tired and hungry and found a couch in a haystack. Julius sat awake to guard his goddess.

When morning broke he had an idea. He enlisted Farmer Sutro's horse in his cause of love. They drove to New Rochelle and then to White Plains, trying to find a free parson, but all the parsons were busy. At dusk Julius hitched the horse to a post and went to buy some cheese and crackers. He was gone so long a time that Minerva believed he was untrue, and she unhitched the horse and started back home. At Greenwich the sheriff recognized Sutro's mare and arrested the girl.

Julius meanwhile decided that fair Minerva was untrue. He started home afoot. Reaching Greenwich yesterday morning, he learned that his goddess had been arrested as a horse thief.

Julius was chivalrous to the end. He went to the jail and asked the sheriff to let him join his Minerva. The accommodating sheriff locked him up.

TERRIFIC RACE WITH DEATH.

"Death was fast approaching," writes Ralph F. Fernandez, of Tampa, Fla., describing his fearful race with death, "as a result of liver trouble and heart disease, which had robbed me of sleep and of all interest in life. I had tried many different doctors and several medicines, but got no benefit, until I began to use Electric Bitters. So wonderful was their effect, that in three days I felt like a new man, and today I am cured of all my troubles." Guaranteed at all druggists; price 50c.

STRANDED GIRL

Slept Six Nights In a Brooklyn Cemetery.

Brooklyn, May 17.—Stranded in Brooklyn while on her way to Sweden, Annie Anderson, aged 29, homeless and penniless, has slept for six nights past in Evergreen cemetery. She was arrested last night. When brought before a magistrate, Annie said that six days ago she came from Chicago, intending to go to Sweden to her friends and relatives. Her steamship ticket and the small funds she possessed were stolen from her. She said she wandered through the streets until she reached the cemetery. The rest she obtained by sleeping under the trees and near the flowers proved so refreshing, she said, that she returned the following night. Each time she sought a different resting place and thus avoided the police.

On her declaration that she would like to work, Magistrate Furlong secured her a place as domestic and suspended sentence on a vagrancy charge.

MONTANA LEGISLATOR

Sent To Jail For Violating An Injunction.

Helena, Mont., May 17.—Charles Geyman, a member of the legislature from Silver Bow county, was yesterday adjudged guilty of having violated an injunction issued by Former United States Judge Knowles some time ago, restraining operations in the mining property of the Boston & Montana company in Butte.

Judge Hunt sentenced him to forty days in the Butte jail, and also assessed the costs of the proceedings, which have been on before him for two weeks, against the Geyman Mining company, of which Geyman is president. The amount is not known, but will be heavy.

The Boston & Montana asserted that the Geyman company was invading its ground and extracting valuable ores, and secured an injunction restraining such.

The evidence at the hearing was so contradictory that Judge Hunt sent an expert of his own over, and upon his showing the finding was had.

The Boston & Montana charges that Geyman has stolen ore to the amount of more than $200,000, and a civil suit to recover this amount will be instituted, it is understood.

PLATT'S LOVE AFFAIRS.

Another Woman Was Jealous of Mae Wood.

Omaha, Neb., May 17.—Disappointed in her effort to serve her summons on Secretary Loeb on his return from Colorado with the president, Mae Wood yesterday turned her attention once more to Senator Platt. In a statement to the press she tells of the senator's wooing and their break, when she ordered him from her room. The senator, Miss Wood declares, had frequently called for her with his carriage, and taken her driving until "another lady friend of his became awfully jealous. My own friends feared she would do something desperate and advised me to leave town," she says. "Several times, to prevent a scandal, I had to leave my office when I knew she was coming. Platt himself pleaded with me to keep out of her way, and usually warned me she was coming to see me."

Referring to Platt's denial of the authenticity of a letter published last week, Miss Wood asks:

"Why does he not sue me for forgery or have me arrested on that charge? I dare any of the crowd to get me into court on any pretext whatever. They will not get a chance to take any more of my papers. I am ready for them. Within reach of my hand, day and night, is a Derringer. The next person who attempts to get my papers will surely find trouble."

SULTAN RECEIVES MISSION PROMPTLY

Tangier, May 17.—Advices received here from Fez say that the sultan received Count Von Tattenbach-Asbold, the head of the German mission, the second day after the arrival of the mission. This unusual haste was intended as a mark of deference to the mission. The count in his speech, it is added, alluded to the ties of friendship between Germany and Morocco and declared he was sent to greet the sultan as an independent sovereign of a free country.

TONT'S TALK HELPED.

How He Unintentionally Earned a Reward.

When Green Morris brought that shifty trick of his, Cunard, to the Eastern races," said a trainer, to the Washington Post, "he started him first in one of the big 2-year-old events at Morris Park—the National Stallion. I think it was. Cunard had shown Green things and he was sure that he had the winner, particularly as the track was deep that day and Cunard reveled in the mud.

"Old Green, who, as everybody knows, has been at the game since the battle of New Orleans, was wandering around the Morris Park lawn an hour or so before the race, when the talk of a man who was going about touting marks caught his ear.

"The chinny chap had the for-sure winner of the big 2-year-old race, he said to the softies, and he proceeded to show them how by eliminating everything on the program of the event except the one he had picked to cop.

"He went over the list from top to bottom, pointing out how this and that one had no show whatever, and when he came to the name of Cunard on the program he threw back his head and laughed hard.

"'Scuse me, gents,' he said to his group of good things, 'but that one jes' makes me laugh—I can't help it, honest t' Gawd I can't.

"'Cunard, hey? Say, hasn't that old Western duck, Green Morris, got his noive wit' him t' t'ink he can skate along here w'it a crab an' nail th' candy in a hoss race like this'n's goin' t' be? Ain't he?

"'I tol' him so, meself, this mornin', an' he comes t' th' front an' says he knows he ain't got no chanst, but he says he's jes' goin' t' run his Cunard colt fr walk as long as he's got him entered.

"'So you can cut out that lob. I seen him wolk yistiddy, an' he runs like a spavined camel. So y' see, they's on'y one in it, an' that one's—' and so on.

"Well, old Green's bright, youthful eyes glowed when he heard that tout's guff, and the grins flickered over his face like shadows over a vitagraph film. He followed the talky tout over the grounds for half an hour listening to him.

"Now, we all know what a big effect the talk of a sure-enough busy tout has when that talk is addressed exclusively to bunches of holiday visitors at a race track. One of the marks goes off and tells all his friends, also marks, that he just heard a 'well-known horseman' say so and so, and that's the kind of talk that sticks and makes prices. It will even switch the wise ones when they get it repeatedly and strongly.

"Long before the big 2-year-old race the word had sifted all over the Morris Park grounds that Green Morris didn't like Cunard or any part of him for the juvenile event. The rumor even hit the bookies' line, and the layers took the story as it reached them and chalked a juicy price against the Morris colt.

"Morris and the people close to him got the cream of the big price, and Morris made one of the big clean-ups of his life, for Cunard had the race at his mercy and took it with ease.

"After Cunard's number was up old Green dug around and found the tout leaning in a dazed sort of way against a betting ring stanchion. Morris peeled off a hundred from one of his wads and slipped it to the tout, who took it greedily, but with an expression of amazement.

"'It looks good, pop, but wot for?' he asked old Green.

"'Well, it's coming to you for two reasons, son,' said old Green, good naturedly. 'In the first place, you made the price, or did a lot to help make it. In the second place, in an experience of nearly half a century on the race tracks I have never met such an ornate and wholly gifted liar as you are, and, I take it, such genius certainly deserves reward at the hands of those who are the beneficiaries of the lying,' and old Green walked away with a chuckle."

Money Necessary For Repair of Fern Is on Way.

Duluth Naval Reserve Will Have Boat In July.

If the Duluth Naval reserve had not taken immediate steps toward taking over the training ship Fern, now at the Norfolk navy yard, the navy department would have had the vessel condemned and sold at public auction.

A Washington dispatch of yesterday carried the information that it was up to the local naval militia to do something definite pretty quickly, or else it would not get the boat, the navy department having heard nothing from the Duluth sailors since the adjournment of legislature.

This report, however, seems to have been incorrect in some particulars, for the reason that the navy department has heard something from the Duluth reserve through Congressman Bede, and communications have already passed this month between Assistant Secretary Darling of the navy department and Lieut. Commander Guy A. Eaton, in which it was suggested to the latter the repair work necessary to be done on the Fern before bringing her to Duluth, and the steps that should be taken by the state department.

A requisition for about $3,300 or $3,400 is said to have gone forward from St. Paul yesterday to Norfolk, to cover the cost of putting in new machinery, caulking the hull above the water line and making numerous other repairs to the decks and other equipment of the boat preparatory to her voyage to the Head of the Lakes.

Secretary Darling stated that the repair work on the Fern could commence after May 15, possibly during the latter part of the month, so that she could be ready to start at least by July 1 next.

"You may say," said Lieutenant Commander Eaton, this morning," that it is a settled thing that the Duluth Naval Reserve will have the Fern.

"The Fern is not the most beautiful boat, nor has she the lines of a battleship, but she is commodious, seaworthy, economical in maintenance, economical in fuel consumption and is in every way a first-class ship for the purposes of the Duluth sailor militia.

"A requisition covering the repairs necessary has been sent forward from St. Paul and as soon as the work is begun I shall be present at Norfolk in the interest of the reserve and the state, to remain until the boat is ready to put in commission.

"According to the plans we shall probably take the Fern to Montreal or even further, with a paid crew, a crew of the Duluth Naval Reserve to meet the boat at either Detroit or the Soo to take possession and bring her to Duluth, after a short cruise.

"We have found it necessary to husband our funds and the proposed trip of the reserves to Norfolk has been abandoned for the reason that the expense of railroad fares, besides paying the reserves a salary while on duty, would make a big inroad into the amount of money we shall have available.

"Bids have been called for the white working dress of the reserves, to be used while on ship duty and it is expected that every man will be fully uniformed by the time we get the boat here."

WOULD SELL NO LIQUOR

Lincoln Park Pavilion to Be Primarily For Roller Skating.

"I have made no application for a liquor license in Lincoln park and have no desire to enter the saloon business there or in any other part of the city," says W. J. Chestock, who has made application for permission to erect a dancing pavilion in Lincoln park.

"What I propose to do is to erect a building 75 feet by 140, to be used partly as a dancing pavilion, but chiefly for a roller skating rink. Roller skating has been revived in the Twin Cities and my idea is to start it again here. The room can also be used for indoor baseball games and basket ball. There will be a refreshment room adjoining it but nothing but soft drinks will be served.

"Anyone who knows anything about roller skating knows that a different kind of floor is used for it than the one used for dancing. A smooth, slippery floor is best for dancing, while a chalky floor is best for roller skating. So even if I wanted to use the hall for dancing I could not do it very frequently. During the summer free band concerts will be given in the pavilion.

"The principal reason it is being opposed is on the ground that it will bring undesirable people into the park and tend toward immorality. I claim that the way to put a stop to immorality in the parks is to light them.

"It would mean ruin to me to run an undesirable resort. I have a five years' lease and if the council chose to revoke my license at the end of the first year, it would mean bankruptcy, so even if I should want to cater to the tougher class of people I would not dare do it."

It is not unlikely that there will be a warm fight on the question in the council Monday evening. On a motion by Alderman Haven made two weeks ago, the building inspector was instructed not to issue a permit for the construction of a pavilion in the park. A similar pavilion is now being operated under a license from the council in Lester park, and several of the aldermen claim that they cannot consistently refuse to allow such a place to be run in Lincoln park.

"I was informed as to the extent of the license, and thought that a liquor license was included," said Rev. Roderick J. Mooney this morning, in explaining an interview which appeared this morning in the News-Tribune. "But in so far as the license for the dancing pavilion is concerned I am heartily in sympathy with the movement to prevent it."

Three Entries To Same Homestead Now Straightened Out.

The general land office has affirmed a decision of the local land office repecting a homestead entry of Henry Morgan on the northeast quarter of 24-62-22. The affair is somewhat complicated. One F. W. Hawkins made a homestead application on the land some time ago and while the application was pending Morgan sought to make entry but his application was rejected. Before he took an appeal Hawkins withdrew his entry and before Morgan could file another application, one Nels Oskeroot made entry upon the land. Morgan then appealed from the rejection of his entry and the rejection is now confirmed. A few days ago, however, before the affirmation was received at the local land office, Morgan withdrew his application and filed on another piece of land.

ROJESTVENSKY IS NOT WELL

Very Disquieting Reports Concerning Health of the Admiral.

St. Petersburg, May 17.—Very disquieting reports are in circulation this evening about Admiral Rojestvensky's health. It is said that he has telegraphed to the emperor that it is impossible for him to proceed. An evening paper prints a report that the admiral suffers a nervous breakdown. No official confirmation of the report that Rojestvensky has requested to be relieved from duty is obtainable at the admiralty. Nevertheless the admiral's health has been the cause of considerable anxiety there. It is well known that he suffered from kidney trouble before leaving Cronstadt and throughout he long voyage to the Far East he suffered at times to such an extent that he had to be carried about on a stretcher. But the Russian commander struck bravely to his post. If he is now compelled, on the eve of battle, to give up his command, the admiralty would regard it as little short of a national misfortune. Rojestvensky has proved to be a genius as an organizer, and confidence is felt that he will show equal ability as a fighter. Should Rojestvensky be compelled to leave the fleet, the command will devolve on Rear Admiral Voelkersam, who is now with Rojestvensky.

BOWEN FINDS PAPERS GONE

Secretary Taft Willing To Accept Copies As Originals.

Washington, May 17.—Minister Bowen called upon Secretary Taft at the war department today and had a short conference. He told Secretary Taft that two cablegrams regarded by him as very essential to the case were missing from the papers handed him Monday by the secretary. Secretary Taft thereupon called upon the state department for the missing papers, but they could not be found, although copies were accessible and indeed Minister Bowen himself had copies brought by him from Caracas. Secretary Taft was perfectly willing for the purpose of the inquiry that these should be regarded as originals. Mr. Loomis also consented to waive all technicalities and accept the copies of the communications in Mr. Bowens' hands as sufficient. As soon as these papers have been received by Secretary Taft, he will refer them to Mr. Loomis for further reply.

It may be necessary to send an agent to Caracas to prosecute the inquiry, but this has not yet been decided on.

EXPELLED BY THE FACULTY

O'Brien Deprived of Privilege of Graduating From University.

Minneapolis, May 17.—By a unanimous vote of a largely attended faculty meeting, Edward C. O'Brien, managing editor of last year's Gopher, was expelled from the university an da recommendation sent to the board of regents that O'Brien and Charles Sainsbury, business manager of the Gopher, be prohibited from ever again entering the university or from receiving any degree.

The action of the factuly came as a result of a searching investigation into the affairs of the managers of last year's junior year book. On recommendation of the faculty committee on student publication the faculty of the College of Science, Literature and the Arts, passed the resolutions which deal out one of the most seathing rebukes a university faculty can give. The fact that only one of the managers implicated was expelled from college is due to the fact that Sainsbury has not been in school this year. He is said to have left St. Paul last week for Spokane, having refused to testify before the faculty investigating committee.

The faculty committee went through an exhaustive investigation of all the affairs of last year's Gopher. Following the report of auditing committee of the present senior class the committee went to the down town merchants involved, to many of the advertisers, and also thoroughly cross-examined both O'Brien and the other members of last year's board. The report to the general faculty shows a careful examination of the facts.

Not only was O'Brien expelled from college, but it was voted to lay the cases of Sainsbury and O'Brien before the county attorney with a view to placing the matter before the grand jury. A further censure was voted upon certain down town firms which were found to have given rebates and other inducements to students for the purpose of securing desirable contracts.

The committee reported that it had found that only two account books had been purchased by the Gopher board last year. In these was kept nothing but a partial list of subscribers. Subscriptions were paid and recorded on loose pieces of paper placed in a pigeon hole in a desk.

It was further stated that O'Brien had confessed to the committee to having an understanding with Sainsbury to keep the other members of the board from gaining any knowledge of the actual expenditures and receipts and to make these appear to balance and divide the excess of receipts.

HE EMPLOYS NOVEL METHODS

An Ohio Democrat States His Candidacy In Rhyme.

Mansfield, Ohio, May 17.—Christian K. Hershey, a prominent insurance agent of this city, who attracted considerable attention a couple of years ago when Mayor Tom Johnson of Cleveland came down into Richland county in his "red devil" and championed Hershey's candidacy for the Democratic nomination for representative against Squire William H. Earhart of Lexington because Earhart incurred the enmity of Mayor Tom by voting for the curative act of the municipal code, is now running for the Democratic nomination for president of the city council, and his announcement cards are all in poetry, home-made. The cards are of three varieties. The first is as follows:

They say this is an age of "fads,"
Mine is to preside over our "city dads;"
So if you will favor me with an "X"
I'll keep them straight or give 'em the "Dutch hex."

Yours for president of the city council, C. K. HERSHEY.

The verses on another are:

Fellow Democrats, I want to be president,
For that office I am running "full bent."
It is not for Teddy's place I want to fill,
But president of the city council.
So, Dear Voter, when you are in the booth
And my name you come across, forsooth,
Opposite it, if you please, a saw buck;
Let it go at that just for luck.

The third one says:

There was a man in our town
They say he was wondrous wise;
He jumped right into politics
And told a thousand lies.

That was the other fellow. I am only a candidate for president of the city council. C. K. HERSHEY.

The Democratic primaries under the Bronson law will be held May 27.

MADE HIS WIFE SLEEP

In Pig Sty At Rear of His Home.

Hazleton, Pa., May 17.—John Ferens of Derringer, it is alleged, has made his wife sleep in the pig sty at the rear of his home, and because the woman rebelled his chased her through the streets with an ax and created a great uproar.

A warrant was sworn out for Ferens' arrest before Justice Crawford, and at the hearing the man's treatment of his wife was rehearsed by the woman and neighbors. Crawford fined Ferens $10 and costs.

The prisoner turned to his wife and said: "You get the money." The wife, without protest; left the office, and, applying to relatives for aid, collected enough money to procure the release of her spouse.

ADULTERATED BEER.

Massachusetts Fines Brewers Who Use Salicylic Acid.

Boston, Mass., May 17.—Nine crisp $100 bills were handed to Clerk Manning in the Suffolk superior court for fines imposed upon two breweries for selling adulterated products.

Of this amount $700 was contributed by the Frank Jones Brewing company (Ltd.) for seven counts of sales of ale containing an antiseptic substance known as salicylic acid, which was put in the ale as a preservative.

The other $200 was contributed by the New England Brewing company for two counts of the sale of beer which contained the same antiseptic substance.

Both of these breweries were indicted by the grand jury, and through their attorneys pleaded guilty. The law, which was changed this year, makes the maximum penalty for the offense of adulterating food $100 in each case, and this was the recommendation made to the court by Acting District Attorney Sughrue.

The law makes it an offense to put any preservative substance in food or liquors without having the ingredients so used plainly marked upon the label or bottle.

BOY OF SEVEN

Found Sadly Gazing At a Restaurant Sign.

New York, May 17.—A boy not more than 7 years old stood in Broadway, near Sixty-seventh street, gazing at a sign which said "Restaurant." With a big sigh he shifted a bundle of newspapers from one arm to the other and sat disconsolately on the curbstone.

"What's the matter, kid?" asked Patrolman Toomey of the West Sixty-eighth street station, tapping him on the shoulder.

"Aw, wot's de use?" said the youngster, glancing at the policeman. "I think I'm all in. Me stomach feels awful empty, an' I was jest thinkin' how I coud fill it over there. You see, me old man has lit out an' me mudder's on de island. I ain't eat since yesterday."

Toomey took him to the station house and Sergant McGlain sent the doorman out for two extra large sandwiches and a can of coffee. Quickly the youngster put them out of sight.

Then he made known that his name is John Murray and until last week he lived with his parents in the lower part of West End avenue. After his mother was sent to the island; he said, his father worked overtime drinking, and was put out for not paying his rent. Since then he had not seen his father.

"What have you been doing since then?" asked McGlain.

"It was the roof for mine," the boy answered, comprehensively. "I got up on de roofs of Sixty-seventh street an' I found a lot of old bags on No. 313 an' I made a bed by de water tank. It was all right, only kinder cold. I slept there three nights, but he janitor is on to me and it's all off."

Peter Keck, 96 years old, veteran member of the congregation, was brought to the place in a carriage and after offering prayer he took a pick and shovel and did the first work of excavating. He then gave a talk on his church experience and a partial review of his life. He has been a life member of the Evangelical church.

BOYS MEET DEATH

At Breaker By Slipping Into Coal Chute.

Scranton, Pa., May 17.—Two boys met a terrible death in the breaker of the Green Ridge company by falling into a coal chute.

They were George Leonard and Joseph Fogarty, both 14 years of age.

The boys were playing and slipped into the chute. Their screams quicly brought help, but the coal, as it passed out of the chute, swept them away, and when their bodies were taken out life was extinct in both cases. They had been crushed and suffocated.

BREAKING RECORD

Steady Pace of Business and Solidity of Trade Conditions.

Never Before Such a General Distribution of Prosperity.

New York, May 17.—The steady pace of business keeps up on record-breaking transactions in almost every line of affairs, and while old time conservative observers are amazed at the immensity in volume and values, they realize that conditions are sound and firmly established. There is but one conclusion that can be reached when a close analyzation is made, and that is that there never was before in a great nation such a general distribution of prosperity.

It is this general distribution of values that gives the solidity to our entire structure of manufactures, trade and commerce. It is this continued thorough distribution of land, of money, of industries of various kinds through all sections that will continue to sustain the remarkable business growth of our present epoch. While financial, social and political writers give space to exploit a score or two of millionaires and many without thought imagine that upon the wealth of these few men rests the business future or business success of this country, the truth is it is from the great mass of wealth in the country that their millions were acquired, and if it had not been for the prosperity and progress of the masses, the wealth accumulating millions of people of this country, these millinaires would never country, these millionaires would never have had existence as such.

Anarchists, Socialists and agitators fail in most cases to discriminate between millions made in honest dealings and by business foresight and the millions dishonestly acquired. Without doubt there are dishonest, disreputable millionaires, so there are dishonest, disreputable poverty-stricken men. It is neither poverty nor riches that makes the honest man, the able man or the reputable man.

I have met some unhappy millionaires; men deprived by death of kith and kin; inmates of tomb-like palaces; all in. Me stomach feels awful empty, an' I was jest thinkin' how I coud fill it over there. You see, me old man has lit out an' me mudder's on de island. I ain't eat since yesterday."

Toomey took him to the station house and Sergant McGlain sent the doorman out for two extra large sandwiches and a can of coffee. Quickly the youngster put them out of sight.

Then he made known that his name is John Murray and until last week he lived with his parents in the lower part of West End avenue. After his mother was sent to the island; he said, his father worked overtime drinking, and was put out for not paying his rent. Since then he had not seen his father.

"What have you been doing since then?" asked McGlain.

"It was the roof for mine," the boy answered, comprehensively. "I got up on de roofs of Sixty-seventh street an' I found a lot of old bags on No. 313 an' I made a bed by de water tank. It was all right, only kinder cold. I slept there three nights, but he janitor is on to me and it's all off."

PREPARE FOR SUMMER

Assist nature in getting the system ready for the depressing Summer months.

The change of Nature from Winter and Spring to Summer is no greater than the change that takes place in our physical systems at this season, and few can undergo it without some manifestation of disorder. Some have no particular ailment but are just worn out and tired, with their energies so depleted that they are totally unfit for work or physical exertion of any kind. The appetite is variable, they are peevish, hysterical and often unreasonable, the digestion is imperfect, the stomach deranged and altogether they are mere drags in their every day life. To others the return of Summer means the return of disease, for warm weather is sure to force out the hidden poisons and seeds of disease which have accumulated in the blood during the Winter, and some old chronic trouble makes its appearance. Boils, Eczema, Tetter, Acne, scaly eruptions, rashes, pimples, etc., break out also at this time, and the heated season is made worse by the burning and itching of these skin tortures.

During the winter months we live a shut-in life as much as possible, breathing the impure air of closed rooms and heated offices; we indulge our appetites to the fullest, eating more of the heavier, richer foods and take a great deal less exercise. As a result the blood grows thick and sluggish, the Liver, Kidneys, Bowels and other avenues of bodily waste become inactive and dull, failing to carry out the poisons which form in the system, and these are absorbed by the blood. Then when warm weather comes the blood is stirred to quicker action and begins to throw off these poisons, and they find lodgment in the system and produce disorders of various kinds.

The time to prepare for Summer is before any warning symptoms are felt or the seeds of disease have time to get too deeply rooted in the blood. The blood should be cleansed and every part of the system put in good working order, so we can start the trying summer season fully prepared to withstand the disorders and diseases it brings.

S. S. S., the recognized king of blood purifiers, is the remedy with which to prepare the system for summer. It not only builds up the constitution, but goes down into the blood and searches out all poisons that have accumulated during the Winter, as well as those that may be lurking there from old chronic troubles. It is a tonic and appetizer without an equal, and in cases of debility, weakness, nervousness and that fagged out, run-down condition it is unexcelled. Every part of the system is toned up and rejuvenated by this great remedy. There is one feature of S. S. S. that is possessed by it alone; it is entirely vegetable, while other blood medicines on the market contain Potash or some other harmful mineral ingredient to derange the stomach and digestion, or otherwise damage the system.

SSS

The way to prepare for Summer properly is to get the blood pure and strong with S. S. S., the leader of all blood medicines and the best of tonics. Our book on the blood and any medical advice wished will be sent, without charge, to all who write.

HER SYSTEM BROKEN DOWN.

Gentlemen:—For over four years I suffered from general debility, causing a thorough breaking down of my system, so that I was unable to attend to my household duties. I had tried other medicines which did not relieve me. Seven years ago my cousin, who had been benefited by S. S. S., told me about it. I tried it, and it has cured me. I have always been able to attend to my duties ever since, in fact, am able to work in the garden as well as in my house. I heartily recommend S. S. S. to all who may feel the need of a thoroughly good blood tonic. Yours truly,

HIS SKIN MADE CLEAR.

The doctors said I had pustular Eczema; it would break out in small white pustules, mostly on my face and hands, discharging a sticky fluid; crusts would form and drop off, leaving the skin red and inflamed. I was tormented with the itching and burning characteristic of the disease for five years, and during the time used various medicated soaps, ointments and washes, but these applications seemed to make me worse. After taking S. S. S. a short time I began to improve; the itching did not worry me so much. I continued the medicine, and soon all the ugly eruptions disappeared and my skin is now as clear as anybody's. I have not been troubled since.
Urbana, Ohio. E. E. KELLY.

skilled and unskilled labor, that there shall be no cessation of activity, no stoppage of industrial establishments on frivilous or slight grounds, no extended or prolonged differences between employers and employes.

Never in the history of mankind has a nation's prosperity brought so much comfort and happiness to so many millions of people as is the case with the United States today, and nothing should be permitted to interfere with our period of good times.

If capital and labor will wisely and cordially co-operate, both will continue to receive the ample rewards that the past six years have brought to them. Arbitrary capitalist or reckless labor agitator who would deliberately disturb and destroy these business conditions which are profitable to every person in the country would be criminal indeed. Differences there may be, adjustments there should be, and with coolness and good common sense on the parts of employers and employes, the best results will follow.

VIRGINIA SENSATION.

McCue's Hanging Said to Have Been Fable.

Norfolk, V., May 17.—A sensation has been caused throughout Virginia by the publication of a story indicating doubt that Samuel McCue, former mayor of Charlottesville, was hanged for the murder of his wife. The story appears in the Growler, a weekly paper, and declares that after the execution a traveling salesman met in Toronto a man much resembling McCue.

The paper gives the following alleged facts in addition:

McCue's back was to the spectators—an unusual thing.

The drop was three feet.

The deputy who adjusted the rope was observed to unduly busy himself by placing his hand around McCue and arranging something under his coat.

When cut down the features of the victim were placid and peaceful.

The neck was not broken, and there was no struggle.

Then is related a rumor that one of the insurance companies refused to pay a policy on the murderer and that the refusal was accepted by the beneficiaries in preference to an exhumation.

The Growler thinks that a small steel hook was used at the execution which suspended the body until cut down.

Many persons declare they believe McCue still is alive.

RAT IN CHURCH

Causes Several Women to Scream and Faint.

Trenton, N. J., May 17.—A big rat scurried through St. Mary's Cathedral, where mission services were being held for women, and in an instant seventeen hundred women were scared into a panic by the screams of the few that saw the rat. Several women fainted, others jumped on pews and tried to climb into the window seats. The priests and a few cool headed women finally restored order. No one was seriously hurt. The rat escaped.

OPPOSED THE WAR.

New Russian Ambassador Popular with Japanese.

St. Petersburg, May 17.—Baron Roman Romanovitch Rosen, who will succeed Count Cassini as Russian ambassador at Washington, is a member of a distinguished baronial family which has contributed many men of prominence to the service of the czar.

He is a state councilor, chamberlain of the imperial court and a knight of the orders of St. Vladimir, St. Ann, and St. Stanislas. He speaks English, German, French, Italian and Japanese as well as Russian and is an accomplished musician. His wife, Baroness Elizabeth Alexevna Rosen, is a daughter of Gen. Odintzoff, for many years governor-general of Nijni-Novgorod.

Baron Rosen has been long in the diplomatic service of Russia. He was for a long time charge d'affaires at Tokio and from 1882 to 1894 he served as Russian consel-general in New York. In 1903 he was sent as minister to Toklo and was a conspicuous figure in the diplomatic negotiations that preceded the present war.

He was popular with the Japanese, who admired his ability and had confidence in his fairness, a trait, they found, that does not mark all Russian diplomats. He was against the war, but was overruled by Alexieff Plehve, and other advisers of the czar, who insisted upon a clash with Japan. When the war was begun Baron Rosen was recalled to St. Petersburg.

LYNN UNIONISTS

Pay Fares In Pennies to Non-union Conductors.

Lynn, Mass., May 17.—A novel scheme is being put into practice in Lynn by the members of the labor organizations to force conductors of electric cars, who do not belong to the Amalgamated Association of Street Railway Employes to join it.

Patrons of electrics well know with what horror conductors in general look upon pennies. Only women who are out on shopping tours are accustomed to give these when paying fares, and in return they get the stony glare, and sometimes are "accidentally" carried beyond the point where they desire to stop.

Every union conductor wears a button in the lapel of his coat, and when this button is missing it is the cue for the union men of other crafts to give that conductor five pennies.

One conductor got 130 pennies, most of them from union men who were on their way to a ball game. When the conductor learned the cause of the flood of cents he joined the union.

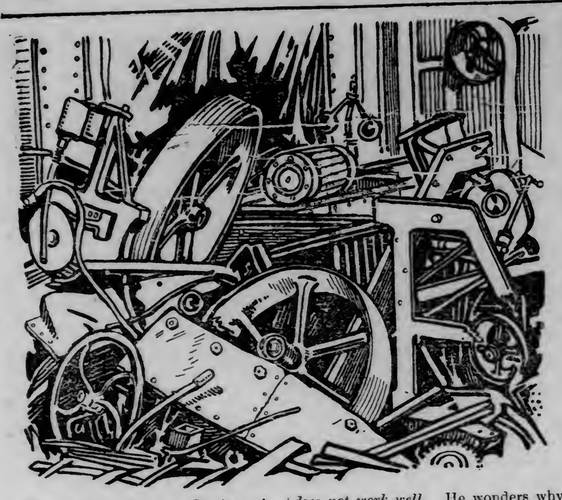
DEFECTIVE PAGE



The Mystery Solved.

THE REASON FOR THE RUIN OF MUCH COMPLICATED MACHINERY.

Man has often been compared to a complicated piece of mechanism. He is a wonderful piece of machinery, more wonderful than anything he has ever been able to create, and he has created some remarkable things. And yet man, the machine, is different from any other machine. An engine, for instance, requires power to drive it. There must usually be a boiler in which may be generated the necessary steam to start the engine and keep it going. Man combines within himself the engine and the boiler in one. The stoker must keep his boiler fires free from clinkers and ashes, and the engineer must keep his engine clean and its parts well oiled. So it is with that human engine and boiler. It too must be kept free from the accumulation of waste matter and must be cleansed and oiled in all its parts or else there will be a rupture of some of the delicate adjustments.

If assimilation be not good then the fires do not burn freely, there are ashes and clinkers in the system. In which case the effort to do the work required of the human engine, the heart overworks, the liver and kidneys are put under great strain, the bowels become clogged. Alcoholic drinks and medicines are harmful because they act on the food to render it less digestible. It is easily proved, for a piece of beef if soaked in alcohol a few hours becomes hard and tough. Test a medicine by adding it to the clear white of an egg. If it instantly coagulates the proof that it is an alcoholic compound is shown and is transformed into hard albumen and drops to the bottom. The result of taking an alcoholic tonic is that animal food in contact with it remains undigested. The person is then filling his piece of human machinery with waste matter. He clogs the blood and the nerves, and the liver and the kidneys, and the liver and the bowels. He then wonders why the old machine does not work well. He wonders why there is a wearing of parts, why all these parts of his mechanism grind and groan and rub, and why he cannot get all the labor out of them that he expects.

No Mystery Here.

Long ago while in the active practice of medicine among the leading families of Western Pennsylvania, Dr. R. V. Pierce came to the conclusion that tonics and blood purifiers that depended to a certain extent on the exhilerating effect of alcohol had an after depressing effect little to be desired—he also found that there were wonderful tissue-building and reconstructive virtues to be found in the shape of certain roots and native medicinal plants—some of them have been known and recognized for centuries by the early American Indians. They were:

Golden Seal (Hydrastis Canadensis).
Queen's root (Stillingia Sylvatica).
Stone root (Collinsonia Canadensis).
Cherrybark (Prunus Virginiana).
Bloodroot (Sanguinaria Canadensis).
Mandrake (Podophyllum Peltatum).

By careful study and experiment Dr. Pierce learned how best to extract the medicinal virtues from these plants in just the right proportion to make a life-giving tonic and blood-maker. King's Dispensatory which is an acknowledged authority on the scientific value of medicines says of Queen's root: "An alterative unsurpassed by few if any other of the known alteratives, most successful in skin and scrofulous affections. Beneficial in bronchial affections—permanently cures bronchitis—an important cough remedy—cures coughs of years standing. Aids in blood-making and nutrition." The same author says of Wild-cherry-bark: "This has a tonic and stimulating influence on the digestive apparatus—gives tone and strength to the system. Useful in fever, cough and found excellent in consumption. Stone root, he says is an alterative and tonic stumulant, valuable in laryngitis. In speaking of Bloodroot he says it stimulates digestive organs as well as does Golden Seal, which cures dyspepsia.

WITH A PITCHFORK.

Womam Saves a Man From Vicious Bull.

Stroudsburg, Pa., May 17.—M. F. Coolbaugh, a former state representative, had a narrow escape from death when a bull gored him. He owes his life to the bravery of Mrs. William Post, who rushed to his aid and drove off the animal with a hay fork. Coolbaugh was attacked by the animal as he entered the Posts' barnyard. The bull knocked him down and gored him several times. Mrs. Post heard the noise, and, seizing a fork, drove off the beast and pulled Coolbaugh under a fence to a place of safety.

FORTY MARYS

With Their Little Lambs Near Connecticut Town.

Winsted, Conn., May 17.—There are forty Marys with their little lambs near this town. The lambs are the bereaved offspring of forty fair ewes belonging to the flock owned by B. B. Moore that were attacked and killed in an onslaught of ravenous docks.

The Marys are the debutantes and belles of Winsted, who have adopted these unusual pets with as much avidity as if they were Griffon pups instead of lambs of the ordinary spring variety. They were inspirited no doubt by the noble spirit of life-saving.

The woolly orphans were left after the bloody massacre in a peculiarly perilous situation. Their trouble was that, being still dependent for sustenance upon lacteal diet, they were robbed not only of their motherly love and protection, but their food supply likewise.

It was the chorus of their piping trebles, bleating with grief and hunger, that aroused the sympathy of the prettiest society girl in the town. She offered to save one lamb's life, and got thirty-nine warm-hearted young women to do the same. The lambs were taken home in autos and runabouts, while forty orders were dispatched to the apothecary for large-sized nursing bottles.

"BE CAREFUL,"

Is Miss Gibney's Advice to Young Ladies.

Pittsburg, May 17.—"I would advise all young ladies to be very, very careful in giving promise of marriage to any young man unless they know him long and well, and always under any and all circumstances, to be careful of what they write. I think I can speak with experience now."

Miss Edith Isabella Gibney of St. Louis, who was granted a verdict of $13,500 in a breach of promise suit against Klaus J. Steiner of Allegheny, made this remark, while sitting on her aunt's porch at 753 Chislett street, and looked as if she meant it. Miss Gibney is evidently much disturbed over the thought that her love letters to Steiner were made public at the trial, particularly that one in which she longed "to be his Easter egg."

"When these letters were read in court—I mean Mr. Steiner's to me—I was so embarrassed that I could have dropped through the floor, and when they began to read mine to him I thought I should die.

"Did I love Klaus Steiner? I thought so. In fact, I know I did love him. But I did not know him. I am glad things ended as they did."

INTO THE SEA

Miss Crocker's $25,000 Necklace Fell and Was Lost.

San Francisco, May 17.—Somewhere in the depths of the Atlantic a $25,600 pearl necklace, belonging to Miss Jennie Crocker, the California heiress, is resting beyond the reach of the divers.

Miss Crocker recently visited San Francisco to attend the final settlement of her estate, valued at about $9,000,000, and while here bought the necklace. On returning to New York she sailed for Europe. News of the loss of the pearls has just reached San Francisco. Miss Crocker wrote to an old friend that while she was showing the pearls to some one on the steamer they slipped from her hands into the sea

THE BEET SUGAR

Boom on Its Last Legs, Says the Government Report.

Work Is Too Hard and the Returns Too Small.

Washington, May 17.—The government puts out a discouraging report on the beet sugar industry. Charles F. Saylor, special agent of the department of agriculture, who prepared the report which has just been issued, is unwilling to admit that the trend of the industry was backward last year, but he does say that a good many discouragements arose during the twelve months.

"In the work of development in the last eight years," he says, "it would be surprising if mistakes had not been made. The agitation was based on logical principles, the general anticipations were rightfully founded, and in the main the results justify the efforts which have been put forth."

The number of beet sugar factories in the United States at the present time is as follows:

Operating	48
Completed plants not operating	6
Building and partly completed	3
Slicing stations	4

Twelve states are now interested in the manufacture of beet sugar, the factories being distributed as follows: California, 5; Colorado, 9; Idaho, 3; Michigan, 16; Minnesota, 1; Nebraska, 3; New York, 1; Ohio, 1; Oregon, 1; Utah, 4; Washington, 1, and Wisconsin, 3.

The conclusion of Mr. Saylor, who has been the department's beet sugar expert since the first factory was built, is that "the last season can be fairly rated throughout the different portions of the United States as favorable to the production of sugar. The success attending the beet crop is offering much encouragement and considerably improved the prospects of sugar production next year. The shortage of beets grown last season was not due to a failure of the crop either in respect to quantity or quality, but to the limited acreage secured by factories in many localities."

It appears from the government report that the industry is acquiring a more settled and definite status. Any new factory installed now is founded on conditions which have been investigated and are known to be satisfactory. Capital appears better able to grasp the possibilities of investment, to look beyond the pioneer experiences incident to every new sugar factory.

The failures which occur through mistakes in locating or constructing, Mr. Saylor declares, are proving valuable guides to those interested in the future extension of the industry. Of the factories not operating, three are in California and three in Michigan.

While the idle plants may appear discouraging, Mr. Saylor says, the fact is that the percentage of idle plants in the United States is not nearly as heavy as the yearly averages for the last ten years in Germany, France and other beet countries. Reaction in local sentiment is given as the cause of factories shutting down. In most cases it was purely a question of securing a sufficient supply of beets. Where sufficient beets can be secured nearly every other difficulty can be overcome.

In his investigations Mr. Saylor found that the difficulty with most of the factories which have not succeeded was too great haste in their establishment. It has not been easy to interest farmers in beet growing and keep them interested. The beet sugar industry prospers in several European countries because the people are accustomed to hard, laborious work and even drudgery.

The farmers in those countries learned to grow sugar beets successfully and they taught the art to their children. Every member of the family works in the beet fields. It is necessary to "thin" and weed beets by hand, and that is what the foreign farmers do.

In this country, it is pointed out, the farmers are devoted to the use of labor saving machinery. The tendency has been away from rather than toward hard hand labor. Here the farmer and his hired man or men do the work; the children attend school.

The greatest need of the beet field, the government's agent says, is hard work and plenty of it. Sugar beets are an expensive crop. Given sufficient attention and labor, they are highly remunerative under ordinary conditions. If neglected, they are just as sure to carry the farmer's bank account the other way.

The failure of the American farmer to return to the drudgery of former days, before the use of labor saving devices became general, is at the bottom of the failure of the beet sugar industry to attain the glorious success which promoters all over the country were predicting five or six years ago.

Modern methods of agriculture will not produce a satisfactory crop, and when the farmer comes to deliver his beets to the factory, he finds that his field is too small to make the business pay. The item of hauling is an important one. It is the testimony of growers—though it is not so stated in the government report—that beets are weighty and that where the haul is long and over unsatisfactory roads the price paid for the crop at the factory will not, in some instances, pay the cost of hauling.

Mr. Saylor admits that the beet growers of America are not going back to European methods of growing, for, he says, "it is evident that if sugar beets are to be produced in this country it must be by a system of labor which is in harmony with American ideas, conditions and aspirations." He mentions the practicability of using the children of the cities in the beet fields, to a considerable extent, without violating any of our ideals.

The whole tone of the government report is in marked contrast with that of the reports issued four or five years ago. Mr. Saylor admits that "the beet sugar industry was started with a little too much of our well-known American enthusiasm." There was too much of the kind of excitement often aroused by the discovery of a new mine or the selling of corner lots in a new town, he says.

"Capitalists, business men and farmers all over the country seemed to have the one idea that a sugar fatory was a highly beneficial institution financially," he continues. There is probably not a town or city in the sugar belt which did not at one time or another have the beet sugar craze. A barbecue was held, the farmers of the surrounding country were invited in, the hat was passed to pay expenses. The band played, the people shouted, and everybody said, "Hurrah for the sugar factory!"

In many cases all this noise and enthusiasm led to the establishment of a factory. The town gave a site and exempted it and the improvements on it from taxation. Things went swimmingly for a time, but after a fair trial the farmers refused to grow the beets, and you can't have a beet sugar factory without beets, even if you can have a cotton factory thousands of miles from the field where your raw supply is grown.

WHITEMAN TRIAL RESUMED.

Buffalo, N. Y., May 17.—The trial of Alonzo J. Whiteman, charged with defrauding the Fidelity Trust company was resumed yesterday. Assistant District Attorney Ryan, in presenting the case, went over practically the same ground covered by him in his opening address at the first trial. With one or two exceptions, the same witnesses will be called to testify.

TO COACH CREW

Committee of Five Will Instruct New Boat Club Members.

Winnipeg and St. Paul Crews Coming to Duluth Regatta.

In place of a professional coach, the old and experienced oarsmen in the Duluth Boat club will have charge of the work of getting the candidates for the crew into shape for the regatta to be held in Duluth on July 22.

At a meeting of the club members held last evening F. N. Lynam, J. D. Mahoney, Murray Peyton, H. M. Peyton and Guy Colquhoun were appointed a committee of five to coach the younger oarsmen. One of the members of the committee will be present every afternoon during the week to instruct the candidates for the crew along the lines laid down by Coach O'Dea last year. The committee will also have charge of the details of the regatta.

A telegram from the Winnipeg Rowing club was received and read last evening. It stated that the club would send an eight, a senior and junior four, and senior and junior doubles to the regatta.

The Lurline Rowing club of St. Paul also announced its intention of sending senior and junior fours to the regatta, and it may be induced to add an eight.

The Fort William club was also invited to compete, but owing to the fact that it has been but recently organized the members did not feel warranted in going to the expense.

The regatta will be the first one held in Duluth in ten years and the club members are anxious to make it as successful an affair as possible.

Next Saturday afternoon the organization of the crews will be effected. Every member of the club who can handle an oar, whatever his size or weight may be, and also those who wish to learn to handle an oar, are requested by the officers of the club to be present at the boat house at that time and crews will be picked and tried out.

The club will probably enter two eights and at least three fours in the regatta, so that there will be plenty of opportunity to take part in the races.

Two eights are now in the process of formation and one or two others may be organized on Saturday.

A SERIOUS MISTAKE.

Don't make the serious mistake of neglecting the signs of a simple indigestion.

You must know that even such a seemingly unimportant matter as wind on your stomach is much more serious than it seems.

It is a gas, the result of the decay of the food you have eaten, which is actually lying inside you, rotting instead of digesting, away.

Now, of course, you can easily appreciate the horrible danger of allowing a mass of festering food to lie in your stomach and taint all the sources of your life and health.

For, after putrefaction (instead of digestion) has turned this food into a liquid (poisonous) form, your glands and other organs of assemilation suck it up and distribute it through your blood current into every part of your body.

You see these glands have no power of distinguishing the bad from the good in a case like that.

They suck up all the stuff they can get, and take it to the liver and kidneys, leaving it to these organs to purify the whole reeking mass.

And these delicate organs then overwork themselves trying to clean out the poison.

So then you have kidney or liver trouble.

And what they fail to get out, goes somewhere else, and poisons that part—may go to your brain and give you a headache, or to your big toe and give you a gout or rheumatism.

And so on.

All because, when you found a slight sign of indigestion, you didn't take the antidote—Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets.

You see, the whole proposition just simmers down to this.

It depends on yourself whether to be sick or well.

One way to be sure, never to have any of the troubles which always follow in the train of an attack of indigestion, is to—Diet.

Eat little. Eat nothing that you know gives you any distress during digestion.

Another way, not quite so strenuous, is to eat what your appetite craves for, and still your stomach's distress with Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets.

Perhaps a combination of both plans would give the best of all round results.

But the main thing to remember is this: Never neglect indigestion, for if you do, you will surely live to regret it.

Another important thing is, that no medicine of any kind will do you the same good, for all forms of indigestion, from the simplest to the complicated, that Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets will.

They are not cathartic.

They are scientific.

THREE CHARGED WITH MURDER

Mrs. Blackshire and Alleged Accomplices Are In Jail.

Parkersburg, W. Va., May 17.—On May 3, at midnight, masked men entered the home of Henry Blackshire, at Brookville, and shot him dead in the presence of his wife and son. Now Mrs. Blackshire is in the Calhoun county jail. Her neighbor, Robert McCloskey, is in the same prison, and Louis Hendricks is in the Parkersburg jail, all charged with complicity in the murder. The arrest of Mrs. Blackshire yesterday was brought about by the statement of Hendricks. He said he was at the McCloskey's home several days before the murder and heard Mrs. Blackshire offer McCloskey money to kill her husband, and said that if he refused to do so she would get some one else to do it. He says that she told Mrs. Blackshire, after the murder, what he had heard, and she offered him $100 as soon as she had collected her husband's life insurance if he would leave town. He and McCloskey left together the day following the murder, and remained near Parkersburg until McCloskey returned to Blackville on Sunday to get his pay and while there was placed in jail. During their absence Mrs. Blackshire attempted to collect the insurance, amounting to $1,000. Public sentiment threatens lynching. McCloskey admits having been present at the time of the murder, and also says Mrs. Blackshire wanted her husband out of the way, but charges Hendricks with the murder.

TUESDAY'S EVENTS ON THE RACE TRACKS

Kansas City, May 17.—The fields, as a rule, were large at Elm Ridge yesterday, notwithstanding the heavy track. Mi Reina, at 20 to 1, in the betting, took the first race after a hard drive from Stumpton. Sweet Tooth, the favorite, was third.

St. Louis, May 17.—The first steeplechase of the meeting was yesterday's feature of the American Jockey club. Weird, at even money, received the best ride and won easily. Jockey Morrison was thrown and badly injured, his leg being broken in addition to internal injuries.

Forehand, at 6 to 5, won the feature race at the Fair grounds, having an easy time in disposing of Lubin and Ethics. With exception of Forehand, the favorites had a bad day.

New York, May 17.—J. L. Magann's Buttling, well played, won the Bay-chester stakes at Belmont park yesterday over a heavy track.

Louisville, May 17.—George Connett ran true to form yesterday and secured his third winning out of three starts at the present meeting, when he won the Bashford manor stakes for 2-year-olds in easy fashion. The crowd was large and had a good day as four favorites won.

VIOLATED INJUNCTION.

Helena, Mont., May 17.—Charles Geyman, a member of the legislature from Silver Bow county, was yesterday adjudged guilty of violating an injunction, restraining operations in the mining property of the Boston and Montana company in Butte, and was sentenced by Judge Hunt of the federal court to forty days in jail. The Boston and Montana asserted that a company, of which Geyman was at the head, was invading grounds and extracting valuable ores, and secured an injunction restraining such. This injunction was found to have been ignored by Geyman, whose company will have to pay the cost of legal proceedings.

MINNEAPOLIS BURGLAR CAUGHT AT GREAT FALLS

Great Falls, Mont., May 17.—Fred Mortensen, the alleged leader of a gang of six burglars of Minneapolis, similar to the Neidermeyer gang of Chicago, has been identified here by Sheriff Dreger of Hennepin county, and will at once be taken back to Minneapolis. The jury was out for three hours and returned a verdict of guilty.

BOLD ROBBERS GET $3,000 IN JEWELRY

Chicago, May 17.—By one of the boldest robberies committed in this city in recent years, four men last night secured from the jewelry store of T. D. Lande, 482 West Madison street, watches and diamonds valued in the aggregate of $3,000.

One of the men entered the store and covered Lande with a revolver, while a second watched at the side entrance to the place and two others broke the front window with the handles of their revolvers, and went off with the trays of watches and diamonds. The street was filled with passersby at the time of the robbery, and when one man shouted for the police the robbers threatened to kill him.

The thieves escaped with their plunder, and without leaving the slightest clew to their identity.

KALDERWIT AND HIS PALS ARE SENTENCED

Anoka, Minn., May 17.—Orlin Kalderwit, Charles Hammon and John Kolb, the Columbia Heights murderers, were sentenced late yesterday by Judge Giddings. Kalderwit, whose trial ended two weeks ago, with a verdict of second degree murder, was sentenced to life imprisonment, while Hammon and Kolb, the jury in whose case reported late yesterday afternoon with a verdict of murder in the third degree, received a penalty of thirty years at hard labor. The men held up a saloon at Columbia Heights, just outside of Minneapolis, on Nov. 2, and during an indiscriminate fusillade into the crowd, killed Freddie King, a 10-year-old boy, and wounded a man named Mingo.

CHANGE OF GRADE

Board of Trade Members Make Recommendation To Directors.

Want No. 2 Northern To Be Contract Grade In Duluth.

The members of the Duluth Board of Trade this afternoon recommended to the directors of the board that No. 2 northern wheat should be the contract grade upon September and all later contracts.

This action came rather suddenly and was something of a surprise. Some time ago a request was submitted to the directors of the board signed by five members asking for a meeting to consider the proposition of allowing the delivery of No. 2 northern upon contracts at a fixed difference. The amount of the difference was not suggested. It is the duty of the directors to frame all rules, and before they can be voted upon they must be first passed upon by the directors. The idea was to give an expression of sentiment and let the directors thresh out the rule as it should be submitted. The meeting was called for 2:30 o'clock this afternoon.

During the past twenty-four hours a strong sentiment developed in favor of making No. 2 northern the contract grade. The condition existing in the Duluth market at the present moment undoubtedly gave strength to the proposition and brought it into favor with many who might a short time ago have opposed it. The market is in the control of one interest and commission business is dead, nobody daring to trade while the congested condition exists.

When the meeting was called the proposition to make No. 2 northern the contract grade was presented. It was opposed on the ground that the meeting could consider nothing but the specific purpose for which it was called.

After considerable discussion it was ruled by President Miller that the action of the meeting would commit the board to nothing, and would only convey to the directors the recommendation of the members, which they might act upon or not, and the resolution was put to a vote.

With but two negative votes it was thereupon declared to be the sense of the members that a rule making No. 2 northern the contract grade in this market on September and all later contracts, should be submitted for adoption.

It is the belief of the members favoring the new rule that the business of the market will be greatly widened by the extension of the contract grade. Manipulation will be more difficult and millers and others will be more ready and willing to hedge here than in markets where they will be subject to congestion and cornering.

PAUL MORTON

May Become Head of the Wabash Road.

New York, May 17.—Paul Morton, secretary of the navy, is to resign in October, according to a report circulated in financial circles, to take the presidency of the Wabash railway. He will succeed Joseph Ramsey, Jr., who has been voted a long vacation, at the end of which he will retire permanently from connection with the Gould system. Mr. Morton has announced that he will retire from the cabinet in October, and as the general election of the Wabash will take place about that time, Wall street regards it as extremely likely that he is only waiting for the vacancy which will be open to him when Mr. Ramsey severs his connection with the Goulds.

Lenich and Louger Face Jury on Murder Charge.

Alleged To Have Killed Peter Korceran of Eveleth.

T. J. Sullivan, employe Clark mine, Hibbing.

Frederick W. Fechner, employe Union Match company, West Duluth.

Frank A. Barber, lumberman, Duluth.

Edward S. Farrell, plumber, Duluth.

Albert M. Johnson, employe Northern Pacific roundhouse, Duluth.

George L. Maycroft, employe Oliver Iron Mining company, Duluth.

L. J. White, city clerk, Ely.

Joseph Vanderyacht, proprietor cigar store, Duluth.

Thomas W. Thatcher, grocer, Duluth.

Edward Hoch, salesman, Wieland Shoe company, Duluth.

Fred Berkman, drayman, Hibbing.

Anton Borgen, grocer, Duluth.

The above twelve men constitute the jury which is this afternoon listening to the evidence introduced by the state in the murder trial of Peter Lenich and Luj Loujer, who are indicted for killing Peter Korceran of Eveleth during a drunken row at that place a few weeks ago.

Twenty-fifth of the regular impanneled jurors were examined this morning before the full jury was secured, over fifty per cent of those excused being released because of bias, claiming that they were so much opposed to capital punishment that no matter what the evidence, they would not vote for a verdict of murder in the first degree, because that would mean hanging.

Two jurors were accepted who were opposed to capital punishment on circumstantial evidence, but who admitted that if the direct evidence was convincing they would have no scruples about voting the death penalty.

The triers were Judge Phineas Ayers, Judge J. H. Potter and Victor L. Stearns, Esq., but these did not have any work to do as no challenge was subimitted to them.

Lenich and Loujer, who are represented by L. H. Corcoran, appeared to be interested in the selection of the jurors who are to decide their guilt or innocence, Lenich sitting close at his attorney's elbow, and Loujer sitting in charge of an officer just inside the railing.

Lenich seems to be the more unconcerned of the men over the outcome of the trial. His incarceration in the county jail has not been long enough to remove the tan from his face, caused by exposure to the weather. He is a young man, apparently from 22 to 26 years of age, rather stocky in build and with a suspicion of a mustache.

The twelfth juror was secured just at noon, and a recess was taken until 2 o'clock this afternoon, when County Attorney McClintock was expected to open the case for the state.

Lenich and Loujer are indicted for murder in the first degree, the penalty for which is hanging, without the alternative of life imprisonment.

The information in their case is that on Easter Sunday last the men had a celebration at some one of the Austrian boarding houses, where beer flowed freely, and trouble arose. Loujer and Korceran are said to have become involved in a fight, into which Lenich also became mixed. Korceran is said to have been getting the worst of the fight and started to run away. Lenich is claimed to have chased him with a knife, and to have plunged the weapon several times into the body of the fleeing man, causing his death on the street.

Following the murder, Lenich and another Austrain who was wounded during the boarding house fight, disappeared from Eveleth. Officers scoured the country about Eveleth for them, but the suspected men's relatives and friends shielded them in every way and it was feared that they had accomplished their purpose of getting out of the country and beyond the reach of the United States authorities.

Andrew Nelson, a settler near the Cloquet river suspected two men who asked him for lodging as the two men wanted by the county authorities and stood guard over them while a messenger carried word to the sheriff at Duluth.

Two deputy sheriffs drove out to Nelson's cabin, some twenty-five miles from Duluth, during the very early morning hours and placed Lenich and his companion under arrest. The companion was afterward released as his wound was evidence enough that he could not have followed or assisted in killing Korceran. Loujer, who is said to have started the trouble resulting in the tragedy was arrested at Eveleth.

THAT BANK ACCOUNT.

Did you ever miss an opportunity to get in on a good thing because you did not have a few hundreds of dollars at hand, you who are living on a salary and doing the best you can to forget about the possibilities of old age? Maybe it was a chance to go into business in a small way, or a chance to buy a lot that has since gone up in value, or a chance to make a legitimate investment that would have repaid you many times. Whatever it was, most of you have missed such a chance.

It doubtless occurred to you then that if you had had a bank account to draw upon, you could have made your start in life from that small capital. And yet, though that opportunity has passed, and others may again present themselves, still you have no bank account.

All you have to do to get one is to start, and if you do not start you certainly never will have one. If you make a start, no matter how small, you will be surprised at the speed with which a bank account, properly nourished, will grow. Your lack of a bank account has not only lost you that opportunity and others that you know not of, but it has bred in you habits of extravagance that have driven out whatever thrift there may have been inherent in your nature.

A person that starts a little bank account, and nurses it duly, is in a good way. You will soon find awakening in yourself a tender interest in that bank account, and a pleasure in watching it grow. It may seem to grow slowly, especially at first, but nothing reproduces itself more rapidly than money. It will not be long before you have enough to make a shrewd investment with, and that is the second step.

At any rate, it will make you careful of your money, and lead you to think twice before you make an ill-advised expenditure. Don't permit yourself to become mean, of course, because meanness defeats its own ends. Just use good judgment, add a regular definite amount and as much more as you can to that bank account, and you will soon see the point.

CASE NOW IN JURY'S HANDS

McTaggert-Shipman Action Closes In District Court.

The alleged malpractice case of David McTaggert against Dr. C. G. Shipman of Tower and Ely was given to the jury late this afternoon after a hotly contested trial lasting several days. The argument in behalf of Dr. Shipman was made shortly before the noon hour by C. O. Baldwin, and the argument for Mr. McTaggert was made by Theodore Hollister, following the call of the court at 2 o'clock this afternoon. McTaggert had a limb amputated at the knee and claims that the treatment he received was not proper and that as a result he suffered unnecessarily a gerat deal and had to have a second operation by a Duluth surgeon before the limb would heal. McTaggert sued for damages in the amount of $10,000.

HOME FOUND FOR JOE WOZ

Nine Year Old Boy Is Adopted on the Range.

Through the efforts of Humane Officer Withrow, a home has been found for Joe Woz, the little 9-year-old boy, who was committed to the state school yesterday by Judge Windom.

The people who have offered to adopt him are residents of the range, and the lad will have one of the best homes in St. Louis county outside of Duluth.

The boy was fitted out with new clothes, new shoes and a new hat by the humane officer yesterday, and a person who had seen him earlier in the day would not have recognized him as the same boy.

"He is one of the best boys I have ever met, considering the surroundings among which he has been brought up," said the humane officer. "The people who are going to take him are lucky to get such a boy, and Joe is lucky to get such a good home."

REACTION IN WHEAT

Market Has Setback But the Trading Continues Light.

Better Weather and Lower Cables—October Flax Higher.

Duluth Board of Trade, May 17.—The wheat market had a reaction today after the sharp bulge of yesterday and throughout the morning was easier. There was very little trading, however, owing to the congested condition here. The weather in the Northwest was a little more favorable. Liverpool closed ¼@⅜d lower, London 1d higher, Berlin ⅝c higher, Budapest ½c higher and Paris unchanged to ½c lower.

The May option in Duluth lost 3c and in Minneapolis 2¼c, while in Chicago it was ½c lower, in New York ⅜c lower, in St. Louis ⅝-½c lower and Kansas City 1¾c lower. The July option also lost 3c in Duluth, 2⅝c in Minneapolis, 1¼-⅜c in Chicago, 1⅛c in New York, ⅝-⅜c in St. Louis and 1-1½c in Kansas City. In Winnipeg May lost 1¾c and July 1⅜c.

Minneapolis stocks show a decrease of 465,000 bus in the first four days of the week.

Snow in his weekly crop report said: "The season which at the end of March was unusually early at the middle of May is distinctly late. Weather conditions for three weeks have been wholly unfavorable both for plant growth and for current farm work. Corn planting is delayed and where accomplished germination is slow and growth checked by cold and excess of moisture. Wheat development is now behind the normal season and the winter wheat belt is later than last year. Rust appearance is scatteringly reported in the Southwest, not yet material, but with threatening possibilities. In view of the retarded plant development both in the winter and spring belt which makes possible completion of life cycle of rust pores before the wheat plant matures. Through the Central West water has stood on the low lands the past week to the injury of both wheat and oats."

Car receipts at Duluth were 1 against 3 last year, and at Minneapolis 94 against 96 last year, making a total for the Northwest of 95 against 99 last year. Chicago received 1 against 4 last year.

Primary receipts of wheat were 125,518 bus, last year 183,881 bus. Shipments 44,-374 bus, last year 196,540 bus. Clearances of wheat and flour aggregated 38,646 bus.

Corn in the Liverpool market closed unchanged to ¼d higher. July corn in the Chicago market closed ⅜c higher. July oats closed a shade lower. Primary receipts of corn were 165,050 bus, last year 216,620 bus. Shipments 223,749 bus, last year 340,643 bus. Clearances were 196,696 bus.

There was very little trading in the Duluth market. The July option opened ½c lower at $1.06⅛ asked, dropped to $1.04¼ at 11:25 and rallied to $1.04½ at 11:55. It fell off again, closing at $1.04, a loss of 3c. May also fell 3c closing at $1.05. September was 1c up to 89¼c, but closed 1c lower at 82c.

There was nothing doing in the cash wheat market.

Flax was very dull. The only thing doing was in the October option which advanced 1c to $1.24½. Other options all closed unchanged.

Oats declined ⅝c.

Following are the closing prices:

Wheat to arrive—No. 1 northern, $1.05. On track—No. 1 northern, $1.05; No. 2 northern, $1.04½N. Durum No. 1, 88c; No. 2, 86c; May, $1.05; July, $1.04; Sept., 82c. Flax to arrive, $1.43; on track, $1.43; May, $1.43; July, $1.43; Sept., $1.25; Oct., $1.24½. Oats to arrive, 29⅞c; on track, 29⅞c. Rye to arrive, 75c; on track, 75c. Barley—Feed, 25@26c.

Cars inspected: Wheat 1, last year 3; oats 2; flax 2, last year 12.

Receipts: Wheat, 898; oats, 2,604; barley, 2,563; flax, 2,384.

Shipments: Wheat, 22,497; oats, 121,188.

THE CHICAGO MARKET.

Weather Conditions Give Wheat Bearish Sentiment.

Chicago, May 17.—More favorable weather conditions for the growth of spring wheat in the Northwest created bearish sentiment in the wheat pit here today. Lower prices at Liverpool increased the selling pressure. Commission houses were liberal sellers of the July option. That delivery opened ¼c to ½c lower at 87¼c to 87½c. On covering by shorts, the price advanced to 87⅝@87⅞c, but quickly sold off again to 87⅜@87½c. Minneapolis, Duluth and Chicago reported receipts of 96 cars, against 161 cars last week and 82 cars a year ago.

The weakness became more pronounced later in the day; sharp declines at Minneapolis and Duluth contributing materially to the depression. For July the lowest point of the day reached at 86¾@87c. The market closed almost at the bottom, July being off 1¼@1⅜c at 86¾@87c.

Bullish sentiment was again rampant in corn. Shorts were urgent bidders for the May delivery, but offerings were hard to find. Local receipts today were less than estimated, and none of the arrivals was of contract grade. May opened unchanged to 1⅛c up at 52c to 54⅛c and sold up to 54¼c. July was up ⅝c to 1½c at 48¼c to 48⅝c. Local receipts were 32 cars, none of contract grade.

On considerable profit-taking May reacted to 52½c, but the price quickly regained all of the loss. With the decline in May the July option sold off to 48@48¼c. A good export demand had a bullish effect on the late market. The close was strong with May up ½c at 53½c July was up ⅜c at 48⅜c.

In sympathy with the strength of corn, the oats market was firm. July opened unchanged at 29¼c and advanced to 29⅝@⅝c. Local receipts were 64 cars.

An advance of 10c in the price of live hogs caused firmness in provisions. The volume of business, however, was very small. Puly pork was up 5@7½c at $12.65. Lard and ribs were each up 2½c at $7.37½ and $7.30 respectively.

Wheat—May, 94⅝c; July, 86¾@⅞c; September, 80½c. Corn—May, 53½c; July, 48¼c; old, 48⅝c; September, 47⅝c; old, 47¾c; December, 44⅞c; old, 45c. Oats—May, 31¼c; July, 26½c; September, 25⅛@¾c. Pork—May, $12.45; July, $12.65; September, $12.85@12.87½. Lard—May, $7.22½@7.25; July, $7.37½; September, $7.55; October, $7.52½. Ribs—May, $7.10; July, $7.27½; September, $7.52½. Rye—May, 77c; July, 66c; September, 57c. Flax—Cash northwestern, $1.42; southwestern, $1.26; May, $1.26. Timothy—May, $2.95; September, $3.20. Clover—May, $12@12.50. Barley—Cash, 42@56c. Cash wheat—No. 2 red, $1@1.01; 3 red, 94@96c; 2 hard, 90¼@95¾c; 3 hard, 88@92c; 1 northern, $1.02@1.03; 2 northern, $1@1.02; 3 spring, 96@$1.01. Corn—No. 2, 53½@54c; 3, 52½@53c. Oats—No. 2, 30¾@31c; 3, 30½c.

GRAIN GOSSIP.

State Crop Reports:

North Dakota: The past week was a very unfavorable one. A severe rain storm set in Tuesday morning, continuing Wednesday and changing to snow Thursday in most all parts of the state, accompanied by severe freezing weather. All low lands, especially in the eastern and southern parts of the state, are flooded and under water, and in some places the water was frozen enough to bear the weight of wild fowl. Hail also fell at some points, and in one instance was heavy enough to cut down what vegetation was up. Many fields of early sown grain that were up have been frozen down by the severe frosts that accompanied the storm, but as a rule, none of it was sufficiently advanced to be seriously harmed. There is no doubt, however, that many fields of grain that were seeded recently will be badly damaged by having water stand on them, and there is also considerable fear that the seed will rot, as the ground is very cold, besides being almost completely saturated with moisture. In the western and northwestern portions of the state, moisture was badly needed, and in those sections, as well as in the central portions, the storm was of benefit, the only detriment being the retarding of work for a few days.

Wheat is about all sown, although what remained to be sown at the close of the previous week has yet to be put in, and the same is true of all small grain, except that in the western portions some flax was sown during the week, and some corn planted.

Minnesota—The temperatures were low much of the week, the minimums approaching the freezing point in northern portions daily until the 13th, when the temperatures rose rapidly, so that they were 70 degrees or higher later in the day. There were heavy rains on the 9th, 10th and 11th, and at many points on the 12th, 13th and 14th. On the 9th snow fell with the rain at many points, and on the 11th there were local hail storms. The wet weather prevented nearly all farm work; so that the finishing of barley and flax seeding in central and northern portions and the planting of corn and potatoes in central and souther portions were stopped. All of the streams and lakes are full of water, and meadows and low-lying fields are flooded, with danger of injury from standing water, or from the deposit of soil washed from the hilly fields. In southern counties corn planting was going on well before the rains set in, but in all portions where corn is grown there is still much planting to be done. Spring wheat and oats are generally up well, but the growth of the small grains, grass and other vegetables is slow, though pastures seem to be doing well.

* * *

Chicago Record-Herald: One of the interesting situations developing out of the May corn deal is the tribute that has been laid on some of the corn traders. They bought corn in their own market for May delivery and hedged it by selling in Chicago. They then found themselves forced to pay high prices to settle their short sales here, with the certainty that the corn will be dumped on them in New York so near the end of the month that there will not be time to ship it back to Chicago to fill May contracts. Sales of contract corn are being made C. I. F. Buffalo at figures representing a loss of about 2¾c from the Chicago value. This corn will not be available for delivery in Chicago. It develops that the Armour house, instead of being short May corn here, as popularly supposed, is long here and short at New York. Valentine brokers sold most of the high-priced May corn here yesterday.

* * *

Logan & Bryan, Chicago: Wheat—Our market opened with very little change from previous change and for a time the price was well maintained. After that the market developed a sagging tendency and throughout most of the session wheat was distinctly under pressure which looked like selling of long stuff by some of the recent converts to the bull side, who had accumulated quite a line on the late advance. Reports from the Southwest are increasing and in some sections are causing some alarm at Southwestern points. The action of the market is perfectly natural. It has had a sharp advance, practically 7c in about a week, and this too, represents a recovery from a demoralized market. The short interest, especially the big fellows have covered their wheat and the bull leaders had accumulated quite a following. The cash demand is still urgent. All things considered we feel the situation is sound and favor purchases on set-backs from this point. The closing tonight was weak enough to warrant the belief of some lower quotations.

Corn—This market was strong throughout the session. The unseasonable weather prevailing throughout the corn belt scared some short covering and inviteI some outside demand on the theory that the plant is going in late, not making progress and bad weather delaying shipments. While the present weather conditions last and receipts continue small, we feel little headway will be made on the short side.

Oats—At no time in the session did this market participate in the pronounced strength displayed by corn. The cash situation shows a little something doing, Trade all through the session was on a very limited scale.

Chicago Inter-Ocean: Cash wheat is being moved in all directions and in a most unusual way. No. 1 northern recently shipped from Duluth to Buffalo is being sent back all rail to Minneapolis to fill May shorts. A cargo of Duluth No. 1 northern recently loaded for Buffalo will be diverted to Chicago, unloaded and sent to Minneapolis all rail, the railroads having announced a rate of 7½c a hundred from Chicago to Minneapolis effective May 18.

Edwards, Wood & Co.: Wheat—Somewhat better weather conditions are prevailing in the Northwest and some other sections of the wheat belt. Early cables were lower and receipts more liberal than for some time. Crop reports from the winter wheat states were conflicting today but, on the whole, a little better. There are indications of more steady prices, and, for the present a weather market may be expected, amounting to good scalping changes.

STOCK GOSSIP.

Logan & Bryan to Paine, Webber & Co.: Market closed irregular but shows very little change from yesterday. Union Pacific shared honors with St. Paul, but did not hold as firmly. It has been a very dull market. Steel issues were under pressure. Late in the session the pressure on this stock was quite urgent. The close shows a fair recovery from the low point. The market is slow and dull and we still feel like advising the purchase of good railroad stocks on set-backs.

* * *

Gates & Co., New York: People who will buy United States Steel at this level and put it away can sit still on it for a few months and get a very big advance in my opinion. The whole market is oversold and has been entirely professional for the last week. The biggest people in the street have been stadily accumulating th best stocks such as I. C., L. N., Atlantic Coast Line and Copper and U. P., all of which I believe are going very much higher. Commission houses generally have from 10 per cent to 40 per cent of their usual line of stocks while some of them are short a big line.

* * *

Walker Brothers to Paine, Webber & Co.: The market today was inclined to be very weak and liquidation marked. In the early trading there was heavy buying of St. Paul. In the afternoon after this buying had stopped, the market became weak and the declines general. There was little support and talk was quite bearish. Before the close there was some recovery, but the feeling was rather nervous.

* * *

Dick Brothers to Paine, Webber & Co.: The market was irregular. Early trading was rather strong with advances in St. Paul and Union Pacific and gave rise to numerous bullish rumors on the former. On the advance, however, stocks were liberally supplied and the market was later unsettled by unfavorable crop news and by weakness of the Steel shares The sharp advance in St. Paul was due chiefly to field and other traders, but there was a suspicion that the professionals were being used by more important interests.

IRREGULAR CLOSE

To Stock Market With Very Little Change From Tuesday.

Steel Issues Under Pressure Which Was Urgent In Afternoon.

New York, May 17.—Opening prices of stocks varied but little from last night and the volume of business was very small. Advances of ¾ in Wisconsin Central and of ⅝ in Union Pacific and the decline of a point in Cleveland, C. C. & St. Louis were the only changes of any note.

Simultaneous buying up of several recognized leaders gave an impetus to other stocks, and the entire market developed a fair degree of strength. Buying was spirited at intervals, but occasional realizing met the advances. St. Paul improved 2¼, to 178½, the preferred 3½; Northwestern 2¾, Pennsylvania, Union Pacific, New York Central, L. & N., Illinois Central, Colorado & Southern, the second preferred, Brooklyn Transit, Locomotive, Lead, Consolidated Gas, United States Rubber and Hide & Leather preferred rose 1 to 1½. Rock Island fell away 1, D. & H. 1⅞, and United States Rubber preferred 2½. The last named rallied 1½. Northern Pacific lost 1 and rallied 1½.

The United States Steel stocks were sold to a medium fraction below last night and fractional reactions in sympathy were general. Northwestern reacted 1¼ and Locomotive and L. & N. a point. Great Northern preferred and Bag lost 1. St. Paul was then marked up again to 179¼ and prices elsewhere hardened. Kansas City Southern preferred, Colorado Southern first preferred, Colorado Fuel and Paper gained about a point. Very few different stocks figured in trading. Prices yielded again at noon. Bonds firm.

The pressure against the United States Steel stocks sapped the energy of the bull speculation and discouraged commitments. United States Steel sold down almost a point to 30¾ and kindred stocks were weakened. Tennessee Coal losing 1 and Colorado Fuel as much. Northern Pacific fell back to 191. St. Louis Southwestern dropped a point and the preferred made a precipitate decline of 2⅝.

Speculation was dull and devoid of feature for the greater part of the afternoon. Stocks fluctuated aimlessly and were unresponsive to the heaviness of a few high priced stocks. Great Northern preferred sagged 3 and General Electric, Colorado Fuel and Steel Foundries preferred 1@1¼. Sloss-Sheffield hardened 2 and yielded ½ of it.

There was free selling of the metal stocks in sympathy with the weakness of United States Steel, which lost over a point. Tennessee Coal dropped 2½, Copper 1¾, and the Republic Steel stocks, American Car preferred, the Smelting stocks and People's Gas 1 to 1¼. Earlier gains in the railroad list were lost; Union Pacific and others falling a small fraction under last night. St. Paul reacted 1¾. Northern Pacific lost 2¾, Cleveland, C. C. & St. Louis 2⅜, and St. Joseph & Grand Island first preferred dropped 7. Room shorts covered and caused slight rallies and Copper made a full recovery. The close was unsettled.

COPPER GOSSIP.

Boston to Paine, Webber & Co. says: The market continued fairly strong today until near the close. Old Dominion had a sharp rise this morning to 26, but lost a point later in the day. One house sold 1,000 Shannon around 8¾. It is still a traders' market and will probably fluctuate up and down within a range of a few points.

THE COTTON MARKET.

New York, May 17.—The cotton market opened steady, unchanged to 3 points lower, which was fully as good as due on the cables, and a generally favorable weather map. There seemed active bull support, however, and with yesterday's sellers coverings in fear of manipulation, prices here quickly advanced to about 13 points over last night's level, following which the execution of selling orders from Liverpool, which some thought originated with local bills, caused a second reaction and the market in the middle of the morning was nervous and irregular about unchanged.

Cotton spot closed quiet, 10 points higher. Middling uplands, 8.30; middling gulf, 8.55. Sales, 656 bales. Futures closed steady; May, 7.86; June, 7.68; July, 7.78; August, 7.78; September, 7.83; October, 7.85; November, 7.92; December, 7.96; January, 8.00; February, 8.02; March, 8.06.

NEW YORK MONEY.

New York, May 17.—Money on call easy, 2@2½ per cent, closing bid 2 offered at 2¼. Time money was easy and dull; sixty days and ninety days 3¼ per cent; six months, 3¼@3½. Prime mercantile paper, 2½@4½ per cent. Sterling exchange firm, with actual business in bankers bills at $4.86.80@4.86.85 for demand and at $4.84.65@4.84.70 for sixty days; posted rates, $4.85½ and $4.87½; commercial bills, $4.84¾@4.85. Bar silver, 52½c. Mexican dollars, 40¼. Government bonds steady; railroad bonds steady.

COPPERS NOT SO ACTIVE

Demand For North Butte Does Not Absorb All Offerings.

The strong and lively market for copper shares yesterday was succeeded by a duller one today and there were no features. North Butte was traded in at $29 and 300 to 400 shares changed hands at that price. At the close today the demand had not been sufficient to absorb all that was offered at $29.

In the Bisbee group there was some activity in Calumet & Pittsburg at $32.50. Lake Superior & Pittsburg was bid in for at $40, but there was little doing in it. Pittsburg & Duluth is in a little better demand and now closes on bid prices instead of on offerings as it has for some time past.

Some Calumet & Arizona changed hands at $100. The notice of the usual quarterly dividend of 20 per cent or $2 a share on this stock is out. It is payable June 19 to stockholders of record June 3.

Black Mountain was traded in to some extent this morning at $3.05 and $3.10 a share.

UNITED IN MARRIAGE.

Miss Mamie Summerville and Henry Andre Wedded.

Miss Mamie Summerville and Henry Andre were married this morning in the French Catholic church in the West end.

The ceremony was a quiet one, attended only by members of the two families and a few friends. It was performed by Father Guillet at 9:30 a. m.

The young people left on the 1:55 train for a wedding trip to Minneapolis. On their return they will take up their residence in Duluth.

Mrs. Andre has been living with her mother at Thirteenth avenue west and Superior street, and Mr. Andre is the son of Joseph Andre, proprietor of the Western hotel.

WILL SPEAK HERE.

Lake Gallilee School Principal Coming to Duluth.

J. C. Buswell, the founder and head of the Lake Gallilee Summer Bible school at Mellen, Wis., will be in Duluth Saturday and Sunday, and will speak here, addressing the congregation of the First Presbyterian church, and also the Sunday afternoon meeting of the Y. M. C. A.

The institution of which Mr. Buswell is the head is along the lines of the Chautauqua school, but is devoted to religious lines entirely. It is situated on an inland lake twenty-five miles south of Ashland, and it is rapidly becoming the Mecca of Bible students in the Northwest.

PALMER IS LOST

Sunk In Collision With Harvard In 600 Feet of Water.

Len McNamara, a Duluth Man Was Engineer—No Lives Lost.

Sault Ste. Marie, May 17.—(Special to The Herald.)—The crew of the lost steamer Thmas W. Palmer was brought here early today by the steamer Harvard, and transferred to the steamer G. Watson French, to be taken to Detroit. The Harvard, which sank the Palmer, forty-five miles east of Copper Harbor on Lake Superior, at 8 o'clock yesterday morning, is badly damaged forward. All of her forward compartments are full and her bow nearly a complete wreck. Her cargo of ore must be lightered, as the steamer is now drawing twenty-five feet.

There was a dense fog on the lake when the two steamers came together. The Palmer was struck on the port side between tank No. 1 and No. 2, and was almost cut in two. Her crew had barely time to escape to the Harvard before their ship went down in deep water. They did not have time even to save their effects in their rooms, the nineteen men making a quick dash to get aboard the surviving ship in the collision.

The Palmer was a composite steamer, built of steel and wood, and was owned by William Livingstone and Ex-senator Thomas W. Palmer of Detroit, after whom she was named.

The Thomas W. Palmer has been making this port for several years and was on her way here at the time of the accident. It has not been learned whether she was light for ore or lo

TO ANNEX SAHARA?

Kaiser May Make Desert Blossom Like the Rose.

Partition of Morocco Said To Be On His Program.

London, May 17.—The temper of the people of Great Britain is perhaps more warm than that of the people of France in the matter of the kaiser's Moroccan adventures, though the feeling in France, according to all accounts, has been warm enough during the past few weeks. The warmth of the temper of the people of London and the provinces is due in a large measure to the belief that it is the intention of the German emperor to partition Morocco between Germany, France and Spain, the Atlantic seaboard falling as Germany's share.

Nobody seems to know what lies beyond in the general program of the emperor of Germany, but his movements certainly have not been conducive towards the general peace and welfare of Europe. About all that is known is that he regards Morocco as more rich in mineral resources than Augeria and that he is convinced that it is the duty of the nations of the continent of Europe to open the country up to the civilization and the commerce of the world.

One idea which has been advanced here, preposterous as it may appear upon the surface, has found many believers. It is to the effect that the kaiser really believes that the Desert of Sahara can be converted into a colony of the German empire and made to blossom as the rose by letting the waters in from the ocean. In this event the Atlantic seaboard of Morocco would prove a magnificent base of operations, giving Germany ports and harbors for Germany's North African empire.

This scheme of redemption of the Desert of Sahara is by no means a new one, but it has been a favorite theory ever since the beginning of great engineering works like the Kiel canal and the Simplon tunnel. And some of these engineers, it is known, have the ear of the kaiser, who is ever ready to listen to new propositions and who shows a familiarity with engineering projects which sometimes startles the engineers themselves.

This conquest of the Sahara has been the dream of adventurous spirits in continental Europe for more than a hundred years. Actuated by the Napoleonic philosophy, that that man must be a public benefactor who makes two blades of grass grow where one grew before, adventurers like Lebaudy have had themselves declared kings and emperors of Sahara, starting navies with steam yachts and running the risk of being declared pirates by reason of the flying of strange and unknown flags from the mastheads of their little toy navies. If the German emperor should take up the proposition, backed by the financial genius and the engineering skill of the German people, it is not too much to say that he might go a long ways toward realizing his heart's desire—that of a great colony peopled by persons speaking the German tongue.

That the Germans are hard pressed for land for purposes of colonization has long been recognized by the statesmen of Europe in general, and by the Teutonic statesmen in particular. With a population of nearly 60,000,000 crowded into a territory not so large as Texas in the United States. The subjects of the kaiser are constantly looking for new fields to conquer beyond the seas. All efforts to obtain a foothold in South America have failed, owing to the jealous persistency with which the people of the United States have clung to the Monroe doctrine.

Such lands as Germany possesses in the southern part of Africa are unhealthful, small in area and widely scattered. Russia's har experience with the Japanese in Asia does not lend much encouragement toward territorial aggrandisement in the Orient, and the German possessions in that part of the world are little more than coaling stations. But with the desert of Sahara turned into a garden, the German empire would be enlarged by the acquisition of at least 2,000,000 square miles, more than half as large as the United States, which has an area in round numbers of 3,500,000 square miles. The present population of the desert does not exceed 1,000,000, made up almost altogether of nomadic and semi-civilized tribes. Hence it could not be urged that the kaiser was doing any particular harm —it could be argued that he was really doing the world good by letting the waters of the Atlantic and the Mediterranean into this hitherto unconquered and unconquerable desert. It is known that the German bankers are taking an active interest in Moroccan affairs since the visit of the German emperor to that country. German investments are being made at a rapid rate in all sections of North Africa, all the way from Abyssinian railroads on the eastern extremity of the territory apparently coveted by the kaiser to Morocco on the west. The German consul continues in high favor with the sultan of Morocco, by whom he is received several times a day.

If this is the real meaning of the "dark procedure" and the hidden policy of the kaiser, the movement may yet make for peace instead of war, since it is difficult to imagine the nations of the world going to war for a stretch of sands, a barren waste that no one has cared for up to the present time. But there is a feeling of vague unrest throughout Europe because of this Moroccan incident, in more than one section the temper fast approaching the danger point.

This is evidenced by the fact that the English newspapers are everywhere printing extracts from obscure Alsatian journals which contain utterances like the following:

"King Edward of England had a conversation with President Loubet during his journey through France. England is evidently at the back of this whole affair; she is fond of sending others into the heat of battle while she herself remains in the background."

And another:

"England furnished the French with the spectacle of a meeting between King Edward and President Loubet. The public, it is true, saw very little of it, since the interview took place in the train while the king was passing through France. The counterpart of this interview was the meeting between Emperor William and the king of Italy at Naples."

And still another:

"England and France have effected a rapprochement. Whether they like it or not, they must reckon with Germany. The English do not like this, nor do the French. The French still recollect the last war and hesitate; but circumstances are stronger than men and the wise adapt themselves to circumstances."

PLEAS MADE FOR HOCH

Case of "Modern Bluebeard" About Ready For Jury.

Chicago, May 17.—With an appeal to the jury to inflict the severest penalty provided by law for murder, Assistant States Attorney Healy today finished his closing argument in the trial of Johann Hoch, charged with the murder of Mrs. Marie Welcker-Hoch. Counsel for Hoch, Attorney Isidore Plotke, then began his plea to the jury in behalf of Hoch. Attorney Plotke, made a strong plea to the German jurors. Judge Kersten's court room was crowded, many fashionably dressed women being spectators.

MALARIA AND FEVERS

Held To Be Traceable to Blood-sucking Diptera.

Birmingham, Eng., May 17.—At a conference held here of the Association of Economic Biologists, Mr. F. B. Theobald, president of the organization, read a paper on the subject of flies as disease agencies. Dealing first with the distribution of malarial fever by the mosquito, he observed that the enormous practical advantage of this discovery had led in many foreign parts to more healthy conditions. And there was no doubt the distribution of many more diseases would be traced to the action of bloodsucking diptera. There was a danger of carrying disease "bacteria" in the proboscis, and injecting it into the blood of men and domestic animals. These disease-carrying agencies were perfectly innocuous in districts in which the diseases did not recur, but at the same time there was always the risk of their carrying infection, acting as distributers, and also playing the part of intermediate hosts.

The particular diseases specified by Mr. Theobald were malarial, yellow, dandy and enteric fevers, cholera and plague. Mosquitoes would breed in pools, water tubs, empty tins and jam pots. While the nests existed there was always the danger of ague and yellow fever coming into this country. The best means of destroying them was by covering the surface of the pools containing mosquito pupae with paraffine.

The ordinary brown mosquito was a most ardent bloodsucker, and very fond of man's company on board ship or railway trains. Cholera and enteric fever bacilli were deposited by an ordinary house fly falling in milk or water, or whisky and soda.

DIVERT THE RIVER SCHELDT

Port of Antwerp To Be Made Largest In World.

Antwerp, May 17.—The burning question in Belgium today is how to extend the port of Antwerp in order to meet the exigencies of the times. It is expected that the proposed docks will cost at least $50,000,000, an improvement well calculated to stagger the minds of a people greater in numbers than the people of Belgium.

The windings of the Scheldt from the town of Lillo up to Antwerp have always been a bugbar of Belgian maritime trade, for it has been predicted by experts that in time the channel of the Scheldt between those two points would eventually become choked, and then goodby to the prosperity of the now third port of the world. To obviate this the government proposed, some twelve years ago, to cut an entirely new course for the Scheldt, which should pass inland at Lillo, and curve gently in a quarter circle to join the natural bed in front of Antwerp at the point where the river turns abruptly in front of the city.

This new course would be some six miles in length. The great objection to this, however, was the danger of the total obstruction of traffic during the progress of the work, a danger which the city feared would divert navigation towards Rotterdam and Dunkirk, both of which places would seize the opportunity, and permanently withdraw much of Antwerps' clientele. The plan just proposed by the minister of finance, Count de Smet de Naeyer, obviates this difficulty by cutting a canal to run parallel with the proposed new bed, so that this may serve the traffic while the new bed of the river is being excavated.

This canal is to be reached from the river at Krulschanz by three enormous sluices, 975 feet long and ninety-seven feet wide, deep nough to allow for the passage of the heaviest laden and the largest ocean liner afloat. Along one side of this marvelous canal there are to be nine open basins 4,000 feet long and 900 feet wide, besides dry docks large enough for all ocean liners, and a semi-circular, open basin, 1,660 feet in diameter.

Not until the canal and its open basins are completed and accessible will the work on the new bed of the Scheldt be started. Here the great dredging machines invented and used by Mr. Bates, the eminent American engineer who dredged the Mississippi, will be employed, and what with the newest improved excavating machinery, etc., engineers claim that the work can be accomplished within ten years, though to be on the safe side some say fifteen years. A large island will be formed between the old bed of the river and the new, which will be used for industrial purposes. On this land there are no less than three villages, which will be wholly expropriated by the government, and disappear entirely from the map.

Traffic at Antwerp has increased so rapidly that within the past twenty years the 6,005 feet of new river quays at the south river front, opened to traffic two or three years ago, have proved insufficient to relieve the congestion. The government has already begun work on two new docks at the north end of the port, directly connected with the river by a new sluice. These may be completed in two years, but even then the relief of traffic will be but small and quite inadequate. The new docks just referred to will connect directly with the proposed canal. When completed, Antwerp will have four times its present superficial area, and be the largest port in the world.

TEAMSTERS' PRESIDENT BLOCKS THE MOVEMENT LOOKING TOWARD PEACE

Declines to Arbitrate With the Team Owners Association.

Understood That He Would and Owners Chose Arbitrator.

Goods Are Now Being Delivered Without Much Interference.

Chicago, May 18.—President Cornelius P. Shea of the Teamsters' International union threw cold water today on all peace moves. He declared that he had not considered arbitration in any form between the Team Owners' association and the Teamsters' union, and that he had never agreed to arbitrate the question whether the teamsters should deliver to boycotted houses.

The declaration of Shea came as a surprise to all concerned, as it was explicitly stated last night and today that Shea had made such an agreement. At the time of Shea's statement the team owners were in conference, selecting their members of the arbitration board, which, they declared, both they and Shea had agreed to.

"I am not going to arbitrate the question of how they shall conduct their business," said President Shea. "There will be no back door settlement. When I am beaten I shall come out and say so."

This declaration on the part of Shea threw the whole peace move up in the air. Members of the Team Owners' association started out at once to find Shea and get some idea of how and where they stood. How the report originated that he had agreed to arbitrate was not explained by Shea, but he denied that he had ever made such an agreement.

Declaring no such proposition as the alleged arbitration of the boycott had been considered by the teamsters, President Shea called the story a subterfuge by the team owners to pacify the Employers' association.

"The teamsters are still running this strike," he said. "Do you think we are going to arbitrate the question whether or not merchants may deliver goods? That is what this proposition to arbitrate means. Do you think we all want to go to jail? We have not received any notice of an arbitration proposition. I have no right to make such an agreement as was printed in the morning papers.

"The teamsters' joint council is here to decide such matters. It has not taken any such agreement up. The team owners are talking a great deal. They are meeting to appoint their representative to act upon an arbitration committee. They have to do something to keep the Employers' association crowd off their necks."

A. J. Reed, a prominent member of the teamsters joint council confirmed President Shea's declaration that no agreement to arbitrate with the team owners had been made.

Like Mr. Shea, President Samuel Gompers of the American Federation of Labor professed today to be surprised to read in the papers that the teamsters had agreed to arbitrate the team owners proposition. He said:

"I have made no proposition to arbitrate this strike. I would not if I could and I could not if I would. All I can do is to pave the way, if it is possible, for a peaceful settlement. But the matter of settlement must be taken up by the officers of the two organizations—the Employers' association and the teamsters. Any statement that has been published, that I have proposed arbitration or attempted to affect a settlement is untrue. I have no authority to take such a course. The best I can do is to work for peace and try to bring the two opposing parties together. If I can find a plan by which they can meet, then they must pass their own judgment upon whether that plan is right or not. I wish to make it very plain that this is the limit of my power here. I am merely here endeavoring to find a way to bring about peace and then submit that plan to the two organizations."

Mr. Gompers said he would leave tonight for Dayton, Ohio, where some labor matters demand his attention, and that he will return either Saturday night or Sunday. He expects to meet representatives of all Chicago labor unions Sunday to review the situation.

Later, President Shea said: "We would be crazy to accept any such scheme as proposed. We are not through fighting yet."

"Can Mr. Gompers and Levy Mayer settle the strike?" Mr. Shea was asked.

"Mr. Gompers may bring us a proposition from the employers," was the reply. "If he does we will consider it; just as we are always ready to do. Of course any settlement would hinge on how many men could be reinstated."

"Does that mean that all strikers must be reinstated?"

"I have never said so," replied Shea. "The joint council will have to act on anything that is done."

Chicago, May 18.—Samuel Gompers, president of the American Federation of Labor and Levy Mayer, representing the Employers' association of Chicago, held a four hour conference last night in the Chicago Athletic club. When they separated they had not settled the teamsters strike, but they had arranged for another meeting today. Present also, in the club were Attorney C. S. Darrow and George Perkins, president of the Cigarmakers union. At the close of the long session between these men, Mr. Gompers made this statement:

"Mr. Perkins and I met Mr. Darrow and Mr. Mayer and went over the strike fully. We discussed its causes, results and present condition.

"No propositions for a settlement were made by any of the people present. We simply expressed the desire of the participants, that the matter be adjusted as soon as possible."

Aside from the presence of Mr. Gompers, the influence that gave greatest promise of a settlement of the strike today was an arbitration committee appointed by the Chicago Team Owners associations and the Teamsters' union. The committee is expected primarily to clear the controversy which for several days has threatened to result in a general strike. The team owners are a "side issue" in the strike situation and their attitude does not indicate the attitude of the Employers' association.

The team owners, however, have been conceded by many to hold the key to the situation, inasmuch as an attempt by the team owners to force drivers to deliver to the strike affected houses would apparently mean an immediate spread of the strike.

The question to be arbitrated, is the justification of the teamsters in refusing to make such deliveries. The arbitration proposal came from the Lumbermen's association. It was accepted by President Shea and the joint team owners organization. In anticipation of a favorable verdict large team owners prepared today to begin hauling to the strike affected stores. The arbitration committee consists of one team owner, one teamster and an umpire chosen by the other two.

That both sides were anxious to get together and settle the strike in some way was evidenced today when representatives of the team owners met and appointed their member of the arbitration committee. He was said to be Edward J. Hines, of the Hines Lumber company. It was said at labor headquarters that the teamsters also had met and had appointed William J. Gibbons, president of the teamsters joint council, as their member of the board. These two, after appointing a third, would, it was announced, proceed to settle the question to whether teamsters should deliver goods to boycotted houses.

Much secrecy was observed with reference to the meeting today between President Gompers and Attorney Mayer, counsel for the Employers' association. Information even as to place and hour of the meeting was refused. An aldermanic arbitration committee appointed by Mayor Dunne held a meeting today at the office of Attorney Mayer.

No change was noticed today in the method of conducting street traffic by the houses affected by the strike. There was no abatement of police vigilance and the deputy sheriffs manned wagons. Rioting, however, did not mar the transaction of business to any extent.

Alderman Devere, chairman of the city council "peace" committee, has not lost hope of being able to do something. He says that there are so many in a receptive mood that he would not be surprised if his committee in its conference with President Shea this afternoon, accomplished a step toward bringing the teamster to a middle ground with the employers.

HARRIMAN NO LONGER DIRECTOR OF THE N. P.

Ousted By the Hill Interests at Meeting of Stockholders.

New York, May 18.—After more than two years of delay resulting from the Northern Securities litigation, a shareholders' meeting of the Northern Pacific company was held today, and resulted in the election of new directors, to succeed E. H. Harriman, William Rockefeller, James Stillman, Brayton Ives, Samuel Rea, Eben B. Thomas and H. McK. Twombly.

The stock held in the names of Union Pacific interests voted for the new board. Most of the shares represented at the meeting were voted by a proxy committee, consisting of J. P. Morgan, Daniel Lamont, J. J. Hill and John S. Kennedy.

BIG CUNARDER PULLED OFF SHOAL WITHOUT ANY DAMAGE

New York, May 18.—After lying for thirty-six hours firmly embedded in the sandy bottom on Flynns Knoll, the shoal three-quarters of a mile off Sandy Hook, the giant Cunard liner Caronia was floated today just as the wreckers were beginning to abandon hope that she would be released before a portion of her cargo was removed. As the big ship glided into deep water and swung slowly half round, apparently uninjured from her mishap, a cheer went up from the passengers, who had been involuntary prisoners, almost within sight of the New York docks since last Tuesday. They had begun to chafe under their prolonged stay on the sand bar, and many had almost abandened hope that the voyage would be continued without the further annoying delays that transshipping would involve.

The Caronia came off the shore with her stern pointing out to sea, and at once started to steam back toward the city. It was supposed that this was because the narrow ship channel did not afford sufficient sea room for the big steamer to swing around, and it was believed that she would run up to Gravesend bay and once more turn her nose toward the sea and again begin the long-delayed voyage across the Atlantic.

On arriving at the entrance to the narrows, moret han a mile off Seagate, the Caronia stopped, and for some time lay still, without attempting to turn. Whether her hesitancy and return was due to some injury not apparent above the water line was not clear.

The Caronia struck on the bar during the dense fog last Tuesday afternoon. She had steamed away from her dock at the usual sailing hour, and was passing out the main ship channel through the thick mist, when another big liner and a little coasting schooner loomed up in the fog almost in her path. In his effort to avoid a collision the Caronia's pilot ventured too near the shoals, and the steamer ran hard and fast aground.

Later, it was announced at the office of the Cunard Steamship company that the Caronia would resume her voyage at 4:30 p. m. today, so as to pass over the Sandy Hook bar when the tide was almost full. It was also stated that the ship was not damaged by the accident. Capt. Warr sent a message from the Caronia saying that the ship was in need of nothing.

WOMEN'S GAMBLING HOUSE RAIDED

New York, May 18.—A gambling house for women has been raided in West Forty-third street by city detectives. Gambling tables, roulette wheels, racing charts and telephones were confiscated and the only man found on the premises was arrested on charges of conducting the place.

A dozen or more handsomely garbed women were leaning excitedly over the tables when the police entered. With screams of alarm they ran to all parts of the house. Some escaped over the roof, but the others were found in closets and in the coal cellar. They pleaded hard for mercy and after taking their addresses and reading them a severe lecture, the police allowed them to go. A big crowd which had assembled on the street jeered the women, as they passed out.

Apparently the place was primarily a pool room, but had been fitted up with gambling devices so the habitues might find diversion between the races.

ENTIRELY PERSONAL

Will Be Ambassador Tower's Visit to Hay.

Bad Nauheim, May 18.—Ambassador Tower's visit to Secretary Hay is entirely personal. The ambassador, who arrives here tomorrow, will spend the day with Mr. Hay and return to Berlin Saturday. It is understood that no political subject will be discussed, certainly not the question of a commercial treaty with Germany, as some of the German papers suppose. The health of Mr. Hay continues to improve. His elasticity seems to be returning. Prof. Groedel thinks Mr. Hay's weariness is disappearing.

CANDIDATES WOULD SUCCEED YERMOLOFF.

St. Petersburg, May 18.—Prince St. Chrybatoff, former president of the agricultural society of Moscow, Lieutenant-Governor Soukhomlinoff, once governor of Kerson and M. Goremykin, formerly minister of the interior are mentioned as likely to succeed Minister of Agriculture Yermoloff, whose resignation was announced yesterday. Prince Mestchersky in the Grashdanin says Yermoloff's downfall was due to his impractical views in regard to land tenure.

RURAL CARRIERS.

Washington, May 18.—(Special to The Herald.)—Don A. Doane has been appointed regular and Hiram O. Harris substitute rural carrier on route No. 2, at Hubbard, Minn.

EXCLUSION ACT

Renders the Making of Treaty With China Very Difficult.

Chinese Minister Talks Over Matter With Secretary of State.

Washington, May 18.—Sir Chentung Liang Cheng, the Chinese minister here, called upon Acting Secretary Loomis at the state department today to talk about the difficulties that had arisen in the effort to negotiate a new Chinese treaty. The minister deprecated newspaper agitation of the question at this time, as calculated to render abortive the efforts to compromise the present radical differences of opinion between the Chinese government and the department of commerce and labor. He did not explain his purpose in collecting testimony from Chinese in this country, and others who had been deported, relative to the execution of the exclusion law by agents of the department of commerce and labor, and it is not known to the department whether it is the purpose of the Chinese government to simply use this testimony to strengthen its hand in endeavoring to secure an amelioration of the existing inspection rules by negotiation, or whether it is the purpose to begin habeas corpus proceedings in the federal courts finally to determine the validity of the exclusion act.

OFFICIAL DENIAL

Given By German Government to Reported Occupation of Haichou.

Japs While Never Crediting Rumor Are Pleased By Disavowal.

Tokio, May 18.—The foreign office today announced the receipt of a communication from the German government pronouncing utterly unfounded the reports of the occupation of Haichou. The rumors of the German occupation of Haichou were never entirely credited here, but their disavowal was received with satisfaction.

"WHIPPING POST LAW"

Is Now In Effect In the State of Oregon.

Portland, Or., May 18.—The "whipping post law," pased by the session of the legislature last January, for the punishment of wife beaters, goes into effect today in this state. The new law provides that a man convicted of wife beating may be punished with whipping, not exceeding twenty lashes, but this is only an additional punishment and not the exclusive punishment for the crime. The old punishment by fine or imprisonment is still in effect under the new law.

According to the new law, the whipping is conducted within the walls of the county or city jail, and by the sheriff o fthe county jail, and by the appointed policeman as the case may be.

JEFFERSON'S

Birthplace Is Sold at Auction For $8,125.

Philadelphia, May 18.—Joseph Jefferson's birthplace has been sold at auction for $8,125. It is a three and a half story stone house at the southeast corner of Sixth and Spruce streets. Some years ago a plan was formed to purchase the property and hold it as a Jefferson museum, but the idea was dropped.

GOOD ROADS CONVENTION TO MEET ON JUNE 21 TO 24.

Portland, Or., May 18.—The official announcement of the national good roads convention, which is to meet in this city from June 21 to June 24, has been issued. According to the announcement, governors of the several states and territories, county road officials, mayors of cities, presidents of all commercial, agricultural, industrial, development, civic improvement, educational improvements, transportation and religious organizations are expected to appoint at least five delegates to represent their respective bodies in the convention. All such officials, together with members of congress and state legislators, are made ex-officio members of the convention.

HUNDREDS OF MILES STILL SEPARATE THE HOSTILE WARSHIPS

Rojestvensky Is Sailing North In Very Leisurely Manner.

Was Only a Hundred Miles From Annam on Tuesday.

The Intentions of the Russian Fleet Are Kept Secret.

Singapore, May 18.—The Russian fleet was in Lat. 13.30 north and Lon. 111.30 east (about 120 miles northeast of Cape Varella, coast of Annam) during the morning of May 16 according to a report brought here by the British steamer Hong Wan.

The German steamer Segovia sighted forty-two Russian ships forty miles from Cape Varella May 15 steaming slowly north.

The latitude and longitude in which the fleet was reported by the British steamer Hong Wan does not indicate that a naval battle is imminent. The Russians were, on May 16, only about 100 miles from the coast of Annam, and apparently heading for the waters of the island of Hainan, near which, according to a Hongkong dispatch, 150 junks, laden with provisions, were waiting for the Russian fleet. Even in case Rojestvensky decides not to take these supplies on board, of if the Hongkong report is correct, the Russian fleet, May 16, was still about 700 miles from the southern part of the island of Formosa, where it has been asserted Admiral Togo may give battle, and it is doubtful if the fleet can now make more than about 200 miles a day under the most favorable conditions.

Tokio, May 18, noon.—The reported departure of Vice Admiral Rojestvensky from Hon-Kohe bay northward renews the popular expectation of a naval action in the near future. It is believed that Admiral Rojestvensky, having filled his coal bunkers and resupplied his fleet, is now in a condition to assume the aggressive, if he so desires. It is the opinion of some that Rojestvensky may make a demonstration in the vicinity of the islands of Formosa and the Pescadores and then enter the Pacific, en route for Vladivostok. This is, however, purely speculative. Everything depends upon Admiral Rojestvensky's plans which, while as yet undisclosed, may include an extended stay in southern waters.

It is reported that the contractors who supplied the coal and provisions to Rojestvensky approached the French colonial officials prior to the arrival of the Russian fleet, and arranged a rendezvous at Kamranh and Hon-Kohe bays. Confirmation of this report is, however, not obtainable.

ADMIRAL BIRILEFF

Will Succeed Rojestvensky In Case of Victory.

St. Petersburg, May 18.—The fears expressed here yesterday that owing to the reported nervous break down of Admiral Rojestvensky the Russian fleet in the Far East would lose its present commander-in-chief turn out to be unfounded. Captain Zilotti, the aide-de-camp of Minister of Marine Avellan, today authorized the statement that Rojestvensky has not applied to be relieved from duty. However, the condition of the Russian admiral's health continues to be a source of anxiety. It is confirmed that the report that he had applied to be relieved may have arisen out of the virtual decision in view of the condition of Rojestvensky's health to send Vice Admiral Birileff to Vladivostok where in the event of Rojestvensky's success in the coming battle, Birileff will take over the supreme command of the Russian naval forces in the Far East and occupy a post similar to that of the late Admiral Makaroff at Port Arthur and of Admiral Skrydloff at Vladivostok.

Emperor Nicholas today summoned Vice Admiral Birileff to the palace.

FLEETS JOINED MAY 8.

Saigon, May 18.—A junction was effected May 8 by the squadrons of Vice Admiral Rojestvensky and Rear Admiral Nebogatoff. It took place outside of territorial waters. The vessels started seaward May 14, going in an easterly direction.

SUPPLIES FOR RUSSIANS.

Hong Kong, May 18.—A special correspondent, who recently proceeded from here to Kwangchau bay observed at 11 o'clock at night on May 16, 150 deeply laden junks presumably loaded with provisions for the Russian fleet anchored southwest of and twenty miles off Cape St. John. The junks exhibited signal lights which were extinguished upon the steamers approach to Kwangchau bay.

PALA, THE OUTLAW, IS SAID TO BE DEAD.

Manila, May 18.—News has been received that Pala, the outlaw Moro chief, who has been pursued the past two weeks on the island of Jolo by troops, under the command of Gen. Leonard Wood, has been killed. His few surviving followers are being trailed by the troops. At the begining of the uprising Pala was reported to have a following of 600 well armed men, most of whom have been killed.

PRESIDENT PARRY SUCCEEDS HIMSELF

Re-elected Head of Manufacturers' Association By Acclamation.

New York Chosen For the Next Place of Meeting.

Atlanta, Ga., May 18.—The national association of manufacturers today re-elected D. M. Parry president by acclamation, chose New York city as the place for the next annual convention, and decided that the association shall be incorporated under the laws of New York state.

The name of Mr. Parry was reported by the committee on nominations for the presidency. The names of William Carroll of New York, and D. A. Tompkins of Charlotte, N. C., were presented on the floor of the convention, but after a long and somewhat spirited debate the two gentlemen withdrew their names.

For the honor of having the next convention, San Francisco was the principal competitor, Saratoga and Wheeling, also presenting invitations. F. P. Stillman of New York was re-elected treasurer and vice presidents were named, one from each state. The executive committee will consist of the vice presidents from the twelve states having the largest membership of the association, these twelve to select six members at large, who, with the president and secretary, will constitute the entire committee.

Atlantic, Ga., May 18.—The opening address at today's session of the National Association of Manufacturers was by George H. Seabury of New York, who discussed the revision and the remedy. Secretary Metcalf of the department of commerce and labor, greatly fatigued, arrived today and is under the care of a doctor. It is possible that owing to his illness, his address, announced for this evening, and the reception planned to be given this afternoon may be cut out of the program.

D. M. PARRY.

A NEGRO CONFESSES TO FIVE MURDERS

Sent Letter to Chief of Police—Arrested Later In Cincinnati.

Chester, W. Va., May 18.—In a letter to the police authorities of this city, a man signing himself A. Johnson, and claiming to be a companion of Henry Williams, who was recently executed in Roanoke, Va., has confessed to five murders and numerous robberies. His reasons for writing are that other men have suffered for his crimes and his conscience troubles him. He says he has been converted. The dates and manner in which the different crimes were committed, as furnished in Johnson's letter, are more complete than the police records, and the authorities believe its authenticity.

Acording to Johnson, he killed a woman at Chester, W. Va., two Italians at Uniontown, Pa., a man at Hyndman, Pa., and a woman at Martins Ferry, Ohio. He also claims to have assaulted a woman at Staunton, Va., for which crime, he says, another man was lynched.

Cincinnati, May 18.—Albert Johnson, colored, was arrested in Newport, Ky., today for sending threatening letters through the mails. The officers express the belief that he is the same man who wrote to the Chester, W. Va., chief of police, confessing various crimes, for which other men had been, or were about to be, punished. A postal card to James Moore, son of Capt. Luke Moore, threatening him with death, was turned over to the United States postal authorities and led to Johnson's arrest. Johnson acknowledged writing the postal, and was then asked:

"Did you write that letter to the Chester, W. Va., chief of police?"

"Yes, sir, I did, and every word in that letter is true," he responded.

"Why do you make these voluntary confessions?"

"Because I am now converted and I intend to lead a better life."

"He continued: "I had three other men spotted to kill in Cleveland, but since my conversion I have abandoned that idea. I informed the men that they had close calls for their lives and that religion was all that had saved them."

RUSSIANS ARE WATCHING BRITISH

St. Petersburg, May 18.—The speech of the British premier, Mr. Balfour, in the house of commons, May 11 on the defense of India continues to attract the attention of the press. The Novoe Vreyma expresses open misgivings in regard to British activity in Afghanistan and Persia, and doubts the sincerity of some of the English expressions in favor of reapproachment between England and Russia. The paper says:

"We will let Great Britain alone in Afghanistan if she keeps her hands off Persia, where our interests are commercial and industrial and not political. We have no desire for territorial conquest. Great Britain, on the contrary, dreams of making the Persian gulf an English gulf, and of uniting India and Egypt by railroad. Russia only insists that Persia remain free and independent."

In the same connection the Novoe Vremya refers to the growing activity of the British in the Caucasus, where they have a private telegraph line and own oil wells, mines, etc., and whose increasing number of colonists almost amounts to a peaceful conquest."

BANK CLERK STEALS FOR SICK SON

Des Moines, May 18.—Carl M. Spencer, a former trusted employe of the Des Moines National bank was indicted by the federal grand jury today on a charge of embezzlement and for alleged fraudulent entries in the bank's books. The amount of Spencer's alleged shortage and for which he is being prosecuted will not exceed $5,000. There is a pathetic story in connection with Spencer's confession, which he made prior to the indictment. For many years annually he had been taking an invalid son east for medical treatment. He had been unable to meet the expenses incurred by the medical attention and to save the boy's life he took money from his employer. Another clerk, suspected of the theft for which he was subsequently dismissed from the bank is completely exonerated by Spencer's confession.

AT THE SCRATCH

BY F. H. Lancaster.

(Copyright, 1905, by Daily Story Pub. Co.)

Hein, mon ami, "Au fait et au prendre," as they say out yonder. When it comes to the scratch it takes very little to make trouble between a man and a woman. But, yes, and a whole lifetime is not long enough to set things right again. That's what the teacher knew.

Madeline was mad, yes. So was Sevari. And the old folk who had been banking on their doing the sensible thing were in no good humor. And all because of a little flirtation at a chopping. Sevari should have know better than to call a pretty girl to account. But, what will you have? Sevari wat hot-headed—and he had his house ready. Why should the girl that was so soon to be his wife have eyes for any one else. Not only eyes, but laughter and dancing and much quiet talk.

En bien, the book agent thought he had quite a mash on that little 'Cajan maiden. He did not know that she was making a fool of him for the fun of the thing. Men never do know that until afterwards. In her heart, Madeline had meant no harm. No, she just wanted to see Sevari go stand by the door and smoke cigarettes like he was smoking somebody he didn't like—book agents, may be. It was his chopping so she knew he could not get on his horse and go home before she was ready for him to go. Ha, and she forgot that a man may seek comfort in an anisette jug as well as in cigarettes. And, mon ami, though the Lord alone knows what isn't in anisette, everybody knows that there is whisky in it. Ha, lots of it—raw and hot. After the tenth taking of counell with the jug the situation became very plain to Sevari. He would tell Madeline what he thought of her, and he would take that book agent out in the woods. Tomorrow, yes.

But on the morrow, the book agent was not to be found and Sevari had a sore memory of how he had taken Madeline roughly by the arm demanding: "What you mean by das? Ha?" And of how the first had flashed into Madeline's eyes. Mon dieu, when a girl gets mad, the game's up.

That was in the fall. Ha, it was a bleak fall for Sevari, and a bleaker winter. But yes, he set his jaws and swore he would not forgive—or, which is the same thing—ask to be forgiven.

The book agent with his high hat had vanished, it is true. But there were others—many others. Every Sunday the pine knots blazed in the mud chimney and every Sunday the hide bottom chairs in wide semicircle on the snow-white floor seated more than one of the handsomest boys on the bayou. Sevari heard.

"Madeline have beeg time, yes," reported his tormenters. "Beeg time, yes. Go to all the ball, go to horserace, go to church." The fastest trotting mares, the newest sulkies were ever at her service—and Sevari sulked at home.

"I 'link me damn," swore his father, "You have more fight dan das." And his mother said: "Das Madeline Mentier, sje aint das only gal on Bayou Bien-vieu, no."

Sevari said nothing because a 'Cajan son may not tell his parents: "Va, tout les diables," and that was the only thing he felt moved to say. For the rest the youths after a vicious round or two let him alone and the maidens having smiled in vain, fell to scoffing. They nick-named him "La figure du mauvais jour." Ha, an image of evil days. Ha, Sevari himself did not know what was the matter with him. A physchologist would have found interesting psychic phenomena in a state of mind that knew it could have what it wanted for the asking and could not—or would not—ask. Madeline knew nothing of physchology, but she knew what was the matter with her lover. She said simply to her simple soul, "Sevari, he's mad, yes." But she did not say even to her soul that she missed the merry follow. His laugh, and the nice way he rolled his cigarettes. Neither did she say that she was wrong to flirt with the book agent. A Cajan girl—if she has the spirit does not admit she is wrong. After marriage, she will sow the cow-pea, sack the coal, scrub the floor, and bear the blame always. But before marriage? Non. She is queen, then.

So Madeline tossed her head and winter went and spring came. Spring comes early out there on the bayou. By the first of February the blue birds the mating and the corn sprouting. Ha, and the new sap is running up in the veins of the pine tree and in the veins of man, also. Madeline got gayer, and Sevari got glummer. Then down at the store—the first week in February—he heard the news. The book agent was coming back. It was the post master told him. And it made him mad. So mad he didn't see school teacher in the road and ran into her. Then he had to stop and apologize. He had gone to school to "teacher" when he was a little fellow and she had trained him up the way he should go. "Taught him how to handle his hat, as well as to read and write—ha, better. So he stopped and apologized and she took his apology gently. "Tetcher" was a little old maid who had lived out heaven-knows how many heart aches—lived out but not forgotten. She had taught a long time on the Bayou. She had taught Sevari his letters. She knew all about his scrap with Madeline and knew all about how empty a life may be when the heart goes out of it. She had been watching, waiting for a chance to help.

"I haven't seen you for a long time, Sevari," she said kindly.

"No'm, I been haul de log up de river." He turned to walk beside her. This was more pyschology, but Sevari didn't know or didn't try to know why he did it. For the first time in three months he had looked into eyes that were neither inquisitive, nor sarcastic, nor reproachful, nor sarcasmocking, nor reproachful, for the same reason that a thirsty ox goes on drinking, he went on looking while teacher talked about his young steers and the new corn and would he burn coal again this summer? Then quite as a matter of course she was asking if he had heard of the new fashion—the valentine? Ha, that teacher didn't mean to lie, no. She mean the new fashion for Bayou Bien-vieu. Sevari woke up.

"Valentine? Coomme ca?"

The teacher explained. "You put a one cent stamp on it and drop it in the post office. And the girl has to guess who sent it. That's the fun. If you would like to send one, I have some little pictures and you can get some white paper and we will make it tomorrow after school with mucilage." The teacher was getting rattled. She was an old maid. And for more than a month she had been guiltily conscious of the doves and rose bud and white ribbons she had been laying up against this opportunity. Ha, but Sevari was delighted and went home whistling. The first time in "t'ree mont." The next afternoon he was on hand with white paper enough for a dozen valentines and he and teacher set to work sticking the white doves and pink rose buds in rich array, leaving a circular space in the center of the page.

"And what you going put in him?" Sevari demanded.

"Why, there is where we must put the verse."

"Ha? Comme ca? How's das?"

"There is where you write how sweet the girl is, or how bright her eyes are, or how much you love her."

Sevari looked wild. "I can't write das, me."

"I'll write it for you. Of course it doesn't matter because you sign no name and nobody knows." She began scanning the selection she had brought, appealing to Sevari for approval.

But the boy shook his head. At the violets that were blue, at the arrow in the heart, at the love like a bird, at them all.

"Well, what do you want to say," queried "tetcher."

"Je dis, je veux mek marry."

"Say you want to marry her."

"Qui. Right now tomorrow, 'Twas tomorrow"—

"But," began teacher gently.

"Please, you write some like dis. But you don't say violet, he blue. No, You say, 'je veux mek merry.'" Comme ca?"

It was tetcher's turn to look wild. She did indeed comprehend, aghast at the comprehension. "I can't write French. But wait, I can try. And while Sevari bent over her in an agony of anxiety, she wrote:

"Et je veux ami
Tu et moi mek marry
Mek marry, ma chere ami
Mek marry sans deia.

Well, it was the funniest valentine that was ever mailed on Bayou Beinvieu—or any bayou. The teacher laughed softly as she went to bed that night. But Sevari, he didn't laugh. Na, he didn't sleep either.

When teacher had sealed up the beautiful valentine and without asking any questions just wrote Miss Madeline Mentler, he got red, but he felt prond—yes, and a little glad that there was no name.

Now a hideous doubt assailed him. Suppose Madeline should think it was that book fellow that sent it. Ta, tout les diables. He couldn't risk that. Better risk being found out himself. So toward midnight he arose and found his lumber pencil and taking the precious thing from under his pillow, searched by moonlight for the arrow pierced heart in one corner of the envelope, and under the heart he wrote his name. He could sleep after that. Ha, but in the morning that Sevari, written with a lumber marker, looked mighty big in the early light. The postmaster, he thought, would be sure to see it and he'd tell, tout le monde. Sevari looked and those letters got bigger and blacker. Ha, he wanted Madeline to know, but he didn't want everybody to know. There was no way to get it off. Ha, but there was a way to beat that postmaster—he would take it to her himself.

Madeline had got up early to do some washing. There was nobody around to see whether she sang or not as he set about it soberly, putting the clothes into the big pot with an unsmiling face. Ha, 'twas a sad face, yes. Sevari saw that. Then he was on her side of the fence.

"I got something here for you, me."

"Some'ting for me?" Coquetry went down before curiosity—and one other thing.

"Yes. Dey call him val-en-tine. Tetcher help me mek him. Ga la," and the rara avis was in her hands. Madeline stared at the big white envelope, at her neatly written name, at the black Sevari under the arrow pierced heart.

"Why don't you look inside—chere?"

It was a long time since he had called her that. Her fingers trembled, so did his, but between them they got it open.

Ha, mon ami, when it came to the scratch—to that scratch—she could forgive. But yes, "au fait et au prendre," as they say out yonder.

PITTSBURG ORCHESTRA

Fraulein Schoen—Rene of Minneapolis Talks of It.

In view of the visit to this city, next Monday, of the Pittsburg orchestra, with Emil Paur as director and Mme. Johanna Gadski as soloist, the following interview with Fraulein Schoen-Rene of Minneapolis, well known to musical people of this city, will be of interest here:

"Every body knows Mme. Gadski, the great opera singer. She charmed the people in Minneapolis in operas as well as in concert. The last time her audience was so enthusiastic over her singing that I heard many people say they thought she was greater than Melba, Nordica or Sembrich.

"I am glad she is singing the scene from 'The Flying Dutchman,' as the critics in the East say she is the best and most satisfactory Senta of today. She is a great favorite here and does not need any introduction for the Wednesday evening concert at the Auditorium.

"'But tell me something about the Pittsburg orchestra. Why do Eastern critics rank this organization above the others in this country? Pittsburg is a great business center and I would think that the millionaire would be more interested in coal mining than music.'

"Fraulein Schoen-Rene smiled and, looking at the inquisitive reporter, gave the following explanation about the coal city orchestra:

"In the first place, Pittsburg, with its enormous wealth, is cultivating the highest in art and science. When the orchestra started, Mr. Carnegie gave the Auditorium as a present to the organization, under the strict conditions that every man, and, above all, the conductor, should be a musician of high standing. This alone assured the future success of the Pittsburg orchestra.

"Symphony is the highest expression of classical musical form, and can only be brought to the right understanding by a body of thorough cultured musicians and a leader with good taste, a highly musical training, combined with natural talent, practical experience in all directions of orchestra playing and reading, and executing such music. All this is combined in the conductor of the Pittsburg—Emil Paur."

"What nationality is Paur?"

"Paur is an Austrian by birth. By nature gifted with great talent, educated under the greatest musicians, practiced orchestra playing and reading under such great masters as Hans von Bulow, whose favorite he was; Johannes, Brahms, Richard Wagner and others. I myself have seen Paur as concertmaster under von Bulow, and also conducting von Bulow's orchestra."

"'Is a leader such a great factor for the success of an orchestra?'

"'It certainly is, but a good musical leader would never conduct a poor orchestra. He would not stand a single man, basso, flute or drum, who is not equal to the best concert master. He only conducts those musicians with musical training and good, flawless instruments and must devote his time only to classical music.'

"'Does not such an organization and conductor cost Pittsburg a lot of money?'

"'I should say so! Emil Paul receives an immense salary and the orchestra, which is the highest paid in the United States, is a great financial success.'

"The Pittsburg orchestra concert, with Mme. Gadski as soloist, will be a great surprise to Minneapolis as I can safely say that such artistic phrasing, shading and detailed effects have never been heard before in Minneapolis.'"

THE SOCIETY WOMAN

Defended From Accusation of Neglecting Children.

A young society woman of Chicago, who played the part of nurse girl and governess in several cities, declares that "American women care no more about the bringing up of their children than if they were so many cattle." No superficial study of American life by a society woman, or anyone else, can serve as an excuse for such a statement. Society women are not invariably the most attentive mothers. Nevertheless, there never was, probably, a time when society women gave more attenton to their children than they are giving now. There never was a time when the average American woman showed more devotion to her children that she is showing now, says the Chicago Inter-Ocean.

There never was a time when American mothers, rich and poor, studied the needs of children more carefully than they do now that children may be properly fed, sensibly clothed, and intelligently trained. It is notorious that within the last ten years there has been a steady improvement in the standard of fashionable families as regards child-bearing and child-training. There is abundant room for more improvement, of course, but this does not alter the fact that much progress already has been made. How many young matrons today rejoice in their children! How many give up social functions that they may give personal attention to their babies!

Anybody who cares to look beyond his own nose in his own neighborhood knows how erroneous must be the statement that American women care no more about the bringing up of their children than if they were so many cattle.

FORMER CONSUL GENERAL

To Turkey Nearly Asphyxiated In His Office.

Columbus, Ind., May 18.—Z. T. Sweeney, ex-consul general to Turkey, was almost asphyxiated Tuesday afternoon in the bath room in his office building.

Thinking the heavy odor of gas was caused by a leak in the heater, he turned it off and jumped into the tub.

A gas pipe had burst, however, and the fumes increased so fast he soon was overcome. His stenographer had heard his struggles and when a porter burst the door open, Sweeney apparently was dead.

Physicians worked with him an hour and a half before he showed signs of consciousness. There are hopes for his recovery, but his condition is serious.

There is a tax on carelessness—and it cannot be "sworn off." When you buy something in the poorest market, because you failed to read the ads. you pay such a tax.

HAPPENINGS IN DAKOTAS

Red River Valley University to go to Grand Forks.

NORTH DAKOTA.

Fargo—After a protracted session the trustees of the Red River Valley university, a Methodist institution, at Wahpeton, Wednesday voted to wind up its affairs at Wahpeton and locate the institution at Grand Forks, the seat of the state university. This is a victory for Dr. Robertson, president of the institution at Wahpeton, who inaugurated the agitation to affiliate with the state university and was seconded by President Merrifield of the state university. Grand Forks is to guarantee by subscription $50,000 within sixty days.

Williston—A barber shop on South Main street was set on fire by some unknown person. There was a strong northwest wind which carried the flames on down Main street, setting fire to five different business houses.

The Arlington hotel, a fine brick building, was in great danger, but by having plenty of help it received only a scorching. Some of the buildings were insured. The total loss amounts to about $40,000.

This is the fourth fire which has been started in the last three weeks. The Methodist church was burned about a week ago. Other buildings have been found on fire. There seems to be a firefiend who is determined to burn the city.

Grand Forks—The infant child of Joseph Marshall of Tabor, Minn., died in its mother's arms in a drug store here Wednesday afternoon. A physician had just handed the father a prescription.

SOUTH DAKOTA.

Pierre—T. E. Blanchard and G. C. Barney, employes of the state land department, have returned from Rapid City, where they went with Attorney General Hall to push cases in regard to that department in the Black Hills section of the state.

Two classes of cases were considered, on which hinge a large amount of the state lands in that section of the state. One was in regard to squatters' filings on school sections in the forest reserve, where squatters have gone upon either sections 36 or 16, and have tendered their filings at the land office after the lands were surveyed. In this test, the land office ruled with the state, that such filings cannot be accepted, although many such filings have beeen placed on the records in the past.

The other class of claims, in which no ruling was made by the local land office, was in relation to mineral lands on the state tracts. Under the law it is contended that the state has no right to sections 36 and 16 in case they are mineral lands. As a matter of fact, there are none other than mineral lands in the Black Hills.

The gasoline boat, City of Fort Pierre, has made the round trip to Sioux City and brought up a large cargo of freight. Capt. Senechal intends to make regular trips for this purpose.

John Gnadt of Chapelle Creek, near De Grey, has secured a good artesian well at a depth of about 1,400 feet. There is no gas with the flow, and the water is reported to be but slightly impregnated with the salts which are to be found in the artesian water in this city.

Vermillion—The juniors of the state university have begun a movement to raise funds for the erection of a Y. M. and Y. W. C. A. building on the campus. At a mass meeting of the two societies, Mr. Pasons of Mineapolis addressed the students, and volunteer contributions in the sum of $1,200 were made toward the building. All told, the students alone have subscribed $1,800.

There now seems little doubt but that enough money will be obtained to erect the structure. The students hope to get the money by subscriptions from citizens of Vermillion, the friends of the university throughout the state and the faculty and students. The amount desired is $10,000.

The new armory and gymnasium on the university campus is ready for occupancy. It has not been formally accepted by the board of regents, but probably will be at an early day. One part of the construction is faulty, as has been demonstrated by the recent heavy rains. The roof leaks in places. This was the objection that the Iowa legislators had in regard to the armory. They said that it was "penny wise and pound foolish" to construct such a nice building and then top it off with a single roof.

Sioux Falls—Persistent efforts to unravel the mystery surrounding the disappearance of F. D. Mills, a wealthy Sioux Falls contractor, while on a visit to Kansas City, have thus far been fruitless. When he left Sioux Falls he had $2,500 in currency. Of this sum, $1,500 was money of his own. The other $1,000 had been borrowed from a local bank.

The missing man had a contract for the erection of government Indian school buildings at a point in the western part of New Mexico. The work was almost completed and Mr. Mills left Sioux Falls for the purpose of making a final visit to the scene, expecting to pay for matrial used in the construction of the buildings preliminary to closing his contracts and receiving his money from the government.

He registered at the Blossom house upon his arrival in Kansas City and it has been ascertained by the police that after leaving the hotel Mills proceeded to the station and exchanged his excursion ticket, good for twenty-one days, for a passage on the Santa Fe road.

A few days after Mills left Sioux Falls his wife received a letter from him. It bore the Kansas City postmark and evidently was written at the Blossom house. The missing man stated in the letter that he had purchased his ticket for Santa Fe and was to leave that night for New Mexico.

A careful canvass of the hospitals and sanatoriums and even insane asylums in Kansas City fails to reveal any trace of the missing man. There is a belief in some quarters that he was seized with a sudden fit of insanity and boarded a train and perhaps went to some distant place.

The most generally accepted theory is that he was enticed into some resort and after being robbed was murdered to cover up all traces of the crime.

Furbie Howard, about 20 years of age, is entitled to the distinction of being the first escaped prisoner from the penitentiary who has voluntarily surrendered himself to the prison authorities so he could complete his term.

Young Howard made a daring escape on July 24 last and has since been employed at various places, including Lansing, Mich., and Memphis, Tenn. The strangest part of the story, the truth of which cannot be questioned, is to the effect that during the time he was a fugitive he came to Sioux Falls four times for the purpose of visiting his mother. On each trip he managed to elude the vigilance of the authorities.

Howard will endeavor to secure a pardon a few days before the expiration of his prison term in order that he may be restored to full citizenship.

DOINGS IN MICHIGAN

Sixteen Year Old Farmer Lad Drowned While Fishing.

Baraga—John Olson, aged 16 years, son of Edward Olson, who resides on a farm nine miles northwest of Baraga, was drowned while fishing in the Sturgeon river. His boat capsized, and although the boy was a good swimmer, he went down in twenty feet of water. His body has not been recovered.

Sault Ste. Marie—Eleven hobos rounded up by the police were brought before Judge Couch at the Soo. He ordered that they be run out of town, and the sad-eyed bunch left the court room inquiring for the location of "Canady." The Soo police are considering putting the stone pile into commission again, in order to abate the hobo nuisance.

Escanaba—The special assessment for the Ludington street pavement at Escanaba cannot be made until Judge Stone hands down a decision in the case of the city against the street railway company. Until this decision is forthcoming it will not be decided whether the company will lay a double or a single track. Should the company find it necessary to lay a double track, the part of the paving cost to be borne by the property owners would be less than in case a single track is laid. The company has refused to take any action with the view of double-tracking the street until the court's decision is made.

Stambaugh—Adam Vingo, trammer boss at the Riverton mine at Stambaugh, was accidentally killed by falling through a winze.

Menominee—The crew of the tug Evans, which has been engaged on the Menominee river collecting the boom sticks of the old K. C. company and in raising the sand sucker belonging to the Menominee River Sugar company, were poisoned by eating canned tomatoes served by the cook. The men ate the tomatoes for breakfast, and shortly after Capt. John McCauley, Engineer Levi Peterson and Fireman Tom Le Veque were taken very sick with cramps. The engineer and fireman were unable to leave the boat, but the captain managed to get downtown and summon a doctor, who at once pronounced the attack potomaine poisoning, caused by eating the canned tomatoes. The men are recovering now, but it is said that they have cut canned tomatoes out of their bill of fare for the future.

ASSAILANT

Of Father Schell Likely to Be Convicted.

Sioux City, Iowa, May 18.—Logan Lambert, the Homer, Neb., saloonkeeper who assaulted Rev. Father Joseph Schell, was bound over to the district court at Dakota City, Neb., for assault with intent to inflict great bodily injury. This is a penitentiary offense. Lambert's bond was fixed at $700.

The case had been adjourned twice before, and Attorney Warner, for the defense, asked for another continuance, but Judge Eimers overruled this motion.

A crowd of Lambert's friends came over from Homer and industriously piled the state's chief witness, outside of Father Schell, with liquor with the evident intent to incapacitate him for purposes of testimony giving. The witness was Robert Holman, who maintained his balance well enough to testify unequivocally that the new Lambert enter a stall with the priest and hit the latter.

Father Schell, who has been resistlessly antagonizing the lawless element which is debauching the Winnebago Indians and who secured the indictment of the defendant Lambert by the federal grand jury at Omaha, went on the stand. He testified that Lambert approached him in friendly fashion and said he would like to talk with witness about his (Lambert's) case in Omaha. They went into the rear of the livery barn and Lambert said:

"What chance have I got, Father Schell?"

The priest said he turned his head in meditation for an instant, when Lambert hit him, unquestionably holding something in his hand. Father Schell fell stunned, though a large sturdy man, and Lambert kicked him in the face, fracturing the prostrate priest's jaw in two places.

There is very widespread interest in this case, as the assault stirred up the righteous wrath of the entire section, which has heard of Father Schell's courageous work in endeavoring to free the Winnebago Indians from the grasp of the soulless grafters.

AROUSES IRE

Taft's Proposal to Buy Material In the World's Markets.

Cabinet Members Say It Is Not "Protective or "American."

Washington, May 18.—A difference of opinion has developed in the cabinet in regard to the policy of buying supplies for the Panama canal abroad, as well as at home, and also steamships to operate in connection with the Panama railroad, which now belongs to the government. The matter was discussed at considerable length and it is possible the president will finally decide to remit the matter to congress.

Secretary Taft and the executive committee of the canal commission carefully studied the question and decided it would be wise to buy materials where they could be purchased the cheapest, whether in this country or abroad, and that two more steamers should be secured for use between New York and Colon. Objection to this was made by several members of the cabinet, who wish to rigidly observe the protection policy.

It has been suggested that the administration would be playing into the hands of the Democrats and Socialists by following the suggestion, because by operating a railroad and steamship line the government would be brought into competition with private carriers and that the Republican party would be seriously embarrassed in the next campaign.

Secretary Shaw had a conference with Roosevelt and is believed to have advocated a reversal of the policy recommended by the secretary of war.

After the cabinet meeting Secretary Taft declared he had not changed his mind about the desirability of buying the machinery and other materials for the canal work where they could be secured to the best advantage, or about the necessity of acquiring ships for the trade between New York and Colon. He would not discuss the political features of the case or enter into a discussion of the policy from any standpoint.

On Secretary Taft's side of the controversy, it was said he was taking the present course in order to "put it up to congress."

The important question of policy is yet to be determined. If the Isthmian canal commission is not bound by any restriction from congress as to where it shall purchase machinery, material and supplies, then it would seem to be its duty to contruct the canal as cheaply as possible and so buy what it needs where it can get it cheapest.

"Every time a large contract is awarded to a foreign maufacturer or dealer there is an outcry on the part of the American unsuccessful competitor. If congress approves the policy favoring American manufacturers and dealers, even if it increases the cost of construction, then it seems to me only just that it should declare this policy by law and lay down a rule which this commission can easily follow."

Congress took no action on this suggestion, but now the canal commission is about to carry out a policy treating American and foreign manufacturers and contractors on the same footing. A number of senators and representatives have not been slow to express displeasure. What they lacked in nerve they now make up in criticism.

Congressman Grosvenor of Ohio, for years the leading members of the ways and means committee in the house, said:

"This proposition to buy ships abroad may be the result of our laggard policy in reference to building up the American merchant marine. We permitted our merchant serivce to decay until we have no ships and no trained sailors to man them if they are purchased abroad, and we are wholly dependent upon foreigners.

"The country would rather pay a little more for something that is made at home, furnishing employment for our workingmen and giving them better pay than their neighbors abroad. If the government is to be a complainant against prices that are the result of this employment of American labor at American wages it will certainly furnish a theme for some interesting deliberations over the tariff."

BIG STEEL CONTRACT.

DAINTY SUMMER DISHES.

Quickly Prepared, Healthful and Most Delicious to the Taste.

To those of our readers who are accustomed to eating Malta-Vita cold with cream, and in no other way, we wish to submit some suggestions from Mrs. May Diets of Boyne City, Mich., who is evidently an artist in dainty dishes. Her recipes, which we publish herewith, are the kind that "make your mouth water." Says Mrs. Diets:

"I certainly think Malta-Vita is one of the very best foods manufactured, and am decidedly a fast friend of it. I enclose three of my favorite recipes for serving Malta-Vita.

MALTA-VITA CUSTARD.

Beat five eggs and one-half cup sugar well together, add 1 quart sweet milk and a pinch of salt, season with extract of lemon or the juice of one fresh lemon, which is better; bake in a moderate oven. When about half done, stir carefully in one cup of Malta-Vita. Serve warm or cold as preferred.

A QUICKLY PREPARED DAINTY.

Into half a dozen or more dessert dishes place about three level tablespoonfuls of Malta-Vita to each dish, with two tablespoonfuls of thick cream each; cover with a stiff meringue. Select enough large, juicy strawberries to allow about three to each dish, roll lightly in sugar and drop carefully at a tasteful distance apart from the meringue.

ORANGE FLAKE.

Sprinkle about two tablespoonfuls of Malta-Vita into a good-sized salad bowl, then a layer of peeled and thinly sliced orange; repeat until dish is nearly full, having last a layer of orange sprinkled thickly with shredded cocoanut. Place over this a heavy plate and let stand for 20 minutes. This gives Malta-Vita time to absorb the orange juice. Remove plate and cover the whole with a meringue."

Malta-Vita is the Perfect Food, made from the best white wheat that grows and the finest malt extract. It contains no glucose, is easily digested, even by the weakest stomachs, and is rich in body-building nutrition. Malta-Vita has its own natural sweetening and is deliciously crisp. It doesn't belong to the tasteless variety of flaked whole wheat foods. Now 10 cents, at all grocers. Same high quality, same big package as when it sold for 15 cents.

BIDDEN BON VOYAGE

Father Feehely Is Presented With Trip Ticket and Purses.

Sons of Norway Celebrate Nation's Day of Independence.

Father Feehely, pastor of St. James Catholic church, who left for Ireland this afternoon, carries away with him feelings for his parishioners and friends at West Duluth which he could not well utter because of how greatly he was affected by them. His farewell talk last night, when a large crowd gathered at St. James hall to tell him good-bye, was touching, and when the congregation of his church presented him with a round-trip ticket and a purse, and the children of the Sunday school presented him with a purse, Father Feehely was fast reaching that state of mind where he could speak scarcely above a whisper. Then to make the matter more difficult for thanks, Miss Mollie Doyle presented a purse for the Society of the Blessed Virgin, and Miss Mary Harvey presented one for the Altar society.

Father Feehely replied as best he could under the circumstances, his manner, more than his words, conveying his gratitude to his parishioners. Rev. John F. Kelly made the presentation for the congregation, and drew attention to the fact that the ticket presented has a return coupon, as a hint that the departing father had better not stay too long. Rev. Fathers Bilbon and Gamache, respectively from Eveleth and Hibbing, were present and gave addresses.

A quartet, consisting of Mrs. M. Hayden, Miss B. Martin, M. J. Fillatrault and J. M. Lauermann, sang and the rest of an informal program was made up by Misses Effie Brotherton, Clara Kinney and Mrs. M. Hayden, who sang solos, Harry Hayden who recited, and Thomas Doyle who danced. The program, though informal, was excellent, and the whole evening was enjoyable. Father Feehely left this afternon for New York and will sail from New York for Ireland on May 24. He will be absent about three months.

INDEPENDENCE DAY.

Sons of Norway Fittingly Observe the Occasion.

The celebration last night of Norway's independence day was general throughout the city, but nowhere was it more enthusiastic than in West Duluth. There, in Great Eastern hall, 300 people gathered to hear the program which was given, under the auspices of Fram lodge, Sons of Norway. National music and appropriate speeches by leading Norwegian-Americans were given, and much enthusiasm was aroused. L. J. Nordheim, delegate to the grand lodge, gave the address of welcome, in the name of the lodge, and gave a short explanation of what the day means to all liberty-loving sons of Norway.

M. Wessenberg, editor of the Duluth Scandinav, spoke of the conditions which led to Norwegian independence, and of the remarkable development of Norway since it asserted its independence. He prophesied the still further separation of Norway from Sweden, and predicted greater things, commercially, for Norway as this break develops.

Rev. A. F. Elmquist of Bethany Lutheran church gave an address on "The Rising Generation in the Development of Liberty." Rev. Elmquist spoke, in opening, of what an American is—the mixture of many nationalities, all enjoying equal rights before the law. It is a poor American, he said, who would be ashamed of his ancestry. Passing to the part of the young in the development of liberty, he made a number of points. The young are the people for pioneer work; they are the ones who like to go in untrodden paths. Difficulty has been said to be the nurse of greatness, and the young enjoy encountering difficulties and surmounting them. He quoted Dryden's words as significant: "O, give me liberty, for were even Paradise my prison, still I should long to leave her crystal walls." The young, too, are courageous, always showing that courage and steadfastness that are necessary to the procurement and retaining of liberty. Liberty is the strongest passion in life, and in the young the passions are always strongest, so that liberty is nursed among them. In conclusion, he declared that obedience to existing good laws is liberty, and that disobedience means only slavery.

The Gauken Singing society gave several Norwegian patriotic numbers, and appropriate selections were played by Westgaard's orchestra. J. C. Wessenberg gave a piano solo, and Hans Linnes recited.

The program closed with the singing of a patriotic air by the audience.

WALKER DEVELOPING.

John Foucault Returns With Good Words For Town.

John Foucault returned last night from Walker, Minn., where he has been for the past six weeks fitting cut boats for Leech Lake service for the Buhl Lumber company. Mr. Foucault says there are several steamers on Leech lake and business in general there is very good. The Buhl Lumber company, whose headquarters are at Aitkin, are putting in about 60,000,000 feet of logs into the Mississippi. The Red River Lumber company will send about 11,000,000 feet across Leech lake, after which they will be loaded on cars and will be taken to the company's mill at Akeley, Minn.

At Walker, which is a good deal of a sumer resort, a large scow 20 feet wide and 68 feet long is being built, also boat houses, etc., for sporting purposes on Leech lake. Walker is building an electric lighting plant and the dynamos and foundations are now set. The town is improving wonderfully.

While north Mr. Foucault visited for a few days with his brother, Paul, at Bemidji.

May Protest.

It is said that owners of property in the vicinity of the site chosen for the new reservoir of the water department at West Duluth are about to protest against the city using up half of the streets abutting the site for the reservoir. They claim it will not only be unsightly, but, leaving streets of only half the ordinary width along the sides of the reservoir, will tend to make the property surrounding it less valuable. The plans are for a 10,000,000-gallon reservoir and the advertising for bids for its construction will soon begin.

Pretty Wedding.

A pretty wedding took place last evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. John Berggren, 306 South Fifty-sixth avenue west, when their daughter, Marie T., was married to Carl J. Dahl. Rev. K. E. Forsell officiated at the wedding, Miss Annie Peterson was bridesmaid and F. Berggren was best man. A reception was held after the wedding and the young people will go to housekeeping shortly.

WEST DULUTH BRIEFS.

Rev. and Mrs. K. E. Forsell have returned from their honeymoon, which they passed at Mr. Forsell's farm, Knutsberg, which is forty miles north of West Duluth. They now reside at 521 North Fifty-sixth avenue west.

BIG BOOM IN BUILDING ON

In New York Due to End of Labor War.

Chicago, May 18.—William E. Curtis says in a New York special to the Record-Herald: It will not be long before every inch of Manhattan Island will be covered with buildings except the parks and the streets. If you will go up into any of the high places today and look over the city you will see nothing but roofs from Harlem river to Battery Park, with a green spot in the center where Central Park lies. Beyond the Harlem and the Bronx, the two rivers which make the city of New York an island, building is going on almost as rapidly as within the old limits, and when you arrive by the New York Central or the New Haven road it is difficult for a stranger to tell when he has reached the city.

Just now there is a great boom in building—the greatest on record. Never in any other city on the earth was so much money put into brick and mortar, marble and granite, steel and tile construction as will be expended this season in New York. This is largely due to the termination of a long strike in the building trades. It lasted nearly a year and cost the members of the Carpenters' union alone more than a million dollars in loss of wages. A settlement has just been made after prolonged negotiations between the board of governors of the Building Trades' association, which is composed of contractors, and officials of the Brotherhood of Carpenters, which is a part of the American Federation of Labor. This settlement affects not less than 90,00 skilled mechanics and artisans, directly and indirectly, and promises a peaceful and prosperous year in building circles. The result appears in the applications for permits for new buildings, which during the month of May have been unprecedented, and it is estimated that not less than $250,000,000 will be expended this season. While the strike has not been general, and has involved only a portion of the building trades, it has, nevertheless, been the cause of continual apprehension and uneasiness; has frightened timid capitalists and has compelled many architects to tuck plans for new buildings in to the pigeon-holes of their desks, which they are now sending to the contractors for estimates.

TO PREVENT COLLISIONS

Wireless Signaling From Train to Train Is Proposed.

Chicago, May 18.—Wireless signals flashed through the air from train to train may before long become the means of preventing railway collisions.

The management of the Alton is preparing to conduct extensive experiments with a new system of wireless signalling. Althought no experiments ever have been made on moving trains, it is stated that the successful working of the models which have been carefully examined by the Alton officials gives them reason to hope that a great advance will be made toward safety in train operation.

The system is the invention of two Detroit men. General Manager Goodnow of the Alton is authority for the statement that in working the models the electric current which is used to give the signals is capable of deflection in any direction, much as a person would deflect the ray from a mirror.

The apparatus will be attached to the tops of the engine cabs and will be circular in form and not more than two feet in diameter. By a proper arrangement of the mechanism messages will be sent to and from trains on the same track and will not affect the instruments on the cabs of engines running on other tracks.

Whenever two trains are within twenty miles of each other the signal will be sent automatically through the air and will ring a bell and show a red light in the engine cabs. Should the mechanism get out of order the cab bells also will be rung. It is said, therefore, to be impossible for two trains to approach each other on the same track nearer than twenty miles without full warning being given to the engineers. The mechanism will operate whether the trains are going in the same or in opposite directions.

If need arises the engineer may so arrange his apparatus that he can give a signal to an approaching train on another track.

SEARCHING FOR IDEAS

John Johnson of Stockholm, a Railroad Man, In Duluth.

John Johnson of Stockholm, Sweden, general manager of the Frovi Ludvika Railway company, who attended the international congress of railroad men at Washingaon, arrived in the city yesterday to make a study of the methods of loading, transporting and unloading iron ore. He spent part of the day at Two Harbors and inspected the ore dock system of the Duluth & Iron Range. Today he is visiting the Great Northern Allouez bay ore docks.

Mr. Johnson, while a native of the North of England, has lived in Stockholm thirty-three years. His road is the owner of iron ore properties, and delivers annually at the port of Oxelosund about 750,000 tons of the commodity for export to England and Germany. The road also owns mines in Lapland, but these are reached by the government railroad.

RALPH CONNOR STIRS WOMEN

Of Winnipeg Who Are Indignant at His Accusations.

Winnipeg, Man., May 18.—A big revival meeting was held here Tuesday night at which committees were named for the furtherance of God's kingdom on earth, and Ralph Connor fervently spoke on the duties of the hour. In the meantime, a reaction has set in against the preacher-author for his fearless words of the last two Sundays. The robust and pure women of the "upper ten" are indignant at his accusations, and actual facts and figures are likely to be demanded from the well-known writer and preacher at an early date.

Connor's further deliverances will be listened to with increased interest. His words, however, have had the effect all over the West and the Citizens' League for Social Purity, for the cleansing of the City of Brandon, met the city council there and fulminated against the powers of evil.

The head master of the collegiate institute said bad women were responsible for race suicide. It was the boast of these women that if it was not for the patronage of the married men of Brandon they could not exist. He stated, that if the names of the frequenters were published there would be twenty-five divorces instituted in the city in a week.

Mayor Fleming took another view and referred to Winnipeg where women ran at large and carried vice all over the city.

An important ruling was made in the king's bench in regard to offenses against women. The case was McEwan vs. McGill, and the plaintiff brought an action against the defendant, a neighbor, for the seduction of his daughter, and obtained a verdict for $1,000. The defendant appealed and the full court dismissed the appeal with costs.

MUST LEAVE SCHOOL.

Teachers Have No Sympathy With Barefoot Boy.

New York, May 18.—Shall children be required to remain away from school during the warm weather because they have no shoes? This question has been agitating the mothers of the East side since the beginning of spring. Scores of them are too poor to buy shoes for their children, and on account of the prejudice against the bare foot of a boy or girl, the education of the children often has been neglected. Today no principal is ready to invoke a blessing upon the heads of barefoot boys, as did the poet years ago.

"In our class," said Miss Crane of public school No. 22, "children are taught it is proper to wear shoes and stockings. The board of education does not require it, but it is generally understood that shoes are as essential as any other clothing. No child would ever think of doing such a thing as coming to school without them. If one should do so, I don't know what measures would be taken."

"I never made inquiry whether wearing shoes was compulsory," said one East side mother, "but my children say that unless they have shoes they will be sent home. When they have none they will stay home. The idea is outrageous. Poor people cannot afford shoes in warm weather."

STEEL CARS STRONG.

They Go Through a Collision Without Damage.

Pittsburg, Pa., May 18.—For the edification of 300 delegates of the International Railway congress and as many special guests, George Westinghouse caused a railroad collision Tuesday afternoon at the interworks of the railroad which he owns, and showed how easy it was to do it all without damage.

A train composed of fifty new steel cars was made up, and to it was attached an ordinary locomotive. The train was then cut into three pieces, two of which were allowed to stand on an idle track.

The third portion, to which the engine was attached, then moved down the track a distance of about two miles, and rushed back at a speed of forty miles an hour.

It crashed into the second section and the latter bumped into the first. Instead of the cars piling up on the tracks in a twisted mass, there was just a quiver and then the three sections, which had been automatically reunited, settled down as if nothing had happened. All the cars were equipped with what is known as the "friction draft gear," which absorbs strains.

COMMITTEE ON RACES

Consider Feasibility of Drainage Canal Waterway.

Chicago, May 18.—A congressional delegation consisting of ten members of the house committee on rivers and harbors arrived here today to begin an investigation regarding the feasibility of a scheme for construction of a deep waterway connecting Chicago and the Gulf of Mexico. The party was met at the station by Trustee Frank Wenter and Engineer Isham Randolph, representing the drainage board of the sanitary district of Chicago and was taken on a trip down the drainage canal to Lockport.

Chicago, May 18.—The body of A. L. Kroeschell, a wealthy manufacturer of boilers and machinery has been found by dredgers at work on the Chicago river. NOT MADE PUBLIC

Census Statistics Are Not Open to Public Inspection.

Citizens Need Not Fear to Answer All Questions.

Fearing that Duluth citizens and other residents of St. Louis county will be loath to answer the rather pertinent questions put by census enumerators, R. D. Haven, who has charge of the census work for St. Louis county, has sent the following communication to The Herald, in order that it may be known that the records are not for public inspection or private use:

"Feeling confident that you are interested in having a careful and correct enumeration of the people in this city, therefore, I feel free to ask your co-operation against the omission of any person within the city, and I know that you fully appreciate what it means to secure that result. We must have the assistance from every source that it is possible for us to get.

"First of all, the people should be informed what is required of them and for what purpose. No doubt, a great many are not aware of the fact that the questions that they will be asked by the enumerator mean nothing more or less than the record for statistics of our state, and that these reports are not for public inspection or private use.

"If this fact can be made clear to the people, so that they will not be afraid to make the proper answers, it will be a great assistance to the enumerator, and very materially help the census bureau.

"The next question is to make the proper check upon the reports of the several enumerators, and to do that we must have such lists of names and addresses as will insure the enrollment of every person.

"I have taken this matter up with the different churches and schools, and thus far have been forutnate in securing their co-operation along this line; and by the time they are ready to begin the enumeration, which is the first of June, I hope to have such lists from the organized bodies and private corporations and all other sources that can be obtained for the purpose of establishing a proper check against errors and omissions made by the enumerators.

RIVERS ARE STILL RISING AT LA CROSSE

La Crosse, Wis., May 18.—The two Wisconsin tributaries of the Mississippi—the Black and La Crosse rivers—and the Minnesota tributary—the Root river—all having their confluence with the Mississippi at this point, are still rising, and grave danger is expected, and especially in case of further rainfall.

The Mississippi river continues to rise slowly, and the local forecaster predicts a still further rise of two and one-half feet, which will cause the water to flood a large residence section of North La Crosse.

TRIAL FOR MURDER.

Plea of Self-Defense Made By the Accused.

Benson, Minn., May 18.—The May term of court opened here Monday. Among the most important cases is the murder trial of J. Schields, who shot and killed C. C. Maxin at Kerkhoven some time ago. A quarrel rose over a horse race that took place shortly before the tragedy, in which each put up his horse as stakes. Schields won the race, and when he called to take the horse away Maxin refused to give it up. A day or so after Schields called at the harness shop of Maxin's and carried a shotgun. A few words took place between them, when Schields raised his gun and shot Maxin, after which he drove to Kerkhoven and gave himself up. When notified what he had done a party of men went to the shop and found Maxin dead, and besides the gun shot wound his throat was slashed, having been done with a sharp knife. Schields denies having cut his throat, and some carry the idea that he did it himself to end his suffering. It promises to be an interesting case, as it is understood that Schelds will claim it was done in self-defense.

BLACKMAIL CHARGED.

Criminal Actions Filed Against an Omaha Editor.

Omaha, Neb., May 18.—Morrs S. Algoe, who recently came here from Michigan with his wife, has filed criminal action against Edward Rosewater, the veteran editor of the Omaha Bee, and John J. Donahue, chief of police of Omaha, both being charged with blackmail. Mr. Rosewater is also charged with being unduly intimate with Mrs. Algoe.

The criminal complaints against Rosewater and Donahue were filed after Algoe had been arrested on an information filed in criminal court by Rosewater charging him with blackmail and an attempt to extort $1,750 from Rosewater.

Rosewater says he went to Mrs. Algoe's room by appointment to close a business deal pertaining to the renting of space in the lobby of the Bee building for a cigar and confectionery stand; that he was there but seven minutes, and that Algoe is simply trying to blackmail him.

Rosewater says that Algoe came to his office several times and demanded money. Thereupon Algoe was arrested on a blackmailing charge.

To Succeed Morton As Secretary of the Navy.

President Again Says He Wants No Third Term.

Chicago, May 18.—A Washington dispatch to the Tribune says: A definite decision has been reached in the case of the secretary of the navy, Paul Morton, fixing the date of his retirement from public life. He announced the other day he would not retire until fall. He was mistaken. It is intended he shall leave the cabinet within six weeks. This meets the approval both of Secretary Morton and President Roosevelt.

Secretary Morton does not like official life, but he refused to resign while under fire, and the president sympathized with him. What will happen te Secretary Morton after he leaves the cabinet is not known, but he will not be prosecuted in connection with the Santa Fe case while he is in the cabinet. The interest of the administration ceases at this point. If the grand jury should indict him it will be as Paul Morton and not as the secretary of the navy.

How near Secretary Morton is to leaving the cabinet is indicated by the fact that his successor is said to have been determined upon. The portfolio, according to rumor, will be offered to Victor H. Metcalf, secretary of commerce and labor. It is a post Secretary Metcalf always has wanted. He was slated for the secretaryship of the navy when the president first offered him a place in the cabinet. But the president also wanted Secretary Morton as an adviser.

Secretary Metcalf has done excellent work in his present office, and has satisfied the president. He was a member of the naval committee of the house when he served in congress, and evinced an intelligent interest in the development of the navy. He believes with the president in a big navy.

Who will be Secretary Metcalf's successor probably will be settled shortly by the president. James R. Garfield, commissioner of the bureau of corporations, has an excellent chance of being promoted. He has handled the corporation matters firmly and equitably and has made few influential enemies. He is from Ohio.

There will be a general reconstruction of the cabinet. Mr. Moody has stated that he will not remain much longer as attorney general, and it was reported today that Secretary Taft would be transferred from the war department to the department of justice. But there are bigger questions at this moment under the secretary of war than in the attorney general's office. The president believes Secretary Taft is in the right place and wants to keep him there.

Secretary Taft has no desire to change. He said so today. Secretary Hay has recovered his health, and the president is delighted that he will remain secretary of state. Secretary Shaw is expected to remain in the treasury department until next February. Secretary Wilson and Mr. Cortelyou will stay with the president. Mr. Loeb, the private secretary to the president, has been talked of for a place in the cabinet, but the president desires he shall stay where he is.

Secretary Hitchcock is reported to have announced that he will get out as soon as the land fraud cases are disposed of, but the proceedings are expected to take some time. Mr. Loeb is regarded as one of the strong men of the administration, and has exercised an influence in governmental affairs not generally understood.

The president proposes to stop all talk of a third term in spite of the recent declarations that he will not accept renomination or that he desires to name his successor in the White House. It was announced authoritatively today the president would make a trip through the south next fall, and this will be his last trip until he retires from public service.

There is no doubt that in determining to restrict his journeys between Washington and Oyster Bay or some special point where he wishes to make a specific declaration, the president was moved by the experience he had recently in the West. He had said emphatically he did not wish a third term and meant it. But there were some people who did not know him, and who thought it would flatter him to speak to and before him of the universal demand that he should continue in office. But he has come back to Washington more determined than ever, if that is possible, not to consider another term and not to give countenance to talk of this character.

The president intends to avoid permitting an opportunity to any one to broach the subject, and decided the best way was to abstain from expeditions through the country. He arranged some time ago to go South and he will keep this engagement.

Determined not to give countenance to efforts to continue him in office, and equally determined not to have anything to do in urging any one upon the country as his successor, the president proposes to let the people decide who shall be president from 1909 to 1913. So long as a man is in his cabinet he must not carry on a presidential campaign. This is one reason why Secretary Shaw is going to leave. He wants to be free from the embarrassments of officialdom to prosecute his claims upon the country.

Secretary Taft is sitting on the lid of his own aspirations. His ambition is to be chief justice of the supreme court, but events are sweeping him to the front as a candidate for the nomination of the Republican party. President Roosevelt likes and admires Secretary Taft immensely, but he will not raise a finger for or against him.

The extra session of congress is fixed definitely for Oct. 16. Senators and representatives who called at the White House have been impressed with the earnestness of the president's purpose to have legislation which will solve the railroad rate question and enable the raising of sufficient revenue to meet the expenses of the government. Mr. Elkins, chairman of the interstate commerce committee, called at the White House and told the president what his committee had done, and indicated that it proposed to recommend some important amendments to interstate commerce laws. The president was not backward in telling Elkins what he wanted.

GOES TO JURY.

Ranta Suit Against Maccabees Is Deliberating.

The suit of John Ranta against the K. O. T. M. supreme court, to recover a judgment for $1,000, representing the amount of a policy in the order of which Ranta claims to be the beneficiary, was given to the jury this afternoon, the testimony and arguments having been completed this morning and early in the afternoon.

In Judge Cant's room a jury is listening to the testimony in the alleged timber tresspass case of Henry Olson et al against the Red Cliff Lumber company. The amount of the claim involved is several hundred dollars.

Through error yesterday it was stated that C. O. Baldwin argued to the jury in behalf of Dr. Shipman in the alleged malpractice case instituted by David McTaggart. It should have been stated that Howard T. Abbott made the argument, Mr. Baldwin having assisted him in the case.

THE HIGHEST BID FOR CHADWICK HOME, $35,000

Cleveland, May 18.—At the sale today by trustee in bankruptcy Loeser of the Chadwick homestead, the highest bid was $35,000, made by ex-Judge W. W. Boynton on behalf of the Savings Deposit Bank and Trust company of Elyria, O., the holder of a mortgage, which, with interest, amounts to about $43,000. The property was appraised at $40,000. A lot in Lincoln avenue, was bid up to $1,650, while the third piece offered, a small lot valued at $200 had one bid of $150. Dr. Chadwick was present at the sale.

THE PRESBYTERIAN ASSEMBLY OPENS

Winona Lake, Ind., May 18.—The general assembly of the Presbyterian church opened today, and in point of attendance, including commissioners and active workers in the church, it ranks well with any former meeting of this legislative body.

Rev. Addison Henry, the retiring moderator, preached the opening sermon.

The question which overshadows all others before the assembly, and one which will be approached with great caution, is that of taking the Cumberland branch into the general assembly. While the church in the North has voted in favor of the proposition Presbyterians in the Southwest are against the proposition.

ONE LIFE LOST

In Burning of Fond du Lac Sawmill.

Milwaukee, May 18.—A Daily News special from Fond Du Lac, Wis., says: The new sawmill of Moore & Galloway burned today, entailing a loss of $40,000; insured for $25,000. Joseph Eitte, an employe, was burned to death. The origin of the fire is not known.

THE PAPER TRUST TO HANDLE ENTIRE OUTPUT

Milwaukee, May 18.—Considerable time was spent by the lawyers and representatives of the General Paper company in a private conference. When the hearing was resumed a circular to the trade was put in evidence. In this circular, the General Paper company announced that after July 5, 1905, the General Paper company would handle the entire product of all the mills represented.

THE YACHTS NOT YET SIGHTED AT NANTUCKET

Newport, R. I., May 18.—The yachts which started yesterday from Sandy Hook in the trans-Atlantic race, have not yet been sighted from Nantucket shoals lightship, off which they were to make their first turn.

At noon the lightship reported that no yacht had been sighted. The weather at that hour was clearing. The wind was blowing from the northwest at the rate of eighteen knots an hour. The sea was moderate.

THE McKINLEY MEMORIAL.

Canton, O., May 18.—Within two weeks the actual work of construction of the McKinley monument for which the people of the nation have given about $500,000 will begin. Architect Magonigle expects the memorial will be completed within two years.

SOME AMERICAN NAMES.

The second edition of Mr. Gannett's "Origin of Certain Place Names in the United States," just issued as a bulletin by the geological survey, has 334 pages, and makes a large addition to the funny, the fantastic, the picturesque and the commonplace names that appeared in the first collection, says the New York Sun. We should include in the commonplace the thousands of names of honest burghers whose patronymics were embalmed in the town names with the addition of "ville," "ton" and "burg." Not more than half of the Jeffersons, Hamiltons, and Adamses are called after the illustrious bearers of those names; they commemorate worthy pioneers who founded the settlements.

The Forty-niners who built a tent town in a day were looking for a name when they saw the word "Bakery" painted on a shingle. They spelled the word backward and Yrekab is now the county seat of Siskiyou county, Cal. Some Pennsylvanians and Yankees happening to meet on a goodly site, decided to stay there, and the village they founded in Wesetern New York still bears the name Penn Yan. Anthony's Nose in the Highlands is admired by all tourists on our noble Hudson, but few of them know that the name of the fine mountain commemorates the remarkable protuberance on the face of Anthony de Hooges. Saint Anthony Falls, on the Upper Mississippi, were so named by a French missionary because "of the many favors received through the intercession of that saint."

There is no end to the Marys, Margarets, Adas and other names of wives, sweethearts and sisters who were introduced into our geographic nomenclature by their ardent admirers; butt here was neither affection, poetry nor imagination in giving to a township in Illinnois the name Sublette, simply because the contract for grading that part of the Illinois Central railroad was sublet at that place.

Montana has a Hellgate river, which was named Porte de l'Enfer by Father de Smet, because when the Blackfeet Indians played the mischief among the settlers they reached them by way of the river. Tradition says that Coney island received its name from the number of rabbits found there. One day Commodore Perry put into a recess in Lake Erie with his fleet, and the place has ever since been known as Put In Bay. The name Dobbs must be rather uncommon in Sweden, but they say it was a Swede of that name who owned a ferry across the Hudson, hence the name Dobbs Ferry in Westchester.

Our forefathers were in all their glory when they monkeyed with foreign words. The euphonious name of Elsinore, a little city in Riverside county, Cal., is merely a corruption of the Spanish El Senor, meaning "the gentleman." But they touched the limit at a village in Arkansas, which appears on the maps as Darysaw, the early English transliteration of the French Des Ruisseaux, signifying "of the streamlets."

QUEER RUSSIAN WAYS.

Millions of sunflower seeds are consumed by Russians. They are either roasted with a little salt or eaten raw, says the Chicago Chronicle. The peasant women often have deep dents worn in their teeth by constantly cracking the brittle shells. They become very expert at this. A seed is placed between the teeth and, without being further touched by the fingers, is split, the tiny kernel eaten and the two light husks sent flying to the ground. On Sunday afternoons piles of husks are to be seen in a semi-circle around the doorsteps or benches where persons have been sitting gossiping, each man or woman provided with a pocket full of sunflower seeds. Whole fields of sunflowers are cultivated expressly for the edible seeds. The Russian watchman has an ingenious arrangement for letting thieves know when he is coming and giving them time to escape. He carries a huge wooden rattle, which he swings energetically as he advances along the street, giving full yarning to timid burglars of his approach, but effectually preventing any drowsiness on the part of the unfortunate inhabitants of the houses. The Russian peasant woman has a peculiar method of washing her baby. She fills her mouth with water and expertly sprays it over the object of her maternal solicitude. Flowers are often watered in the same manner.

NO ESCAPE.

The following telephone conversation is reported to have been heard between a certain well-known young financier and a society woman whose functions are considered somewhat boring, says Harper's Weekly:

"Is this Mr. ——?"

"Yes."

"This is Mrs. ——. Won't you give us the pleasure of your company at dinner on Monday?"

"I'm sorry, Mrs.——, but I have an engagement for Monday."

"Can you come Tuesday, then?"

"Why, it is most unfortunate, but I have a partial engagement for Tuesday, also."

"Well, how about Wednesday?"

"Oh, hang it! I'll come Monday."

DON'T EXPERIMENT

You Will Make No Mistake If You Follow This Duluth Citizen's Advice.

Never neglect your health.

If you have pain in the back, urinary disorders, dizziness and nervousness, it's time to act and no time to experiment. These are all symptoms of kidney trouble, and you should use a remedy which is known to cure these troubles safely and surely.

Doan's Kidney Pills is that remedy, and if you wish to be cured of kidney disease without experimenting, do not fail to use it. Others have been cured, and cured permanently. Why not follow the advice of a Duluth citizen and be cured yourself?

Edw. J. Hoppman, mineralogist, living at 423 First street west, Duluth, Minn., says: "The best proof of the merits of Doan's Kidney Pills that I can give is that since using this remedy for a bad attack of kidney trouble, some six years ago, I have not found it necessary to use any medicine at all for my kidneys. At the time when I began using them I suffered from sharp aching pains in the back and loins. The kidney secretions were disordered and the trouble told on my general health. Doan's Kidney Pills brought prompt relief and a final cure, and the permanence of the results thoroughly proves that this remedy can be depended upon in such cases."

SOCIETY GIRLS WASH LACES

Two Young Women of Washington Start Novel Business.

Washington, May 18.—"A sympathetic laundry" is the name given by several of its patrons to a novel enterprise recently started by two young society girls in Washington.

It cleanses rare old laces, worth many times their weight in gold; exquisite table pieces of the finest handwork, priceless linens and cherished heirlooms, with greater care and consideration than even the owners would be able to give. Hence, the sympathetic attribute.

The young women who have undertaken this work are Misses Emma and May Mullan, whose home is in Connecticut avenue, four doors from the British embassy.

In a house filled with rich tapestries, exquisite bric-a-brac and costly furniture, they have established their novel laundry, which is welcomed by the harassed owners of rare and costly family pieces as few laundries perhaps have ever been welcomed before.

The Misses Mullan are not compelled to go into business. Their father, Capt. John Mullan, accumulated a comfortable fortune in California. Their mother, formerly Miss Rebecca Williamson of Baltimore, belonged to an old Maryland family, and was a prominent member of the Society of Colonial Dames. Care of dainty laces is a labor of love with the young ladies.

Both by education and because of the high social position which they hold, they are fitted to conduct their novel business most successfully. Their patrons are met by them on a plane of social equality.

CARNEGIE SAID

To Be Supporting Project of International Town.

London, May 18.—According to The Hague correspondent of the Telegraph, Andrew Carnegie is inclined to support the fantastic scheme of Dr. Eykman to build an international town near The Hague, which will be devoted entirely to arts, sciences and international fraternization. It is estimated that the cost will be $10,000,000. The scheme is distinct from the plan to build a peace palace.

Running Down Long?

You and Your Food Are a Misfit Sure

It's a relief to feel the sunshine and glow of perfect health, bounding energy and "go" of the sucessful, brimful-of-spirits man. The joy of living real LIFE will come back when you give your body the kind of food it is mutely appealing for, that from which it can make good the daily waste caused by brain work and exertion.

Suppose you abandon for a time the food which evidently is not properly nourishing you, and go in for a 10 day test and see how near the food expert, who perfected comes to your case. Drop tea and coffee absolutely and if you want to get to the front by bounds cut your tobacco down to at least one-half.

Now for breakfast.

A little very ripe fruit, a saucer of Grape-Nuts (not over 4 heaping teaspoonfuls with some rich cream poured over it, insist on cream, milk will do as a last resort, but water spoils the delicate sweet flavor), a slice of very hard-baked toast, thinly buttered, and a cup of Postum Food Coffee. No more.

That will carry you until lunch time, when the same articles can be used, and add a little hot clear soup.

Take dinner at 6 or 7 and have a generous portion of meat, only one kind. Cut out the soup and fish, have 2 vegetables and a Grape-Nuts pudding, a cup of Postum Food Coffee (which will not keep you awake) and one or two slices of buttered toast. QUIT THERE.

Two days thus will open your eyes and 10 days make this good old world seem a happy place again.

It's nice to be happy.

OFFICER'S NOSE

Claimed to Have Been Broken By Albert St. Arnold.

Man Is Awaiting Trial For Second Degree Assault.

Accused of smashing Sergt. Kenna's nose with a blow from his fist, Albert St. Arnold was arrested by the police this morning and brought into court on the charge of assault in the second degree, which is a grand jury offense.

According to the story told by Sergt. Kenna of the police force, St. Arnold became involved in a quarrel with the night clerk of the Clarendon hotel, at the corner of Superior street and Garfield avenue, Tuesday evening.

The night clerk summoned Sergt. Kenna to eject St. Arnold from the building. The sergeant responded to the summons, and requested St. Arnold to leave the hotel. He did so, and the sergeant walked with him down the stairs to the street. The officer claims that as they were walking down the stairs, St. Arnold suddenly turned and struck him with the full force of his clenched fist between the eyes.

The man is claimed to have then fled, leaving the officer dazed with the blow.

On examination it was found that the bridge of the officer's nose was broken by the force of the blow.

The following morning a warrant for St. Arnold's arrest was sworn out by the officer, and this morning the police succeeded in locating him.

When brought before Judge Windom in the municipal court this morning, he asked for a preliminary hearing, which was set for Monday morning at 10 o'clock. His ball was fixed at $250.

There are three degrees of assault, the third degree being only a misdemeanor. First and second degree assaults are grand jury offenses and must be tried in the district court.

WANTED IN NORWAY.

Pittsburg Motorman Notified of a Fortune.

Pittsburg, Pa., May 18.—While Pittsburg lawyers and officials of the Pittsburg Railway company were endeavoring to locate Frank Falsan, motorman, he was operating his car as usual, all unconscious that he was wanted at home, and that $1,000 for expenses to Bergen, Norway, awaited him.

Tuesday night he was located and handed an order for $1,000. He said, "Thank you," got a signal from the conductor, and started to finish his night's work.

From lawyers who are interested in the case it is learned Falsen, who is the son of Christian M. Falsen, nobleman, of Bergen, Norway, left home years ago because of a quarrel. He was paid $2.20 per day as a motorman. A fortune was spent in the search for him. He would not say if he would resign and go back. His father is said to be wealthy.

EQUITABLE FACTIONS

Said to Be Seeking to Secure Peace.

New York, May 18.—Reports are current on Wall street that both the Alexander and Hyde factions of the Equitable controversy are willing to have the fight called off. They are beginning to realize the situation is going beyond their control, and, fearing for their own interests, are willing to make concessions to secure peace. It is said that William Nelson Cromwell will act as "pacifier" between the factions. Cromwell's ability to serve in this capacity was illustrated in the late shipbuilding investigation.

According to report he will appear as counsel for the Equitable society, but his chief and only duty will be to bring about harmony. Both sides have clamped the lid down tight again, and refuse to discuss even the most trifling features of the scandal. The Frick committee is still more secret. Today it changed its meeting place and refused to say whether any of the society's officers or directors had been examined.

Deputy Superintendent of Insurance Robert H. Hunter was asked whether he had found anything that would justify calling District Attorney Jerome on the case.

"No one," said Hunter, "has charged anybody with the commission of a crime. Each faction has accused the other of having violated certain provisions of the insurance law, which, if true, would warrant the state superintendent asking the attorney general to remove the offending officers or directors and prevent them ever holding office in any insurance company in this state. But the removal of an officer or director did not mean such a person had done anything criminal. For that reason I don't see where Jerome can get into the case."

FILIPINO STUDENT

At Yale Disappears, Owing Large Sums.

New Haven, Conn., May 18.—Jaun Bautista Alegra, a Filipino first-year student in Yale law school, has been missing from his recitations and his usual haunts for several days, and it is believed that he has sailed for Spain.

A law firm here has been looking for him in behalf of some of the student creditors, to whom he owes considerable money. One of his creditors is the proprietor of the dormitory.

Young Alegre seemed to be always liberally supplied with money while at Yale, and it was given out that his father was a millionaire in Manila. He said he was a graduate of the University of Barcelona.

PROPOSITIONS FOR GAS WORKS

Philadelphia Council Considers Two, Each For Seventy-Five Years.

Philadelphia, May 18.—The proposition to lease the city gas works came before the city council today. Previous to its consideration by the common and select chambers the question was discussed at a public hearing before the finance committee of councils. The committee had two proposals under consideration one by the United Gas Improvement company, the present lessees, and one by E. B. Smith & Co., bankers of this city, representing a syndicate of New York capitalists. In general the propositions are the same. The United Gas company offers the city $25,000,000 for a lease of seventy-five years, Smith & Co. make the same offer, with $20,000,000 additional to reimburse the United Gas Improvement company for money expended by that corporation in improvements. Under the terms of the existing lease held by the United company the city may secure control of the works in 1907 by the payment to the company of the money spent in improvements, amounting to about $20,000,000. Thus the two propositions are similar. Smith & Co.'s bid differs from the others in that it proposes to share profits with the city at the rate of one-third for ten years, and one-half for sixty-five years, and under the Smith offer the city may reduce the price of gas as the profits increase.

KICKS ON TAXES.

Attorney For the World's Richest Baby Objects.

Newport, R. I., May 18.—Counsel for John Nicholas Brown, 4 years old, known as the world's wealthiest baby, will be the first to make formal protest against the raising of personal property valuations by the tax assessors. The child's personal property, estimated to be worth $12,000,000, was assessed at $125,000. This figure has been raised, but to what extent has not been divulged.

ONE-DOLLAR VERDICT

For Alienation of a St. Wife's Affections.

St. Paul, May 18.—Sam W. Goulstone was damaged to the extent of $1 when W. C. J. Hermann, the real estate man, entered his household and alientated the affections of his wife, Mildred.

After a trial lasting over a week, and after considering the case for over half a day, the jury returned a sealed verdict, Tuesday evening. This was opened in court yesterday, and the judgment announced.

Goulstone sued for $5,000. The verdict is displeasing to both the plaintiff and defense. Goulstone believed he was entitled to a larger sum, and the attorneys for Hermann are annoyed because the verdict, small as it is, throws the heavy expense of the trial upon Hermann.

The trial was marked by the introduction of unprintable testimony and many bickerings and passages between the opposing counsel.

It is reported that Hermann will appeal.

SLAPPED BY A WOMAN.

Pennsylvania Church Meeting Breaks Up In Fight.

Wayne, Pa., May 18.—In a church row here Tuesday, Mrs. G. A. Amen, a society woman, slapped a man's face as they stood near the altar, and this action was followed by a fight between several men just outside the church door.

The controversy arose over the requested resignation of the Rev. Dr. W. A. Patton from the pastorate of the fashionable Presbyterian congregation.

The pastor had given in his resignation and the voting was going on, when Mrs. Amen, opposing the pastor, struck G. R. Park. This broke up the meeting.

GETS SIX CENTS

Erick Perkia Recovers For Handful of His Whiskers.

President of Floodwood Mulcted For Damages In That Sum.

Instead of $500 Erick Perkia received 6 cents for the handful of whiskers alleged to have been torn from his chin by John New, president of the village of Floodwood.

It was bargain day yesterday in the municipal court, and the jury in Judge Windom's room knocked down the whiskers at that ridiculously low figure. At that rate Mr. New could have taken the whole beard for less than a dollar.

Perkia claimed that Mr. New assaulted him twice in one afternoon and on the second occasion tore out a handful of his whiskers. The whiskers were in court as evidence, and they correspond with those carried on the plaintiff's chin.

Mr. New, on the other hand, admitted that he had assaulted the plaintiff, but said that Perkia had acted in disorderly manner, while intoxicated, and had called him vile names in front of the members of his family and some guests. Later, in his capacity as peace officer, he arrested Perkia on a charge of being drunk and disorderly.

The arguments to the jury were completed shortly before 6 o'clock last evening. The jury was out but a few minutes. They agreed that Mr. New was guilty of a technical assault, but fixed the damages at only 6 cents, as they believed that the provocation was sufficient to warrant the assault.

"How did you come to settle on 6 cents as the figure?" one of the jurors was asked, after he had been discharged by Judge Windom.

"Well, we figured that the whiskers were worth about 1 cent, and we gave the plaintiff a nickel for the injury done to his feelings," said the juror.

After the verdict had been announced Mr. New gravely dug down into his jeans and settled the judgment against himself.

It was denied by the defendant that he had torn out any whiskers during the affair or that he had used any further violence than was necessary to place the plaintiff under arrest.

FIFTEEN-YEAR-OLD GIRL

In Nymore Charges Her Father With Incest.

Bemidji, Minn., May 18.—A complaint has been lodged against Jacob Weber of Nymore by his 15-year-old daughter, charging him with incest and Weber was arrested yesterday on a warrant issued by Judge Pendergast and is now in the county jail awaiting trial, the date for which has not been set. Weber has lived at Nymore for some time past and is well known in Bemidji. He has two other children, one a daughter of 13 and the other a son of 10.

FREAK PIG BORN.

La Crosse Man Has Porker With Two Tails.

La Crosse, Wis., May 18.—C. T. Casterline of West Salem has in his possession a freak pig which was born on his farm four weeks ago and which is alive and thriving at the present time. Mr. Casterline has received valuable offers for the animal, but refuses to sell it.

Making Panama Healthy.

The United States is playing health officer as enthusiastically in Panama as it did in Cuba and the Philippines. As a result the isthmus is enjoying a freedom from disease that it never knew before. Persons who take an occasional dose of Hostetter's Stomach Bitters will also enjoy better health than ever before. It will stimulate the digestive juices, which are so necessary to the perfect digestion of the food, and thus prevent sick headache, nausea, bloating, costiveness, liver and kidney troubles, indigestion, dyspepsia, insomnia and billiousness. Women and young girls who suffer from ills peculiar to their sex need the Bitters above everything else, because it has often cured when others had failed. We urge every sick man and woman to try the Bitters at once. Avoid substitutes.

NEW CONSTITUTION

Considered By General Synod of Reformed Church.

Allentown, Pa., May 18.—The general synod of the Reformed church devoted the entire morning session to the consideration of the new constitution. On motion of Rev. H. C. Nott of Milwaukee, the synod decided to ask that the congregations accept the Bible as the word of God, in addition to the Heidelberg catechism. The committee had omitted this because it is expressed in the preamble.

COMMANDER IS RETIRED

For Allowing "Ragging" on the British Cruiser Kent.

London, May 18.—A recent case of "ragging" on board the British cruiser Kent has been promptly followed by the compulsory retirement on half pay of Captain Douglas A. Gamble, her commander, for allowing such an occurrence on his ship and by the punishment of others concerned in the affair. The "ragging" took pace in the gun room where the midshipmen attempted to strip and flog an unpopular comrade. The latter drew a revolver and shot one of the midshipmen in the mouth.

In answering a question on the subject in the house of commons today, Admiralty Secretary Prettyman announced the punishments which had been meted out to the culprits adding that the admiralty had determined to put down such practices.

WITNESSES SUMMONED.

Washington, May 18.—Secretary Taft has decided that it will be necessary for him to hear some oral testimony in the prosecution of his inquiry into the Bowen-Loomis affair and at least one witness has been summoned from New York.

NEW YORK LEADS

In the Treatment of Tuberculosis, Says Osler.

Washington, May 18.—"In spite of its frivolity of spite of its size, in spite of its—other things which I hesitate to allude to—New York has set the pace in legislation, in institutions and treatment of turebculosis."

Dr. William Osler, made this statement today in an address before the first annual meeting of the national association for the study and prevention of tuberculosis.

Dr. Osler said that education regarding tuberculosis was the thing to strive for. He discussed this feature under three heads: Education of the public, of the physician and of the patient.

The public, he said, was awake, but sitting on the edge of the bed and not yet dressed. In this awakening, however, he asserted much had been accomplished over past conditions. When the public got dressed he predicted that much activity would follow and much would be accomplished toward stamping out the disease.

Many doctors, from all sections are in attendance. The subject of tuberculosis will be discussed in all of its phases for two days.

DEMAND AMENDMENT OF BRITISH DIVORCE LAWS

London, May 18.—The London diocesan conference, now in session here under the presidency of the bishop of London, passed a resolution today demanding an amendment of the English marriage law so as to preclude the remarriage of divorced persons during the lifetime of the other party to the proceedings. An attempt to modify the resolution in favor of permitting the remarriage in church of the innocent party was defeated by a large majority.

WORTH INVESTIGATION.

The idea of a county school of agriculture and domestic science for St. Louis county, presented in The Herald the other evening in an interview with S. W. Gilpin, county superintendent of schools, is something worth looking into by the county authorities.

St. Louis county must look to some extent to agricultural development for its subsistence in the future, and the importance of agriculture will increase every year. Duluth is to become a manufacturing city with the development of the water power, but one more point needs to be cared for in order to insure full success, and that is cheap living. If the territory immediately tributary to Duluth can produce enough to feed its people, the saving will be considerable, and it will go a long way toward solving the problem of cheap living, which is so essential to a manufacturing community.

The soil of the county is marvelously rich and productive, but the most can be made of it by judicious, scientific cultivation. Given two farms, side by side and with equal conditions and possibilities, the owner of one, by the old hit-or-miss methods, will with difficulty wrest from the soil a bare and hard-earned living for himself and his family; while his neighbor, by the exercise of modern scientific and economical methods, will send produce to market and wax fat and rich. Therefore every scientific farmer in this county will be an important factor in its up-building, and in the prosperity and growth of Duluth.

Properly managed schools of agriculture can produce such farmers. Minnesota has an excellent school at St. Anthony park, but it is a long way from this county, and few of our young people will be able to go. If the county finds it expedient, therefore, to start a county school, it can accomplish much. No doubt the large land-dealers of the county, whose interests are greatly involved, would contribute toward its success, which would mean an annual output of methodical, successful farmers, accompanied, by virtue of the "domestic economy" feature, by young women trained to do their share in the marital partnership. The combination would undoubtedly be of great value to the county, and would repay the expense many-fold.

NEWSPAPER TRIALS.

District Attorney Jerome of New York may have been confronted by some acute condition that made it true when he said that the Nan Patterson case has "caused one more step in this country toward trial by newspapers rather than trial by jury," but his remark is not by any means applicable to the general field. For whatever so-called "yellow journals" may do, and whatever newspapers may have done in times gone by, it is a rare thing today to see a newspaper taking any stand in a criminal trial.

While perhaps it is not the best news presentable, the clientage of a newspaper demands that the news of the criminal trial be published, and it is therefore the duty—sometimes a disagreeable one—of the newspaper to publish it. It is not that newspaper's duty to distort the facts in favor of either the state or the defendant, and seldom indeed is it ever done. If a presentation of the facts creates a public belief in the innocence of the accused, and that public belief reacts upon the jury, or seems to react, that is not the fault of the newspaper. It will generally be found that the evidence warrants such an effect.

Naturally a case like that of Nan Patterson appeals to a larger public than do ordinary criminal cases. It is true, too, that the appeal is to the baser part of the reader, and that therefore the baser part of the public takes the deepest interest in the proceedings. As a result there is no doubt much maudlin sentiment, that may, in the Patterson case, have resulted in a mistrial and a miscarriage of justice. That cannot be justly blamed to the newspapers, however, and even if some disreputable New York newspaper had earned Jerome's criticism, that should not be blamed to the newspaper field as a whole.

A VANISHING BOUNDARY.

Dimmer every year grows the dividing line between the parties. Larger every day grows that vast body of independent voters, who were a few years ago branded by a term that was one of reproach, but who are today proud of the fact that they hold principle above party, and country above party government.

Perhaps nothing in recent years has so thoroughly shown the condition than the association of Theodore Roosevelt with the presidency. In his nomination, practically forced by the knowledge that the country at large wanted him, regardless of politics, his party simply bowed to the inevitable. In his election, the strictly party Democratic vote was faint, and all over the country Democrats voted for Roosevelt and gloried in it, where a few years ago disloyalty to party was a thing to be concealed in fear and trembling. Were there a Roosevelt in the Democratic party there are at least as many Republicans who would think nothing of party ties in voting for him for president. In his reception over the country, north and south, there has been absolutely nothing of partisanship. Of course there should not be, for a president is a president before he is a Republican or a Democrat. But in the old days there would have been more of the party spirit, and at least the entertaining would have been in the hands of party organizations. In Chicago, for instance, the Iroquois club, a Democratic organization, was prominent in the reception of Roosevelt, and in Denver a Democratic mayor enthusiastically boomed Roosevelt for a third term, bringing out his unmistakable announcement that he would not be a candidate.

Truly, the love of party has given place to love of country. They are not inconsistent, but in the past party has had too great a preference. It is well that country is being placed first. As the Memphis Scimitar said in discussing the Chicago entertainment of Roosevelt by the Iroquois club: "It shows the broadening of the people and the increasing bigness of them. They are partisans, of course, but they are Americans first. They used to be Americans, but they were partisans first. The transition is a most happy one."

Happy, indeed, for it means that the parties will have to divorce themselves from entangling alliances and become parties of the people. They will have to choose whether they are to follow the interests of the people or the interests of those whose welfare is secured at public expense.

THE SPECIAL SESSION.

In view of the president's public utterances upon the question of railway rate regulation, and his obvious belief in the importance of early action on the problem, there seems to be little doubt that there will be an extra session of congress, called to convene about Oct. 16, for the express purpose of considering rate legislation, and perhaps tariff revision as well.

The matter of holding an extra session is entirely in the hands of the president. If he says there is to be a special session there will be one, for there is no one to say that it shall not be, and no one else to call it if he decides it is not necessary to have one.

Therefore the rate question, with nothing else to impede its consideration, will probably be before congress this fall, and it is altogether improbable that congress will be able to evade some sort of action. The question of whether or not the federal government, through the interstate commerce commission or otherwise, shall control rates is before the national legislative body, and the temper of the people is not uncertain upon the subject. They want it settled, and they want it settled affirmatively.

This is the year when congress is more cautious about public sentiment than usual, for there are elections next year. True, there is no presidential election, but all the members of congress are to come up for election, governors are to be elected, and legislatures that select senators are to be elected, too. Therefore politics is in the foreground, and the statesman's ear is a little closer to the ground than in the off-year sessions. This adds materially to the hope that something tangible will result, even though the senate is tardy in its recognition of the popular will. There will be six weeks of special session, and an unlimited regular session, in which to make it realize that the people are interested.

ONE MAN'S EXPERIENCE.

A merchant of a Western city recently made a trip to New York. Calling upon a business friend he was asked: "How does your store really compare with others in your line, in your city? Are you setting or following the pace?"

For reply the merchant took from his hand-bag several late issues of his leading home newspaper, and said: "Look over these papers. I will mark for you my advertisements and those of my competitors for three successive days. Judging by these ads, what is your own opinion of how my store stands in the race?"

After some consideration, and the use of a measuring tape, the friend replied: "On the showing here made—if it represents the general average for a longer period—your store stands first in your line in your city."

"Yes; it is true that in that showing I use eight inches more space than my next competitor—but is it safe to estimate a store's importance upon the space it occupies in its advertisements?"

"Safe enough," replied the friend, "to make it a general rule among business men. Your newspaper advertising is an outlet for your enterprise; and big enterprise requires a big outlet."

"Now, as a matter of fact," confessed the merchant, "my store is still second in volume of business done in my line in our city. But—two years ago it was fifth. At that time I concluded that I would use as much space in our leading newspaper as my largest competitor used, although such a campaign seemed to be beyond my real resources. I was then doing less than half as much business as the biggest store in the city—employing less than half as many clerks, occupying a building a third as large. At the end of the first year I found that I had had less worry over the big advertising bills than I had previously had over the small ones—and that I was fourth in the procession.

"Then I concluded to use a little more space in this newspaper than the biggest store was using—and for the year past I have done that. The result is that I am now a good second in the race—and a year from now the other man will have changed places with me.

"The other man has professed to believe that I would overdo the thing—that I would tire of paying big bills for space; but my experience is that it seems easier to pay a bill of a hundred dollars when there is a balance in bank of two hundred than it is to pay a bill of fifty dollars with a balance of seventy-five. And I have found that sufficient advertising has made a change of about that proportion in my financial affairs."

This is the essence of the conversation in which there is a good deal of "food for thought" for local merchants.

Hotel Gossip.

"Lumber prices are high and firm, owing partly to the fact that suitable timber is each year becoming more scarce, and that there is an active demand for all classes of building material this year," said E. Townsend of Minneapolis at the Spalding. "The chances are that lumber will never be much cheaper than it is now, for every season the supply of pine is becoming smaller and more difficult to get. At present Norway pine brings as high as $20 and $22 a thousand, while the white variety, some grades of it, is worth as much as $50 a thousand feet. There is now an active demand for all grades, high and low.

"From the way things look now, I should say that in ten years there will be very few mills running in Minnesota, although the timber supply will not be entirely exhausted by that time. Probably at the end of the next decade there will be a few sawmills operating in the Bemidji and Cloquet districts, as being nearer the source of supply, and the Weyerhaeuser and the C. A. Smith mills at Minneapolis may still be in operation, although they will not continue to run much longer than that, and they may go out of existence before the ten years are up.

"I was recently in Ashland. Things are pretty quiet there in the lumber business, and that means that pretty nearly all other lines of business are quiet in the Wisconsin town, for it has always been dependent, to a more or less degree, upon the lumbering interests. Ordinarily in the past there have been six or seven sawmills running at Ashland, but now all but three have closed down. Cloquet is coming to be one of the principal lumber centers of the country, and within a year or two will doubtless be the largest manufacturing lumber center in the entire country. Already the town is pressing closely upon the heels of Minneapolis for this distinction. Minneapolis last year sawed about 105,000,000 feet of lumber.

"Quite a bit of lumber is now being brought East from the Pacific coast country, and the amount will increase as time advances. The Washington fir is much better for many classes of work than is either white or Norway pine. Particularly is this true of the heavier classes of work, such as for bridge construction. The wood is firm and practically free from sap, which is quite an advantage in bridge building and similar kinds of work. Minneapolis lumbermen are quite extensively interested in Western timber, and are giving a good deal of attention to it."

"All that Duluth lacks to be placed on a footing with other metropolitan cities of the country is an amusement park," said T. S. Lang of Cleveland at the Spalding. "She is a little behind the times in this one feature. I see Minneapolis has just opened a new park for pleasure-seekers, built something along the Coney Island style, and Cleveland is about to open a new place of the same, although the city already has attractions of this kind. I should think that such an outfit could be made a paying proposition on Park Point. The railway down there could back the proposition and make money out of it.

"Luna park is the name of the new resort in Cleveland. Thousands of people fairly clamored for admission at the gates Sunday, in spite of an announcement previously made that the park would be closed to the public until the opening, which is set to take place today.

"For new features and general uniqueness the parks excels pre-eminently. All the fun in the catalogue may be found there, including the roller coaster, the shoot the chutes, merry-go-round, trip to Rockaway, shoot the shoe, circuses, a picnic ground of twenty-six acres and enough other attractions to make anybody forget all his troubles for a while.

"One of the most attractive features is a Japanese exposition. The buildings are of an architecture most elaborate and are typical of the native country. Geisha girls to the number of about a dozen are being secured and will give performances there daily. In addition to these there will be tea gardens, and other attractions too numerous to mention."

"Minnesota has some mighty pretty lakes, but they are hardly to be compared to some that are to be found in the western mountains," said H. E. Arnold of St. Paul at the St. Louis. "It has been my good fortune to visit one of these, the beautiful Lake Chelan, in the state of Washington, which is the wonder of the tourist and despair of the artist. This region is justly claimed to be one of the grandest scenic spots on the continent, and the Easterners who are in the habit of spending their summers abroad would do well to put in a little of their time at the lake this year, stopping off on their way to or from the Portland exposition.

"It is no easy task to describe the many beauties of the lake. One would have to be a poet to do so. There are two peculiarities of the waters of Lake Chelan, its extreme clearness and remarkable colors. The shores are bold and high, except at the lower end, where there are stretches of sandy beaches."

Sample Freight Rates.

Norfolk, Neb., Press: If a department store located in Norfolk should buy its goods in New York and ship by water to Duluth and then the rest of the way by rail, he would find the railroad freight rates running against him in this fashion, as compared with his competitors in Tekamah and Lincoln:

On a car of implements—To Norfolk, 520 miles, $115.20; to Tekamah, 527 miles, $72; to Lincoln, 599 miles, $79.20.

On a car of stoves—To Norfolk, $108; to Tekamah, $64.80; to Lincoln, $72.

On a car of furniture—To Norfolk, $146.40; to Tekamah, $73; to Lincoln, $81.60.

On a car of third-class merchandise—To Norfolk, $182.40; to Tekamah, $108; to Lincoln, $117.60.

On a car of first-class merchandise—To Norfolk, $300; to Tekamah, $192; to Lincoln, $204.

Tarred With the Same Stick.

Chicago Chronicle: President Stickney of the Chicago Great Western is entirely right in his criticism of public officers who accept free passes over the railroads. It may also be said, however, that the public officers would not get the passes unless the railroads were willing to issue them. If there is anything smacking of corruption in the transaction the railroads must bear their share of it.

MINNESOTA OPINIONS.

Virginia Enterprise: The state dairy and food commission will attempt to see that range residents are provided with a better quality of whiskey. We do not know what quality of goods is dished out to them at present, but if there is any improvement to be had it ought to be provided, for there is no known section of the earth where there is more of the stuff drank than right here.

Grant County Herald: The girl who poses as a street flirt or lounges about in public places during evenings, is the girl whose name may be heard where men congregate to revel in idle words.

Little Falls Transcript: It is claimed that the cut-over pine lands in the northern part of the state are ideal for the growth of sugar beets. The raising of beets requires a considerable labor but the returns are satisfactory. The building of a beet sugar factory in the northern part of the state would open a new industry of value in developing the country.

Red Wing Republican: Secretary Shaw is said to be worrying over a deficit. Newspaper men know how to sympathize with him.

International Falls Border Budget: When we read all this talk about Cortelyou reforming the postoffice department and issuing orders prohibiting postmasters from taking an active part in the political game we wonder how far it reaches beneath the surface. An example is what the public is hankering for.

BEFORE AND AFTER.

Baltimore American: Millions of hearts are beating more lively in expectation of the approaching commencements. The young people often look upon graduation as the greatest crisis in life, and so it is until another occurs to diminish its importance. They will probably discover in due time that life is punctuated with crises, each one of which will appear more serious than all which have gone before. Life before commencement has been dotted with pangs and disappointments, but the time will surely come when the latter will disappear from memory like the headlands as the ship gets farther out to sea, and there will remain only the mirage of happiness and pleasure enjoyed.

Graduation is a crisis, made all the more so by the boundless hopes of the graduate. So few realize that the meaning of the word commencement is beginning. They are so apt to regard it as the ending or the completion of one life and the introduction into another. In a sense it is. The romance of existence often ends with the delivery of the diploma, and when the student plunges into the busy world his ambitions and fancies are sometimes rudely shocked. He is astonished to find how little his academic stock of knowledge helps him in the real life struggle. Even here he may be greatly in error. At school he has been accumulating knowledge for a lifetime, and he should not expect to pour it all out at once and find fitting spots for its application. The uses will come as he settles into his place in the community.

It is doubtful if one ever learns anything at school that is not useful in after life, it frequently happens in a business career that knowledge which he had apparently forgotten is recalled and made useful. For all that there can be no more serious error than for graduates to imagine that they know everything and that the real work of life is over. The real work begins at commencement. All that has been done, no matter how useful, is in the nature of preparation. A student is apt to consider his work hard, but all work is hard to those who think so, and no work is really hard to one who works in the right spirit.

Couldn't Fool Him.

New York Sun: It was the youngish widow's wedding day, and the signs and omens were fructifying in the brain of her oldest, a bright chap of eight. He had wondered much at the sewing that had been in progress for weeks past.

The whispering and chattering of the women, too, had stirred some half faded leaves in his memory. This particular day above all set him thinking very hard.

His mother had kissed him tearfully and then retired into seclusion. Then, after he had been dressed—a mere incidental matter—he was told to be good and keep quiet and not give any trouble.

The appearance of his grandmamma and aunts was also suggestive. Of course, there were a good many other people, and he recognized therein a divergence from long past experiences, but he looked out of the window and chanced to see the clergyman arrive, carrying a small black leather valise.

Then he heard the word passed around that the "doctor" had come—the clergyman was a D. D.—and then he was sure that he was on the right track.

He at once sidled up to one of the youngest and prettiest of his aunts, and remarked to her in that style of whisper which always concentrates attention:

"I know, now."

"Do you, dear?" said the pretty aunt. "What do you know?"

"I know what is going to happen. I'm going to have a new brother or sister. I saw the doctor come in with his big bag that he carries them in. You can't fool me."

His memory had been going back to the birth of his youngest sister, about two years and a half before, and the explanations that had been made him at that time.

Wages in Duluth are low this season, but not as low as previously stated. Day laborers are getting from $1.25 to $1.50 a day, and the prospects are that they will be raised before long. A great many men are employed on the coal docks at wages averaging $2 per day.

Dr. F. C. Bowman has been attending the meeting of the state homeopathists' association this week.

The David Dows loaded iron ore at Two Harbors on Wednesday—the first load of the season. Everything worked to perfection at the ore docks. She was towed below by the George Spencer, which carries 60,000 bushels of wheat. The Dows will run in Wilson's fleet during the year.

Harper's Bazar: Auctioneer—What am I offered for this fine large bath sponge? Going at 50 cents—going—going—. It's a shame I can't get more for it. I'd buy it myself only I've just come back from a visit at the seashore.

Yonkers Statesman: "If you are a rich women and have married a poor man who has retired from business," remarked the Observer of Events and Things, "it is all right to say that you have retired him from business. Don't say you have put him out of business. It might not be understood."

Philadelphia Ledger: "I tell you what," grumbled the pessimistic waiter, "people ain't givin' tips like they used to in the old days."

"That's right," replied the funny waiter. "Think of Esau, who gave his birthright for a mess of pottage."

Philadelphia Ledger: "The robin is a very timid bird isn't it?"

"I guess so. At any rate, the average restaurant cook can make it quail."

Philadelphia Record: A married man longs for either some excitement to relieve the monotony or some monotony to relieve the excitement.

"Pshaw, that's too bad!" said the villain, "allow me to lend you a pin."

Philadelphia Press: "But," protested the plain citizen, "don't you consider honesty is a good thing?"

"Sure," replied the politician, "but it's like all other good things; you've got to make money before you can afford it."

Chicago Tribune: James Monroe had just completed his famous doctrine.

STILL HUNTING.

Back from his western vacation,
Tanned, but a little less fat;
Doffed in the good old sombrero,
Donned is the tall silk hat.

Gone is the gun with its bullets,
Now the big stick as of yore,
Bears and the wolves have grown quiet,
Now that his hunting is o'er.

Back to the grind of his office,
Grinding away just the same,
Yet he's engaged in some hunting,
Only for bigger game.

Now the big wolves that he's after
Live in the civilized East;
Some are now saying he means to
Bag a few big ones at least.

Back from his western vacation,
After big game now he lusts;
If they don't take to the timber
He's bound to kill off a few trusts.

Stakes Were Too High.

The author of "The Accomplice," Frederick Trevor Hill, a member of the New York bar for sixteen years, has many anecdotes to tell of various queer phases of character that he has run across.

"A case with which I was connected a few years ago," he said the other day, "involved some large corporate mortgages, and frequent references were made by the lawyers on both sides to the 'ten-million-dollar mortgage' and 'the twenty-million-dollar bond issue.' Finally, one of the jurors, a little German barber, couldn't stand it any longer, and raised his hand.

"'Mr. Judge,' he expostulated, 'if der lawyers will please to say von dollar ven dey means a million dollars, dot would makes me understands besser. Dose millions! Ach! Gott! dey confuses me!'"

McTAGGERT LOSES CASE

Dr. Shipman Gets Verdict In Alleged Malpractice Suit.

After deliberating about forty-five minutes, the jury in the alleged malpractice case of David McTaggert against Dr. C. G Shipman, returned a verdict for Dr. Shipman, yesterday afternoon. Mr. McTaggert sued for damages in the amount of $10,000, claiming that he had received improper treatment in case of the amputation of his left leg at the knee joint.

The case is one that has attracted much interest, particularly among the medical profession, a large number of the local surgeons having been called to give expert testimony and several depositions being introduced containing the views of prominent Chicago surgeons on the sort of operation performed by Dr. Shipman.

The case was given to the jury at 4 o'clock and the verdict was returned shortly before 5 o'clock.

STATEMENT BY MRS. CHADWICK

Explaining the Beginning of Her Financial Troubles.

Cleveland, O., May 18.—Mrs. Cassie L. Chadwick made a statement tonight concerning her affairs in which she told of the beginning of her financial troubles.

"Since Jan. 1, 1901, I have had $3,210,000. Of this amount I borrowed not over $800,000, the remainder coming from a trust fund and some sales.

"In April or May, 1901, I owed only $53,000. I paid that debt. I was then induced to make an investment which called for almost $400,000. I took no security for this investment and the transaction so far as I was concerned never materialized. The investment was made upon the advice of a friend."

After relating her experiences while abroad during which time her husband and her neice were ill for several months, Mrs. Chadwick said:

"Early in the month of February, 1902, after my return home, I was informed that my investment was a loss and that I was in debt $400,000. Besides that sum there was an additional loss which I had incurred of $200,000. In order to meet these obligations I made large loans for which I paid heavy commissions.

"I have borrowed in all $900,609. I obtained $175,000 on my own note. A loan of $204,000 was secured by me on the endorsement of a prominent New Yorker. The other $409,000 I have mentioned before.

SPORTING NEWS

League Season Opens at Brainerd, Fargo and Winnipeg.

Several Changes Have Been Made In the Duluth Team.

With Dennis Potts, the big southpaw in the box, Artie O'Dea and his bunch of White Sox are playing the opening game of the Northern league season this afternoon at Brainerd, against the Brainerd-St. Cloud combination.

The team has undergone somewhat of a shaking up during the last two days. The signing of Kennelley to play first base has resulted in the release of Second Baseman Head. Artie O'Dea will move on to second base, which position he held down with Superior last summer. Weiler will continue in his old place at shortstop and McShane at third base. McAleese will retain his position behind the bat, where he has more than made good, and the outfield will consist of "Si" Bennett, Sam Meniece and Neighbors.

Cook, Rees and Lynch proved unsatisfactory as twirlers and they have all been let go. This leaves the team with only one tried pitcher, Dennis Potts. The other two twirlers are Miller and Smith. The latter will probably make good, as he comes with a good reputation, but little is known concerning Miller.

The pitching staff is, aparently, the weakest point on the team and special efforts are being made to strengthen it, both Capt. O'Dea and Manager Van Praagh being on the lookout for another good twirler. The rest of the team is well balanced and will compare very favorably with last year's nine.

Great preparations have been made for today's opening in Brainerd. Two games will be played there and the third one of the series in St. Cloud, where there will be another opening.

Crookston is opening the season at Fargo this afternoon, and Grand Forks is playing at Winnipeg.

The Grand Forks players have all reported with the exception of Leach and Varco, the two university men, who will play with the team this summer. They will report on May 25 in time for the first series with Fargo.

Winnipeg is experimenting with a team composed almost entirely of Canadians this year. As the only Canadian city in the league the idea is bound to make the idea a popular one among the loyal Canucks.

CROOKSTON WINS.

Defeats Grand Forks Team In Exhibition Game.

Crookston, May 18.—(Special to The Herald.)—In the first game of ball between league teams of the Northern league this season, Spike Anderson's famous Grand Forks aggregation of ball tossers, vanquishers of the Javas and never yet defeated, went down to Crookston to the tune of 8 to 4. The game all through was an exciting one, but was not devoid of errors, both teams piling up an unusual number during the nine innings played. Fully 1,000 witnessed the game, and the rooting was of an exceptionally enthusiastic order. Grand Forks people accompanied their players to this city 500 strong, chartering a special train for the occasion. The game was not a league game, but an exhibition one, played on account of the 17th of May celebration here yesterday.

McNeil and his "Ludefiske" bunch of this city showed up remarkable ball, surprising the people of Crookston and opening the eyes of the Grand Forks people as to the quality of the material which will go to make up the 1905 Crookston team. The team plays fast and evenly, does excellent team work and has several phenomenally heavy hitters. The pitching of both batteries was good.

Score by innings:

Crookston	0	1	0	0	0	3	4	0	x	8
Grand Forks	1	0	0	1	0	0	1	0	1	4

Preparations are now complete for the interscholastic field meet, which will be held Saturday afternoon at the driving park.

The meet had to be postponed from last Saturday, owing to the wet grounds, but weather permitting it will be pulled off this coming Saturday.

The committee in charge of the meet consists of Thomas Doyle, Ray Nelson and Daniel Cole and Norman MacLeod, the physical director and secretary of the boys' department of the Y. M. C. A.

There will be twenty events in the meet, and the team scoring the highest number of points will win the handsome trophy which has been put up for competition.

The sports will commence at 2:30 o'clock.

WEDNESDAY'S EVENTS IN THE RACING WORLD

Louisville, May 18.—Martin Doyle, quoted at 2 to 1, and in some books at 3, won the Blue Grass stake at Churchill Downs yesterday. King of Troy was held as the favorite by the bookmakers, but there was a terrific plunge on Finiculaire. Only one decided favorite won, but nearly all the winners were well backed.

Kansas City, May 18.The Swope park stakes for 2-year-olds was the feature of the card at Elm Ridge yesterday. The Ellison entry, James Reddick and Lady Navarre, ran first and second, respectively. Ed Ball upset all calculations by taking the fifth race easily from True Wing and Clifton Forge.

St. Louis, May 18.—Miss Mae Day, the winner, and the second and third horses in the fourth race at the Fair ground, were all held at liberal odds. Form players, however, secured their revenge on the bookmakers in the next race, when High Chancellor, heavily played at 5 to 2, galloped home.

IN DEFENSE OF P. JONES

Henry Watterson Replies to Criticisms of the British Press.

Paris, May 18.—General Porter, the retiring American ambassador, was given a farewell banquet last night. President Loubet was represented by the presidential staff. Practically the entire diplomatic corps were present.

American guests, who numbered several hundred, included Henry Watterson and Levi P. Morton.

The speech of General Porter brought out a tremendous ovation, the entire assemblage rising and cheering.

Mr. Watterson made a characteristic speech, which after a glowing tribute to General Porter, took up the achievements of Paul Jones. His closing words, hurling back the taunt of the English press that Jones was a pirate, aroused great enthusiasm.

"It was the hands of Paul Jones," said Mr. Watterson, "which first loosened the flag which we adore and carried this flag defiant and triumphant into English waters, into the Irish sea and into the North sea; yea, into St. George's channel, not merely bearding the lion in his den, but coming away with those same hands stuffed with indisputable trophies, with actual and visible fragments of his fame and tact. I do not wonder at their calling him a pirate, but if he was a pirate, Washington was a highwayman and Franklin a lobster."

AGAINST ROAD

Farmers Do Not Favor Trunk Road to Boundary Line.

Claim Money Might Better Be Spent on Shorter Highways.

A large proportion of the settlers in the northern district of St. Louis county are said to be against the idea of any more trunk roads. They argue that the money that can be obtained from the state for trunk roads could be spent to far better advantage on shorter county roads that will give the settlers in new agricultural districts outlets to the towns or to the railroads.

Since the appropriation made by the last legislature, of $1,400 to aid in building a road from the city of Virginia northwest to the international boundary line to be known as the Virginia and International road, protests have been made by farmers residing in the district beyond Virginia, notably west of Ashawa against the trunk road to the boundary line. It is claimed that the road will not benefit the greatest number, furthermore that there is little probability of its ever getting any further than the line between St. Louis and Itasca counties.

Those who are opposed to the idea of the boundary road point to the history of the Miller trunk road, a county highway which has a more or less interesting past and which it is claimed is not yet paid for after the expenditure by the taxpayers of an immense amount of money. It is argued that the annual expense entailed in keeping up the road is not in proportion to the benefits derived from usage of the highway, that it is, in fact, comparatively little used except for short stretches where the road passes through farming sections.

The Ashawa farmers claim that the proposed Virginia and International road is likely to be simply a repetition of the history of the Miller trunk road and they hold that the money appropriated by the state for the highway might better have been applied to building shorter roads from farming communities to the towns or to the railway stations.

That the proposed trunk road to the boundary is not a necessity is pointed out by the fact that the Duluth, Virginia & Rainy Lake road is building from Virginia to International Falls at the present time and that it is not good policy to spend money in attempting to parallel the railroads when they will be the logical means of transportation, and when the money could be used to build cross roads to the railroad.

It is also claimed by the farmers that the proposed Virginia and International road is not a highway of their choice, but rather of the business interests of Virginia, that the business men are more interested in getting long highways built into the city than in having shorter roads reaching the agricultural communities.

The argument is also made that the taxpayers of Itasca county are generally against the idea of a trunk road to the boundary, and that even if it is started, the county board of St. Louis county would hesitate to take over a highway which would mean a large annual appropriation from the road funds for its maintenance.

MORE CHARGES PREFERRED

Against County Attorney H. J. Loud of Beltrami County.

St. Paul, May 18.—The investigation of the charges of malfeasance in office preferred against County Attorney H. J. Loud and Commissioners O. F. Sibley and Wes Wright of Beltrami county, was still further complicated yesterday by the charge of Mrs. Sullivan of Minneapolis that the officials of the county have refused to issue warrants for the arrest of persons accused of murdering her son, J. C. Sullivan, who, it was claimed, was devoured by wolves in the wilds of Beltrami county. Mrs. Sullivan says that detectives in her employ have collected evidence to show that her son was murdered at a hotel at Blackduck, and that this evidence was submitted to the officials of Beltrami county, and that they refused to act.

These complaints were filed yesterday with Governor Johnson, on whom Mrs. Sullivan called, in the hope that he might increase the reward for the arrest and conviction of the murderers from $250, fixed by Governor S. R. Van Sant, to $500. The governor took the matter under advisement.

J. C. Sullivan, who was employed at the depot at Blackduck, mysteriously disappeared in April, 1903. His mother went to Blackduck and traveled about Beltrami county in search of her son. Later it was announced that the remains of a young man were found in a secluded spot in Beltrami county and, from the appearance of the body and the clothes scattered about it, the theory was advanced that the young man had been killed by wolves. Mrs. Sullivan says that the body was not that of her son. Robbery is supposed to be the motive of the murder. Mrs. Sullivan says her son had saved $300 from his wages, which he received as an employe at the depot, and that this disappeared with the body of her son.

LEVY IS NO LONGER NAN PATTERSON'S ATTORNEY

New York, May 18.—Abraham Levy, who defended Nan Patterson during her three trials for the murder of Caesar Young, announced yesterday that he had withdrawn from the case finally and absolutely. Mr. Levy said he understood that Miss Patterson intended to accept an offer from a theatrical manager and added that he strongly disapproved of such an action.

"I wish to announce that my connection with the case has ceased for all time," he said. "I put in nearly a year of arduous and patient work and after I had accomplished the purpose of my retainer and secured my client's discharge from custody, my hands were cleared. I am through with the Nan Patterson case. That can not be put too plainly."

DANCE AND DRAMA

Cure the Insane In an Iowa Hospital.

Cherokee, Iowa, May 18.—That the insane can be cured of their hallucinations by dancing and by witnessing theatrical performances has been practically demonstrated by the Iowa state hospital for the insane at this point.

For two years the novel system in use at this institution has been on trial, and its success may be judged from the fact that the hospital is discharging as cured 25 per cent of the patients annually.

In short, the theory adopted by Superintendent Voldeng and his assistant, Dr. Willheit, is that the insane can be cured if their attention can be taken from their malady. Accordingly the patients are surrounded by circumstances calculated to interest them.

Among the requirements of an attendant at the asylum is that he be able to dance and play some instrument. The asylum has an orchestra, a band and a theatrical troupe, made up of attendants and some of the patients. The musical organizations discourse music three or four times a week. There are also three or four social events each week, a dance, a drawing room or an amateur theatrical performance.

At the dances the women attendants dance with the male patients and the male attendants dance with the female patients. This is found to be necessary. The patients are well behaved because they know that their good behavior alone can give them the opportunity of enjoying these festivities. The dancing stops a little before 8 o'clock and light refreshments are served. To watch one of these scenes one would imagine it was a ball such as any respectable society might give. There is no fuss, no unseemly behavior. Everything is quiet, simple and orderly and happiness reigns over the entire proceedings.

On of the best rooms in the immense building is the theater or chapel. This is a beautifully lighted, large hall, furnished with all the scenery and latest stage paraphernalia.

THE CHURCH AND WEALTH

Congregationalists Discuss Gifts By Wealthy Individuals.

Binghamton, N. Y., May 18.—At the seventy-second annual meeting of the New York state association of Congregational churches here, the committee on applied Christianity has made a report of which a portion is devoted to the discussion of "The Church and Wealth."

The report on this point says:

"We believe the supreme question before the church today is to teach brotherhood as the only true basis of business. With natural wealth open to the use of all men we believe industrial combination in the interest of economy would develop naturally and with injury to none. We believe the church should guard against all such alliances with institutions of individuals of great wealth as can give color to the charge that the church is under the domination of the rich, or that her ministry is silenced regarding business methods oppressive and menacing to personal independence. It is our conviction that no gifts to charitable or religious enterprises can atone for the wrong done against society by financial or industrial methods which ignore the natural law that only the creators of wealth are worthy to enjoy or distribute."

To lose is often merely not to find—as a business chance or bargain missed, and thus lost, through failure to read the ads.

NORWAY'S DAY

Sons of Norway Have Celebration Program at Steinway Hall.

Normanna Male Chorus Entertains at Lester Park Pavilion.

The Norwegian independence day celebration, under the auspices of Northern lodge No. 16, Sons of Norway, at Steinway hall, last evening, was attended by an audience which comfortably filled the hall. The musical numbers were given by the Beethoven club of Duluth, consisting of F. G. Bradbury, violin; Mrs. Marie Geist-Erd, 'cello, and Gerard Tonning, piano. They played two movements of the "Per Gynt" suite, "Morning" and "Anitra's Dana," and two Norwegian dances, all by the Norwegian composer, Grieg. Mrs. Geist-Erd played a 'cello solo, an adaptation of R. Wagner's "O, Thou Sublime, Sweet Evening Star," from "Tannhacuser," and responded to an encore with a "Laendler."

The principal interest rested in the appearance of Marie Falk-Gjersten, a dramatic reader of much force and good power from Minneapolis. She read the "Bergliot" poem by Bjornson, with melodramatic music by Grief, played on the piano by Gerard Tonning, and responded twice to incessant demands for encores. Later she gave "The Cocking School," by George Riddle, in the English language.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred. G. Bradbury played a sonata for violin and piano by Grieg.

Dr. J. M. Tufty delivered an interesting address in the Norwegian language. He depicted the struggles of the Norsemen, which terminated in the grant of political and religious freedom, more sweeping than the rights conferred on the mases in any other European kingdom, and held that the constitution which was adopted and which has continued in force was adapted from that of the United States and France and embodies the political ideas of the Norse liberalists who defeated the conservative party.

Dr. Tufty told of the military alliance formed with Sweden and said that for nearly a century the nation has prospered under the liberal regime. He recalled the traditions of his native land and dwelt on the period previous to 1260, when Norway and Scotland used a common language.

H. B. Knudsen was chairman of the meeting.

* * *

At Lester Park the Normanna singing society gave a celebration in honor of the day, at which about 400 people were present. The Normanna chcrus sang a number of the national songs of Norway, and there was dancing, the orchestra rendering a number of popular dances of Norway.

MEMORIAL DAY IS ANNOUNCED

Governor Johnson Pays Tribute to the Dead Soldiers.

St. Paul, May 18.—Governor Johnson has issued a proclamation announcing the recurrence of Memorial day, as follows:

"Again that day approaches about which cluster the tenderest associations of the nation—Memorial day.

"For almost half a century the beautiful custom of decorating the graves of soldiers has obtained. Most of the states of the Union, including our own, have by proper legislation set the seal of approval upon this custom by setting this day apart for filial rites of remembrance and for the payment of a just and deserved tribute to those who, forgetting all save love for country, enlisted in the war for the preservation of the Union.

"True ancestor worship—this tribute from grateful, loving children to the heroic forefathers who fought to preserve to their heirs a land free from incumbrance, and who wrote their last testament with their own blood that all the world might read.

"In the great family struggle Minnesota played no fledgling part. The first state to offer her sons for the sacrifice and the last to withdraw them from service, her story is written in the language of Gettysburg, Chickamauga, Mission Ridge, Nashville, Vicksburg and a hundred other battles where valor and courage made heroes of men. Those who rest beneath the mounds in the North and South can no longer tell of their deeds, but the mound is in itself a story of patriotism, love and sacrifice. And it is to these mounds that we are privileged to go on Memorial day and lay floral and other decorations show our reverence and affection for the heroes of the nation.

"It is therefore taken for granted that no unnecessary labor will be performed on this day of hallowed memories, either in the home or business world, and all citizens of the state are urged to lay aside their cares and duties for that day and generally join in a due observance of the customs which prevail; to find some form for showing veneration; to express some tender thought for the departed. The drooping flag, the evergreen, the flowers of the field, should become proper symbols, typifying the resurrection of the body, and all these we may find at hand to express the gentler emotions of the heart and soul.

"The race of heroes has not become extinct. The passing of the soldier of 1861 is at hand, but the records of Santiago and Manila remind us and bear noble testimony that at any call to duty, American sons quickly respond, testifying that heroism and patriotism are imperishable.

"Let us, then, with one accord gather together, with unity of spirit, with one purpose, and without stint do homage at the shrine of the departed heroes of our country and thus honor ourselves in the performance of a sacred duty."

"AD" FAKIR IS IN TOWN

Fails to Get Endorsement of Trade Unions Which He Wants.

Every little while an advertising fakir of some kind or other strikes Duluth and tries to work some old graft in a new way. One of these space drummers is in town just now and, as usual, is trying to work a very old graft in a manner that is not as yet threadbare, but is not exactly new. It would be a fertile brain, indeed, that would get up a perfectly new advertising scheme these days when advertising schemes have been sprouting as thickly as mushrooms.

The gentleman who is now engaged in "working" the town is first of all seeking the endorsement of labor unions, and is representing to those to whom he sells space that he has such endorsement. He is getting out a wall card, which is of about as much use for advertising as a sign on the Sahara. But the trouble with his graft is that he is not getting the endorsement of the labor unions, and is not likely to get it.

Last night he appeared before the Cigarmakers' union and tried to get the endorsement of that union, but was turned down without ceremony. The union knows something of advertising and detected the graft at once. His offer to labor unions for their endorsement is that he will print on his card the label of the union, thus advertising union goods.

It is hardly likely that he will meet with much success among business men, any more than among the unions, but it is just as well to warn business men in advance.

DEATH OF E. W. TOOLE.

Foremost Lawyer of Montana Passes Away.

Helena, Mont., May 18.—E. W. Toole, perhaps the foremost lawyer of Montana, died yesterday, aged 66. He was born in Missouri, and came to Montana in 1864. He was a classmate of Senator Elkins at Masonic college, and was attracted to Montana by the bold excitement.

He mined very little, however, but soon built up a large law practice and became identified with the most prominent cases in the state, including the Davis will case, the Northern Pacific mineral land case and Butte mining litigation.

His brother, Joseph K. Toole, is chief executive of the state. Death was due to a complication of diseases.

ECONOMIC POLICY

Relation of Reciprocity to Our Foreign Trade Discussed.

Eugene N. Foss Addresses National Association of Manufacturers.

Atlanta, Ga., May 18.—One of the chief features of the session of the National Association of Manufacturers was an address on reciprocity by Eugene N. Foss of Boston. Mr. Foss said, in part:

"What are you going to do about it?"

This is the question I desire to ask of the National Association of Manufacturers relative to the situation suggested by my topic, "Reciprocity, an Economic Policy, and Its Relation to Our Foreign Trade."

What place does it occupy in our fiscal economy?

Is it worth protecting and promoting?

Can reciprocity aid us in protecting and promoting it?

These are some of the questions I would like to discuss here today.

Broadly speaking, there have been, in the past, only two alternative commercial policies: On the one hand Protection, on the other Free Trade. This is no longer true.

A third commercial policy is before us today and demands consideration. I am here for the sole purpose of defending Reciprocity as a consistent and reasonable policy for the development of a nation—and of persuading this representative body of American manufacturers that their largest and highest interests can be more perfectly safeguarded and developed by this policy than by any other; and that at the same time, by this means, the welfare of our people and the progress of civilization will be aided and advanced.

Now by Reciprocity we mean fair trade. We mean decent trade recognition of those nations which buy liberally of us, and thus become our commercial allies and make their prosperity our own.

We hold that this true Reciprocity is a much better economic policy than either that extreme form of "Free Trade," under which the Englishman favors his worst commercial enemies, to the injury of his best friends, or to the remorseless abuse of Protection by which we Americans adopt a still worse antithesis and assail our best friends with equal or greater vigor than even our worst foes.

We hold that this true policy of reciprocity carries with it a considerable and sufficient measure of tariff revision. It will insure to the American consumer a reasonable opportunity to buy without being made suubject to monopoly or extortion. I will also provide our producers the opportunity to sell throughout the world in fair competition.

For our own country, this means a tariff adequate to protect our industries against such conditions abroad as are undesirable and unAmerican; while low enough to enable our people to procure the necessaries of life, and materials for manufacture, as favorably as their foreign competitors. Abroad it implies friendly commercial conditions, whereby the products of the United States are admitted upon at least equal terms with those of other countries.

This beneficent policy, by its sound and strong system of rewards and punishments, will powerfully promote the great fundamental causes of humanity the world over—not only commerce, but liberty, progress and peace. Under its sway labor will be really protected, not despoiled; autocracy and monopoly will be boycotted and strangled.

Adopting President Roosevelt's famous phrase, "the countries that behave themselves decently will have nothin to fear," and I may add, everything to hope, from each other and from all, when and where true reciprocity shall prevail.

Mr. Foss then discussed our experience with reciprocity. We have had four distinct experiences with reciprocity. The first was with Canada, with whom a treaty providing for the free exchange of natural products was in operation from 1886 to 1866. The second was with the Hawaiian Islands, which was in force from 1876 to 1900. The third was that existing under the McKinley tariff act of 1890, with the British and Spanish West Indies, the Dominican republic, five Central and South American countries, and the German and Austrian empires. The fourth was our reciprocity experience under the Dingley act, particularly with Cuba. Mr. Foss showed that in each case reciprocity was very successful.

As the second main proposition, Mr. Foss contended that reciprocity is not inconsistent with, but on the contrary is the complement of a carefully guarded and limited policy of protection. Such a policy is the only true and defensible protection policy. Unfortunately, however, this is not the form bof protection which we now have. Protection as we know it is tending to become prohibitive of foreign trade and commerce and productive of graft and monopoly at home.

Reciprocity is identical in spirit with such true protection as that advocated by the foremost leaders of protection in recent years—such as Blaine, Harrison and McKinley. It is the "twin principle" with protection, the compensation in the economic system which should control and direct the commercial policy of the government.

We must remind the world that this policy of reciprocity was consistently and persistently promoted and advocated by them and their administrations, through both legislative and executive acts requiring great effort and proving of great importance.

We must also observe that although this policy of reciprocity was the creation of the Republican party, and was at the outset and until recently strenuously withstood and denounced by the Democratic party and by free traders, it has of late been pretty fully and formally adopted by the latter. In fact, they are contending with the Republicans for the right of the line in its onward march.

Hence, it has become the common solvent of our fiscal and economic politics; a common meeting ground for us all, without regard to party; removing this great moral and commercial issue, or at least its fundamental aspects, from the arena of party strife.

My third main proposition is, that reciprocity is the essential foundation for maintaining and extending our valuable foreign trade. Your true protectionist, I take it, recognizes that he has two markets to protect, so that he may sell his goods in both with a reasonable profit—the home market and the foreign market. When, as in many cases now, we supply the home market wholly and have a large surplus to send abroad, the acquisition and retention of our proper share in the foreign market becomes continually more important.

The aspect of protection is gaining more recognition from year to year, as our exports increase. The true policy of protection is to keep American enterprise and labor busy, with a reasonable return for both; and not to pour unlimited profits into the laps of monopolists.

As has been well stated, when McKinley used the phrase at Buffalo in his great reciprocity speech, "without injury to any American industry," he did not mean it as an equivalent of "without any reduction of profits to the manufacturer." The industry is injured when it ceases to be conducted with reasonable profits, not when the proprietor suffers a diminution of dividends from extravagant profits to fair profits. This is the milk in the cocoanut of too many of our over-protected manufacturers, who, like our friends who defeated the French treaty, grow red in the face at any suggestion of lowering the tariff schedules for the purpose of increasing trade.

But finally we are told there are serious objections to our program. A distinguished manufacturer of my own state—whom we all delight personally to honor—has just publicly announced his conclusion that any attempt to revise the tariff will lead to "party disorganization and national calamity." He can see no alternative but to "stand pat," let come what may.

I cannot agree with him. Party is a secondary consideration, in a question of this importance; but even on that ground I have confidence enough in my own party to believe that it can revise the tariff, whether by one method or another, to the benefit of the country. This may involve some change in the personnel of our representatives at Washington, but even that is a secondary matter to which the people can be trusted to attend.

It is a favorite device of the ultra high-tariff man to allege that the manufacturer, particularly of Massachusetts, is desirous of abolishing all duties on all raw materials while retaining high duties on the finished products.

This special appeal to the prejudices of the farming class, this playing of one interest against another, is made, it is needless to say, to stir up the farmer to antagonize all tariff revision; ostensibly in his own interest but in reality to save a class of duties which are unnecessarily, yes, outrageously high. In my part of the country this appeal comes most loudly from a group of gentlemen whose products enjoy a measure of protection ranging from 45 to 150 per cent.

As we reach the more moderately protected manufacturer the cry is not so loud, and when we get down to the fellow who has only 25 per cent and is doing the largest business of them all, particularly in the foreign trade, the boot and shoe manufacturer, he says: "Give me my free raw materials, including coal, and take off your tariff, if you think best—I can compete in any market in the world." It is a man of this stamp that was elected governor of Massachusetts last fall, and he is one of the most successful business men we have in the state.

The farmer is not to be fooled very easily, and he knows that his best guarantee of success is prosperity in the manufacturing centers. He knows, too, that the policy of retaliation which is shaping up all over Europe will hit him first, for it is at our agricultural products that the first aim is taken. If you doubt this, study the new German tariff. The farmer is even more dependent upon foreign trade than the manufacturer, for he has more of it.

YOUNG FIREBUG

Who Could Not Endure the School's Restraint.

Bozeman, Mont., May 18.—A warrant has been issued for the arrest of Joseph Davis, aged 14, on a charge of arson. Davis is a resident of Valley View, and is accused of having set fire to the Valley View schoolhouse, owned jointly by the school district and by the Modern Woodmen.

The last attempt was made on the evening of May 9, but was only partly successful, the building being saved with little damage. It had just been rebuilt after being burned last November. It was also burned about a year before that, and at all these times suspicion pointed strongly to the crime of arson.

County Attorney Galbraith believes that Davis started all the fires. The lad was strongly averse to going to school, and it is thought he started the fires with a view of getting a long holiday.

DELEGATE OF PRINTERS.

Local Union Representative to Toronto Named.

Duluth union, No. 136, of the International Typographical union yesterday afternoon elected as delegate to the annual convention of the organization W. Harry Witchall. The convention will be held in Toronto, Aug. 14, and will be in session about a week, legislation for the benefit of the printing fraternity at large. There were several candidates for the honor which fell to Mr. Witchall, and there was a warm contest. The election of a delegate was by ballot.

Mr. Witchall was born in Toronto, and his election as delegate is doubly interesting to him, as he will not only attend the convention, but will be able to visit his relatives at the same time.

LITTLE BUSINESS TALKS.

There are hundreds of men in the business world who have seen their competitors commence to advertise and promptly and loudly prophesied their failure. These have learned their mistake and paid a high price for their experience.

To see your competitor prosper at your expense is far from pleasant. Others havet hought that there might be something in advertising, but have preferred to wait and see how those who tried it came out. These must now be content to occupy a position as "also rans," as the advertisers have forged so far ahead, and gained such a foothold, that it is a hard matter to dislodge them.

Advertise your goods.

The purchasing public expect to hear from you, if you have bargains to offer. If you don't tell your story the man across the way will. The public want bargains.

If your prices are right, if your goods are seasonable, if your advertising is truthful and goes to the home, you will without a doubt be the owner of a busy store. Every business evening nearly 18,000 people buy The Herald. Every evening it is read by an average of nearly 90,000 people, in most cases in their homes. A home-read paper assures business for its advertisers next day.

If you want to "talk over" your advertising campaign in any way, it will be a pleasure for a Herald advertising man to call upon you, if you will please call 'Three Twenty-four. Either line.'

SEES FIENDS IN A DREAM

Attorney In Defense of Murderer Tells Fantastic Tale.

Somerville, N. J., May 18.—Three men, as fantastic and evil as villains in fiction, but portrayed with a fidelity which brought them forth as actual beings, were introduced to the jury in the criminal court, which is hearing the trial of George H. Wood for the murder of George Williams on Mount Horeb, Feb. 2.

Samuel Swackhemer, counsel for prisoner, told the jury that all three characters are flesh and bood to Wood. They have come into his life at frequent intervals for several years. They have lured him on to acts which have blighted his career.

If Wood killed Grocer Williams in his sleigh, Swackhemer asserted, it was three devils holding him in their power for nearly a week which drove him to do the murder.

He opened for the defense with the following words:

"I am in an extraordinary position, representing a deranged man, a man unable to make a defense like one in possession of his normal faculties. I can neither deny nor admit the circumstances of the crime.

"The defendant knows nothing of what transpired in the interval from Jan. 31 to Feb. 2. He cannot recall his whereabouts or his action during these days.

"We will endeavor to show you that on Feb. 2 the prisoner was unconscious of his acts. If he killed Williams, it was not through a guilty motive nor for gain, nor because of animosity.

"This defendant on Jan. 30 started out, as he thinks, with two men—Henry Wolf and Mack. Mack was introduced to Wood by Wolf. Both are beings born of insanity. Wolf has been Wood's evil genius for years. He first came to the defendant one day, claiming to be an illegitimate son of Wood's father.

"Wood has forsaken job after job to escape the houndings of this apparition. He was in terror of the man, for human he was to the defendant.

"Wolf appeared Jan 30, and, while talking about business affairs, told Wood a man named Mack would help him. Mack had agreed to obtain $1,000 from his father and to give it to Wood; it would be necessary to go to Scarsdale, Pa., for the money. Wood goes home and is met there by Wolf, and the latter conducts him to a barber shop, where he introduced Mack. There plans were made for the trip.

"Wood tells how with his two companies he crossed the ferry and took the Pennsylvania railroad train. He recalls vaguely disembarking at a junction, having dinner, and tells even what the party ate. While sitting at a table the surroundings became obscure. In this haze Wolf and Mack disappear and Wood finds himself with a little dark man at his elbow.

"This man becomes his guide, and together they set forth. Wood seemed to be moving in a rush. Something drills it into his mind that the little black man took him aboard a train. Dreamy sensations numb his brain until he returns to consciousness, when the keeper at the Tombs asks him on Sunday, two days after his arrest for the murder of Williams, if he wishes to attend religious service.

"At the time when this evil genius, Henry Wolf, appears, he takes control of Wood. The defendant's life then is without a guide or rudder. Wood is not a criminal, but a lunatic."

CONGRESSMAN DAVIS

Tells President the Northwest Is With Him.

Washington, May 18.—Representative Davis of Minnesota had a pleasant visit with President Roosevelt yesterday. Speaking about the purchase of Panama canal supplies in the cheapest markets, the president said the result of his policy would be to put the entire question up to congress, where it belongs. He wants congress to decide it. He did not discuss the tariff in this connection with Mr. Davis.

The president was interested in finding out what the Northwest sentiment is regarding the railway rate question, and seemed pleased when Mr. Davis informed him that the Northwest public indorses what the president said in his Denver and Chicago addresses.

Mr. Davis has had some official business at the postoffice department. Among other things, he is working for the readjustment of rural delivery matters in his district, more especially in Goodhue county. There was a move to detach part of Red Wing from the city postoffice, for instance, and attach it to rural routes. This Mr. Davis will probably be able to prevent. He will go to New York tonight.

POLICE GUARD

Bride From a Hoodlum Crowd of Students.

Des Moines, Iowa, May 18.—Lest the pupils of the bride, who was a teacher in the Highland Park college, here, should interrupt her marriage ceremony by a demonstration, a dozen policemen formed the picket lines about the house while Miss Helen Longwell was married to E. W. Weldy Tuesday night. A band of several hundred students was kept back by the police.

DEFENDER OF GUITEAU

Finds It Very Hard to Keep a Wife.

Knox, Ind., May 18.—George Scoville, brother-in-law of Guiteau, murderer of President Garfield, whome he defended, has brought suit in the Starke circuit court against William L. Chaney and wife for $5,000 damages, claiming they had alienated his wife's affections.

After Guiteau's conviction Mrs. Scoville left her husband because he had failed to clear the murderer.

He married the second time a few years ago, and now his second wife has left him, and he charges her daughter and husband with being the cause.

NATURE'S ESSENCE.

Extracted From Forest Plants.

Nature's laws are perfect if we obey them, but disease follows disobedience. Go straight to nature for the cure, to the forest; there are mysteries here that we can fathom for you. Take the bark of the wild-cherry tree, the root of mandrake, stone root, queen's root, bloodroot and golden seal, make a scientific, non-alcoholic extract of them with just the right proportions and you have

Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery.

It took Dr. Pierce, with the assistance of two learned chemists, eight years of hard work experimenting to make this vegetable extract and alterative of the greatest efficiency.

Just the sort of spring remedy you need to make rich, red blood, and cure that lassitude and feeling of nerve exhaustion. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery bears the stamp of PUBLIC APPROVAL and has sold more largely in the past forty years than any other blood purifier and stomach tonic. The refreshing influence of this extract is like Nature's influence—the blood is bathed in the tonic which gives life to the blood—the vital fires of the body burn brighter and their increased activity consumes the tissue rubbish which has accumulated during the winter. Dr. R. V. Pierce, the founder of the Invalids' Hotel and Surgical Institute, and a physician of large experience and practice, was the first to make up an ALTERATIVE EXTRACT of roots, herbs and barks,

Without a Particle of Alcohol or Narcotics, which purifies the blood and tones up the stomach and the entire system in Nature's own way. The "Golden Medical Discovery" is just the tissue builder and tonic you require when recovering from a hard cold, grip, or pneumonia. No matter how strong the constitution the stomach is apt to be "out of kilter" after a long, hard winter; in consequence the blood is disordered, for the stomach is the laboratory for the constant manufacture of blood. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery strengthens the stomach—puts it in shape to make pure, rich blood—helps the liver and kidneys to expel the poisons from the body. If you take this

The weak, nervous, run-down, debilitated condition which so many people experience at this time of the year is usually the effect of poisons in the blood; it is often indicated by pimples or boils appearing on the skin, the face becomes thin—you feel "blue." NORTHFIELD CONFERENCES

Six Main Assemblies, Running From June 30 to Sept. 15.

Northfield, Mass., May 18.—The plans for the Northfield summer conferences, as just announced by W. R. Moody, son of the late D. L. Moody, promise one of the liveliest seasons in the history of the work. Six main assemblies are under way, including the well known college conference, which has met at Northfield since 1886, a similar conference for young women, a summer school for Sunday school workers under the direction of the Massachusetts State Sunday School association, a summer school for missionaries managed by the Women's Board of Foreign Missions of the United States and Canada, a general conference for Christian workers, the oldest assembly of the kind in America, and a series of post conference meetings lasting until Sept. 15. Most of the gatherings will be of an international nature and the missionary school is expected to bring together one of the largest delegations of foreign workers ever assembled in this country. Many methods of religious work will be brought up and discussed during the summer, the first four assemblies dealing specifically with different branches of Christianity, and the general conference combining and energizing them all by the inspiring power of the holy spirit.

Nearly all the foreign speakers who took part in the conferences last year are again scheduled to speak, and in addition, an unusually strong corps of men are on the program. The list as announced includes Prebendary Webb-Peploe of St. Paul's cathedral; Dr. G. Campbell Morgan of Westminster, London; Professor R. A. Falconer of Halifax; Dr. S. M. Zuener of Arabia; Dr. C. R. Watson of Egypt; John R. Mott, Rev. A. P. Shauffler, D.D.; Robert E. Speer, Mrs. W. A. Montgomery of Rochester, Professor James Denney of Glasgow, John Willis Baer, and Dr. Johnstone Ross of Cambridge.

The exact dates of the conferences are as follows: Student conference, June 30 to July 9; Young Women's conference, July 11 to 20; summer school for Sunday school workers, July 22 to 30; summer school for Women's Missionary societies, July 24 to 31; general conference for Christian workers, Aug. 4 to 20; post conference addresses, Aug. 22 to Sept. 15.

RASH COUPLE WERE WARNED

By the Minister and Hasty Marriage Was Postponed.

New York, May 18.—Leroy Clark, member of the Yale club and broker in the employ of Jewett Bros. of No. 45 Broadway, who lives at No. 351 West Fourteenth street, and Miss Sarah Brown, who gave her address at the Hotel Orleans, No. 10 West Eightieth street, went to the Hotel Barthodli in a cab early in the morning and declared they wished to be married.

Clark was told that Rev. Harry M. Warren, known as the hotel chaplain, was ready to wed all couples at all hours in the hotels. The chaplain came hurriedly down from his home, No. 45 West Ninety-fourth street.

Before his arrival Clark met Tim Hurst the baseball umpire, and several other men about the hotel, and they were invited to witness the marriage. Hurst immediately appointed himself master of ceremonies and then Miss Brown, it is related, told how a second man had proposed to her exactly at 12:30 o'clock.

She rejected his proposal and fifteen minutes Clark, who was with her when the first proposal was made, asked her to become his wife. Clark's proposal was accepted, and the rejected suitor, Clark and the girl climbed into a cab and started off to the Barthodli.

Rev. Mr. Warren came in while the girl was telling how she had refused the first offer of marriage, and how the rejected suitor still remained outside in the cab.

Seeing the minister, the couple arose and stood ready for the ceremony. Hurst took his place as best man, and other men in the hotel crowded around. But the minister did not begin the ceremony. His face was very grave as he approached Clark and the girl.

"Aren't you making a mistake?" he asked. "Aren't you being in too great a hurry? Will it not be better for you to consider this serious step further before you take it?"

"We will wait," came from Clark, and his face became pale.

"You had better," suggested the cabman. "I will take this girl home now. You better wait till you have thought it out."

The cabman's suggestion, added to the advice from the minister, was enough for the girl.

"We will wait," she whispered, and she took Clark's arm and followed the cabman to the street. Clark and the girl climbed in by the side of the rejected and forlorn suitor, the whip cracked over the tired horse and he was off.

BITTEN BY A DEADLY SNAKE

And Survived to Figure In Three-Cornered Tragedy.

Memphis, Tenn., May 18.—According to statements made by the mother of Eva Ferguson, the young woman who with Hal Williamson was killed by Thomas McCall last Sunday in a Calhoun street restaurant, her daughter had led a remarkable career. Born in Cuba, bitten by a venomous reptile in the tropics at an early age, she survived the bite and proved herself immune from pain or poison. This in brief is the statement of the mother.

The woman's maiden name was Eva Kennedy. Her parents live in St. Louis. She was born in the West Indies. At the age of 4 she was bitten by a fer de lance and the bite did not poison her. That fact attracted the attention of scientists and in her effects were stories printed in various papers of her being bitten by other poisonous snakes without injury. She spoke French fluently and had traveled the world over. At one time she was on the stage and claimed to have been married to a man by the name of Tardo and that her stage name was Eva Tardo. Her child is in a school in Georgia and she sent it money regularly.

During her residence in Memphis she had received mail from Shreveport, La., and South McAlester, Okla. She stated to her more intimate friends that her father was a physician and that she had two married brothers, but that she did not know where the brothers were.

THREE FINGERS BROKEN

As Result of Fall From Eleventh Story.

Memphis, Tenn., May 18.—Falling from the eleventh story of a new steel-framed skyscraper in course of construction here, Lonnie Stroud, foreman of the plumbing forces of the Seldon & Breck Construction company, was hurled seemingly to sure death, but lives to tell the tale of a most remarkable accident.

Stroud lost his balance and fell through the elevator shaft. His companions hurried down expecting to find a mangled body, but instead Stroud rose to his feet and exhibited three broken fingers as the sum total of damage.

A plank which extended across the bottom of the shaft resting on timbers served as a springboard and undoubtedly saved Stroud's life, as it broke the force of the fall.

VICTIM OF OVERWORK.

Brother of E. L. Millar of Duluth Hangs Himself.

Kenton, Ohio, May 18.—Attorney John F. Millar, aged 44, of Richwood, Ohio, hanged himself in a barn at the home of his cousin, Mrs. Newton Robinson, near here Monday. He formerly was employed on the Republican, a newspaper edited here by his brother, E. L. Millar, now in Duluth, Minn. Overwork caused nervous prostration and melancholy. A widow and two children survive.

Millar's father-in-law is Lord Houghton, an Englishman, now living in Marion.

TERRIBLE BLUNDER

In Mrs. Lillie's Case, Say the Nebraska Club Womem.

Serving Life Sentence For Murder of Her Husband.

Lincoln, Neb., May 18.—A second Mrs. Maybrick, say the club women of Nebraska, is Mrs. Lena Margaret Lillie, who is serving a term of life imprisonment in the state penitentiary for the murder of her husband. Thoroughly convinced that the woman is the victim of a terrible blunder of justice, the club women have taken up the matter of securing for her a new trial or a pardon.

At the coming meeting of the state federation plans for enlisting the support of all of the women of the state in the movement will be adopted. The first step will be to raise money to employ counsel to present the matter to the supreme court, with the proffer of new evidence that has been gathered since that tribunal decided that there was no doubt of her guilt under the evidence presented at the trial.

The initial step has been taken by club women of Lincoln. Mrs. Lillie was at one time active in club affairs.

She was a former school teacher and later the fashionable dressmaker of the town of David City, where her husband was a grain dealer on a small scale. The murder for which she was sentenced was committed in October, 1902, but the case was so stubbornly fought in the courts that she was not brought to the penitentiary until a few months ago.

There she was visited by former friends, acquaintances made in club work. To them she insisted that she was an innocent woman.

They have become convinced that she is telling the truth and they propose to help her. If the courts will not act, a monster petition will be presented to the governor asking for her pardon.

"A committee from the federation," says Mrs. H. M. Bushnell, president of the state association, "has visited Mrs. Lillie at the prison and heard her story. We have cross examined her at length and asked her all sorts of questions, and we are convinced that she is an innocent and greatly wronged woman.

"Her case bears a striking analogy to that of Mrs. Maybrick. Both were falsely accused of the same crime, the killing of a husband. Around both have been woven strong webs of purely circumstantial evidence.

"Mrs. Maybrick, after many years of effort, proved her innocence. We propose to try to do the same thing for Mrs. Lillie. American justice moves not so slowly as that of England, and we hope to accomplish something in a short time.

"We shall ask first for a rehearing at the hands of the supreme court. Twice that court has declared its conviction that the evidence justified the jury's verdict, but we shall present some new facts of a pertinent character.

"Mrs. Lillie wants and we desire to give her a chance to prove her innocence, but if justice bars the way we propose to appeal to mercy. We propose to take the matter up among the women of the nation, and if necessary to move the courts or the governor to act, we shall bring their powerful influence to bear.

"The woman had but little money when the tragedy occurred, and her parents, once well-to-do, have spent all of their property in trying to save her. An appeal to the women of the country will shortly be made."

As an earnest of their belief and of their desire to help, a number of women here have given orders for summer dresses to be made by Mrs. Lillie. Soon after her reception at the prison, she was put to work sewing for the institution. In a short time she organized the women of the prison into a sewing club and later, under permission to the warden, she was allowed to take work outside of the penitentiary.

Her skill as a dressmaker is such that she has more orders than she can execute. All of her surplus earnings, above the daily task she is required to do for the warden, she keeps, as is the rule with all convicts.

Mrs. Lillie's husband was killed in bed one morning. Mrs. Lillie was the only known person in the room with him. Her story, told to the other members of the household, was that she was awakened by the shot that killed her husband.

She started up to find a tall stranger with a gun pointed at her. She rolled out of bed just a second before he pulled the trigger, and the bullet whistled harmlessly over her and out through a window. Then the man vanished.

The night before, she says, Lillie brought $500 home with him. This fact was known to a certain man, who has since left David City, the scene of the murder, and before going to bed Lillie expressed fear of this man's robbing him. The money was gone the next morning.

Unfortunately for the woman's story, the bullet entered Lillie's head upon the side toward her, while the bullet holes in the window curtain and screen, instead of showing a downward direction, as they would if the shot had been fired from where she says the man stood, indicated that the missile had been headed upward; the hole in the screen being higher than that in the pane.

The state's theory was that Mrs. Lillie while lying by her husband's side shot him. Then turning over she fired the second shot out of the window to give verisimilitude to her story. As a corroborative circumstance, it was shown the curtain had been scorched, which the state asserted would have been impossible if the revolver had been held on the far side of the bed.

Mrs. Lillie did not take the stand in her own defense. It was shown that she had been gambling in options on the Chicago board of trade, privately telephoning her orders to a local broker and cautioning him not to let her husband know.

She had lost $1,000 in a few months. Lillie was heavily insured. Here was the motive, the state said—to get more money with which to gamble and retrieve her losses.

Mrs. Lillie says now that it was an error on her part not to testify. She desired to do so, but her attorneys told her it was unnecessary, that the evidence did not justify a verdict of guilty and that she need not undergo the mental and physical strain. She now realizes that her silence told against her.

Mrs. Lillie is 40. She has a daughter.

KILLED HERSELF

At Clinic, With Hundred Doctors Within Call.

New Orleans, La., May 18.—After being told that she was suffering from an incurable disease at a clinic of the Charity hospital, Lena Lassique, aged 34, walked outside the room and swallowed carbolic acid. She was discovered lying in the hallway a few moments later and was carried into a ward. Although all the physicians at work in the clinic worked on her she died inside of an hour.

This is the first time in the history of the Charity hospital that any one committed suicide within its walls, with a hundred physicians within calling distance.

The woman traveled over a hundred miles to get an expert opinion on her condition.

A FATAL BLOW

Would Have Been Dealt to Northwest Wheat Growers.

Effect of Interstate Commission In the Early Seventies.

Chicago, May 18.—Prof. Hugo R. Meyer, assistant professor of political economy in the university of Chicago, and one of the most eminent of the students of economic conditions abroad, today declared that had the interstate seaboard commission been in existence in the early seventies, it would have dealt a fatal blow to the wheat growers of the Northwest.

Prof. Meyer has just returned from Washington, where he appeared before the senate committee on interstate commerce. He gave the senators the benefit of his twelve years of investigation of the economic conditions in Germany, Russia, England, Austria-Hungary and Australia.

"Had the interstate commerce commission been in existence in the seventies when Minnesota and Dakota wheat was in competition with the wheat of New York, Ohio and their neighboring states, the farmers of the Northwest would have been dealt a blow from which they never would have recovered," said Prof. Meyer.

"Fortunately, however, when the people of Ohio, New York and the other Eastern states which produced grain, went to congress with the claim that the markets of the American seaboard were theirs by natural right, and that nobody else should be allowed to get into it and demanded that freight rates should be established according to the length of the haul, which would compel the farmers of Minnesota and the Dakotas to pay three, four or even five times as much for the transportation of their grain to get it to a port, congress did nothing but listen. The idea of fixing the rates by law and not by commercial conditions was not seriously considered then. If the interstate commerce commission had been in existence then with the authority to fix rates for which it is now clamoring, and had acted as it has acted many times since, it would have established just such a scale of rates as the Easterners wanted and that, of course, would have excluded the Western grain growers from the Eastern and European markets on which he must depend.

"As it was, the railroad straightened the question in their own way and continued to serve the interests of the Northwestern farmers much to the satisfaction of a majority of the people. Today the farmer of the Northwest is able to land his wheat at an Atlantic seaboard dock at a cost so reasonable that he can compete upon a basis of equality with any one in the world.

"In fact he can send it to Germany, for example, where the railroads are owned by the government and freight rates are consequently set at a point that has restricted trade almost to its annihilation in some places, and sell with decided advantage over the German wheat grower who is, perhaps, not one-tenth as far from the market.

"Early in the present investigation a very interesting letter was received from one of the large milling houses of Minneapolis. It was written in refutation of some of the statements that had been made to the effect that Western millers were in favor of putting the regulation of freight rates into the hands of the interestate commerce commission. No evidence that this refutation must be final could be stronger than the simple statement of this miller. He wrote he could send a barrel of flour to Europe and land it as cheaply as he could deliver one by horse and wagon in his own city.

"Nobody has been discriminated against to give the wheat grower, the grain dealer and the miller of the Northwest, this advantage over foreign competitors. The whole commerce of the country has benefited, as it has benefitted by a hundred other similar opportunities opened by the railroads. Every shipper in the United States is helped, of course, by anything that increases the volume of traffic to a point where his cost of transportation is lowered. Why any one should want to replace the system that has so successfully built up American industry until its products have entered every market in the world, with a system that has never failed to restrict trade, wherever it has been tried, is more than either expert in political economy or the well-informed business man can understand."

MICHIGAN MAN

Caught a Giant Six-Foot Sting Ray.

Frankfort, Mich., May 18.—H. L. Lockhart sent home from Florida the sting of an enormous sting ray, which he hooked while fishing for channel bass at Rockledge. The barbed sting measures seven inches and was taken from a salt water monster measuring six feet from tip of nose to end of tail, and three feet two inches across.

Mr. Lockhart and his brother-in-law, J. J. White, were out in a boat and were having good luck with bass, when Mr. Lockhart got a "good one." The catch fought for over an hour and Mr. Lockhart tugged, but could not land the fish. Then he turned it over to Mr. White, who played with him for another hour. They were sure they had a shark, so they rowed the boat into the water and pulled the fish toward shore, and when it showed up it proved to be a giant sting ray. The men hooked it with another line and waded ashore and towed it in and killed it. Photographs were taken.

Inflammatory Rheumatism Cured in Three Days.

Morton L. Hill, of Lebanon, Ind., says: "My wife had inflammatory Rheumatism in every muscle and joint; her suffering was terrible and her body and face were swollen almost beyond recognition; had been in bed for six weeks and had eight physicians, but received no benefit until she tried the Mystic Cure for Rheumatism. It gave immediate relief and she was able to walk about in three days. I am sure it saved her life." Sold by all druggists.

THE LAXATIVE OF KNOWN QUALITY

There are two classes of remedies: those of known quality and which are permanently beneficial in effect, acting gently, in harmony with nature, when nature needs assistance; and another class, composed of preparations of unknown, uncertain and inferior character, acting temporarily, but injuriously, as a result of forcing the natural functions unnecessarily. One of the most exceptional of the remedies of known quality and excellence is the ever pleasant Syrup of Figs, manufactured by the California Fig Syrup Co., which represents the active principles of plants, known to act most beneficially, in a pleasant syrup, in which the wholesome Californian blue figs are used to contribute their rich, yet delicate, fruity flavor. It is the remedy of all remedies to sweeten and refresh and cleanse the system gently and naturally, and to assist one in overcoming constipation and the many ills resulting therefrom. Its active principles and quality are known to physicians generally, and the remedy has therefore met with their approval, as well as with the favor of many millions of well informed persons who know of their own personal knowledge and from actual experience that it is a most excellent laxative remedy. We do not claim that it will cure all manner of ills, but recommend it for what it really represents, a laxative remedy of known quality and excellence, containing nothing of an objectionable or injurious character.

There are two classes of purchasers; those who are informed as to the quality of what they buy and the reasons for the excellence of articles of exceptional merit, and who do not lack courage to go elsewhere when a dealer offers an imitation of any well known article; but, unfortunately, there are some people who do not know, and who allow themselves to be imposed upon. They cannot expect its beneficial effects if they do not get the genuine remedy.

To the credit of the druggists of the United States be it said that nearly all of them value their reputation for professional integrity and the good will of their customers too highly to offer imitations of the manufactured by the California Fig Syrup Co., and in order to buy the genuine article and to get its beneficial effects, one has only to note, when purchasing, the full name of the Company—California Fig Syrup Co.—plainly printed on the front of every package. Price, 50c. per bottle. One size only.

No city in the Union is showing such permanent progress, which means much to every inhabitant and taxpayer. To the untiring efforts of its aggressive jobbing concerns is largely due the credit of the great advancement made by the city in the past few years, and each day they are demonstrating that

ALL HOOSIERS ARE AUTHORS

Says George Ade—State's Zones of Literary Activity.

Lakewood, N. J., May 18.—George Ade made a humorous speech at the second anual dinner of the Periodical Publishers' association. His topic was ond annual dinner of the Periodical From the Author's Standpoint," but his speech was of Indiana and its authors. Ade illustrated his fun with a chart of Indiana, divided into zones of literary activity. He is a modest young man and spoke with some nervousness, but the joyful reception he got put him squarely on his feet right at the start. He said:

"I am going to read my remarks, and after I read them you will know why I didn't have the courage to memorize them. A good many years ago, when I selected journalism as a profession because it is the only profession that seemed to require no special preparation or unusual mental equipment, I believed that an editor was a man who really wielded the Archmedean lever. After I got into the business I discovered there was another man who wielded the editor, and that he was known as the publisher. I had to get into the inner workings of the craft in order to learn this important fact.

"When I applied for a job on a newspaper I was asked 'Have you attended college?' I said: 'No, I have attended a university. We have no colleges in the West.'

"Accordingly I was assigned to the editorial staff at $15 a week. I was sent to push a pencil in a back room on the top floor. Afterward I learned that if I had not owned up to being a college graduate I would have been assigned to the business department with a roll top desk at $50 a week.

"The publisher and his favored associates on the business end of the sheet had beautiful quarters on the first floor. We could see them through the glass partitions lolling in their leather chairs. They worked four hours a day and we worked fourteen. I discovered I had a made a mistake and I could do better in the advertising field, so I became an author. I suppose that is why I am invited here tonight. I know I am an author because I am from Indiana. Every Hoosier is an author. He is an author by instinct.

"You gentlemen who are in the publishing business no doubt are looking for hot stuff. If so do not worry for another moment. There are now being incubated in the State of Indiana enough manuscripts to keep all you supplied for the next ten years. Every summer the authors of Indiana meet at Hyde lake. They assemle in the open air, because there is no building in the state big enough to hold them.

"Do you know how many authors we have in ndiana? I do not speak at haphazard. I make no careless estimates. We have in Indiana 22,837 authors, 6,397; magazine poets, 1,625; real poets, 420; dramatists, 1,216; syndicate humorists, 674; short story writers, 8,532.

"We can give you anything you want. If you wish a scholarly essay with a dash of statesmanship, go down into the Beveridge belt, where John Hay started, where Schuyler Colfax, Harrison and Voorhees labored. You can get an essay while you wait. If you wish a novel with a burning heart interest go and inspect what is known as the Tarkington zone. There are Tarkington, Charles Major, Nicholson, and hundreds of others writing. In the northwest you will find the McCutcheon family, eight of the family going it with day and night shifts. The southern part is the romantic novel region, with Gen. Lew Wallace, Maurice Thompson, David Graham Phillips and others.

"John Clark Ridpath was one of the pioneers in what has become a permanent industry. He wrote school histories and sold them to college students at 50 cents apiece. Afterwards it was discovered that by putting in the Christy pictures and distorting the main incidents the book could be sold at $1.50 per.

"The region between Vermilion and Posey counties is something unprecedented. Everybody there says 'Well, if Tarkington and the McCutcheon boys can get away with it, there's a chance for me.' Go to any village on a peaceful summer evening and you will hear a low buzzing. At first you think it is a dynamo in an electric lighting station. Not so—it is some 16-year-old maiden thinking out a historical romance. Next year she will have her picture in The Bookman.

"Right in the heart of the dialect poetry region is a cluster of counties which gave to the world names that are unperishable. How shall we account for genius thus emerging from the tall grass? Richard Underwood Johnson, the humorist of the Century company, came from Richmond, Ind. William M. Chase, the eminent painter, came from Franklin. Tod Sloan, the world's greatest jockey, came from Kokomo. Kid McCoy, premier middle weight, came from Zionsville.

"I shall not tire you with a further recital of our greatness. If you haven't got what you want go to Indiana."

GREAT MEDICINE MAM.

Follopa Harjo Has Many Whites Among Patients.

Muskogee, I. T., May 18.—Simon Billey, whose Indian name is Follopa Harjo, is reputed to be the greatest medicine man among the Creeks. He does not confine his healing art to members of his own tribe, but many white people have gone to him and secured relief. He charges no fee, but merely asks his patients to give him a free will offering after he has finished treating them.

Follopa Harjo is officially known among his people as the Medicine Man of Eufaula-Canadian Town. His home is eight miles west of Eufaula. Here he has innumerable varieties of roots, barks and plants in stock, from which he extracts his healing potions. He has a different medicine for every ailment, which he applies either externally or internally. He mixes the medicine in huge "sofka" kettles, all the time reciting a kind of a chant in his native tongue. Occasionally he stops and with a long tube blows his breath into the liquid. When this is done the medicine is put aside for use.

Follopa Harjo maes all the medicine which is given to Indians before they indulge in an Indian ball game, and in their stomp dances. For several hours before the dance or game they sit near the scene of the coming sport under arbors, drinking the medicine. It acts as an emetic and is supposed to clear their systems of all impurities and give them strength and endurance for their games or dance. The old medicine man is a fullblood and does not speak a word of English.

CONFISCATED BY URUGUAY

Nova Scotia Schooner Seized and Crew Put In Prison.

Halifax, N. S., May 18.—The Nova Scotia sealing schooner, Agnes G. Donohue, with her outfit and cargo of 400 sealskins was confiscated by the Uruguayan government and her commander, Capt. Matthew Ryan and crew of fifteen men have been placed in prison to serve terms of from six months to three years for alleged violations of the laws of that country.

That information reached the owners of the vessel in this city yesterday in a cablegram from the agents of the Balcom sealing fleet at Montevideo. The case has been pending since 1903, and the decision of the court has just been delivered.

The Agnes G. Donohue, a sealing vessel, sailed from Halifax in 1903, and was seized five miles off the coast of Montaildo by Uruguan gunboats. The vessel and crew were taken to Montevideo and have since been held. The captain was charged with raiding the seal rookeries and hunting in Uruguayan waters without permission.

It was said last night that the British government would probably send warships to Montevideo and demand a thorough investigation.

Capt. Ryan was sentenced to three years, William Ryan, first mate, and William Prior, second mate, to two years each, and members of the crew to six months each penal servitude.

Ottawa, Ont., May 18.—R. Boden brought up in the house yesterday the seizure of the sealer Agnes G. Donohue, by the government of Uruguay for alleged seal poaching in Ecuadorean waters. The owners claim the vessel was seized on the high sea.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier, the premier, said in reply that all the government could do was to make representations to the British government.

TWINS ALIKE IN MARRIAGE

Daughters of Poor Mechanic Wed Men of Millions.

Boston, May 18.—The second of the Riece twins, famous for their beauty, has followed the example of her sister and surprised Back Bay society by her secret marriage to a son of wealthy parents. Both young women were salesgirls at the glove counter in a local department store. Mrs. Samuel G. Adams of No. 284 Marlborough street, has just learned upon her arrival from Europe that her son, William F. Clapp, was secretly married in Providence a month ago to Miss Helen Riece.

Mr. Clapp is 23 years old and his bride is 27. As soon as his mother sailed for a European trip a month ago he went to Providence, was married and established his bride in a house in Somerville. The bride's parents have also just been acquainted with the news.

Mary L. Riece, the bride's sister, caused society a surprise when she was married on Aug. 3, 1899, to Horatio Bigelow, a son of A. S. Bigelow, president of the Boston and Montana Copper company, and worth probably $30,000,000.

Young Mr. Bigelow, while passing through the department store, saw Miss Riece and immediately fell in love with her. He sought an introduction, soon proposed marriage and was accepted. When he told his father of his intentions the elder Mr. Bigelow immediately suggested a trip around the world, with the hope that the young man would forget this love affair.

The son agreed, but went only as far as Chicago. He renewed his suit and was secretly married.

There was talk at the time that Mr. Bigelow would disinherit his son, but he, too, was soon won by his daughter-in-law's great beauty and parental forgiveness followed.

The Riece twins are daughters of August Riece, a poor but respected machinist at the Watertown arsenal. He served through the civil war, and was also for thirty years in the regular army.

Not a cent wanted, unless you are cured. If you are sick and ailing, take Hollister's Rocky Mountain Tea. A great blessing to the human family. Makes you well—keeps you well. 35 cents, Tea or Tablets. Ask your druggist.

HAY FORK FELL FROM LOFT

And Impaled a Four-Year-Old Girl.

Richmond, Ind., May 18.—Gladys Campbell, 4-year-old daughter of John Campbell, a farmer residing near Dublin, was instantly killed by being struck by a hay fork. The fork fell from the mow, and plunged through the body of the child. The father was almost crazed with grief.

BY A ROOSTER.

Little Girl In Indiana Was Badly Lacerated.

Indianapolis, Ind., May 18.—A ferocious rooster attacked 2-year-old Olive Nimal at her home, 608 South Keystone avenue, and seriously injured her before it was driven away. The child instinctively placed its hands across its eyes and saved them. The rooster finally knocked her down and pecked her face till it was covered with blood.

The child's screams failed to scare it, but they brought her mother to the rescue. It was necessary to summon a physician to care for the wounds.

London, May 18.—A dispatch to a news agency from St. Petersburg, says Ivan Kalcieff, who assassinated Grand Duke Sergius at Moscow, was executed yesterday.

TRAGEDY OCCURS AT SANDON, B. C.

Winnipeg, Man., May 18.—A terrible tragedy is reported from near Sandon, B. C., where a friend going on a visit found a horrible state of affairs at the cabin of Gus and Charles Kumlin, a quarter of a mile east of Almo siding. Both occupants were found dead, one lying on the cabin bed with several ugly gashes on his head, evidently done with an axe. The other was lying on the floor with a double barrelled shot gun near the top of his head, which was blown off. Nothing is missing from the cabin. The door was fastened on the inside, but the window was broken. There was not much sign of hard fighting. The deed appears to have been done by one brother, who killed the other while asleep. Both men were steady workers in the mines around Sandon.

MATRIMONIAL CLUB RAIDED BY POLICE

Chicago, May 18.—In a raid made yesterday upon the Belmont Corresponding club, an alleged matrimonial agency at 12-14 State street, detectives arrested three persons and seized several thousand letters and photographs. The prisoners gave the names of Oscar Wells, "Doc" Moses and M. Felcher. They were charged with disorderly conduct and were released under bonds to appear before Justice Prindiville. The police say the "club" has done a large business. The prisoners would not discuss their arrest.

PLANNING FOR ELK'S MEETING

Arrangements For Coming Convention In Duluth Are Made.

At the meeting of the Elks last night arrangements for the entertainment of the visiting members of the lodge during the state convention, to be held in Duluth, June 8 and 9, were discussed. While all the details of the program are not yet entirely complete, the main features have been decided upon, as has already been announced in The Herald.

On the first day of the convention there will be a business meeting from 2 to 4 o'clock in Elks' hall. At the same time a reception will be given the ladies at the St. Louis hotel, which will be the headquarters of the lodge during the meeting. In the evening there will be a ball at the Armory.

On Friday, the last day of the meeting, a business session will be held in the morning, and later all the visitors, including the ladies, will be taken for a drive around the boulevard and to other points of interest. In the afternoon there will be an excursion on the lake, and in the evening there will be a special session and entertainment at the Armory.

ARE ALARMED NEEDLESSLY

Park Pointers Hear False Report About Water System.

A wild and woolly report was current aomng some of the Park Point residents this morning to the effect that the board of water and light commissioners had rejected the guaranty for the water system and that the board would not spend the $40,000 obtained from the bond sale on the Park Point system as agreed to by the city council.

Inquiry among some of the Park Point residents, who are handling the guaranty petitions, and at the office of the water board, shows that the report is utterly foundless and that unnecessary alarm has been created.

W. F. Leggett, who is one of the Park Point property owners interested in getting the water system, says that because the guaranty must be technically correct, it has been necessary to take the list and make a little revision. Some of ahe people signed as owners of Lake avenue property when their descriptions should have been for Minnesota avenue. It is claimed that were there any part of the guaranty lacking in the original list there are a large number of other property owners that stand ready to sign if called on.

At the water board office it was stated that the report could not be true as the board had taken no action other than to refer the guaranty list to the abstract office. That office found that some of the signers had wrong descriptions of their property and the lists were referred by the city attorney back to the people handling them to get them revised.

The guaranty required by the water board was $2,269 and this amount was raised by the subscription lists already presented and which have been refered back. It is the understanding of the water and light commissioners that there are more than enough property owners on the point that stand ready to sign, if necessary.

WILL REPAIR BREAKWATER

Whitney Bros. Company Submit Lowest Bid For Work.

Bids were opened this noon at the office of Major Charles L. Potter, government engineer, for the repair of the east breakwater at the Portage Lake canals, which was damaged by the storm of last December. The lowest bid for the work was $1,175, made by Whitney Bros. company of Superior, which firm will be awarded the contract. Other bidders were John P. Richards, Dollar Bay, Mich., for $1,575 and McCurdy Bros. of Houghton, for $2,089.

The work is what may be termed an emergency job and for which there is $1,200 available, the Superior firm having figured within $25 of that amount.

In the repair work the specifications call for about 100 cord of rock for filling and for furnishing and placing the deck and sloping plank and steel plates and fastenings.

SAWMILL BURNS

Red Cliff Lumber Company's Plant On South Shore.

Off-Shore Wind Prevented Loss of Planer and Lumber.

The Red Cliff Lumber company's sawmill at Red Cliff, Wis., on the south shore of Lake Superior, near Bayfield, was totally destroyed by fire about 12 o'clock last night. News of the fire was telephoned to the company's headquarters here this morning, but no details were given as to the cause of the blaze. A. E. Gilbert, a member of the Red Cliff Lumber company, left for the scene of the fire this morning.

The loss on the mill is stated by Frederick L. Gilbert to be about $12,000, fully covered by insurance.

The Red Cliff company has a considerable amount of lumber and timber at that point, as well as a planing mill, but as the wind was off shore, it is understood that the loss was confined to the mill alone.

The mill had a 20-hour capacity of about 140,000 feet, and has been operating quite steadily of late on a double shift. Some of the timber to be used for the cribwork in the protecting dike at Superior entry this summer was sawed, or to be sawed, at the Red Cliff mill.

The mill was built several years ago and was fitted with two bands and a resaw.

The Age of Dogs Does Not Affect the License.

Contrary to an impresion which seems to be quite widespread in the city, the age of a dog has no effect on the necessity to secure a license for it.

Many owners believe that when a dog is under six months of age it is not necessary to take out a license, but this is not the case, and no matter how old the animal may be it must have a license.

Officer Barber has been detailed by the police force to hunt up delinquent owners of dogs and compel them to pay their license fee. The fee was due May 1 and all owners who have neglected to pay it are liable to a fine or imprisonment.

PROUTY'S VIEWS

On Rate Making Told to Senate Committee.

Washington, May 18.—Commissioner Prouty of the interstate commerce commission today gave testimony before the senate committee on regulating rates. He said that neither the commissioners nor any court had power to determine a reasonable rate for the future. There must be a tribunal to stand between the railroads and the people. Rates should be made by the railroad, but there should be some power to revise the rate fixed by the traffic managers. The executive and judicial duties, he said, should be taken away from the commission, but it should be left with administrative duties, which include authority to revise and fix rates for the future.

Speaking of the fruit cases investigated at Chicago, he said the commission would hold that refrigerating charges were a part of the freight rate. He would create a department of railways, before which informal complaints could be filed, and also a commission which should decide all questions of rates to go into effect at once, to be reviewed by a court.

TO CURE INSOMNIA.

Lying awake is often a habit. It is worth almost any effort to break up such a habit, says the Philadelphia Inquirer.

Insomnia is usually the result of one of three things—poor circulation, indigestion or mental distress. The person who studies himself carefully will be able to locate the difficulty and treat himself accordingly.

For poor circulation try warm baths, warm-water bottles, brisk rubbing, soaking the feet and deep breathing. For indigestion take a warm drink before retiring or when sleepless. Dring warm water, warm milk, weak tea or cocoa and breathe deeply.

For mental distress mere will power is the best. Close the eyes and as fast as the thoughts come drive them out. Carry on in the mind a house-cleaning process.

Sweet sleep and plenty of it will go a great way toward keeping women young. When sleep departs wrinkles come.

It is by sleep that we gain strength for another day. Sleep is to the brain and nerves what food is to the body.

Here are a few simple, tried rules for driving away insomnia.

Go to bed warm. Never go to bed with cold feet.

If the event of the day have been trying, read a short, light story before retiring.

Leave the window down at the top and protect the bed from draughts.

As soon as the body touches the bed relax the muscles, shut the eyes and make ready to sleep. Nothing drives away sleep more than the thought that one can't sleep.

SOME BIG HANDS.

Helena Beats Butte at Some Tall Poker.

"It was perhaps the most remarkable game of poker played in Helena in recent years," said a well-known physician, addressing a group of friends in one of the hotel lobbies, according to a Helena, Mont., correspondent of the New York Sun. "No, I was not a participant, but I learned the details, and of their veracity there can be no doubt.

"The game occurred during the last week of the legislature, and was participated in by residents of Helena and Butte, and a remarkable feature of the game was that every resident of Helena quit a winner, while every Butte man booked a losing when the game ended.

"While the aggregate winnings amounted to less than $5,000, yet there were two or three unusual incidents even for a poker game, and these involved high stakes.

"One Butte man sat in the game, buying $200 worth of checks. The man to his right, who was also a resident of Butte, opened a jackpot for $50. The newcomer, who had three aces, played back, and to the extent of $50.

"The opener, who held a pat hand, stood the raise, and again raised the newcomer for the amount of his stakes, or $100. The newcomer did not better his hand in the draw, and lost his $200 within two minutes after he had sat in the game.

"The most remarkable stake of the game was when this same newcomer opened a jackpot with three queens, and several others staying it came to the dealer, who found that he had an ace full.

"He quite naturally played back, and the three-queen opener simply trailed to see what the others would do, and to his delight all stood the raise. Noticing that the dealer had exposed his own hand to the extent of announcing that he would stand pat, the opener drew right down to his queens and caught the fourth one.

"He passed the bet and allowed the trailers to start the ball rolling, so that when it came to the dealer the pot contained nearly $2,000. The dealer bet $50, while the four-queen opener played back for $500 more, but did not get a caller, raking down about $2,900 in one pot.

"The Helena men won $2,400, $2,200, $525 and $200, the losses being nearly equally divided between the Butte men, with the exception of Swede Sam, who lost nearly 1,800."

NO NEED OF THANKS.

An elderly clergyman who attended the Baptist ministers' meeting last week told of an occasion during the past winter when the joke was on him, says the Philadelphia Recorder. It was a very cold day, and the sidewalks being slippery, the clergyman had some trouble in walking. When he came to the steps of his residence he tried to climb them, but was unable to do so because of the thick coating of ice. A little boy passing along the street lent his arm to the old man, assisting him to the top step, and then was about to run away, when he was called back and thanked. "Oh, don't mention it," said the boy. "I am used to that. My father comes home that way almost every night."

TOO MUCH GROUND.

Ex-Congressman H. St. George Tucker of Virginia, during a recent visit to Baltimore, repeated a story of a Virginian who had been indulging too freely in the flowing bowl and who had become overconfident of his own greatness. Looking around at his companions the Virginian boasted: "Gentlemen, I can like any man in Richmond." Nobody took up the challenge and the Virginian returned to the charge. "Gentlemen," he said, "I can like any man in the whole state of Virginia." The words were hardly uttered, the narrator said, before a tall, lean, sinewy man from the western part of the state gave the boaster a thrust that sent him sprawling on the floor. Like Owen Wister's famous nameless hero, this Virginian had a sense of humor, and as he slowly picked himself up he turned to the group and drawled: "Gentlemen, I'm ready to acknowledge that I kivered too much territory."

FRIGHTEN SHORTS

Reports of Damage Cause Them to Cover Wheat Sales.

Sharp Advance In Price With September Option a Feature.

Duluth Board of Trade, May 18.—Stories of crop damage or reports calculated to unsettle confidence in the future of the growing crops were thicker than flies in the summer time today and the shorts ran to cover with a swiftness that caused prices to sear, especially in the final hour when the larger part of the grain was made. Oklahoma, Kansas, Texas and Indiana were all sending in discouraging reports. Nicollet of the Kansas City Star was reported as saying that it looks like two-thirds of a crop in Southern Kansas and Oklahoma. On the other hand some private wire houses wired from Chicago that the damage reports coming were not of a nature to be considered reliable, and that the advance was simply a case of "shorts on the run and scared to death." The Northwest was getting reports from its wheat fields to the effect that the crop is from ten days to two weeks late.

While there were advances in all options the real feature of the day was the gains scored in September, which has formerly been rather dull.

In Duluth this advance reached 3½c while in Minneapolis is was 2¾-⅞c, in Chicago 2⅝c, in New York 2⅜c, in St. Louis 3¼c and in Kansas City 2¾-7⅛c.

Chicago woke up today and had a sharp advance in all options. Both May and July there advanced 2c. In Duluth the advance was 1c in May and 3½c in July, in Minneapolis 1c in May and 2⅝c in July, in New York 2⅜c in May and 2⅝c in July, in St. Louis 2½c in May and 2⅝c in July and in Kansas City 3½c in May and the same in July. In Winnipeg there was an advance of 1¼c in May and 1c in July.

The Liverpool market closed ⅞@1d lower. London ½d lower. Berlin ⅝c lower and Budapest ½c lower.

Car receipts at Duluth were nothing against 8 last year, and at Minneapolis 100 against 46 last year, making a total for the Northwest of 100 against 54 last year. Chicago received 1 against 2 last year.

Primary receipts of wheat were 151,960 bus, last year 112,555 bus. Shipments 374,826 bus, last year 504,694 bus. Clearances of wheat and flour aggregated 72,774 bus.

Corn in the Liverpool market closed unchanged at ¼d lower. July corn in the Chicago market closed ¾-⅞c higher. July oats closed ⅝-¾c higher. Primary receipts of corn were 195,800 bus, last year 200,400 bus. Shipments 369,898 bus, last year 385,880 bus. Clearances were 126,573 bus.

In the Duluth market trading in wheat was limited in volume, though after the noon hour, when the heavy advance came, there was more than previously. The July option opened 1c lower at $1.03 and fell to $1.02¼ five minutes later. It then advanced to $1.03½ at noon and in the next half hour jumped to $1.05¾. It closed at that price—an advance for the day of 1½c. The May option advanced 1c to $1.06. The September option was really the feature of the market. It opened unchanged at 82c and at noon had advanced to 83¼c. It jumped to 85¼c in the last hour and closed at that price, a gain for the day of 3½c.

Cash wheat was dead. Durum wheat declined 2c.

Flax was generally dull, though there was a little trading in October. That option opened ½c lower at $1.24, advanced to $1.24½ and closed at $1.24. The September option advanced 1c to $1.26. July was strongest, making an advance of 1¾c to $1.44¾. May was 1c higher.

Oats advanced 1c.

Following are the closing prices:

THE CHICAGO MARKET.

Improved Weather Has Weakening Influence on Wheat.

Chicago, May 18.—Improved weather conditions throughout the United States had a weakening influence on the wheat market here today. Bearish sentiment was made more pronounced by the weak tone of the Liverpool market. Pit traders were liberal sellers. July opened 1⅛@⅜c to ⅜@½c lower at 86c to 86¼c. On buying by commission houses the price advanced to 86¾c, but eased off again to 86⅜c. Minneapolis, Duluth and Chicago reported receipts of 401 cars against 116 cars last week and 56 cars a year ago.

Late in the session the market developed exceptional strength, and prices made a sudden jump upward. Numerous reports were received telling of deterioration in the fall sown crop, the most damage being reported from Kansas, Oklahoma and Texas. An actual general demand started a rapid advance in prices. Just before the close July sold at 86¼c a gain of 3½c from the lowest point of the day. The market closed practically at the highest point with July at 86⅝@⅞c, a net advance for the day of an even 3c.

The bull campaign in corn for May delivery received a temporary setback today. Weather conditions were more favorable to the bears and prospects were good for increased arrivals. An additional bearish influence was a decline at Liverpool due to rumors of large shipments from Argentina. May opened ½c to 1c lower at 52½c to 53c, and for a time held within the opening range. July was off ⅛c at 48¾c. Local receipts were 85 cars, with seven of contract grade.

In response to the bulge in wheat the corn market became active and strong. Shorts were the best buyers. May advanced to 54c and July to 48c. May closed at the highest point of the day at a gain of ½c. July was up ⅝@¾c at 48⅝@45c.

Oats were firm on a fair demand from commission houses. July opened unchanged to ⅛c lower at 29⅜c to 29½c, and advanced to 29¾@¾c. Local receipts were 89 cars.

In sympathy with a firm hog market, provisions had a firm undertone. The market received some support from packers. July pork and lard were each unchanged at $12.65 and $7.37½ respectively. Ribs were up a shade at $7.27½@7.30.

Close: Wheat—May, 97½c; July, 89⅝@½c; September, 82½@¾c. Corn—May, 54c; July, 48⅝@48c; old, 49¼c; September, 48¼c; old, 48¾c; December, 44⅞c. Oats—May, 31½c; July, 30¼c; September, 28⅝@¾c. Pork—May, $12.55; July, $12.75; September, $12.95. Lard—May, $7.22½@7.25; July, $7.37½; September, $7.55@7.57½. Ribs—May, $7.10; July, $7.27½@7.30; September, $7.55. Rye—May, 77@78c; July, 60c; September, 57c. Flax—Cash northwestern, $1.42; southwestern, $1.26; May, $1.26. Timothy—May, $2.90; September, $3.20. Clover—May, $12@12.60. Barley—Cash, 42@50c. Cash wheat—No. 2 red, $1@1.02; 3 red, 95@97c; 2 hard, 94@96c; 3 hard, 88@94c; 1 northern, 2 northern and 3 spring, nothing doing. Corn—No. 2, 54@54¼c; 3, 53¾c. Oats—No. 2, 30½c; 3, 30¼c.

LIVERPOOL GRAIN.

Liverpool, May 18.—Wheat—Spot, quiet; No. 1 California, 6s 9d; futures, steady; May, 6s 7¼d; July, 6s 8½d; September, 6s 7d. Corn—Spot, firm; American mixed, new, 4s 3½d; futures, steady; May, 4s 3⅞d; July, 4s 4¼d.

GRAIN GOSSIP.

Logan & Bryan, Chicago: Wheat—In the first hour market ruled strong and showed a slow advancing tendency, but on receipt of news from the Southwest reporting damage from Texas to Kansas the bulls simply ran away with the market. The bear element was early stampeded into action. Covering from this source contributed much to the early strength. Other news received no attention whatever. To back up and give color to the damage reports coming in both St. Louis and Kansas City markets were sharply higher, but very little buying from these centers developed in today's market. To our mind it is yet too early to get anything reliable in the shape of damage news. Scares are bound to come whether true or not, and considering this fact we feel would go rather slow in forcing the bull side on extreme bulges. We still feel the condition is sound; the cash situation is strong and while this factor holds we would buy wheat on the setbacks.

Corn—Trade in this market was on a liberal scale and in a mild way the market acted in sympathy with the wheat. The improved weather prevailing through the corn belt took a little snap out of the bulls who seem inclined to go slow in forcing the bull side. This market still looks to us like a trading affair. The market still looks to us like a trading affair.

Oats—The action of this market is slow. It seems to have petered out on the recent increase in cash and export demand. We feel a furthr advance in the speculative will prevent shipments from primary points and increase the movement from the country.

• • •

Record-Herald: Wet weather in the corn belt during the last three wooks has turned an apparently hopelessly May corn deal into an impregnable one, and in addition has put the soil in condition to give the new crop a fine start, provided warm and fair weather follows soon. Only twelve more business days of the present month remain and it is hardly probable that conditions will change sufficiently to impair the position of the present holders in view of the profits that have already accrued from a widening of differences in their trades recently closed. The May corn was bought and the July sold originally at differences of about ⅝c per bus. These widened out to 5¼c where they stood at the close of business last night. The cash corn situation has steadily improved. By the exhaustion of Argentine and reduction of American corn stocks at Liverpool, export business was possible yesterday at very slight concessions from the Chicago basis of values. The Bartlett-Patten crowd corn holding is about the only one from which respectable quantities can be offered abroad. It is melting away very fast, as it must stand the drain from domestic as well as from foreign consumers.

• • •

Cincinnati Price Current: Excessive rains delaying corn planting and to some extent unfavorable to other crops, but good promise for wheat and oats not appreciably disturbed. Favorable weather in the near future would put corn on an encouraging basis.

• • •

Charles E. Lewis, Minneapolis: I took the bull side of wheat this morning and I'm going to stay there. I believe our July will sell at $1.20 and September at 95c or $1.00. Southwest crop news is growing worse every day.

THE COTTON MARKET.

New York, May 18.—The cotton market opened firm at an advance of 1 to 7 points on active covering with nearby shorts particularly uneasy and May selling at 7.96 on call. The buying was prompted by very firm cables and large spot sales reported in the English market, while on the advance there was heavy realizing on bulls. After the first rush of covering, consequently, the market sagged off and by the end of the first hour had declined to a net loss of about 2@3 points on the active months. The market was less active at the decline and looked very nervous.

Spot closed quiet; middling uplands, 8.30; middling gulf, 8.50; sales, 1,050 bales. Futures closed steady; May, 7.85; June, 7.66; July, 7.74; August, 7.74; September, 7.75; October, 7.83; November, 7.86; December, 7.90; January, 7.94; February, 7.96; March, 8.02.

TREASURY BALANCES.

Washington, May 18.—Today's statement of the treasury balances in the general fund, exclusive of the $150,000,000 gold reserve in the division of redemption, shows: Available cash balance, $130,228,353; gold, $68,704,263; silver, $18,821,119.

DECLINE IN STOCKS

Continued Pressure on Steel Issues Unsettled Entire Market.

Closing Was at About the Lowest and Very Weak.

New York, May 18.—Selling orders predominated at the opening and carried prices lower. The industrials were most affected but Northern Pacific lost a point and Southern Pacific and Wabash large fractions. There were running sales of 7,000 shares of United States Steel at 29⅞ and 29⅝, compared with 30¼ last night. The preferred stock fell ¾. Copper, Locomotive and Colorado Fuel lost about a point.

Operations in the railroad list were governed by the movement of St. Paul. When that stock overcame the effect of the depression in the metal group, and advanced to 175¼, Standard stocks improved slightly. Meanwhile Delaware & Hudson had been lowered 2 points and St. Louis Southwestern preferred, Wabash, Kansas City Southern preferred, United States Steel preferred, Tennessee Coal, Bag preferred and Rubber Goods preferred 1. Eventually the losses were retrieved to some etxent when the western stocks began to display decided firmness. Union Pacific rose to 123 and Wheeling & Lake Erie scored a gain of a point. The movements were wavering and reflected no decided opinions on the market. St. Paul was below 178 before 11 o'clock.

Union Pacific had an advance again, reaching 1 point higher than last night, and Southern Pacific followed it a large fraction. The effect elsewhere was slight and the United States Steel stocks sagged lower than before, the common losing ⅞. There was a sale of 100 shares of Michigan Central at an advance of 12 points over the preceding sale in Feb. Atchison, Atlantic Coast Line, Sco, Smelting, Sloss-Sheffield Steel, General Electric, Consolidated Gas and the Paper stocks lost 1 to 1½. Bonds were steady at noon.

Selling orders were largely increased after 12 o'clock, and the resultant weakness affected a great variety of stocks. Among these was St. Paul, the Southwesterns, Pacifics and a great number of the industrial specialties. Union Pacific succumbed to the general heaviness and sold off to 121⅝, carrying Southern Pacific with it. Losses were established of 4 in American Express, about 2 in St. Paul, Copper, Tennessee Coal, Pressed Steel Car preferred and Allis-Chalmers preferred and 1 to 1½ in Illinois Central, Kansas & Texas preferred, Great Northern preferred, Reading, Pennsylvania, Canadian Pacific, Chicago Great Western, St. Louis & Western preferred and some others of less prominence.

The heaviest liquidation of the day occurred between 1 and 2 o'clock, when stocks were poured out on a large scale. Declines were much extended in all quarters, and the persistent pounding the market received shook out many stop-loss orders. Over-night losses ran between 1 and 2 generally and between 2 and 3 for many representative stocks, including St. Paul, Union Pacific, Northern Pacific, New York Central, Reading, United States Steel, Copper and Smelting.

Losses were much extended in the final hour, the market showing very little resisting power. The declines which reached 2 or over became numerous amongst the speculative favorites. St. Paul was forced down 4¾, Great Northern preferred and Northern Pacific 5, Union Pacific 3⅝, Atlantic Coast 3, Toledo, St. Louis & Western preferred 3½, New York, Chicago & St. Louis second preferred 5, D. & H. 3¼ and Locomotive, Copper, the United States Steel stocks, Steel Foundries preferred and others 2½ to 3. The closing was at about the lowest and very weak.

STOCK GOSSIP.

Logan & Bryan to Paine, Webber & Co.: The market is closing very weak. Continued pressure on the Steel issues unsettled the entire market. Wall street also has been giving more attention to crop news and undoubtedly reports of damage to the winter wheat had something to do with the selling. The close shows some little feeble rally from the low point which would warrant the belief of at least some lower prices tomorrow. Further declines appearing we would favor purchases of good stocks.

• • •

Dick Bros. to Paine, Webber & Co.: Market showed strength again for a time this morning when bullish traders made further efforts to rush prices up, but once more stocks were plentifully supplied and before noon the list turned heavy. Latter it became decidedly weak, influenced by reports of crop damage. The Steel shares declined sharply and had much to do with unsettling the market.

• • •

T. A. McIntyre to Paine, Webber & Co.: From what we hear can see nothing better ahead than a traders' market for moderate turns. We think it will have more of a dragging tendency than otherwise until the winter wheat crop is out of danger and the outlook is more re-assuring for cotton and corn than at present.

DULL MARKET IN COPPER

Very Light Trading and North Butte Lower In Price.

The local market for copper shares was very dull today and trading did not aggregate very much in volume. There were a few trades in North Butte at $28, not more than three or four, and while offerings are scarce the buying power is slow enough so that they are not readily absorbed. At the close some was offered at $27. Buyers are evidently under the impression that they can get it cheaper by waiting.

Black Mountain was more liberally traded in than usual, several hundred shares changing hands at $3.10.

In the Bisbee group there was not much activity. Some Calumet & Arizona was taken at $100 and there were a few sales of Calumet & Pittsburg at $32.50 and Lake Superior & Pittsburg at $39. Junction was $70 bid with no trades. Pittsburg & Duluth was dead and again closes on "asked" prices.

Paine, Webber & Co. wired from Boston to the local house that the market there was dead. The dullness in Boston is undoubtedly affecting the market in all copper stocks.

The Anaconda, Mont., Standard of Monday said of the North Butte company:

"The North Butte company has some improvements under consideration and they will be undertaken as soon as it secures control of the property. Among these improvements is the sinking of a new shaft. At just what point it is to be put down has not been fully determined upon, but it will be on some of the new ground recently acquired by the Speculator company. Some new devices for convenience are now being adopted, one of which is the installation of an electric motor. It is the intention of the company to operate all of its machinery outside of the hoisting plant by means of the electric current, which will add greatly to the economic conduction of the work.

"The vein struck in the Jesse claim by way of the 1600-foot station crosscut of the Speculator is said to be growing larger and better with the advancement of the drifts. T. F. Cole, J. Morgan Clements and John G. Brown, who came here from the East to examine the property, spent a day last week going through the workings and were much pleased with the showing. It exceeded their anticipations, especially those of Mr. Brown, who lives in Chicago. The vein of the Jesse is like those of the other large copper-silver ore producers in the Butte district; its course is east and west and its dip south. It is claimed that F. A. Heinze had a bond on the property about three years ago and could have bought it for $50,000, but allowed the time to expire without an attempt to renew it.

"The North Butte company does not intend to stop with the purchase of the Speculator. It has already laid its plans for the acquisition of other mines to its possessions, but it is not giving the public any information as to the ones it is after. It may go out of Butte for some and it may not, and it may take in some more of the good ones with which the hill north of the city is dotted. It may also build a concentrator and smelter of its own; it is rumored that these things are under consideration and will be given attention after the transfer of the Speculator is made. It is not likely, however, that any plant will be built in the near future, if at all, for all of the ore mined can be disposed of to the Amalgamated at a good figure, and the latter company will buy all it can produce."

The Norberg Manufacturing Company of Milwaukee has contracted to install three quadruple cylinder hoisting engines in the Bonanza circle group of properties at Bisbee, Ariz. The three engines are to be installed at the Oliver shaft of the Calumet & Arizona, the Cole shaft of the Lake Superior & Pittsburg, and at the Junction shaft. They are of identical size, with steam cylinders 18x42 inches. The egnes in these shafts are triple-deck, carrying three ore cars to each load. The duty for which the new hoisting engines are designated is to hoist a load of 24,900 pounds, consisting of 6,000 pounds of ore, 6,900 pounds contained in the cage and cars, and 12,000 pounds of rope.

ELOPER SUICIDES.

Takes Morphine In a New York Hotel.

New York, May 18.—Herbert Leon Kepler, a bookkeeper, whose home was in Deland, Fla., died in a room in Hussen's hotel at Forty-sixth street and Sixth avenue today from morphine poisoning. With him at the time was a woman who told the police that her name was Mrs. Dona Miller, and that she fled from Deland with Kepler two weeks ago. Mrs. Miller said Kepler was the son of a Deland physician and that he left Florida suddenly because of some trouble which he got into there. He left a wife and several children behind when he fled, she said, and she left her husband to come here with him. She has been detained by the police pending a further investigation of the case. Kepler was about 37 years old.

Marine.

The E. T. Carrington, the former canal ferry steamer, left today for Houghton, where the owner, Capt. Walter Lloyd will operate her as a ferry while traffic there is impeded by the loss of the ferry bridge which the North Wind knocked over some time ago.

Very few boats arrived in this harbor during the last twenty-four hours. All of those that did come in with the exception of one, are light for ore. Two boats which came up light for ore a few days ago were sent to either Two Harbors or Ashland to load last night.

Arthur F. Rose of the Sault, is assistant lighthouse keeper under Keeper James Prior at the Duluth entry. Mr. Rose recently passed the light house examination with a standing of 95 per cent, the highest rating of his class.

REND NOT BADLY DAMAGED.

Chicago, May 18.—An examination of the steamer Rend 'n the Shipowners' dry dock shows that the boat is not as badly damaged as thought from standing on Manitou island. The starboard side is raised, but this can be remedied by a shifting of the keel blocks, after which an inside steel cord will be placed on that side. eRpairs will cost $5,000 and will take about ten days.

PALMER INSURED FOR $100,000.

Cleveland, May 18.—The steamer T. W. Palmer, which was sunk on Lake Superior by collision with the Harvard, was insured for $100,000. She had a partial cargo of coal shipped by the Pittsburg Coal company. The Harvard's bow is badly damaged and she is leaking. She will have to lighter about 1,000 tons of ore at Sault Ste. Marie.

EVIDENCE ALL IN

State Rests Its Case Against Lenich and Longer.

Accused Murderers of Peter Kracovitch Begin Their Defense.

With a conclusion of the evidence gathered in the murder case against Frank Lenich and Frank Longer, the state practically rested when court adjourned this noon, although County Attorney McClintock asked that it be left open until 2 o'clock, at which time the jury were to again assemble and when it were possible that the state might have additional testimony to put in.

The morning session of court in the murder trial rather dragged. The principal testimony given against the men on trial, or more particularly against Lenich, was that of Joseph Frenzell, an Austrian residing at Eveleth, who acted as interpreter at the coroner's inquest over Peter Kracovitch's body. Frenzell said he had known Lenich, Longer and Kracovitch for the past two years.

At the inquest Longer, so Frenzell said, testified that Lenich pursued Kracovitch out into the street and knocked him down with a blow in the head or neck, that so far as he knew Lenich merely used his hands to strike the blow. Longer was said to have further testified that after Kracovitch was knocked down, he, Longer, went up to Lenich and said, "Come back, Frank, Pete has got enough." This was said while the men were standing almost over Kracovitch.

Frenzell said Longer testified that after he spoke to Lenich, the latter pulled his arm and they walked away. Longer is also reported to have said that he saw Lenich kick Kracovitch after he was down.

Frenzell further testified as to the testimony of some of the other witnesses at the inquest but he so frequently got his English mixed up that both the state and Lenich's attorney finally gave up trying to get anything more from his recollections.

Deputy Sheriff M. J. Horgan, who with Deputy Randall drove out to Isaac Nelson's home on the Miller trunk road, after Lenich and Molinech, after the two men were captured by Nelson, testified as to the trip made in the early hours of the morning. The officers drove out about twenty-eight miles from Duluth at 3 o'clock in the morning. Nelson's place was said to be thirty-two miles from Eveleth.

Deputy Horgan testified to finding Lenich sleeping and that when aroused and shown the picture which appeared on the circulars sent out to aid in his apprehension, he readily admitted that it was his own picture. Lenich told the officers that he was from Eveleth and that he was on his way to Duluth. When arrested Lenich had $31 in money and was carrying a small bundle of clothing.

Patrick Dolan, chief of police at Eveleth, who was a witness for the state this morning, told of his notification of the murder by an unknown man, a tall fellow with a thin black moustache. This man, he said, he had not since been able to find.

Chief Dolan testified to finding the body of Kracovitch lying on the sidewalk with a wound in the neck. The wounded man was taken to the hospital, a few hundred feet distant, where he died shortly after the stabbing affray. Chief Dolan said he set right out to hunt up the murderer or murderers and searched several houses, among them the boardinghouses of Lenich and Longer, but without any success. He says that he arrested Longer when the latter appeared at the coroner's inquest the following day, but that Lenich he never saw until yesterday at the county jail.

Testimony was given yesterday afternoon by Matt Kieley, who was the first to reach the dying man. Jacob Korpi, Alex. Hill, Dr. E. D. Daugherty and Louis Zidar, the latter being a boy about twelve years of age. Louis is said to have taken to Chief Dolan a knife which Lenich gave his mother, the weapon being covered with blood. The state acts on the supposition that this is the knife used to kill Kracovitch and it was introduced in evidence. The weapon is, apparently, new, a two-bladed affair with an ordinary wooden handle. The blade, which seemed to have been used for the cutting is about two inches long and has on it a number of bloodstains.

Several of the witnesses told of seeing the struggle and one of the death blow, but none of the witnesses that appeared yesterday were able to positively identify Lenich as the person they saw struggling with Kracovitch.

It was not known this noon whether L. H. Corcoran, attorney for Lenich and Longer, would put his clients on the witness stand. During the morning recess Lenich and Longer sat laughing and chatting together in low tones and in their own language. Lenich would ocacsionally grimace and shrug his shoulders as if something that had been said or done did not suit him.

HIRAM CRONK BURIED WITH IMPRESSIVE HONORS

New York, May 18.—The body of Hiram Cronk, the last veteran of the war of 1812 to pass away, was buried today in Cypress hill cemetery with impressive honors. Since yesterday, when it was brought from Boonville, the body of the veteran soldier lay in state in the city hall, where it was viewed by many thousands.

DROWNED IN SLIP

Unknown Man Falls In Bay Near City Ferry Dock.

Victim Sank From Sight Before Assistance Could Arrive.

An unknown man was drowned in the harbor, just opposite the city ferry dock, about 12:30 o'clock last evening.

A. B. Hill was just returning from a trip in his gasoline launch at the time. He heard a splash, followed by repeated cries for help, but before he could get his engine started and his boat headed for the spot, the man sank from sight.

After searching for a few minutes about the place where the man sank, Mr. Hill headed his launch for the dock, and running to the nearest telephone, summoned the life saving crew.

The men dragged the spot for some time, but their efforts were unsuccessful, and they finally abandoned the search.

This morning they renewed their efforts, and about 10 o'clock they dragged the body to the surface.

It was taken to Durkan & Crawford's undertaking rooms, where it now lies awaiting identification.

There were no papers in the man's pockets which would assist in identifying him, and the police have received no inquiries for missing persons who answer the description.

He is evidently a woodsman or a dock laborer, judging from his clothes, and inquiries are being made among the laborers on the docks and the lodging houses along Lake avenue in an effort to establish his identity.

Coroner McCuen viewed the body, and after hearing the story of the life saving crew, decided that death was due to accidental drowning. The man was probably partly intoxicated, and while wandering about the docks, slipped off the edge.

CARRIERS ARE HONORED

Duluth Men Get Plums From the State Convention.

Two Duluth letter carriers have been highly honored by their brothers in the state association.

J. S. Kriz, R. G. Malcom and A. R. Armstrong have just returned from the state convention in Minneapolis, where they went to act as delegates from the local association. Mr. Kriz was elected treasurer for the third term, and Mr. Malcom was chosen state vice president.

Mr. Malcom was also chosen to be delegate at large to represent the state at the national convention to be held in Portland in September.

The three delegates report that the convention was one of the largest and most enthusiastic state conventions yet held, and they were royally entertained by the Minneapolis members of the association.

EX-POLICEMAN IS ARRESTED

Forfeits Bail and Judge Issues Warrant For Arrest.

Accused of fighting in the street, Harry Petty, a former member of the Duluth police force who was discharged recently on the claim that he had accepted a bribe, and John Cork, a Finn, were arrested last evening by the police on the charge of fighting in the streets.

Both men furnished bail in the sum of $10, but Petty did not appear in court this morning. After hearing the story of Cork, Judge Windom discharged him and ordered a bench warrant to be issued for Petty's arrest, after declaring his bail forfeited. Cork's story, and that of Officer Gleason who made the arrest, were to the effect that Petty was the aggressor in the fight. The Finn carried a highly colored optic as a souvenir of the scrap.

Chicago, May 18.—With a final plea in behalf of Johann Hoch charged with the murder of Mrs. Marie Welcker-Hoch, counsel for Hoch, Attorney Plotke, today finished his address to the jury. Attorney Olsen then followed with an attack on the contentions of the defense and concluded with a demand that Hoch be adjudged guilty and that the death penalty be inflicted.

FEAR OF THE INVASION OF INDO-CHINA BY JAPS GIVES FRANCE A SCARE

Remarkable Report Made By French Deputy For the East.

Recommends Immediate Strengthening of Fortifications.

Says an Expenditure of $42,000,000 Should Be Made at Once.

Paris, May 19.—M. Francois Deloncle (Republican) deputy for Indo-China, has submitted to the special parliamentary committee on naval affairs a remarkable report on the urgent necessity for strengthening the defenses of Indo-China against the peril of a Japanese invasion. "Indo-China," he says "has only two enemies to fear, namely Japan alone or China encouraged and supported by Japan.

The former constitutes a real danger, for Japan has much to gain and little to risk and her isolated position makes her almost invulnerable to us. She could in a few weeks throw 100,000 men into Indo-China and easily reinforce this first landing party. The first phase of such a struggle would consist of Japan's efforts to secure mastery of the sea in order to reinforce her troops. Owing to Japan's great superiority in naval forces in Far Eastern waters our feeble division would not risk a decisive battle but would fall back upon our only naval base, Saigon. There it would be blockaded as the Russians were blockaded with in Port Arthur. With our division thus bottled up the Japanese could oppose the junction of the blockaded warships with the relief squadron and having secured the mastery of the sea Japanese transports would be free to land invading forces. She has two admirable anchorages ready for her transports at Karanh bay and Port Dayot. She probably would take the first as nearer to Saigon. Japan would thus be established upon the sea route connecting Tonquin and Cochin-China and who could prevent it? In the present condition of our defenses could we resist such an attack? Evidently not and within a brief time Indo-China would be the prey of the invader."

The report then examines the means which it is necessary to adopt for the defense of the colony and says the best solution of the problem is to strongly reinforce Indo-China so that the colony may be able to defend itself for several months against the Japanese, until French naval divisions reached the theater of operations. The program to accomplish this consists of a large augmentation of the naval forces in the Far East, an increase of the military force of occupation to a minimum of 55,000 men, the establishment of strong naval bases at Saigon, Kamranh bay, Allong bay and Pulo Condor and the establishment of torpedo boat and submarine stations at Cape St. James, Kamranh bay and Turan.

The report concludes with asserting that it would be puerile to disregard the gravity of the situation. Therefore it is necessary to make large sacrifices to place Indo-China in readiness to meet the shock.

Detailed estimates are given of the cost of the work, namely, the fortification of Tonquin, guns and armament, $22,000,000; coast defenses, including strengthening the naval base at Saigon, $14,000,000, and the establishment of torpedo and other stations, $6,000,000, a total of $42,000000.

M. Deloncle is a member of the special parliamentary committee on naval affairs which appointed him to submit a report with a program of the defenses necessary to place Indo-China in a condition to resist an attack.

GERMAN SCHOONER LEADS OCEAN RACE

The Hamburg Sets the Pace With the Atlantic a Close Second.

New York, May 19.—The German schooner Hamburg was leading the ocean race for the kaiser's cup early Thursday morning, according to reports brought in by the steamer Oneida, which followed the racers 130 miles out from Sandy Hook. A mile and a half behind the Hamburg was the Atlantic on the same tack and footing at a great rate. Both boats were crowding on all the sail they could handle closely hauled, and were beating against the fifteen-knot breeze blowing from the northeast.

E. C. Benedict, owner of the Oneida, was on board and when he headed back to New York at dawn Thursday, the weather was so thick that nothing could be seen of the other contestants in the trans-Atlantic race until 10 o'clock yesterday morning, when the Ailsa was sighted.

She was only seventy-five miles out and the Oneida was not able to learn what had delayed her. She appeared to be making good headway, and to be driving hard to make up lost ground. The other vessels in the fleet scattered early in the race, and are probably hurrying in widely divergent courses.

In the time elapsed from the start of the race until the Oneida turned back, the Hamburg and the Atlantic had made good pregress, footing fast all the way. Both boats were admirably handled and took advantage of every possible point.

The showing made by the Hamburg was a big surprise to those watching her and the opinion was expressed by the returning yachtsmen that if the German yacht and the Atlantic have equal luck with the weather they will furnish as pretty a race as could be wished for, the issue probably depending on the choice of a course. Both are likely to go well to the north, chancing danger to the limit of reasonable safety, hoping to get strong winds in the northern circle.

As to the Ailsa, it is surmised she must have met with an accident, having made only seventy-five miles in twenty-two hours. Whatever the trouble was, it had been repaired for no sign of disability was apparent to the Benedict party.

Newport, R. I., May 19.—The Nantucket lightship signalled to the government wireless station here at 8 a. m. today that the identity of the vessel sighted at midnight had not been fully established, but there was little doubt that it was the Valhalla, one of the contestants in the ocean race for the Emperor William cup. No additonal yachts had been picked up at that hour. The weather was fine and the lightship reported a twenty-four-mile southwest wind with the sea moderate to rough and the barometer standing at 29.68.

MURDERER WOOD SENTENCED TO THIRTY YEARS IN PRISON

Manila, May 19.—The Moro outlaws against whom Gen. Leonard Wood has been campaigning have been killed in action together with all the principals. The outlaws were supporters and followers of the sultan of Sulu. The large chiefs of the island of Jolo were not involved. The outbreak was purely an aggregation of piractical outlaws and disorderly characters of Sulu and the other islands stretching down to Borneo. The position selected by the outlaws for defense was in almost impenetrable jungles and exceedingly strong, prohibiting the use of artillery and necessitating close contact and an assault in two instances. Gen. Wood's forces sustained a loss of nine killed and twenty-one wounded. The constabulary had two killed. The latter were highly praised by Gen. Wood who said:

"The troops behaved splendidly and performed this difficult service in a highly creditable manner."

Gen. Wood has returned to Zamboanga with the troops.

Wood's plea of guilty was made after a conference between the prosecutor, the judge and the prisoner's counsel, in which that disposition of the case was agreed upon. The sentence was the full limit of the law. The case was remarkable, chiefly for the novel defense set up in behalf of Wood. Wood went from New York to Watchung, and engaged Williams to drive him in a seligh to a neighboring town. Subsequently the body of Williams was found with a bullet hole in it, in the seligh beside the road. Wood was traced to New York and arrested.

In his defense an attempt was made to show that Wood was a victim of epilepsy or apphasia; that he had a dual perosnality, and that his movements while in one state were controlled by the evil influence of "a small black man," who existed only in Wood's diseased fancies. Medical experts, however, declared that Wood knew the difference between right and wrong.

SCORES OF COLLIERS

Anchored Off Nha-Be With Coal for Russian Fleet.

No Further News Expected at Saigon Until Battle.

Saigon, French Cochin China, May 19.—Forty-three colliers, mostly Russian and German, are anchored off Nha-Be under the supervision of the French gunboat Caronade. Twenty similar ships are off Cape St. James, near here, under the supervision of the French cruiser D'Assas.

The Russian transport Kieff is still in the commercial port of Saigon.

No more direct news of the Russian fleet is expected here beyond what might be received from refugees should fighting occur in the neighborhood of the Pescadores islands.

FLOATING MINES

Call Forth No Criticism From Great Britain.

St. Petersburg, May 19.—The Russian newspapers call attention to the indifference with which the powers contemplate the danger involved in navigating Far Eastern waters owing to Japanese floating mines, contrasting this with the harsh criticism earlier in the war when the Russians planted mines outside Port Arthur. The Novoe Vreyma says:

"Although seven ships were blown up during the last fortnight, the British press, so vigilant wherever the seas are concerned, does not utter a word of reproach against its ally."

ASKED TO LEAVE.

Commercial Agents Must Not Remain at Vladivostok.

Washington, May 19.—Richard S. Greener, American commercial agent at Vladivostok, has cabled the state department that all the foreign commercial agents there have been asked to leave the Vladivostok fortress and are given permission to reside in cities of the maritime provinces. Mr. Greener himself was just leaving Vladivostok for Haborowskz. It is recalled here that a similar measure was adopted by the Rusian authorities at Port Arthur at the beginning of the investment of that place by the Japanese land and sea forces and hence it is assumed that Vladivostok is expected to become a center of the seat of war very soon.

JAPS ACTIVE.

Believe Present Truce Will Soon Be Broken.

Gunshu Pass, Manchuria, May 19.—The weather has cleared and the roads washed out by the recent rains are impassable quagmires, but they will soon dry.

The present truce is expected to be broken by the Japanese. They are showing every evidence of preparation to assume the offensive, constantly shifting positions and pressing the Russian left, where the cavalry forces are daily exchanging shots. The demonstration on the Russian left, however, is probably only a feint to cover the real stroke at the right. This is thought more probable because of the care with which the Japanees are screening the movements on their left, using Chinese bandits freely for this purpose. The attempts of the Russian scouts to pierce the curtain have not been successful. Profiting by past experience a new system for the transportation of wounded men from the battlefield by means of pack horses have been organized. Experiments have shown good results.

POISONED BY GAS.

Deer River Man Is Almost Asphyxiated.

Minneapolis, May 19.—Day Du Mar, 54 years old, a lumber merchant of Deer River, Minn., is at Asbury hospital in a critical condition, as the result of gas poisoning.

Mr. Du Mar came to Minneapolis Wednesday on a business trip and registered at the Windsor hotel. He went to bed early Wednesday evening and did not get up to breakfast yesterday morning. The clerk went to his room and rapped and, getting no response, forced the door. Mr. Du Mar was lying in his bed unconscious, and the clerk was unable to arouse him.

The room was full of gas from a partly open jet. A physician was summoned and the patient was immediately ordered to the hospital. He has improved since being taken there, but is not yet out of danger.

ASK ROCKEFELLER FOR AID.

Toronto, Kas., May 19.—The women of the Baptist church here have written to John D. Rockefeller asking for financial assistance to rebuild their church, which was destroyed by a tornado.

CHICAGO STRIKE IS TO END WITHOUT ANY FORMALITY

BOMB INTENDED FOR THE GOVERNOR KILLS WOULD-BE ASSASSIN

WorkmAn Falls Down and Bomb Explodes With Great Violence.

Two Detectives Killed and Others Were Seriously Injured.

Warsaw, May 19.—A workman who was trying to avoid the observation of two detectives on Miedowa street, at noon today, stumbled on the curb of the sidewalk, and a bomb which he was carrying in his pocket exploded, killing the workman, both the detectives and some persons who were passing by. It is believed the bomb was intended for Governor General Maximovitch, who was expected to pass the spot on his way to the cathedral to attend the service in honor of the czar's birthday.

The bodies of the victims were literally blown to pieces. A cafe near the scene of the explosion was entirely demolished, all the windows in the neighborhood were smashed and a lamppost was torn out of the ground. The first report was to the effect that a bomb had been thrown among local officials, who were on their way or returning from the cathedral, and caused intense excitement.

Later, it was stated that only the workman and two detectives were killed, though two passersby were severely injured, and others were slightly hurt by fragments of the bomb.

When a correspondent of the Associated Press reached the scene, the mutilated remains were still lying in the roadway, portions of them being on the sidewalks, twenty yards distant. The roadway was covered with debris.

The authorities are convinced that the bomb was intended for the governor-general, tI now develops that he was attending the services at the cathedral, which is located at the corner of Dluga and Miodowa streets, a few yards from the scene of the explosion. All of the high officials and members of Russian society here also were present. The governor-general had recently been threatened with a bomb attack particularly since the May day disturbances. The police accordingly exercise the greatest vigilance whenever he leaves the castle. After the officials had entered the cathedral detectives observed a poorly dressed man loitering on Miodowa street. When the man saw the detectives he ran towards the entrance of a confectioner's store when he either tripped or threw the bomb backwards at the detectives. The explosion occurred only a minute before the people commenced to pour out of the cathedral. Three minutes later, the governor-general would have passed the spot. Cossacks who were hastily summoned soon cleared the streets and the governor-general drove by another route to the castle. In all nine persons were wounded.

STARCHERS' STRIKE SPREADS RAPIDLY IN TROY LAUNDRIES

Troy, N. Y., May 19.—A general shut down of the extensive shirt, collar and cuff factories here is feared owing to the trouble which has existed for a fortnight between the starchers and employers. Nine of the large factories having laundry plants are now affected and no work is being laundered in those shops because the starchers refuse to handle the work. If the work cannot be laundered, business in the factories is likely to halt unless the manufacturers decide to utilize non-union help, of which there is no indication.

The trouble started in the laundry department of Cluett, Peabody & Co., said to be the largest plant of the kind in the world.

The employes demanded more wages, which they said had been cut down; also the reinstatement of discharged employes. The firm refused and the starchers quit together with those in the Ide plant. Material from these two was offered in other plants, but the starchers refused to handle it and left the various shops. Thus the trouble spread, and as goods cannot be handled except through the laundering departments, about 2,000 hands, many of them girls, are now without work. If the strike continues many thousands more will be involved. The strike is also extending along other lines. Teamsters are refusing to handle goods from the shops, while the manufacturers have been notified by the express company agents that they did not care to take the goods from the factories and endanger the men working on their wagons. Many cases that were packed for the expressmen to take away remain unmoved.

BOLD ROBBERY OF JEWELRY STORE

Chicago, May 19.—After cutting telephone wires leading to the jewelry store of Louis Antoine, in North avenue, three young robbers last night fastened the front and rear doors of the place with iron bars, then smashed in a large plate glass window in the front and escaped with diamond rings and watches valued at $2,500. The theft was committed in exactly the same manner as the robbery of the jewelry store of T. D. Lande, in West Madison street last Tuesday night and the police are convinced the same men were engaged in this robbery. The raid occurred while the street was lighted brilliantly and while scores of persons were passing.

POLICE CAPTURE RIVER PIRATES

New York, May 19.—A battle with pistols between a squad of harbor police and a band of river pirates has resulted in the capture of the latter and the recovery of five bags of concha beans valued at $1,000. The fight was a thriller while it lasted. In answer to an alarm from a railroad pier on the North river, six officers hurried there in a launch. Just as they approached an open boat fitted with an engine shot out of the darkness and headed full speed across the river. The police commanded a halt but the two pirates crowded on power and dropped into the bottom of their craft. Taking up the chase, the police opened fire which drew an instant response. The thieves were not good shots while their boat was being struck nearly every shot and after a short chase they surrendered. No one was hurt although scores of shots were exchanged.

SANTA FE WOULD LIKE MORTON BACK.

Chicago, May 19.—The Tribune today says: E. P. Ripley, president of the Santa Fe railroad, when asked last night regarding a report that Paul Morton, secretary of the navy and former second vice president of the Santa Fe, would renew his relations with the railroad upon leaving the cabinet, said that nothing definite was known yet; that the Santa Fe would be most happy to have Mr. Morton assume official relations with the road; that Mr. Morton would be in Chicago next week, and that some arrangement might possibly be made then.

"I have been in California lately," said Mr. Ripley, 'and have not seen Mr. Morton for three months, and do not know what his plans are.

"The Santa Fe would be glad to have him back, and something may be done during his visit in Chicago next week."

NEW YORK TEAMSTERS

Will Not Join Rockmen and Excavators' Strike.

New York, May 9.—The Brotherhood of Teamsters has decided not to strike against the Contractors' Protective association in sympathy with the rockmen and excavators, thus averting a repetition in New York of the Chicago disturbances.

At the time the Rockmen and Excavators' union ordered the present strike they were confident of the co-operation of the teamsters, whose action probably will prevent a strike of the 26,000 members of the Excavators' union.

DEWEY IS BETTER.

Washington, May 19.—Admiral Dewey, who was taken sick in New York last Saturday, was reported to be much better this morning, but is not yet able to leave his residence.

NEITHER SIDE TO CLAIM A VICTORY

Men Will Return to Work and the Boycott Will Be Lifted.

Sheriff Satisfied Strike Is Over and Appoints No Deputies.

Chicago, May 19.—"The strike will end tonight or tomorrow morning. There will be no claim of victory or defeat by either side. The employers will take back the teamsters who are worthy and desirable men and who have not violated the law."

This declaration was made by Sheriff Thomas E. Barrett today and was confirmed from several sources. Sheriff Barrett began to call in the extra deputies engaged in guarding wagons of the Employers' Teaming company and discontinued the appointment of new deputies.

Mayor Dunne asserts that he has information from a source in which he has implicit confidence, that the strike will come to an end within twenty-four hours or within forty-eight hours, at the latest. There will be no formal declaration of a calling off of the boycott, he said. Men who are re-employed will quietly go back to work and the ban will be lifted without demonstration of any sort.

President Shea of the Teamsters' union, when told of the declarations of Mayor Dunne and Sheriff Barrett, said:

"There is no man in this world that has power to call this strike off or make any such settlement. The teamsters' joint council alone has that power. The council has not considered any such proposition."

Notwithstanding the statements of Sheriff Barrett and Mayor Dunne, C. H. Cook of the teamsters' general strike committee, said: "I have heard nothing whatever of such a settlement as the newspapers are printing today. The strikers are instructed, and have promised to take no information from the papers. The men positively will not go back to work until the strike has been settled officially."

Simultaneously with Mr. Cook's statement came a report, credited to a member of the Employers' association, who is a department store leader, that he had reason to believe the strike would be officially called off if a promise weer made to the strike leaders that there would be no prosecution in the federal court of the men now included in the charges of violation of the court's injunctions.

Dell Stevens of the Department Store Drivers' union admitted that this afternoon matters would be brought to a focus by the rank and file of his union, at a meeting between the union and some employers. "From this meeting large results will come—watch the meeting for a settlement," the union man said.

When President Gompers left Chicago last night, it is said, Sheriff Barrett was given authoritative information that while there would be no formal capitulation on either side of the controversy, the striking teamsters and the employers would quietly merge interests and restore peace. The sheriff was informed that if the law-abiding members of the union could be reinstated, the strike would not last twenty-four hours. Sheriff Barrett declared that he had been informed that such men would be taken back.

Chicago, May 19.—Overtures looking to a peaceable settlement of the teamster's strike here were temporarily set aside today. Through the departure of President Gompers for Dayton, O., last night, the chief influence upon which hopes of peace were centered was removed.

The defiant attitude of International President Shea and his bitterness toward the State street merchants whom he accuses of conspirating to wreck the teamsters' organization, seemed to preclude the possibility of any definite step toward an adjustment of the trouble before the return of Mr. Gompers. Encougaged by the efforts at mediation, however, the president of the National Federation of Labor will hasten back to Chicago and expects to renew his negotiations tomorrow.

Mr. Gompers admitted before his departure, that the various conferences between representatives of both sides in the controversy, had produced a more pacific feeling, and this he argued would accomplish much toward fixing a common ground upon which terms of peace might be arranged.

The aldermanic committee held conferences today with representatives of the teamsters and with Attorney Levy Mayer for the employers. Chairman W. E. Devere expressed himself as satisfied with the progress made.

The most encouraging phase of the situation today was the change of front on the part of teamsters in entering into negotiations with the team owners and considering a proposition from that body, to arbitrate the question of deliveries to the boycotted houses.

Should the teamsters' council at its meeting tonight accept the team owners' arbitration proffer, it was generally believed today that the end of the strike is at hand. An adverse decision of an arbitration committee compelling the drivers to deliver goods wherever their employers should desire would be the signal for raising the strike against all business firms now affected except the State street department stores, the express companies, and the coal concerns.

Officials of the Teamsters' union, while admitting that the arbitration proposal of the team owners would probably be accepted by the teamsters' joint council tonight, denied today that this was to be taken as showing any weakness on the part of the strike against strike-bound houses.

"To be sure this is arbitration of a principle rather than a condition," said A. J. Reed, secretary of the Furniture Drivers' union, today. "It is a bad thing to arbitrate, for it sets a bad precedent. However, in this case it may be the equitable thing to arbitrate it, so that a general tie-up of the teaming industry may be averted. If the principle of delivery to strike-bound houses by union drivers is submitted to arbitration in this case, it will only be for this one case, and then solely to prevent a general spread of the strike to all the teaming interests in the city."

T. J. Cavanaugh, one of the prominent team owners, said today there was no doubt in his mind that the teamsters would agree to arbitrate the delivery question tonight, principle or no principle.

Victor F. Sincere, assistant secretary of the Employers' association, said today the Employers' Teaming company had reduced teaming work to a system. Today the company had 2,100 wagons making deliveries, and had in employment 2,300 drivers. This is exclusive of 500 drivers employed by the express companies.

Members of the aldermanic strike committee, made individual appeals to employers to end the strike. Some of the employers were asked to make concessions to the strikers. It was said the employers replied they could not break away from their association.

A serious flour famine threatens Chicago as the result of the spreading of the strike to include the wholesale flour manufacturers and dealers. Predictions were made today that unless peace intervened, the delivery of flour to retailers would be tied up within the next twelve hours. The flour makers and dealers were said to be acting in concert and intended to lock out the union drivers as soon as the drivers refused to haul goods to any of the boycotted firms. Pieser, Livingstone & Co. today ordered flour taken to a boycotted house. When the driver refused to make the delivery twenty-eight union drivers were told their services were no longer needed.

It was said that such of the manufacturers and dealers who supply the bulk of the retail trade in the city would take similar action with drivers refusing to make deliveries.

PROMINENT MASON ENDS HIS EXISTENCE.

Chicago, May 19.—In the office of Gilbert W. Barnard, grand secretary of the grand commandery Knights Templars of Illinois, on the nineteenth floor of the Masonic Temple, Archibald McLellan, prominent in Masonic circles, committed suicide today by shooting himself. Despondency, due to rheumatism and acute indigestion, is supposed to have been responsible for the deed. McLellan was 71 years of age and was a 33rd degree Mason.

CORNWALL, N. Y., BANK CLOSED.

Washington, May 19.—The First National bank of Cornwall, N. Y., was closed today by direction of the comptroller of the currency, on the ground of insolvency, and National Bank Examiner Charles E. Van Broklin has been appointed receiver.

New York, May 19.—The First National bank of Cornwall was capitalized at $25,000, and according to a recent statement, owed depositors $18,000.

WARD GETS THIRTY YEARS IN JAIL

Somerville, N. J., May 19.—George H. Wood of New York today pleaded guilty of murder in the second degree in shooting George Williams, a grocer of Watching, on February 2. Wood was sentenced to thirty years in prison. At the opening of the trial he had pleaded not guilty of murder in the first degree and his counsel had declined an offer by the prosecution to accept a plea of guilty of murder in a lesser degree. That plea was withdrawn soon after court opened today and the plea of guilty substituted.

THE LEADING BUTTER STATE OF THE UNION

Rapid Development of Dairy Industry In the Last Decade.

Prospects For the Future Are Indicative of Greater Progress.

The dairy industry of Minnesota has experienced a most rapid development in the past decade. The agricultural sections of the state, which were formerly grain producing almost exclusively, have become great dairying districts peopled by farmers devoted to the pursuit of diversified farming and stock raising. Minnesota has demonstrated to the world that in dairy products she takes her stand in the foremost rank among the great dairying districts of the world, and she may feel justly proud of the success which has been obtained. There are undoubtedly as large a number of cows furnishing milk for private dairies in the state as are contributing to our creameries and cheese factories, and as this fact must be borne in mind in studying the following statistics in order to fully appreciate the magnitude of the industry. A total of 449,740 cows contributed to our creameries and cheese factories in 1903, a total of 1,392,948,495 pounds of milk, from which were manufactured 72,266,346 pounds of butter and 3,993,646 pounds of cheese. A total of $14,385,090.54 was paid farmers of the state for the milk furnished these factories. There are 770 creameries and 90 cheese factories. Of these the farmers of the state own and control 606 and 254 are owned by individual parties.

While the volume of the dairy business in Minnesota is sufficient to attract the attention of her sister dairying states, her reputation as the leading butter state of the Union has been accomplished through the superior quality of her creamery butter. She began her series of successes in 1884, when she won grand sweepstakes at the New Orleans Cotton exposition. Again, in 1893, she won first premium at the World's fair in Chicago, and in 1896 gold and silver medals at the Cedar Rapids, Iowa, National Creamery Butter Makers' contest. In 1897 the victory of 1896 was repeated at the Owatonna, Minn., meeting of the National Creamery Butter Makers' association, a gold medal and silver cup being the trophies.

In 1898 the ntional prize again went to Minnesota at the Topeka, Kan., meeting. In this same year four first premiums were won at the Omaha exposition. In 1899 the first prize was again won at the National Creamery Butter Makers' contest at Sioux Falls, S. D. Again in 1900 Minnesota won first place at the national contest at Lincoln, Neb. At the Pan-American exposition, Buffalo, 1901, Minnesota took second place in the sweep stakes. At the National Creamery Butter Makers' convention held in St. Paul in 1901 and in Milwaukee, 1902, where there were larger entries than ever before, Minnesota products easily held their high position carrying off the largest number of prizes, she having taken the grand sweep stakes prize at the World's exposition in Paris in 1900, where her products came in competition with those of the world. Her latest triumph was at the St. Louis World's fair held last year, where her dairy and creamery excelled all others, carrying away nearly all the principal prizes and medals. Before her bowed the whole world, acknowledging the supremacy of the "Bread and Butter State."

The winning of so many prizes has served more than to satisfy the pride of those interested in the upbuilding of the dairy interests of the state—it has resulted in creating an active demand for Minnesota butter in the markets of the world and the people who have been producing this golden product which has made the state so famous, have profited accordingly. Minnesota is today receiving a higher premium for her creamery butter in the Eastern markets than any other state in the Union, and this, of course, means more money in the pockets of the producer. The additional price received for Minnesota butter over that sold in any other state, is a substatnial benefit for the patron who produces milk for a ceramery in Minnesota.

In spite of the wonderful growth which has been accomplished by our dairy interests, the prospects for the future are indicative of greater progress. Minnesota is an ideal dairy state, peculiarly adapted to diversified farming and stock raising. Dairying thus far has been more confined to the thickly settled prairie regions of the state, where the general adoption of the industry has been brought about through necessity, excessive grain raising having depleted the fertility of the soil. During the past five years the business has been developing most rapidly in the Red river valley, and this section is destined to become a great dairying district. In Northeastern Minnesota conditions are perhaps more favorable for dairying than any other branch of farming. In fact, the country is especially adapted for dairy farming, both from the stand point of a market, for dairy products and from the natural conditions of the country. The great advantage lies in the fact that for the producting of feed Northeastern Minnesota is ahead of any other section of the state. Clover is a sure crop, yielding as high as three and a half tons per acre (first and second cutting.) Fodder corn and mangles do equally as well. White clover and Kentucky blue grass make permanent pastures.

Minnesota's natural advantages should appeal to those coming from other sections, and who are in search of cheap farm homes, where they can engage in the business of dairying. The vast empire comprised by the northwest and northeast sections of the state, the natural advantage of which are so apparent to the observer, should soon become peopled by farmers engaged in dairying and stock raising. No other section of the whole northwest can offer such opportunities and inducements. It is the universal opinion of authorities who have given the matter attention that Minnesota has only entered upon her career as a great dairying state. She will eventually become the greatest dairy state in the union in quantity as she is now recognized the leader in quality.

HAPPENINGS IN DAKOTAS

Gang of Angry Italians Terrorize the Town of Flaxton.

NORTH DAKOTA.

Flaxton—Two carloads of Italians, most of whom are armed with revolvers and knives, are terrorizing the town.

The men were shipped here by the Soo company, to surface the track from Kenmare to Portal. Because of dissatisfaction over their work, they demand passes to Chicago, and present an ultimatum in the form of a threat to burn and kill.

Dissatisfaction arose when it was attempted to divide the men into squads of eight or ten to be sent to other towns to work. They contend that the company, in contract with them, agreed that they were to work together. Consequently they went on the warpath, and after a general pow-wow, in which they danced and sang, pounced upon the foreman and gave him a severe beating. Later they instructed the agent to inform the company that they wanted passes to Chicago, and if their request was refused the track would be torn up and station burned.

Not only are the Italians threatening the company's property, but they are insolent to the town people as well. Two of them went to the home of a business man and asked for milk. Upon being informed that no milk could be spared, they proceeded to the stable and began to milk the cow, but were frightened away by the family dog.

An Italian also shot a valuable horse belonging to a dairyman.

Minot—After evading the police for four months, Richard Nightengale, charged with robbery in the second degree, was arrested at Harvey by Sheriff John Lee. Nightengale left this city Jan. 21 with $250 belonging to Robert Rowan, which he secured by forging Rowan's name to a certificate of deposit. He was brought to this city today and is confined in the county jail.

Max Frieland of St. Paul, representing the Remington Typewriter company, was arrested at the Leland hotel on the charge of grand larceny. He was arraigned before Judge Murray, who placed him under $200 bonds. The warrant was sworn to by M. J. Barrett, an attorney of this city, who says that Frieland went to his office in his absence and took a Remington typewriter.

An action has been commenced in the district court in which Hugh B. Hineline of Williston seeks to recover damages of $41,350 from the Great Northern Railroad company for injuries received by being caught between a moving engine and the station platform.

SOUTH DAKOTA.

Chamberlain—Chamberlain for several days has had an opportunity to experience the effect of the recent decision of the supreme court of the United States to the effect that Indians who have taken lands in severalty may purchase intoxicating liquors without violation of the law.

Hundreds of Indians who have just received their cash annuity have been in town to invest their money, and naturally there were many whose desire took the direction of liquid refreshments. Allotment certificates were conveniently at hand to convince dealers that the holder was entitled to acquire a "jag" of any desired dimensions. But they were all disappointed.

As a solution of the difficulty and responsibility the decision places on border towns, all Chamberlain saloonkeepers have decided to refuse Indians liquor as before. This is done as a protection in several respects. To many, all Indians look alike and it is stated that instances have been noted where the allotment certificates have appeared in more than one set of hands, and dispensers of liquor would have to have a personal acquaintance with the red men to be sure they were handing out liquor only to those affected by the supreme court decision.

Sioux Falls—A change has been made in the office of warden of the Sioux Falls penitentiary, O. S. Swenson, for four years warden, being succeeded by Harry T. Parmley of this city. The new warden will recommend Henry Peterson for appointment to the office of deputy warden.

As a result of a case which is likely to arise in this county, the question as to whether or not it is compulsory for boards of county commissioners, under the new state law, to maintain cattle commissioners and establish stock dipping tanks will be determined by the courts. J. J. Urquhart of Valley Springs, at a meeting of the stockmen of the county some weeks ago, was elected cattle commissioner for Minnehaha county in accordance with the terms of the new law. The county commissioners have thus far failed to provide for the establishment of dipping tanks at points in the county, maintaining that the law was intended to apply only to the counties in the great cattle range. Inspector Urquhart was recently called to treat some diseased cattle in the northern portion of the county. After performing the work he presented a bill for his services to the commissioners, but they refused to allow it. The matter was reported to the state cattle commissioners, who have decided that Inspector Urquhart acted within his authority and that the county commissioners are bound to pay the bill. If they still refuse Inspector Urquhart will commence an action in the courts, when the exact provisions of the new state law will be judicially determined.

Clark—In the criminal action brought against William Adams for assault with a dangerous weapon upon Earl Purdy, the jury returned a verdict of guilty and Adams was sentenced to pay a fine of $100. It is stated that the slander case of Dora Bailey against Lizzie Fletcher has been settled. A divorce was granted Lulu Miller from her husband, William Miller. Both are from Garden City.

The case of the First National bank, formerly doing business in Clark, against E. D. Quinn to secure payment of a note for $1,200, resulted in a verdict for the defendant.

THE CUBAN CLUB

At Havana Is Gambling House Catering to Americans.

No Expense Spared In Making the Place Luxurious.

Havana, May 19.—In Havana, the "Paris of the West Indies," there is a New York gambling house, pulled up root and branch from the metropolis and transplanted in tropical soil. Dealers, attendants, paraphernalia, furnishings and proprietor are all from New York. None of the outfit speaks Spanish except the doorman, and as a linguist he is more ornamental than useful.

The establishment is called "the Cuban Club," although no Cuban who has not first been subjected to a third degree examination has ever passed its portals. The Cuban "trade" is not wanted. The traveling public—the American tourist of the better class—is catered to. Such people as John Jacob Astor, Proctor Smith, E. R. Thomas and Joseph Leiter have been enrolled upon its membership list. The proprietor of the "club" is William T. Barbridge, who was Frank Farrell's partner and who divides honors with Richard A. Canfield as an art connoisseur, because he also displays luxurious taste in the outfitting of his places of business.

No expense has been spared in making "the Cuban club" luxurious. The rental is $6,000 and its fittings cost $10,000. So successful has it been during the season just closed that larger quarters will be found for it before the tide of Americans sets Havanaward next November. And beyond this, so encouraged are the gamblers over the situation in general that plans are now under way to build in the province of Havana a Greater Monte Carlo, interested in which project with Burbridge is said to be the most powerful syndicate of gamblers in the world, amply able to put up the $3,000,000 in cash the gigantic enterprise will cost.

The laws of Cuba are very strict as regards games of chance. It was to test these laws and to feel the pulse of the 200,000 Americans who pass through Havana in a year that "the Cuban Club" was begun on what is now considered a small scale when compared with what is planned for the future.

"Jai alai" is about the only game of chance where betting is openly countenanced by the Havana authorities, and this is so because it has come to be regarded as a national institution and for the further reason, it is asserted, that many of the most influential of these authorities are interested in the proceeds of the sport. Behind the "jai alai" is a powerful clique that discourages all other forms of betting games, and between this clique the police and the disappointed gamblers who hoped to acquire the field for themselves "the club's" management has had to "jump hurdles," financial and otherwise, almost from the time its doors were opened until just before the close of the season, when, every means having been exhausted to dislodge the gamblers, the authorities practically admitted their helplessness and that in the future the business of the establishment could proceed in substantial peace.

Under the law, the police are permitted access to any clubhouse during the hours of the day, but they cannot enter after 6 o'clock in the afternoon. For this reason all the gambling paraphernalia of the Cuban club is taken down and stored away as soon as the day breaks, and then the house presents the appearance of a magnificent old Spanish residence, in which Burbridge and his employes luxuriate.

As a matter of form a Cuban policeman in blue khaki, with revolver and a club in his belt, is stationed in front of the clubhouse door every evening, but he is absolutely powerless to interfere with its members, and his presence there is simply a notification to the alcade of the city that the captain of the precinct knows there is gambling going on within, but he can not help it.

Attendance of "membership" is secured by the old American "steerer" method, although the procedure is in a more open manner. In fact, everything is wide open. In the evenings a gentleman faultlessly attired in evening clothes scans the registers of the different hotels and selects the men of prominence who are "eligible for membership." The selections are very carefully made, both from a personal and financial viewpoint. These people he approaches with a polite tender of a member's card to "The Cuban Club."

Minus the evening attire the same man accosts well appearing Americans at various points of interest during the day with the same polite tender of hospitality and amusement.

At least one-half of these strangers in a strange land accept the tender and the system of interested hospitality has been so successful during the two months of the establishment's operation that its rooms, spacious as they are, were too small to contain its patrons.

It is proposed to build this "greater Monte Carlo" at Camp Columbia, the spot selected by the United States army of intervention as the most healthful spot adjacent to Havana to pitch its tents. The new American gambling resort, which when completed is expected to draw hordes of Americans with gaming instincts not only from Havana, but from the hotels on the East coast of Florida, is planned to rival the world-famed possessions of the Prince of Monaco, and in addition it will have other attractions of a truly American character.

The buildings will face the sea and will have enormous surrounding territory, on which will be built an American racetrack. This will be set in a tropical frame of royal palms, cocoanut palms, banana groves and the ever-present national weed, the morning glory.

SILK THIEVES IN IOWA.

Arrests at Marshalltown Said to Be Important.

Marshalltown, Iowa, May 19.—With the arrest of Chris Ritter of this city, and a man named Jackson, whose residence is unknown, it is believed the police have secured valuable clues to a gang of silk robbers, who have been operating in all the larger cities of Iowa.

Ritter and Jackson are suspected of complicity in the robbery of the E. R. Lay store, here, Tuesday morning. It has been discovered that a much larger amount of goods than was at first supposed was taken, and the value is now estimated at about $1,000. The police say they know the hiding-place of the goods, but refuse to divulge it, as they are waiting in hope of catching other members of the gang.

Recently there have been silk robberies at Davenport, Clinton, Cedar Rapids and other places in the state. Only the best silks and laces were taken, and the methods pursued were the same in each city. The officers here believe the same gang did all the jobs.

Ritter bears a bad reputation locally. He was recently arrested for holding up a stranger here, and was concerned in events that led to the suicide of Mrs. A. L. Bonawitz, some time ago.

NOT TEXAS CAPITALIST

Is Dalton Arrested For Land Lottery Scheme.

Chicago, May 19.—John H. Dalton, recently on trial before the United States courts of Chicago for alleged fraud in connection with a land lottery scheme in Louisiana, is an entirely different person from John Harrison Dalton, a well-known capitalist, interested in Texas oil lands. This statement is made in justice to the latter gentleman, who might be caused some annoyance because of the similarity of the names.

West Duluth

THE BRASS WORKS

Baileys Dispose of Industry to E. G. Hilliard of Duluth.

Corporation Likely to Be Formed to Operate Plant.

The Duluth Brass works at the foot of Ramsay street has been purchased by Edward G. Hilliard. The purchase takes in the stock and machinery only, the building which the works occupies being owned by the West Duluth Land company. The purchase price of the machinery and stock of the works, together with its good will was $5,500. This price is considered remarkably cheap.

It is understood that Mr. Hilliard is not the actual purchaser but is merely one of a company of local men who will later incorporate and operate the works possibly adding to the equipment before long and entering the manufacturing of finished products. At the present time the works is manufacturing brass and is providing the local railroads, the shipyard in Superior, the National Iron works, the mills and other local industries around here with the brass fixings they need. However the new company will probably go more extensively into the field for putting out finished stuff.

Mr. Hilliard runs a supply house on West Michigan street and is quite well known in Duluth. For the present W. F. Bailey, who with his brother George N. Bailey, owned the brass works, is operating the plant for Mr. Hilliard until the latter gets his affairs straightened out after which time he will be in active management of the concern.

W. F. Bailey said this morning that the only reason he had for selling out is that he wishes to take a rest, which has been long deferred. The plant is paying well he said and added:

"Had I been fifteen or twenty years younger, I would not have sold out at twice the price given. But I am now getting well along in years and if I am ever going to get a rest it must come soon. Mr. Hilliard has a good thing here and a business which can be developed on much larger lines than I have cared to try to develop it."

The plans of George N. Bailey have not yet been announced. W. F. Bailey will probably remain in the city.

Rev. Dr. Forbes, former presiding elder of the Duluth district of the Methodist church, is in the city and will leave today for Missouri for the American board of his church of which he is secretary. The doctor is looking exceedingly well, much better than he has appeared for years. He looks as though life is agreeing with him and he with life.

West Duluth stretched out her hands to him in welcome and again laughed heartily at his witty sallies.

He said this morning that within six months he has seen the Atlantic, the Pacific and the Gulf of Mexico. He has been traveling extensively and as is his wont, has observed many things by the way.

TWO MEN DISAPPEAR

From Buffalo and One Leaves Young Bride.

Buffalo, Minn., May 19.—Charles Donley of the firm of Donley & Viergutz, of the Central hotel, mysteriously disappeared last Monday and nothing has been heard of him since. His absence cannot be accounted for, as business has been good and the money belonging to the firm, which he took before his departure, does not exceed the sum he originally invested. He married a young lady from Wisconsin in St. Paul, in March, and she knows nothing of his whereabouts, as he did not confide in her. She has left for her home in Madison, Wis. Another peculiar incident combined with the affair is the disappearance of Claude Hamilton of this place, on the same day, and he has not been heard from, nor did he leave any clue as to where he went. Mr. Hamilton recently sold his farm, and on Monday morning drew his cash for it. Nels Reth and Jake Ruff had loaned him money and indorsed a note on the strength of his assertion that he would pay when he received his cash.

WOODS DENY

The Story of the "Veiled Murderess."

Quebec, May 19.—The representatives of the Wood family in Quebec emphatically deny that Charlotte Wood, Lady Elliott, was the so-called "Veiled Murderess," who died a few days ago in the criminal insane asylum, at Mattewan, and whose senational story, starting from New York, is now going the rounds of the American and Canadian press. Col. Frost Wood Gray of his majesty's customs here, a first cousin of Lady Elliotts, pronounces the whole story to be a myth. He declares he frequently met the real Lady Elliott in Scotland, between 1856 and 1869; that she was Charlotte Wood, the daughter of his uncle, Robert Wood, a Quebec timber merchant, and the wife of Sir William Elliott, and that she died in 1878, and he shows by Burke's Peerage the record of her death, so that it is impossible she could have been identical with the so-called "Veiled Murderess," who was confined at Mattewan for over fifty years, and who died last week.

Beautiful Window Display.

That we are growing to be quite a metropolitan city will be seen at a glance by anyone who will take the trouble to look at the window displays of the prominent retail stores of Duluth. In character and richness of displays they are entitled to rank with those of the largest cities. Particularly is this true of the window displays of J. M. Gidding & Co. This firm's efforts have never been so noticeable as at this time. The wearing apparel displayed by them would certainly do credit to any metropolitan city, and the Gidding firm has reason to feel proud of them, and particularly Nathaniel Gidding, the manager, who looks after the firm's displays. That he is an artist is shown by the simplicity and elegance given them.

DRAWS TO CLOSE

Fate of Lenich and Longer to Be With Jury Soon.

Lenich's Fiancee Gives Testimony In His Behalf.

The feature of this morning's session of the murder trial of Frank Lenich and Frank Longer was the appearance on the witness stand of Miss Rosa Theresia Stupca, the young Austrian woman to whom Lenich was engaged to be married shortly. She was called to give testimony in Lenich's behalf, but some of her admissions were hardly of a nature to tend to clear him of complicity in the trouble that ended with Peter Kracovitch's death.

Miss Stupca said that she and Lenich saw at a distance the fight between Longer and Kracovitch and that Lenich wanted to go to Longer's assistance, but she attempted to hold him back, claiming that she was afraid he would get hurt. She said Lenich finally broke away from her and joined Longer and Kracovitch.

When questioned as to the character of Kracovitch, the young woman claimed that he was a bad man, always quarreling and fighting.

Nearly all the testimony that was taken this morning in behalf of Lenich and Longer was given through the medium of an interpreter and related to the general reputation of Lenich, Longer and Kracovitch.

The testimony was chiefly to the effect that Lenich and Longer bore good reputations for being peaceable and lawabiding, while Peter Kracovitch, the murdered man, had the reputation of being quarrelsome and of making trouble.

John Derzal, a butcher of Eveleth, said he had known Lenich and Longer for several years and knew Kracovitch by sight. His testimony was that Lenich and Longer bore good reputations and that Kracovitch did not.

Joe Drobanich, an Austrian boarding-house keeper, who claimed to have known Lenich and Longer for about one and a half years, and Kracovitch for nearly a year, testified that he had never heard anything bad about the two former men, but that Kracovitch was known as a bad man.

John Jaklich, a miner, said he had known Lenich and Longer about three years and never heard anything to their discredit, but that he had known Kracovitch for three years, some of the time at Cleveland, where he had a reputation of being quarrelsome and always looking for a fight.

Anton Rupert, who is employed at the Spruce mine, testified that he had known the defendants Lenich and Longer about two years, and that they had the general reputation of being "good boys." He said he had known Kracovitch for four years, and that at Cleveland and at Eveleth Kracovitch had the reputation of wanting to fight all the time. Rupert claimed that Kracovitch had the reputation of carrying dangerous weapons. On cross-examination, Rupert claimed to be a friend of all the parties, but admitted that Kracovitch had struck him with a knife some time ago, and for that reason he had not lately gone very much in the deceased's company.

Tony Lenich, a brother of Frank Lenich, testified that he had known Longer abaut three years, and that both his brother and Longer bore good reputations at Eveleth, so far as he had ever heard. He claimed that Kracovitch had the reputation of being a fighter and always carried a knife, it being common talk among the Austrians that he was a dangerous man and one that it was wise to keep away from. On cross-examination, Tony Lenich admitted that he carried a knife in his pocket, and that the general practice among the miners was to carry a knife, although he said he had never done any harm with his knife.

At noon today, L. H. Corcoran, attorney for Lenich and Longer, said that the defense would be completed some time this afternoon.

When court convened this morning, Mr. Corcoran moved that the testimony of Franzell, the interpreter, relative to the testimony of Longer against Lenich, at the inquest, be stricken out. The motion was opposed by County Attorney McClintock, and the court took the matter under advisement. This testimony constituted some of the state's strongest evidence against Lenich.

When the defense began putting in testimony yesterday afternoon, Mr. Corcoran sprung a little surprise by refusing to outline his case. He opened the defense with the testimony of Joe Ivansich, who claimed to have been at the Zidar home when the trouble began that ended in Kracovitch' death. Ivansich said he was in company with Kracovitch in visiting several saloons the night of the tragedy and that the latter made the remark he had an open knife in his pocket but did not think he would need it that night. The witness also related the quarrel between Longe and Kracovitch at a drinking bout at Zidar's and said that Kracovitch and Longer scuffled at the rear of the house, where Longer was cut with a knife, and where Lenich was involved in the struggle.

Ivansich said Mrs. Zidar asked Lenich if he cut Kracovitch and Lenich replied that he had only kicked him.

Louis Marinsek, the man who was with Lenich at the time of his capture was called to the stand. He said he was at the Zidar house when Longer and Kracovitch quarreled and that in trying to separate them he was slashed in the left side by a knife in Kracovitch' hand. Marinsek exhibited the bloodstained garments he claimed to have worn at the time of the trouble.

Marinsek claimed that after he was hurt he went back into the house to have a wet cloth put on his wound and later went to the hospital, where Lenich found him and told him that they must stick together, after relating that somebody had stabbed Kracovitch. Witness then related the flight from Eveleth and their life in the woods and at lumber camps, until arrested at Isaac Nelson's place.

RELIEF IS GIVEN

Legislature Passed Important Law Relating to Criminal Procedure.

County Attorney May Proceed By Information In Certain Cases.

Although the last state legislature turned down Senator George R. Laybourn's bill providing for the abolishment of the grand jury in Minnesota except at the call of the district court judges, it passed a measure which is said to afford some of the relief sought in the Laybourn bill, even if the state legislators did not go all the way in the matter.

The law referred to is found in chapter 231 of the General Laws of 1905 and is entitled an act relating to proceedings in criminal cases.

Under certain restrictions this act provides that where a person who is arrested for an offense and is bound over to the grand jury after a proper preliminary hearing, if he wishes to plead guilty, may be brought directly before the court having jurisdiction in his trial and sentenced, without the formality of an indictment. This may be done either during a term of court or during a vacation.

This particular phase of the law is found in section 4 of chapter 231 of the General laws, and reads as follows:

"Section 4. That in all cases where a person charged with criminal offense, shall have been held to the district court for trial by any court or magistrate, and in all cases where any person shall have been committed for trial and is in actual confinement or in jail by virtue of any indictment or information pending against him, the court having trial jurisdiction of such offense or of such indictment or information shall have the power at any time, whether in term or in vacation, upon the application of the prisoner in writing, stating that he desires to plead guilty to the charge made against him by the complaint, indictment or information, to direct the county attorney to file an information against him for such offense, if an indictment or information has not been filed, and upon the filing of such information and of such application, the court may receive and record a plea of guilty to the offense charged in such indictment or information, and cause judgment to be entered thereon and pass sentence on such person pleading guilty and such proceeding may be had either in term time or vacation.

"Provided, that the provisions of this section shall apply only to cases where the punishment provided by law for such offense may be commitment to the reformatory or does not exceed five years in the state prison."

This provision gives relief for those who are willing to plead guilty to the crime that is charged to them, and receive a speedy sentence, rather than remain from one to three months in the county jail awaiting the next meeting of the grand jury. As soon as a person held in custody of the sheriff to answer to the grand jury signifies his desire to plead guilty, the county attorney can proceed to file an information against him for the offense, and the person accused can be brought before the court having jurisdiction, where the plea may be received, judgment entered and sentence passed.

The restriction to this procedure is found in the final provision which says the section shall apply to only such criminal cases where the punishment for the offense may be a reformatory sentence, or a sentence to the state penitentiary for a term not exceeding five years.

This provision would, of course, debar any proceeding by information on the part of the county attorney in criminal cases of serious import like murder or aggravated assault but there are a large number of minor offenses where the sentence that might be rendered in case of conviction or a plea of guilty would permit the accused to enter on sentence without waiting for the grand jury.

The law does not, however, afford any relief to those persons who are accused of crimes who intend to enter pleas of not guilty and who might, at trial, prove their innocence of the offense charged. Such persons cannot be brought before the court having jurisdiction except through the regular procedure by indictment or presentment. Where persons who have been arrested since the last grand jury met charged with an indictable offense, are now held at the county jail, they must remain in custody of the sheriff, unless able to furnish bail, until the first week in September next, as the grand jury will not meet bfore that time.

In cases where the accused expects to prove his innocence, he will be practically serving a three or four months term in the jail before his case comes to trial. In cases where the accused is afterward acquitted, or no indictment is returned, this enforced confinement in the jail is clearly a hardship for which the person has no recourse and, in cases where a conviction follows, it is claimed to be more or less of a hardship for the reason the person to be sentenced was already served a long term of imprisonment awaiting trial.

The voters in the state, at the last election, authorized the constitutional amendment doing away with the grand jury system, and by many it is believed that the working of the new law which affords a small part of the relief sought, will influence a more favorable legislation on a similar grand jury bill to be presented two years hence.

There are said to be a number of persons now confined in the county jail awaiting grand jury action who, if they desire to plead guilty, can greatly shorten their term of imprisonment.

KILLED BY RIFLE

Sixteen Year Old Boy Shoots Himself Through Head.

Accident Occurs In Woods Behind Lakewood Pumping Station.

David Norberg, a 16-year-old boy, accidentally shot and killed himself with a small calibre rifle, in the woods back of the Lakewood pumping station, about 1 o'clock yesterday afternoon.

Norberg was employed by Gus Swanson to assist in cutting cordwood. He and his employer had been working during the morning, but about noon Swanson complained of being ill, and they decided to spend the afternoon in looking over timber to be cut later in the season. Norberg took his rifle along with him on the chance of securing a chance shot at some animal.

The two men had walked about half a mile from D. J. McDonnell's homestead, where they were boarding, when Swanson became tired and they sat down upon a log.

Norberg held his rifle between his knees, with the stock resting on the ground. Happening to notice a squirrel in a tree close by, he called Swanson's attention to the little animal, and said he guessed he would take a shot at it.

"Better let it go," said Mr. Swanson, turning to look at the squirrel.

As he turned his head there was a loud report, and he looked to see his companion roll from the log with the blood gushing from beneath his chin. He fell dead in the brush without uttering a sound.

Mr. Swanson, after assuring himself that he could not revive his lifeless companion, returned to Mr. McDonnell's home. He and the homesteader brought the body in to the Lakewood pumping station, from where Coroner McCuen was notified.

The body was brought in to Durkan & Crawford's morgue last evening, and was viewed by the coroner.

The victim of the sad accident lived with his mother at 305 West Fifth street, Old Superior. He has been employed by Swanson since last October, and the latter states that the boy was always exceedingly careful in handling firearms.

An examination of the body showed that the ball had entered under the chin, and severing the jugular vein, had lodged in the skull.

It is the belief of Mr. Swanson that the boy had been holding the rifle cocked between his knees, when the trigger caught on part of his clothing.

Sons of Veterans Plan a Reorganization.

A number of the former members of the Sons of Veterans' organization in this city have been taking an active interest in the past few weeks toward resurrecting the local camp, or the reorganization of a new camp.

Past Col. E. H. Milham and Adjt. J. H. Hiland of St. Paul are in the city today, and this evening a meeting will be held at Kalamazoo hall, at which the state officers will muster in another camp. All sons of old soldiers are eligible to membership and are invited to be present. The ladies of the G. A. R. will serve refreshments.

May Rebuild Mill.

Later details regarding the burning of the Red Cliff Lumber company's mill at Red Cliff, Wis., Wednesday evening, shows that the total loss was about $35,000. The fire is said to have originated in the boiler room from the sawdust conveyor, or that immediate vicinity. It is possible that the mill will be rebuilt, but on a smaller scale.

RANTA GETS FULL AMOUNT

Jury Holds That Insurance Policy Must Be Paid.

John Ranta, who sued the Supreme tent of the K. O. T. M. of the World for a judgment of $1,000, with interest and costs, was yesterday awarded a verdict of $1,165 in district court.

The action was one in which Mr. Ranta sought to compel the Maccabees to pay to him as beneficiary the amount of an insurance policy issued by the organization to his son, Victor Ranta, now deceased.

The son died several months ago, from consumption, the refusal of the order to pay the insurance being based on a claim that consumption existed in the family at the time he applied for membership, and that false statements had been made regarding his health.

John Ranta contended that any statements by the son had been made in good faith, and that the company, after accepting his application and membership fees, was liable.

Mr. Ranta was represented by Miller & Clapp and the fraternal order by S. T. and William Harrison.

PETITIONS OUT

Voters May Express Their Choice For School Board Candidates.

Petitions Used to Avoid Expence of Primary Election.

Members of the board of education are anxious to secure some general expression of opinion as to the men who should be voted on to fill the vacancies caused by the expiration of the terms of Directors Phelps, Smith and Le Tourneau.

It is impracticable and expensive to hold a primary election for this purpose and the members do not consider that a mass meeting of the citizens furnishes a fair means of arriving at a fair expression of opinion.

At the last meeting of the board, therefore, the following resolution was passed:

"Resolved, that this board hereby invites the qualified electors of this school district to present to it by petition on or before June 2 next, an expression of their preference for candidates for election to fill the vacancies which will be caused this year by the expiration of the term of Directors Smith, Le Tourneau and Phelps, to be voted for at the next annual school election, to the end that this board may cause such tickets to be printed and distributed as will fairly give the voters an opportunity to express their choice at the polls."

Blank forms for the petitions can be secured from Charles A. Bronson, clerk of the board, and at the meeting held June 2 the board will act upon the petitions that have been received.

The object of the board as expressed in a similar resolution passed last year, is to prevent the candidates for election to the board being chosen by chance or accident, and to get some general expression of opinion in regard to the matter.

"The school board election is an important one, and it is to be hoped that every citizen and taxpayer will take an active interest in it," said one of the members of the board in speaking of the matter.

TONIGHT'S ATTRACTIONS.

METROPOLITAN—Harry Corson Clarke in "What Happened to Jones."

COMING ATTRACTIONS.

LYCEUM—Monday, Pittsburg Orchestra and Madame Gadski.

HARRY CORSON CLARKE.

"What Happened to Jones" was again presented at the Metropolitan last evening by Harry Corson Clarke and company and drew a good sized audience. This is the most popular offering of the engagement and the public is showing great pleasure over the clever impersonation of Jones by Mr. Clarke and the excellent manner in which all of the members of the company acquit themselves in their parts. The same play will be repeated this evening and tomorrow afternoon and evening.

MADAME GADSKI.

Madame Gadski who will sing at the Lyceum Monday evening with the Pittsburgh Orchestra was for nine years one of the favorite singers of the Metropolitan Opera company of New York. When she left there she refused an offer to sing the role of Kundry in the English production of "Parsifal" which Henry W. Savage has been giving. She determined that she would devote this season exclusively to concerts and has been following out that intention. At the Duluth concert she will sing the great "Dich theure Halle" aria from "Tannhauser," Schubert's famous "Erlking," Massenet's "Ouvre tes yeux bleus," and Weil "Spring Song."

NINETY-FIRST

Annual Meeting of Missionary Union Begins.

St. Louis, May 19.—A number of delegates to the general Baptist convention met by appointment at an early hour today and went to Bellefontaine cemetery to see the grave of John M. Peck, who came as the first Baptist missionary to St. Louis in 1817. A brief service was held at the grave.

Today the ninety-first annual meeting of the American Baptist Missionary union began. Preliminary meetings of the Woman's Foreign Missionary societies, and of the board of managers, were held. The convention was then opened with devotional exercises, conducted by Rev. J. T. M. Johnston of St. Louis. President William A. Munece of Massachusetts presided and delivered his annual address.

PARTY IS SPLIT

Taft as Leader of Progressives, Share of Standpatters.

President Roosevelt In Line With the Tariff Reformers.

Chicago, May 19.—Walter Wellman in a Washington special to the Record-Herald says:

Present indications are that the Republican party is to be split in twain on the traiff question with a bitter struggle for supremacy between the standpatters on one side and the progressives on the other.

Already two aspirants for the Republican presidential nomination in 1908 are taking positions as leaders respectively of the rival factions. A most interesting phase of the affair is that both of these aspirants and rivals are members of President Roosevelt's cabinet, and that to this extent, at least, the administration is divided as to the tariff.

These clashing leaders are Secretary of War Taft, the progressive, and Secretary of the Treasury Shaw, the reactionary. It is an open secret that President Roosevelt's sympathies are with Secretary Taft.

The president is a tariff reformer. He welcomes the episode which has precipitated another question—the action of the Panama commission in deciding to go into the world's markets and buy where it can buy cheapest, regardless of the home market theories of the protectionists.

The political pot in Washington was today fairly boiling, and that purchase-in-the-cheapest-market policy of the canal commission supplied the caloric needed to keep things bubbling.

Secretary Shaw was visibly ruffled. As one of the standpatters, as a presidential aspirant who has through thick and thin thought it was wise to stand by the historic policy of the party and to oppose the slightest modification in the interest of the progress, he was seriously alarmed over what to him seemed a colossal blunder on the part of the administration with which he is associated.

Mr. Shaw shook his head and looked solemn when the canal order was mentioned in his presence.

"Don't take too much stock in the theory that President Roosevelt is responsible for this decision," said the secretary of the treasury to a newspaper man. "I warn you that if you do you will make a mistake."

When this admonition was reported to Secretary Taft later in the day, the recent sitter upon the lid, laughed heartily.

"I don't know who gave you your warning," he said, "but it will do no harm to tell you that the whole affair was thoroughly discussel by and in the presence of President Roosevelt, and the policy has his hearty approval. It would not have been adopted had he had objections to it. So far as responsibility for this great crime is concerned, I am quite willing to assume all that myself."

Mr. Taft declined to say anything more, but at the White House his version of the episode was amply confirmed. President Roosevelt is as earnestly in favor of the policy adopted by the canal commission as Secretary Taft himself.

The law commands the president to construct a ship canal across the American isthmus as cheaply as possible. To obey the law it may be necessary to buy ships in foreign countries, and it is besides pretty well understood that President Roosevelt is not at all displeased at the turn of events bearing upon the tariff question.

The deficit in the treasury, the prospective trade squabble with Germany, to buy in cheapest markets have all synchronized in a focus of public attention upon the Dingley law, and the economic policy of the near future.

Mr. Roosevelt smiles over the outlook. Things are coming his way. He has not felt so good since he killed that last bear out in Colorado.

Although the professional standpatters and the protected interests and shipbuilders, who are displeased at the canal policy are bearing down on the war department with their protests ad threatening to "raise hades" if the commission persists in its program, Secretary Taft appears to be altogether happy. He believes he is right and he doesn't care how loud the howls are from the galled jades. So far as he is concerned if the beneficiaries of the protective system start in to ruin his presidential prospects, and succeed in doing so, he will shed no tears. Mr. Taft stands by the decision despite that.

With Mr. Shaw it is different. He is so crazy to be president, so eager to catch at every straw that may help his prospects, that he thouht he saw a fine opportunity in this business. He would seize it; he would pose as the outraged and idignant friend of protection and the protectees, even at the risk of incurring the displeasure of his chief in the White House.

Mr. Shaw's notion is that if he can contrive to make the beneficiaries of protection realize that here in Washington he is their friend; that he is so devoted to their interests that he is willing to take all sorts of risks in their behalf, they may be grateful enough to turn in and use their mighty power in pushing him along the road to the White House.

WEDDED AT LAST.

After Fonrteen Failures Ohio Man Wins Bride.

Cincinnati, May 19.—After having been disappointed in love fourteen times, according to his own statement, Frank Messang, 67 years old, Wednesday night married Louise Wullweber 47 years old, and for twenty-five years his housekeeper.

"The first of my fourteen love disappointments," remarked Messang as he obtained his license, "was away back in 1856. I don't know what has been the matter with me, but every time I began going with a girl with the idea of marrying her some other fellow came along and took her away from me.

"The girls used to offer me a bonus to go with them, feeling sure the moment I paid them any attention they would marry some other fellow."

CRUELTY TO THE INSANE

A Florida Legislative Committee Submits a Scorching Report.

Jacksonville, Fla., May 19.—The report of the joint committee of the legislature, appointed to investigate the conditions at the asylum for the indigent insane at Chattahoochee, Fla., has created a sensation. It accused officials, attendants and nurses of cruelty toward patients, and drunkenness while on duty.

"No systematic effort whatever has been made or treatment given for the restoration of the mind," says the report. "The sick and afflicted have not been given the necessary medicine or other attention due and needful for their cure or restoration. Evidence is before the committee that the management has been cruel, negligent and heartless in some instances. Attendants and nurses have been drunk while on duty, and have been brutally and inhumanly cruel to helpless inmates.

"In some instances the very atmosphere of the institution has been scented with vice and immorality to the extent that even inmates have begged and pleaded to be released on account of it, and citizens living near by have felt outraged by it.

"Reports of misappropriation of the state's money and effects have come to the committee. No accurate system of accounts has been kept, and from the observation of the method of purchase and disbursement the committee is forced to the belief that some money and effects did not go to the use and benefit of the institution.

"It is with serious regret that duty compels the committee to maintain and so present that the board of state institutions is very largely responsible and should be so held for the deplorable conditions, the inexcusable and unpardonable evils that have existed in and about the institution—responsible to those poor, helpless, unfortunate inmates who have been caused to suffer the pangs of hunger, the humiliation and pain of keen cuts of the lash, the thud of the fist, the stamp of the foot, the unknown and untold physical suffering and mental anguish caused by the willful, wanton neglect of the management and attendants.

"While the evidence is not absolutely clear that such cruelty and failure of duty caused death, it is sufficiently clear to create suspicion of such being true."

The board of state institutions is composed of the governor and members of his cabinet. The conditions to which the committee calls attention are not chargeable to the present governor, since he has been seated only since January. The former governor was William S. Jennings.

SAYS NAN HELD THE REVOLVER

Denver Attorney Had the Story From Her Lawyer.

Sioux City, Ia., May 19.—C. A. Irwin, who Wednesday declared that Abraham Levy of New York, Nan Patterson's attorney, told him Nan said she held the revolver when Caesar Young was killed, reiterated the story more emphatically than ever yesterday. He did this in spite of declarations by Levy that he never heard of Irwin, and that Irwin's statement is a malicious falsehood.

Irwin says he was misquoted in one particular, in that he is credited with saying that the conversation with Levy took place in New York.

"I had met Levy in Denver," Mr. Irwin said yesterday, in giving a more detailed statement of the conversation, "and knew him well enough so that we would recognize one another. Last November I was going from Omaha to Denver, when I found Levy had a berth in the sleeper near mine. Levy was then on his way to Denver to see a wealthy aunt of Nan Patterson, who lives on Capitol hill.

"I greeted him and we talked for a while before retiring. The conversation drifted to the Patterson case, and he then told me Nan's own story to him of the tragedy. He told the story just as it was published yesterday, saying the gun was accidentally discharged while in Miss Patterson's hands during a struggle between her and Young."

Mr. Irwin is a criminal lawyer known widely in this section. Only this month he has removed to Denver to practice. He had returned to Sioux City on business and gave out the interview with Levy in the presence of a half dozen witnesses.

DULUTHIANS IN DENVER

Are Doing Well In Western City Says A. Snyder.

A. Snyder returned this afternoon from Denver after an absence of six weeks, during which time he was busy looking after interests in and around Denver. Mr. Snyder is enthusiastic about that Western country and considers it the best and most promising in the United States today. He says that business is good and everybody who is at all willing to work seems to be making money. Opportunities for investment are excellent there, he says, and chances for them paying big profits could not be much better.

Mr. Snyder saw a good many former Duluthians in Denver, among them Hugh Mitchell, who was formerly a ticket broker here, and Percy Dow, formerly in the sugar business here. Both are doing well and like Denver first rate.

ARGUMENTS

Made For a New Trial For Mrs. Rogers.

Montpelier, Vt., May 19.—A hearing by the state supreme court on a petition for a new trial of Mrs. Mary Rogers, sentenced to be hanged for the murder of her husband, Marcus K. Rogers, was begun here today. Thomas W. Maloney of Rutland, counsel for Mrs. Rogers, presented affidavits of physicians and persons to show that the doctors who performed the autopsy on Roger's body did not report a fracture of the skull at the base of the brain, which subsequently was discovered. Mr. Maloney made an extended argument in favor of a new trial, contending that the government had tried to show that Rogers died of suffocation, whereas it was possible the injury to the skull might have caused death.

KEPLER A SUICIDE.

New York, May 19.—A coroner's jury today returned a verdict that Herbert L. Kepler who was found dead in a hotel here yesterday came to his death by morphine taken with suicidal intent. Mrs. Miller, who came here with Kepler from Deland two weeks ago and who was with him when he died, was discharged from custody.

INNOCENT VICTIM

Tale of Unfortunate Victim Is Told In Court.

Population of City Decreased By Order of Judge.

The simplest, mildest eyed son of Sweden that ever swung a cant hook was hauled into the municipal court this afternoon. How he ever got there is one of life's little mysteries, as his chief offense appeared to be allowing himself to be assaulted by an employment agent.

He evidently thought that nothing short of hanging was the penalty for disorderly conduct with which he was charged, as he sobbed like a child throughout his hearing, and mopped the tears away with his dirty begrimed fist, which plainly showed the effects of hard labor.

"Ay went to the man and ay give him a dollar and he send me out to get a yob," he sobbed. "Ay walk thirty miles in the woods, and ay get lost and when ay get there there is no yob. Then ay come back and ask the man for another yob and he hit me and knock me down and choke me, and ay say 'please mister don't hit me,' because ay no want to get arrested."

"I wish I had the other fellow in here," said Judge Windom. "If I had been you, I think I would have got a club and broken his head. How anybody ever suspected you of being disorderly is beyond my comprehension. You may go."

* * *

Pat Desmond, shaking from the effects of a long continued spree, was arraigned on the charge of vagrancy.

"He's been bummin' around the Bowery for three weeks, your honor," said the officer who made the arrest. "He's in a fair way to land in the snake ward if he stays any longer."

Pat indignantly protested that he had property out in Renville county, and that he had a right to walk about the streets and spend his own money.

"Maybe you have," said Judge Windom, "but you'll have the snakes in another week. We've seen too many cases down here not to know when they're coming, and it will be a God-send to you to go to work. I'll sentence you to pay a fine of $15 or spend twenty days in jail, and I'll give you until nightfall to jump the town."

* * *

The population of the city was still further depleted by the order of Judge Windom, in the case against Pat Burke, also charged with vagrancy.

"You look like a bad egg to me," said the court. I'll sentence you to $20 fine or thirty days in jail, and I'll give you just two hours to fly your kite. That doesn't mean for two or three months either, but for good, and if you are caught here again at any future time the police can throw you in under that sentence."

MARKET VERY DULL.

Very Few Transactions In Copper Shares.

This was one of the dullest days the local copper market has seen for some time. Holders of shares will probably find consolation in the fact that a dead market nearly always comes before an advance in prices. There were one or two small transactions in North Butte stock at 27, but the sales were not of a size to really make prices. At the close there were some bids of $27 and even $28 for very small lots, but not enough to make the prices as high as that.

In the Bisbee stocks there was nothing doing. Offerings are uractically nothing.

DECISION FILED.

George Burgess Secures Judgment Lien on Property.

Judge Ensign filed his decision with the clerk of district court, this morning, in the damage action brought by George V. Burgess and Bessie Burgess against J. H. McLaughlin, S. I. Levine and Frederick Ayer. The court holds that the allegations made in the complaint by the plaintiffs were true, that they furnished the materials mentioned and demanded payment which was refused. The court orders that the Burgesses take judgment for $107.73 and costs and that the judgment stand as a lien against the property described as lot 103, block 17, Duluth proper, Third division, also subject to a mortgage held by Frederick Ayer. The sheriff is ordered to sell the property, subject to the mortgage lien and pay the judgment.

George Burgess was represented at the trial held in January last by A. E. McManus, and Mr. Levine was represented by A. L. Agatin. The other defendants were not represented.

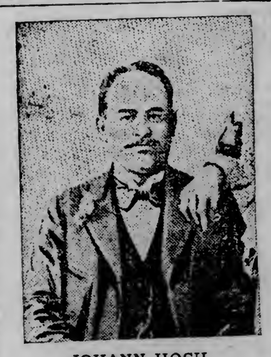
JOHANN HOCH MUST DIE

Found Guilty of Murder and Sentenced To Death.

Chicago, May 19.—The jury in the trial of Johann Hoch found him guilty of wife murder and sentenced him to death.

When the verdict was announced, Hoch stood in a stupor. He nodded his head. He seemed unable to realize what was said. After a moment of silence, he asked the question, "Another one?" No person understood what he meant. A bailiff tapped him on the shoulder and tried to bring him too. Several women who had been awaiting the verdict fainted in the court room.



JOHANN HOCH.

In the commotion that followed Hoch was escorted from the court room by a bailiff. A verdict of guilty was voted on the first ballot. On first ballot for punishment, the vote stood 2 for life sentence and 10 for the death penalty. Two additional ballots were required to bring the two remaining jurymen over to the death penalty.

THE CONGRESS MUST DIRECT

Taft Will Buy No Foreign Built Ships at Present.

Washington, May 19.—Secretary Taft has decided not to buy any foreign-built ships at present, nor to purchase abroad any material for the Panama canal construction beyond that needed for immediate use. This decision does not mean that the president and Secretary Taft have in any degree changed the policy recently announced to govern purchases for the canal work, it being explained that they do not intend to take advantage of the present situation by stocking up heavily in material and ships in anticipation of restrictive legislation by congress at its next session.

It is stated on authority that the president and Secretary Taft would gladly receive any instructions from congress and execute them in the spirit in which the legislation is conceived. But that, as the law stands, the material must be bought in the cheapest market is the view of the president, Secretary Taft and Chairman Shonts. They have discovered that congress itself practically held this view in the case of the Philippine transport service. Some representations have been made to the executive that if the execution of the new policy is delayed until congress reassembles, directive legislation will be had immediately thereafter. So the decision was reached to make no abnormal purchases of material, while as to the needed shipping the commission will proceed to charter such foreign ships as may be necessary to transport construction material to the isthmus.

HEAR MANY REPORTS

Work of Special Committees Read to the Presbyterian Assembly.

Committee on Sabbath Observance Urge Abolishment of Sunday Sports.

Winona Lake, Ind., May 19.—At the opening of the Presbyterian general assembly today, Dr. Sol Dickey presented Moderator Moffat with a gavel made from different woods representative of the Winona work. In replying Dr. Moffat referred to the manner in which the different woods had been blended and likened them to the different branches of the Presbyterian church. This reference to the question of union with the Cumberland Presbyterians brought forth loud applause. Dr. John B. Shaw of Chicago reviewed the work of the evangelistic committee in the last four years.

Moderator Moffat announced the appointment of Justice John Harlan of the United States supreme court as vice moderator.

Prior to recess the assembly received the reports of a number of special committees.

The report of the committee on evangelistic work was in part as follows:

It is the impression of the members of the committee that from the first year of its appointment the tide of evangelism has been rising, until today there has been awakened throughout the entire world, a new spirit of hope and the desire for an awakening; and in some places, not only abroad but in our own land, remarkable works of grace have been witnessed recently. The belief is warranted that in some slight degree at least the general assembly's committee on evangelistic work has had its share in helping to encourage and conserve this increasing interest, and at the same time has helped to bring to the front a higher type of evangelism than our church has known in more recent days. Beyond all question, the spiritual condition of the church is remarkably improved.

The money expended in the work during the past year has been $82,616. The greater part of this has been contributed by individuals, the receipts from miscellaneous sources being $15,255.

The encouragement last year has been greater than ever before and the appointment of a committee on evangelistic work is recommended for the ensuing year. It is believed by the committee, that there has never been such an opportunity for victory.

The report was read by Dr. J. Wilbur Chapman.

The committee on marriage and divorce urges that the rule that ministers refuse to perform marriages between divorced people unless the causes for divorce are scriptural, be continued. In this event one year should elapse between the granting of the divorce and the marriage ceremony. The committee was continued.

The committee on Sabbath observance urged that all forms of sports and railroad excursions be abolished on the Sabbath, that Presbyterians refuse to subscribe for Sunday newspapers, and that in April next each minister preach a sermon on Sabbath observance. The committee on church cooperation and union submitted a plan for uniting with the Reformed Presbyterian church.

The board believes that there are some indications of an awakening of the church to a sense of peril of the present situation. This appears, the report says, from the appointment of ministers to prepare papers on the subject and the applications made to the board for accurate information; and further from the way in which the matter has been presented to the synods. The board suggests that the proper way to bring about a change for the better is to disabuse in the minds of young men the notion of an overcrowded ministry. Every effort should be put forth, the reports says, to bring about a revival of family instruction and family worship. A sense of the responsibility resting upon the church for giving of the gospel to all mankind through the agency of the ministry should be diligently taught; so that heads of families, and pastors of churches, under a sense of this responsibility, may begin to pray with sincere desire and earnestness for a great enlargement of this agency. Young men should be educated under influences favorable to piety, and not calculated to shake their trust in the plenary inspiration and authority of the Holy Scriptures.

The committee on digest of acts of the general assembly asked to be continued. The committee on sustenation reported a plan for caring for aged and disabled ministers and asked to be continued.

PRESENTION OF TUBERCULOSIS

Discussed at Length at Meeting of National Association.

Washington, May 19.—The national association for the study and prevention of tuberculosis, in two sections today, discussed many phases of treatment and sociologic problems entering into the general question constituting the object of the association. The pathological and bacteriological section confined its work to the strictly technical features embraced under those heads. The sociological section considered a symposium of argument relating to sanitorium treatment.

One of the points of interest brought out in this discussion was that every effort so far made to establish self-supporting communitise or settlements of tuberculosis patients had proved a failure. Nevertheless a partial support had been accomplished under carefully directed industries in the open air. It was the general opinion that all cases of tuberculosis should be allowed to remain at large where proper care of the patient was maintained and proper sanitary requirements are observed to protect members of the family with which the patient resided.

PASTOR CLIMBED

In Window, When Trustees Locked Church Door.

Eldorado, Md., May 19.—At the hour of holding the usual Sunday morning services in the Eldorado church this quiet town was the scene of a controversy between the pastor of the church, Rev. Mr. Zepp, and the trustees of the church, who carry the keys of the building.

For some time a friction has existed between the powers of the church and the pastor. Every effort has been made to have him resign. Refusing to do so, the trustees decided not to permit him to preach. When he arrived at the church he found the building tightly locked and the doors bolted against him. The determined preacher is not one to be easily foiled, and in making a flank movement he found an unguarded window through which he quickly climbed. Once in the building he deftly used his pocket knife to remove the screws from the lock. The doors were swung open, and the congregation entered.

At the usual hour the services began, the only departure from the ordinary being a very much more numerous congregation, a larger collection and a more eloquent sermon. Just what action the trustees will take in the matter is problematical, but at the end of the services Rev. Mr. Zepp announced to his congregation that there will be the usual preaching in that church on Sunday next, and he hoped for a still larger congregation.

TO TAKE GAS PLANT.

City of Indianapolis Will Exercise Option.

Indianapolis, May 19.—The board of public works has served notice on the directors of the Consumers' Gas company, whose franchise has expired and whose mains and house connections include a greater part of the city, that the city will exercise its right under the ordinance of 1884 to purchase the property and will proceed to appoint appraisers within the time specified in the ordinance. The board intends to supply artificial gas for fuel.

HAD LIVELY VOYAGE.

Fire and Wild Animals Kept Sailors Busy.

Philadelphia, May 19.—After having been disabled by fire that raged under its decks in mid-ocean for three days, the steamship Kingstonian has arrived with a remarkable cargo of animals, birds and snakes.

A Market street dealer, who makes a specialty of supplying menageries and zoological gardens, decided that the weather was too chilly to allow the snakes to remain in boxes, and he directed his men to transfer twelve pythons, some of which were fifteen feet long, to bags.

The biggest python slipped away from the men and was gliding along the deck. Before it could be corralled it knocked a sailor overboard. In the mad scramble to rescue him others on deck forgot all about the snake, which had things it own way for a short time. When the sailor was pulled on deck the snake was making for the hatchway.

It was then Policeman John Kerns arose to the emergency. He put one foot on the snake's neck, while several men tried to subdue it, and it was not until a well-directed blow stunned it that the men finally succeeded in stowing it away in a big canvas bag.

The fire that damaged the Kingstonian started when it was about two days out from Antwerp. The monkeys seemed to realize the peril, and between smoke and fright thirty-five of them perished.

TO CURE TYPHOID.

Baltimore Physicians Claim to Have Found Remedy.

Baltimore, May 19.—Dr. William Royal Stokes and Dr. John S. Fulton of the state board of health have, after nearly four years of investigation, discovered what they believe to be a curative serum for typhoid fever.

Dr. Stokes and Dr. Fulton have tested the serum that they have made in twenty-three human cases of typhoid. There were two deaths, and among the twenty-one cases ending in recovery there were fifteen in which they considered that the favorable result was due to the influence of the serum. The two deaths were due to complications apart from the original disease.

In both of these cases the injection of the serum caused an appreciable drop in the temperature. Six cases out of the twenty-three showed no response at all to the serum.

The conclusion reached is that by the use of this serum the febrile period may be shortened and the daily variation may be favorably modified.

HOD TAYLOR

To Visit Immigrant Stations In Northwest.

Washington, May 19.—Assistant Secretary of the Treasury Hod Taylor left yesterday for a tour of the immigration stations in the Northwest. He will continue his journey to Alaska, inspecting recently established stations en route.

Mr. Taylor said that he wishes it positively denied that he intends resigning from his present position. "Secretary Shaw and myself," said Mr. Taylor, "enjoy the most cordial relations, and the report that I intended to resign because of friction with my superior is without foundation."

MUNICIPAL THEATER

Red Wing's Playhouse Built Through a Merchant's Benefaction.

Must Give Citizens Best Attractions at Lowest Prices.

Red Wing, Minn., May 19.—The first playhouse in American history to be donated to a municipality as a memorial of the donor has been dedicated here. It is the T. B. Sheldon Memorial Auditorium, and has just been opened to the public here. The playhouse was erected as the result of the bequest of the late Theodore B. Sheldon, a merchant of Red Wing, who died April 3, 1900.

The municipal theater has existed for many years in various cities of Europe, notably in Berlin and Paris, the latter of which boasts of the noble work done for the advancement of dramatic art by its Comedia Francaise, but it has remained for an unassuming merchant in a small Western city to make the first effort in America along similar lines.

The donation of this magnificent auditorium, which has cost uward of $80,000, is hedged about by no conditions whatever, except that the playhouse shall be managed under the direction of a board of citizens appointed by the trustees under the will in the first instance, and after five years by the city council, that it shall never be managed for personal or public gain, but always for the public good, its right entertainment and enlightenment.

It is never to be used for sectarian or political purposes, and all of its net profits, derived from all sources, are to be devoted to establishing a fund, the income from which shall operate as an endowment to enable the directors to obtain the best that is to be had in dramatic, operatic and musical art and in instructive lectures, readings, concerts, etc., and to place these attractions before the citizens of Red Wing at such moderate prices of admission as all shall be able to afford to pay.

As the building was turned over to the city complete in every particular, with house and stage equipment and furnishings scarcely matched in any other theater in the United States, but without any funds whatever, in order to pay the insurance for the coming year, the directors decided to sell the house for the opening at $5 a seat for the parquet and dress circle chairs and lesser prices in other portions of the house, ranging as low as $1 for the double entertainment. The house sold readily, realizing the sum of $2,587.75, which shows that the magnificent gift from Mr. Sheldon is appreciated by the citizens of Red Wing at its right value.

The building is a fine example of the best Italian renaissance, and in all its exterior lines conveys the idea of a memorial in its severe simplicity. The interior is ornate. The lobby is of fine Italian marbles, with inlaid mosaic floors. At either side of the lobby are luxuriously furnished reception rooms for men and women. The floors are covered with Oriental rugs and furnished throughout with mahogany.

The foyer is a graceful curve surrounding the parquet and spanned by Moorish arches, with Arabic designs. The whole interior decoration is in mahogany, old ivory and gold. There are 962 seats, though the dimensions of the building would be thought ample for 1500. The main walls are decorated with two large oil paintings, 14 by 16 feet in size, and which are copies of two famous paintings—one a scene on a Norway fjord and the other a water scene off Venice.

The stage is ample to accommodate the largest theatrical combinations. The proscenium arch is 32 feet wide and 28 feet high. The stage is 60 feet wide and 30 feet deep back of the curtain. There are fourteen dressing rooms all supplied with stationary wash stands, hot and cold water and steam heat, gas and electric lights and furnished with rugs, tables, chairs and mirrors.

There are special reading and writing rooms for the convenience of the members of the theatrical companies visiting the city, and where all the latest dramatic and musical publications are always to be found. The building is situated on a plot of ground apart by itself and entirely removed from all other buildings. It is on the margin of the best business portion of the city.

The greatest interest is manifested in its success by all classes of citizens, and for the first time in the history of Red Wing's old residents, Methodist, Baptist and Lutheran, they have seen the inside of a theater, for it is the first time in more than twenty years that Red Wing has possessed one.

TOURING PARTY

Stop Auto Long Enough to Get Married.

Wilmington, Del., May 19.—An automobile wedding took place a few days ago at the rectory of St. John's Episcopal church, when Archdeacon George C. Hall married Harrold Berrell Larzelere and Miss Nan Harron Shively, motor car enthusiasts, of Philadelphia.

The happy couple arrived from Philadelphia early in the afternoon, accompanied by two brothers and a sister-in-law of the groom. All were togged in auto garments and made the trip in a big touring car. They were completely covered with dust when the car halted at the courthouse.

The groom and his brothers hurried into the office of Clerk of the Peace Quigley, where a marriage license was secured. Then they searched for a Presbyterian minister, but could find neither Rev. Dr. T. A. McCurdy nor Rev. W. F. D. Lewis, who had been recommended. The liberal use of the telephone located Rev. Dr. Hall, an Episcopalian, who was waiting for them when the car bowled along the boulevard to the handsome rectory.

Wearing their auto garments, the nuptial knot was quickly tied, and after a luncheon the party returned to Philadelphia.

RUINS

Of Great City Found Under a Village.

Paris, May 19.—A noteworthy instance of the truth which frequently underlies popular tradition comes from Lacluse, near Bourg, in the French department of the Ain. The local peasantry cherish an ancient legend that a mighty city once stood upon the site now occupied by the village, and that, for some reason or other, of which accounts vary, it was one day destroyed by either the devil or some other agency of the kind. Within the last few days the ruins of a great Roman bath have been discovered in a field near the village. It is on the largest scale, and a considerable portion has now been laid bare, including the sudatorium, the subterranean channel for the hot water supply, numerous debris of Samian pottery, and other relics. In other neighboring fields traces have since been found of ancient ruins which have not yet been thoroughly examined, while Roman remains have at one time or another been found covering a distance of several miles towards the village of Izernore, which would seem to point to the fact that an important Roman city did once occupy the spot, having very probably been destroyed by the devil, or his equivalent, in the form of a barbarian army.

FAMOUS SHRINE

Which Was Closed By France Is Now Nearly Deserted.

A Few Peasants Worship In Its Former Sacred Precincts.

New York, May 19.—A Mentone cable to the World says: The peasant knelt on his wooden stool and bent his head before the little shrine. He was an old man with a wrinkled, sun-tanned face. The hands he clasped before him were knotted and brown as the trunk of an olive tree. His round felt cap lay on the stone slab beside him. Above him our Lady of Laghet, the Lady of Miracles, stood in tinsel majesty with two guttering candles set on iron spikes offering her wan homage in the moonlit glare.

Through the window of the whitewashed gallery peered down the great mountain of Mont Angel, crowned with the walls and entrenchments of the fort in the clouds, the fort that guards the Riviera from the sea and the French frontier from the invaders if Italy should ever move upon Marseilles along the Mediterranean. From the entrenchment line the white stone precipices dropped sheer for 300 feet into the pine woods, and the pine woods fell in dark green billows until they faded into the silvery gray of the olive groves and; the olive groves clambered down the slopes until they reached the deserted little valley framed in laurel cactus and giant fern and stately cedar where stood the monastery of our Lady of Laghet, wherein the peasant knelt in prayer.

A year ago the monastery was of no small importance in the Roman Catholic world. Bishops and even cardinals came to walk under the tree ferns on its terrace, beneath the walls of which a stream ran tinkling in the shadows. Trains of pilgrims marched upon the mountain roads and gathered in chatting groups before the ancient inn across the monastery square. In the great church with its high altar agleam with gold and silver and set about with splendid pictures, the monks moved in their ordered ritual, and their sonorous chantings were carried down the defile.

But in the course of years there arose in France a certain gentleman of the name of Combes, who rose to great eminence and power. He held it the duty of the state to cut itself adrift from all sacred things. From which came many scenes of pathos in Normandy and Bordeaux and about Paris, and also in provence of Savoy. For the order went forth that all religious orders were to be utterly abolished from the face of France.

So one morning there came marching down the pilgrims' road a detachment of gendarmes and a little gentleman in black bearing a bag in his hand. They entered the great doors of the monastery in the defile and presently there issued forth a procession of monks singing a penitential psalm as they passed away from their home forever. And the little gentleman in black, quite unmoved by the firce murmurs of the gathering villagers, fixed the government seals upon the doors of the church, put the keys in his bag and disappeared with the serenity of a man who has performed his duty under trying circumstances.

Yet for several months the faithful came wandering back to the Church of Our Lady of Laghet. Before the great doors they burnt their candles and decked the old stone entrance steps with forget-me-nots and lilies, as if they had been the altar itself. They tore down the official seals, risking imprisonment thereby. Into the iron gratings they thrust their homely tributes of bromm and pink lilac. They wrote wild appeals and prayers on the whitewashed walls. "Whether this church be open or shut I will still return each year in gratitude." "Ah, wretched government! it is the innocent that you make to suffer."

Also they raised a little shrine in the cloisters. And today, on the stone before it, I saw the peasant kneel—alone.

But the glories of Laghet passed with the imprint of the official seals. The pilgrims who came to write their passionate appeals on the whitewashed wall have not returned. Of all the thronging crowds of the past, of the monks and bishops, of the princes and nobles, of the travelers and pilgrims, of the villagers and shopkeepers, there remained today but this old peasant kneeling in solitary silence before the little shrine, and of all the rich offerings there was left but one bowl of wild flowers, which he had placed before the church doors on which hang the broken seals.

KINGDON GOULD

Offers Balm to Columbia For Hazing Episode.

New York, May 19.—Announcement of the gift of a new $600 shell for the use of the Columbia freshman crew at Poughkeepsie has been made at Columbia university. Although the name of the donor is withheld by the managers of the crew, the gift is generally attributed to Kingdon Gould, a member of the science freshman class, and is regarded by his fellow students generally as an attempt on his part to wipe out the unpopularity which he met with after his firing upon his sophomore hazers.

Kingdon Gould is not a member of the freshman crew, but he and his father before him were deeply interested in Columbia oarsmanship. The $25,000 boathouse of the Columbia Rowing association at One Hundred and Fifteenth street and the Hudson river was the gift of George Gould.

Since Kingdon Gould returned to college after the unfortunate hazing incident his conduct from the student point of view has been exemplary, and the ill feeling which his college mates entertained for him at first has largely disappeared.

LAWYER'S WIT

Compels St. Louis Merchant to Return $1,500 to a Parent.

Latter Paid It to Condone Son's Theft of $20.

St. Louis, May 19.—This is a story of graft, of two crimes hidden, of a boy's folly, of a merchant's itching palm, and of a lawyers' keen wits.

Every fact is susceptible of proof in a law court. The locale of the story is St. Louis and three members of the dramatis personae are well-known citizens of St. Louis.

The boy was employed in a great Washington avenue house. His salary was so small that he had no money to squander, and as the girl he loved lacked adornments which he handled daily in the store, he stole from the stock and won her smiles.

The inevitable disclosure came ere his thefts amounted to grand larceny. All thieves bungle, even Raffles bungled occasionally, and this poor youth fortunately bungled grossly when the total sum of his stealings aggregated less than $20 in value.

The disgraceful tale had to be told at home to his father, who believed that his son was in the way of becoming a merchant prince.

It humbled the father, but did not crush out of his heart love for the foolish boy.

Father went to the president of the company that employed the boy and restored to him all the articles that had been stolen, save some trifles, worth approximately $1.25. He pleaded for mercy and offered to do anything in his power to complete restitution and stop prosecution. He asked the president to remember the boy's youth, his own honorable position in the community, and the ruin that must follow if the boy were prosecuted. He asked that he be given a chance to redeem his son.

The president was obdurate. He said the company could not afford to condone theft among its employes. The boy had committed a crime for which he deserved and must receive punishment.

In very agony of soul the father pleaded, and at length the president relented.

"I will let the boy go free," he said, "if you will pay me $1,500."

And that was his last word. He did not explain the basis of this demand, nor the object of which the money was to be devoted. He demanded $1,500 to condone the crime and still his lips.

The father went in haste to his lawyer and told him the story. He did not have $1,500 to give, and yet he would willingly raise the sum by mortgaging his home, if that would save the boy. "You must pay the money," said the lawyer. There is no other way to save the boy. Put the money in bank if it is not already there. Then draw your check for $1,500 and take it to the president. Give it to him personally."

It was with despair in his heart that the proud old man arranged to pay the needed sum. But he did it, and following the instructions of his lawyer, he took the check to the president.

A few days ago the first anniversary of this transaction occurred.

After one year, under the statute of limitations, prosecutions for misdemeanors are barred.

On the anniversary of the day the check was given to the president the lawyer wrote him a letter, which was like the following:

"Dear Sir—I have in my possession a canceled check for $1,500, drawn by ——— ———, my client, in favor of your company, indorsed for deposit by your company and by you personally. As my client did not owe you $1,500, or any part of that sum, and the money was secured by you without consideration, I respectfully request you to return to my client, through me, the sum of $1,500, with interest for one year at 6 per cent, a total of $1,590. I would be obliged to you if you would pay this money before 12 o'clock tomorrow."

The next morning a lawyer, representing the company called on the father's lawyer.

"What does this mean?" he asked, showing the letter to the attorney.

"You will have to go to your client for further information than that contained in the letter," the father's lawyer said calmly.

"But what's your game?"

"There is no game. Your client owes us money and we want it."

"If he pays, what becomes of the clerk you speak of?"

"Do you smoke?"

"Yes."

"Then you carry matches. When you pay the money you may light a match and learn how much smoke a check for $1,500 can make."

There was that in the attitude of the father's lawyer which aroused the mirth of his professional brother, but he yielded.

"I'll send you a check tomorrow," he offered.

"No."

"I'll bring you the company's check, certified by the bank."

"No. I have all the checks I want. Bring coin of the realm and bring it by noon today."

The lawyers smiled at each other as only lawyers can smile. The one who represented the company acknowledged defeat and brought the money.

He counted it out, $1,590, in legal tender.

"Now for the check," he said.

"Light your match."

The father's lawyer held the check safely and the company's lawyer applied to a corner of it the flame of a burning match. The check blazed finely and soon was a curling wisp of blackened ash tossed by the light current of air blowing under a loose set door.

Thus was the boy saved from the awful consequences of his first crime against society.

Thus did a merchant's itching palm gain a slight salve of grafted dollars.

Thus did he escape prosecution for blackmail and for the composition of crime.

Thus did the father recover, after a year's wait, the money he had almost depleted his little bank account to pay.

And thus did a lawyer gain a fee and the admiration of his brother in the law and gratitude of his client.

Moral: There are so many morals in this story he who reads may pick the one that he likes best.

"WILLIE" THE WISE OLD OWL

Waits For Firemen When Students Would Smoke Him Out.

Columbus, Ohio, May 19.—"Willie," the owl, was dozing comfortably in the hollow trunk of a big oak tree, which leans out gracefully over Mirror lake, near the famous spring at the Ohio state university, when some mischievous students kindled a fire in an opening far beneath him.

A distant, far-away sort of crackling sound woke "Willie" and a whiff of smoke was wafted past his perch. It made his ordinarily staring eyes blink furiously, and, cocking his head to one side, chicken-like, he peered down into the depths below.

A licking tongue of flame was creeping up the side of the rotten interior. It flickered, spat, died away, and a rush of blinding smoke came up the passageway. Gasping and half strangled, "Willie" swooped out of his doorway.

From the top of the nearby elm "Willie" watched the smoke pour in ever-increasing volume from his home. Then came cries in the distance, and soon a rush of men with a strange puffing, coughing machine toward the tree. "Willie" snuggled down amid the foliage and watched.

When they put a snake-like affair into the hollow trunk and squirted water upward in great volume, the wise owl chuckled to himself. For once he had fooled them. Finally they began to climb the tree, and he watched them with even greater interest.

There the snake-like affair again sputtered a stream of water into his home, and pretty soon the smoke died away and the puffing machine stopped its cough as they drew it away. "Willie" remained securely hidden in the elm, and with much effort refrained from hooting them.

The fine old oak may die from the effects of the fire. It is one of the handsomest on the campus and had long been the owl's home. The university authorities may expel the culprits if it is discovered who built the fire.

ALLOTMENTS BEING BOUGHT

Lands of the Cherokee Indians Now In Demand.

Muskogee, I. T., May 19.—It is stated upon good authority that some of the local real estate dealers are buying Cherokee lands regardless of their restrictions, basing the legality of their action upon a recent decision of the United States supreme court, which holds that, when an Indian has been given title to his allotment he is no longer a ward of the government.

This decision, it is held, will prevent complications in the sale of lands by Indians, where the title has been regularly signed by the governor of the nation and the secretary of the interior. The point is made that this entire country, which has been divided into allotments, at one time belonging to the Indian nations. Deeds to the property become legal when signed by the secretary of the interior and the chiefs of the several nations.

The decision of the United States supreme court under which the real estate men are making these purchases was in the case of a saloon keeper in Kansas who sold whisky to an Indian who had been given a deed to his allotment. The saloon man was convicted in the United States circuit court, but carried the case to the supreme court, which reversed the finding of the lower tribunal, holding that an Indian, when he has been given a deed, in regular form, to his allotment, is not a ward but a citizen of the United States, and that a man could not be punished for selling whisky to an American citizen.

The decision was handed down only a short time ago, and taking advantage of it, several real estate men have invested, for speculation, in Cherokee lands. The Cherokees are the poorest of the five Indian tribes in the territory, and readily sell their allotments when a purchaser offers. The action of the local real estate men may bring about legal complications, but they have secured opinions from some of the foremost attorneys in the territory, who claim the decision will hold good.

In some cases, it is said, the lands are purchased even before the contest period expires, the buyer taking chances on this point. The lands bring good prices, as the Cherokee nation is one of the finest agricultural sections of the territory. Some lands bring as high as $25 an acre.

NAVAL GUNNERY

To Be Imparted to the British Artillerymen.

London, May 19—A new departure will be made shortly in connection with the Royal Garrison artillery, the object of which is to give fortress gunners a better knowledge of naval gunnery tactics.

Both in naval and military circles it is agreed that the man behind the gun in a shore fort should know all about a ship and her gunnery. Up to the present, however, there has been practically no instruction on these lines.

A committee is to be appointed, consisting of naval and military officers, to decide the best means of imparting the knowledge of naval gunnery to the artillerymen.

Among the suggestions to be considered is one proposing the amalgamation of the Royal Garrison artillery and the Royal Marine artillery, and that ship and shore duty should be given alternately to every man.

Another suggestion is that pensioned naval gunners should be employed as teachers in the forts.

SCRATCHED DAY AND NIGHT

"My scalp was covered with little pimples and I suffered tortures from the itching. I was scratching all day and night, and I could get no rest. I washed my head with hot water and Cuticura Soap and then applied the Cuticura Ointment as a dressing. One box of the ointment and one cake of Cuticura Soap cured me. Now my head is entirely clear and my hair is growing splendidly. I have used Cuticura Soap ever since, and shall never be without it. (signed) Ada C. Smith, 309 Grand St., Jersey City, N. J."

FIGHTING THE WHITE PLAGUE

Distinguished Medical and Scientific Men Are Organized.

Washington, May 19.—(Special to The Herald.)—The fight against the "White Plague" is to be taken up in earnest by the medical men of the country. To this end an association has been organized, and will hold its first annual meeting in this city on May 18 and 19. Among the membership are many of the most distinguished medical and scientific men of the nation. A glance at the roster of officers will soon show the high standing of the association:

President, L. Tradeau; vice presidents, Dr. William Osler, Dr. Hermann M. Briggs; treasurer, Gen. George M. Sternberg; secretary, Dr. Henry Barton Jacobs, Baltimore, Maryland; executive secretary, Livingston Farrand, New York; directors, Dr. Howard S. Anders, Philadelphia; Dr. Robert H. Babcock, Chicago; Dr. Hermann M. Biggs, New York; Dr. Vincent Y. Bowditch, Boston; Dr. Henry M. Bracken, St. Paul; Dr. Norman Bridge, Los Angeles; Maj. George E. Bushnell, Fort Bayard, New Mexico; Edward T. Devine, New York; Dr. Lawrence F. Flick, Philadelphia; Dr. John P. C. Foster, New Haven; Dr. John S. Fulton, Baltimore; Frederick L. Hoffman, Newark, N. J.; Dr. John N. Hurty, Indianapolis; Dr. Henry Barton Jacobs, Baltimore; Dr. S. A. Knopf, New York; Dr. Arnold C. Kelbs, Chicago; Dr. Charles L. Minor, Asherville; Dr. William Osler, Baltimore; Dr. Edward O. Otis, Boston; Dr. Leonard Pearson, Philadelphia; Dr. William Porter, St. Louis; Dr. Charles O. Probst, Columbus, Ohio; Dr. Mazyck P. Ravenel, Philadelphia; Dr. S. E. Solly, Colorado Springs; Dr. M. M. Smith, Austin, Texas; Gen. George M. Sternberg, Washington; Dr. Edward L. Trudeau, Saranac Lake; Dr. Victor C. Vaughan, Ann Arbor; Dr. William H. Welch, Baltimore; Gen. Watler Wyman, Washington.

It is organized for the study and prevention of tubruculosis, and a number of distinguished laymen will take part in the first annual meeting. Among the matters that will be discussed may be noticed, progress of the sanatorium movement in America; infection in transportation; channels of infection in tuberculosis; serum, the blood in tuberculosis, the relation of tuberculosis to life insurance, open air treatment, climatic conditions, etc. Infection in transportation will be discussed not only from the point of view of the physician, but from that of transportation companies.

It is anticipated that great good will come from this meeting. It is the first of its kind ever held, and the bringing together of so many distinguished men who have made a special study of this dread disease will bring out much that will be of great value to the medical profession, and it may result in giving legislators information of the highest value in framing laws dealing with the subject.

Much has been lately said in the public press about the danger of infection in cars used for the transportation of passengers, and there has been a decided movement toward requiring better ventilation and sanitation in all such cars. This will be one of the most important questions discussed. Turebculosis has practically spread over all the country, and its rapid spread has been laid to infection in transportation.

For generations it has been believed that no cure existed for the disease, but many eminent men now hold that it can be cured. The first great object, however, is prevention, and the means by which this much desired end may be reached is now engaging the attention of very many of the physicians of the country.

INTERESTING COMPARISON

Between Church Work In Manila and United States.

New York, May 19.—The Rev. Lewis B. Hillis, who has been for three years working in the First Presbyterian church of Manila, in the Philippines, is in the United States on vacation and spent several days in New York last week. He makes an interesting comparison between church work in Manila and here. The Presbyterian church in Manila is maintained by the Presbyterian Board of Foreign Missions for the English speaking residents of that city, and a large part of the congregation is made up of army officers and their families, and soldiers; therefore the attendants of the church is constantly changing. Membership in the church, because of this, is in two classes, regular members, as in home churches, and affiliated members. The latter class is composed of those who are church members at home, in the United States, but who, during their residence in Manila, are identified with the Presbyterian church. The Rev. Dr. S. B. Rossiter, who was for nearly thirty years a New York pastor, is in charge of the Manila church, the Rev. Mr. Hillis being his associate.

Work is about to be commenced on a chapel building for the Manila congregation to cost $12,000, toward which sum $10,000 has been raised. The whole plan contemplates a church plant to cost $35,000 which will not be built, however, for several years. The chapel is to seat 400 and is to be constructed of cement blocks fastened together with iron rods, to be earth-quake proof. Provision is made for a roof garden. Mr. Hillis explains that the pastoral work in this congregation, because of the constantly changing personnel, requires that constantly a large number of calls be made in order that the places of those who return to the states, or who are sent by the government to other parts of the islands may be filled. The climate does not favor energetic work and many of the missionaries have to go to Japan or return to the United States seeking health.

The Presbyterian church in Manila is entirely distinct from the work of the Presbyterian Board of Foreign Missions maintained for the natives of the islands, and is designed only for the English-speaking residents of the city. A difficulty of the work has hitherto been the lack of adequate means of transportation. Many of the congregation live several miles from the church, and until the completion of the trolley road just opened they had to walk to church or pay high fares in hacks. In many cases as much as a dollar had to be paid a hackman to take people to and from church, and even at that rate, hacks are scarce and some had to patronize the liveries and pay from $2 to $4. These charges are high, but horses are scarce in Manila; they die easily, and feed is expensive. By using the trolley road people living at the most remote points will be able to attend the church by spending not more than 20 cents car fare.

Rev. Mr. Hillis speaks in glowing terms of the teachers sent out by the United States government to teach the English language in the Philippine schools. English, he says, is rapidly coming to occupy a place that the Spanish language never did. It is even now possible for an American to travel to almost any village and town of the islands with the assurance that he will find someone to act as interpreter for him. Within two years, he thinks, English will be the only language heard in the courts. American teachers in the schools are not permitted to use any but the English language, even to make explanations. The result is that the Filipino children and young people are gaining a thorough and practical knowledge of the language.

St. Cloud, May 19.—(Special to The Herald.)—The Duluth White Sox won the opening game of the season here yesterday afternoon in a very one-sided game with the St. Cloud-Brainerd aggregation, shutting out the locals by a score of 9 to 0. Potts for the White Sox was well-nigh invincible, allowing a total of three dinky singles, scattered through as many innings. The locals were outplayed from every standpoint. Potts gave three hits, struck out nine, walked two and hit none. Howells allowed fourteen hits, of which three were triples and three doubles, struck out but one, passed four and hit one. Duluth made two errors and the locals one. The contest was practically featureless.

The weather, which had been unfavorable for two weeks previous to yesterday, cleared and was fine and warm. A crowd of about 1,000 fans turned out to witness the opening contest.

Another game will be played this afternoon, when Gilchrist will pitch for St. Cloud and probably Miller for Duluth.

FARGO WINS.

Defeats Crookston In Opening Game of Season.

Fargo, N. D., May 19.—(Special to The Herald.)—Fargo 5, Crookston 4, was the result of the first game in the Northern league on the local grounds. The local bunch got away right and started the season under most favorable auspices. Following the parade of both teams down town there were appropriate exercises at the park, which included an introductory address by Secretary Price of the management and short speeches by Mayors Wall of Fargo and Nye of Moorhead. Each threw the first ball for the oposing teams and the game was on.

The Fargo fans had their first opportunity to size up the local team as there had not been even an exhibition game prior to the opening contest. The majority of the team showed up in a manner that delighted the fans and with one or two weak spots strengthened the aggregation will probably hold its own in the league this season.

Mehl and Rose were the premier batters, each securing a trio of safe ones. In fielding Fitzgerald had his troubles at short and Hisey in center. The ground around short was in bad shape and responsible for the greater part of Fitzgeralds infractions.

The team showed weaker on the base lines than elsewhere and did not get the runs to which they were entitled from the number of safe hits made. The batting was a strong feature and it cheered the heart of the fans to see the safe bingles. There was a nice rally in the fifth when four safe swats came in a row. Fargo teams have been so notoriously weak with the stick in the past that the slugging came as a gratifying surprise.

Crookston seems to have a well balanced aggregation. Their lack of hitting was due in a large measure to the fast work of Hanson in the box for Fargo. The visitors have lost of ginger and snap and put up a fast game.

Umpire Anderson, recently of the American Association, officiated satisfactorily, except in the third when he called Traeger out at first after Schlatter had dropped the ball.

THURSDAY'S EVENTS ON VARIOUS COURSES

St. Louis, May 19.—The favorites at the American Jockey club had a fair day, the public selections winning three of six events. Dishabille again demonstrated its class in the fourth race at the fair grounds by winning from a field of some of the best sprinters in the West. Tangent, in the second race, at odds of 30 to 1, was the winning long shot.

Kansas City, May 19.—Baikal got away with the running start in the third race at Elm Ridge yesterday and was never headed, winning easily from Ada N and Helgerson. The fourth number, a handicap at six furlongs, was declared off and a selling affair at the same distance was substituted. Squire, at liberal odds, won the race after a hard drive from Marco, the favorite.

BELTRAMI OFFICIALS

Are Being Given Hearing By Governor Johnson.

St. Paul, May 19.—In the office of Governor John A. Johnson today there will be a hearing on the charges of malfeasance in office preferred against Commissioners F. O. It is said that the county commissioners are going to fight the case tooth and nail. County Attorney H. J. Loud will probably make no defense. He has resigned, and there is no reason for continuing the investigation against him, say the attorneys for the state.

FIELD FOR NEGRO

Success Attained By American Negros In the Soudan.

Four Tuskegee Graduates Are Now In the Nile Country.

New York, May 19.—There is a field for the educated American negro in Africa, and he has already found it out, according to Leigh Hunt, the American business man and traveler who has just arrived here from abroad for a stay of several months.

Mr. Hunt has important mining interests in Korea, but the latest enterprise is a cotton-growing experiment in the Soudan. Last year he purchased a tract of 50,000 acres of land for agricultural purposes from the Soudanese government on the railroad route between Beeber and Suakim and spent the winter there seperintending the cotton experiment.

In an interview Mr. Hunt outlined an experiment with the American negro in the Soudan quite as interesting as that of cotton growing.

"In the first place," said Mr. Hunt, "please don't call me a millionaire or a promoter. Call me a frontiersman, for that is what I am. I make my home on the frontier. This city life, with its luxuries and confinement, would be the death of me.

"Now, as regards my bringing American negroes into the Soudan, I am reluctant to talk on the subject. Some of the stories published about it have been absurd. I am not fathering a colonization scheme nor planning to take 40,000 negroes to Africa. The ciphers were gratuitously added.

"The question of emigration as a solution of our negro problem is a difficult one to answer. It is a big subject and I don't pretend to know what can be accomplished in that way. What I do believe is that, given favorable conditions, the educated negro can establish a home for himself in a foreign land and prosper there. Two important desiderata in such a move are congenial climate and the absence of competition with white men, especially where racial prejudice is operative.

"Now, on the strength of this belief, when it came time to find men to fill positions as overseers on my plantation, I requested the Booker Washington Institute at Tuskegee to send me four negroes who had been educated in that school. These men came over about a year ago, and I can say that thus far there has been no cause for disappointment in the experiment. The negroes are technically educated men and good workers. They have got along well with the Soudanese laborers, and the influence of the Americans on the natives has been the best.

"After being with me some months these mene sent for some of their Tuskegee friends in the South, who joined them, and there are still others arranging to go over there to conquer. He has a rival in the Egyptian fellaheen, or peasant. It was once believed that he would never leave Egypt for the Upper Nile, but it looks as if this was wrong. If he does take kindly to the Soudan it means that Lord Cromer's dream of the Soudan as the outlet for Egypt will be realized.

"The Soudan is not a white man's country. That is one of the points in favor of the negro who goes there. Moreover, the climate seems to agree with him excellently. In fact, I am now convinced that the ancestors of many of our negroes came from the Nile region.

"The land in the Soudan is wonderfully rich. It is easy for an educated negro, who understands agriculture, to make a home for himself there, and, if he is industrious, to prosper. If he leases more land than he is able to operate he can sublet a part of it to natives and thus find himself, in a way, a landlord. You might add, too, that the experience of having men in his employ, or dependent on him, is no small factor in his success as an emigrant."

Speaking of the rusults obtained in his Soudanese enterprise, Mr. Hunt said:

"Our experiments in cotton show a larger yield per acre than Egypt produces, and as for quality, it is quite equal to the best American product. The Egyptian varieties will do as well as in Egypt if planted early. But early planting involves the question of water at low Nile, which is the chief problem of the future. For eight months of the year when the water is running waste to the sea we are happy, but for the balance of the year when the low Nile water is needed in Egypt we are in the hands of Providence. However, we have tremendous confidence in the way Cromer, Garstin, Wingate and Cecil—the 'big four'—do things, and, somehow, we feel they will solve the water problem, too.

"The railroad connecting Sheikh Barghut on the Red sea, with Damer, on the Nile, will probably be completed by the summer of 1906, and then the doors, which have hitherto been closed on that great country, will swing wide open for an era of peace and prosperity."

Mr. Hunt has spent many years in Korea, but has not been there since before the beginning of hostilities between Russia and Japan. Speaking of the war, he said the success of the Japanese would mean a new and better life for China and Korea.

"The limitations of Korea," said Mr. Hunt, "are so narrow that her development will mean little to the world, but no country has wider natural limitations than China. Now that Japan knows her strength, she will give her neighbor a strong guiding hand, which will mean that Chinas' superb natural resources and the enormous wealth and power of her cheap labor are factors to be reckoned with in the future.

"The after results of this war will be good for everybody, as far as one can see. Japan will readily forgive France, for she looks upon her as an honorable and chivalrous ally of Russia. But the meddling of Germany, which among outside influences is regarded as second only to the Russo-Chinese bank in bringing the war about, she will never forgive.

"I do not in the least believe in the yellow peril. If the earnest, simple life of the Oriental proves too much for the self-indulgence of the Occidental, I see no reason why the one should be held back to increase the ease and luxury of the other. In my opinion, the future controlling combination of the world will be England, France, Italy and Japan. As for the United States, we shall have our hands full looking after our Socialists, unless our republic rides safely through the domestic storm that is now gathering."

BAPTISTS WILL MEET NEXT AT PORTLAND, ORE.

St. Louis, May 19.—Contrary to the usual custom of Baptist conventions, the place of next meeting usually being selected by a committee, the delegates yesterday practically unanimously voted upon Portland, Or., as the place for the Baptist anniversary in 1906.

The most important action of the session of the Baptist Home Mission society was the adoption of a new plan for evangelistic work, which was outlined by Rev. Dr. Henry L. Moorehouse of New York. Special evangelists are to be appointed who will conduct or participate in evangelistic meetings at the large centers of population, and hold meetings for students attending theological seminaries and academies and colleges. The appointment of state evangelists was strongly endorsed.

ASSESSORS GET LIST OF MORTGAGES

New Law Compels Register of Deeds to Furnish It.

All Mortgages Will Fall Under Three Per Cent Tax.

What would amount to almost a confiscation of mortgages held by residents of Duluth and the entire state is likely to be brought about under an act passed by the last session of the legislature.

Under the provisions of the act the register of deeds is compelled to certify to the county auditor a list of all the mortgages in the county, the cost of the work being borne by the county. A copy of the list of those in Duluth, it is understood, will go to the city assessor, and his deputies in making their assessments of personal property will be provided with the names of the persons who own mortgages and the amount of the mortgage.

Mortgages drawing 6 per cent interest will then be assessed with a 3 per cent personal property tax, cutting the income of the owners in half, if a full valuation should be given.

Mortgages, of course, have always come under the head of personal property, and have been liable to this tax, but it has hitherto been the custom of owners of such paper to neglect to disclose the fact to the assessors, and the latter have never had any means of checking up such statements and arriving at the facts. The consequence has been that but a very small percentage of the mortgages have been assessed.

Just what the outcome will be is difficult to say. Owners of mortgages drawing 5, 6 or 7 per cent interest will not be willing to submit to a 3 per cent tax, which would reduce the interest to the amount paid by savings banks, and if the facts are as stated there will be wholesale turning over of mortgages.

Under the state laws mortgages held by state banks are not assessable under the personal property tax, and the bank is assessed only for its capital stock. The mortgages could therefore be turned over to a state bank and the personal property tax thus evaded.

If such a list of mortgages has been furnished the assessors, and there are excellent grounds for believing that such is the case, there will be some surprises in store for mortgage owners when they receive notice of their personal property assessment, and the board of review, which will meet in June, will have a stormy session in prospect.

The law says:

"Section 1.—It is hereby made the duty of the register of deeds of each county in this state to make out a list of all mortgages or other real estate securities held, owned, or controlled by the residents of his county, showing the names of the owners or agents, alphabetically aranged, and the amount due on each separate instrument. He shall make out such list according to the records of his office and deliver it to the county auditor on or before the last Thursday of April in each year."

RAILROAD NEWS

Not Enough Men to Fill Orders for Railroad Work.

Southern Lines Trying to Get Italians Into the South.

The railroad companies are experiencing considerable difficulty in getting all the men necessary for railroad work just now. There is so much new construction work going on, and so many spring repairs to be made, that the available supply of laborers appears to be smaller than the demand. One agency, for example, has received orders for nearly 200 men in the last twenty-four hours, and while not all of them are wanted for railroad work, the majority of orders are from the railroad companies. The Duluth & Iron Range put in an order this morning for seventy-five men for an extra gang on the range, and several other lines are putting on extra gangs.

Ordinary section work does not seem to be very popular with the men looking for employment, owing, perhaps, to the fact that this class of work is poorer paid than others. The wages for section men are as low as $1.25 a day in some cases, although the range roads are paying $1.75. Down towards Ashland the section men are receiving in several instances only $1.25, but west of Duluth they are getting from $1.40 to $1.75 a day, though the latter figure is rather the exception than the rule.

The same difficulty in getting enough men for the railroads is being met with in the South, and to change this condition of affairs immediate steps are to be taken to divert the flood of Italian immigrants coming to this country from the Northern cities to the Southern states. The immigration authorities, officials of the railroads traversing the Southern states, and the Italian ambassador have been considering the matter for some little time past, and have decided that this plan will prove to be a solution of the two-fold problem. It will, they agree, dispose of the newcomers to their own South with the labor of which it stands in need. Not only railroads, but other concerns in the South, it is reported, are now finding it easy to get all the laborers they want.

Vice President J. T. Harahan of the Illinois Central railroad, who was one of the first to strive to get a sufficient number of white workers into the cotton growing states, has arranged for a tour for the Italian ambassador, Baron Mayor des Planches, in which the baron can see for himself the real situation. The trip will be begun today at St. Louis. J. M. Dickinson, general counsel for the road, with a number of other railroad men and manufacturers, will accompany the ambassador in a special train that will visit most of the cities of the South.

At the discussion in which the matter was first brought up it was pointed out that the climate of the South was more like that of Italy than is found in the Northern states. The newcomers, it was argued, would find a further advantage in the scarcity of competent labor existing in that portion of the country. There were negroes enough, it was said, but so many of them did not care to work steadily that they did not count as an equal number of white men would count. In the belief that the government of Italy can do much in the way of determining the destination of its immigrating citizens, the baron was interested. If he recommends to his government that the South be favored it is believed that other governments will follow the movement, although it is considered altogether unlikely that the South will ever prove as popular with certain nationalities, Swedes and Norwegians, for example, as the North. Comparative figures show that in the past the heavy tide of Italian immigration has been to the Northern states. Where Virginia has only 860 Italians, Pennsylvania has 66,000, and the state of New York has 182,000. Illinois has 23,000, and about the same ratio holds good through other of the Northern states.

The feature of the labor market in Duluth this spring is the great diversity of the employment to be had by men seeking for work, either on the railroads or elsewhere. This is more marked than it has been in years. On the railroads almost every class of worker usually to be found there is in demand, with the exception, perhaps, of the more skilled classes, and for these men are not obtained through employment agencies. But section men, extra gangs, ax men for clearing the right of way, graders, teamsters, bridge carpenters, etc., are in great demand.

24 EAST SUPERIOR STREET.

Much interest is being shown by a large number of people outside the club women in the work undertaken by the Women's Council of Duluth in the school gardens and summer school of domestic science. The financial support which has been given the council is most gratifying, and another means of adding to the treasury was presented. "The Merchant of Venice," which will be presented next Wednesday evening at the Lyceum, under the management of John Milton, will be under the auspices of the Women's Council and a most generous precentage has been arranged for the work of the council. Tickets may be secured at the library.

In the school or vacant lot gardens, a project which has been most successful in other cities was begun this year, and the value which the employment will be to many boys, and the improvement of the property, assures the undertaking the support of all thoughtful citizens. Five gardens have been arranged for, and the one near the high school, at the northeast corner of First avenue east and Second street, is perhaps attracting the most attention. The lot has been fenced, and the gardens laid out nicely. The work is directed by a skilled gardner, and the boys are enthusiastic over the opportunity of raising vegetables and garden stuff.

The summer school of domestic science, which will be maintained during July and August, at the Adams school, is also a plan which originated with the council, and promises to do a great amount of good during the eight weeks of summer. Applications have been made in excess of the number that may be accommodated. The teacher has been engaged, and the school is receiving the support and approval of many of the most prominent women of the city.

Aside from the interest felt in "The Merchant of Venice," through the connection of the Women's Council, the play in itself promises to be most interesting. The cast is a most attractive one, including as it does the most prominent readers of the city. The costumes to be used are most beautiful ones, and the Lyceum next Wednesday evening will undoubtedly be the place where Duluth society will gather.

The beneficent degree of the order of Modern Samaritans last night gave one of the prettiest dances of the season at Elks' hall. The only difficulty was that the crowd was almost too large but each participant seemed to be enjoying the evening to the fullest degree. A large class was initiated before the dance began and then La Brosse's orchestra played a dance program of strictly up-to-date music.

At the next meeting of the degree another large class will be initiated at which time the officers will wear their new robes.

Mrs. Clarence Coleman entertained at cards yesterday afternoon at her apartments in the Hotel Superior. A large number of Duluth society women were among the guests.

HAND MADE THINGS.

Girls Handy With Needle Can Keep Busy.

A girl who is handy with her needle nowadays need not want for useful and interesting work. She may not be a seamstress. She need not know any of the mysteries of cutting out and seam fitting, and yet she may be the busiest girl in the house, doing things that mean far more in the general effect of her summer wardrobe than the most intricate machine work. There never was a time when there was such a rage for hand made things. All the knowledge that every young girl has about fancy work may be practically applied now to gowns. She may be busily doing stuffed embroidery, long and short and cross stitch; even darning on her blouses and gowns, and she will be just twice as smart in her summer gowns as her richer cousin who can hire them all made, but who doesn't know how to embellish them, says the New York Globe.

She may make teneriffe wheels. These are perfectly lovely in finest of linen thread for sheer and dainty under muslins. They are equally pretty in colored linens or silks of larger design for the yokes of thin gowns. A gown seen recently which was indescribably beautiful had the entire yoke and bertha and upper part of the skirt's flounce made of teneriffe wheels of cobwebby blue. The gown was a blue organdy. The maiden who wore it was fortunate in having a maiden aunt who was an invalid and had time to make the wheels. Teneriffe wheel work is rather slow, though very interesting pickup work for those who have much time.

The more effective shirt waist things, turnovers, collars and cuffs, etc., appeal more to the younger girl's needle. A certain young woman has made a nice bit of spending money this spring making and selling stock bands to be worn with shirt wait gowns. These are not simply stocks like you buy in the shops, by any means. Her most popular seller was an adjustable band or collar with a long strip fastened to it that extends down the shirt front. The whole thing was done on huck towelling entirely covered with a design darned in mercerized linen. The darning stiffened the collar sufficiently to make it stand up. Some were done in reds and blues; the white ones were most popular. Such a stock and band is easily adjusted, no trouble to laundry, and gives a smart touch to the plainest shirt waist.

Revers and collars and cuff sets are the order of the day now. Indeed, no jacket suit, whether linen or otherwise, is complete without such adornments. The variety and orginality of these depends entirely upon the girl's own taste and ability to work. She may get the simplest of patterns and cut them out of plain white linen or pique for general wear. Or she may put an unlimited amount of ingenuity and work upon those of daintiest Swiss and organdy. Valenciennes flouncings, real lace insertions, French knots, appliqued medallions, etc., all add to their richness.

The embroidered monogram is always a smart touch upon a shirt waist. A lovely shirt waist gown was seen the other day. It was made of white linen with short skirt and perfectly plain blouse. The waist had no plaits, and was cut with good shoulder breadth. A round pocket on one side of the front was covered with a hand-embroidered monogram. This was the smart touch of the gown. The monogram was done in heavy white linen and white arrow heads were embroidered at the head of the hidden plaits in the skirt, which commenced at the knee.

CUPIDANDCOFFEE

By J. C. Plummer.

(Copyright, 1905, by Daily Story Pub. Co.)

If Capt. Jim Warren hadn't gone gunning Tuesday morning— But he did go, he and his friend, Capt. Peter Hawkins, with infinite greater chance of shooting each other than of bagging game, and they were to return early Wednesday. In the meantime, Mr. Crowley, the bookkeeper, was to look after the affairs of Warren & Co., importers of coffee.

Wednesday morning arrived with exemplary promptness, but Capt. Warren did not accompany it. Mr. Crowley was a good accountant but he was good for nothing outside of that line and when the fact become apparent that Capt. Jim had not arrived the executive of the firm of Warren & Co., became so harassed with responsibility that he lay the case before Mrs. Warren.

Mrs. Warren was a pretty woman, and she was also resourceful. She at once informed her sister, Janet, that she was going down to the office and assume the management of the business until her husband's return.

"But, my dear," objected Janet, "you don't know anything about business."

"Nonsense," retorted Mrs. Warren, "it's nothing like as hard as keeping house. You come down about noon and we'll have lunch in the office. It'll be better than a picnic in the woods."

"I'm glad it happened," murmured Mrs. Warren, as she tripped her way to the wharf, "it'll do Janet good to come down, poor thing." As a matter of fact Janet was mopey. She had been engaged to be married to Frank Strong, a merchant in the same line as was Captain Warren. The match was eminently suitable from whatever point of the compass it was viewed and the problem of a trousseau for Janet was troubling the brain of Mrs. Warren, when a cloud rose on the horizon of the pair's relations which hurled the bark of love a wreck on a lee shore. It is useless to go into details. Mrs. Warren loyally upheld her sister and stigmatized Mr. Strong as a wretch. Doubtless Mr. Strong's sister, if he had one, would have espoused as loyally her brother's side and declared Miss Janet a flirt. Be the fault of the break where it belongs, Mr. Strong began assiduous attentions to another lady and Janet wept copiously and moped.

Captain Warren, who viewed these tender emotions from a grossly material standpoint, declared living on one chocolate cream a day was no way to conquer unrequited love and suggested a diet of pork and beans, a prescription which was treated with merited contempt by both ladies.

"Jim," said Mrs. Warren to her husband, "don't sell anything to that wretch, Frank Strong; don't speak to him."

Captain Warren promised readily. His idea of navigating the matrimonial ship was to promise whatever he was called upon to promise and trust to luck that his wife would forgot about it.

Mrs. Warren found business unexciting. It was a dull day and the few people who called were handled by Mr. Crowley without recourse to the protempore executive in the private office, and Mrs. Warren found herself longing for Janet and lunch hour. Then a crisis occurred. A burly drayman handed Mr. Crowley an order and he came in the private office with it.

"Here's an order from Mr. Frank Strong for a hundred bags of coffee the captain sold him last Monday. I'll deliver it to the drayman."

"Mr. Crowley," exclaimed Mrs. Warren, with a gleam in her eyes, "do you mean to say that my husband sold Frank Strong some coffee?"

"Why, yes'm, he did," replied Mr. Crowley, "and the drayman's come for it."

"Oh, the perfidy of that man," groaned Mrs. Warren, "after promising me. Won't he catch it when I see him."

"Shall I deliver the coffee?" asked Mr. Crowley.

"You will not deliver it," snapped Mrs. Warren, "tell the drayman that Warren & Co. won't sell Frank Strong a bag of coffee for ten million dollars."

"But it's already sold," expostulated the worried Mr. Crowley, "and Mr. Strong's as good as wheat."

"He's a vile wretch," retorted Mrs. Warren, "and you do what I tell you, Mr. Crowley."

Mr. Crowley, with the air of a man who is in a trance, obeyed and the drayman, uttering a shrill whistle, departed.

"What deceitful, heartless creatures men are," murmured Mrs. Warren, "but here comes Janet."

A tempting lunch of cream puffs was spread out before the ladies and the mopey Janet was pecking at one of them like a sick canary, when some one bustled into the outer office and Mr. Crowley was heard in animated conversation with the visitor. Presently he came in the private office, perturbed.

"Mr. Frank Strong is here," he said, "and he's mad as a hornet. He wants his coffee."

Janet turned pale, but Mrs. Warren boldly informed Mr. Crowley that she would confront Mr. Strong, and walked into the outer office, closing the door behind her.

"Mrs. Warren," exclaimed Mr. Strong in amazement, "where's the captain?"

"He's not here," replied Mrs. Warren coldly.

"Well, he sold me a hundred bags of coffee Monday, and I want it. I must ship it today."

"Frank Strong," said Mrs. Warren with energy, "I'm surprised at your brazen effrontery. Do you suppose the firm of Warren & Co. would sell you a bag of coffee after the way you've acted?"

"But, Mrs. Warren," urged Frank "it wasn't my fault. She'd no right to waltz with that fellow, Ferguson, when I had forbidden her."

"Nonsense," retorted Mrs. Warren "if I'd obeyed all the things Jim commanded me I might as well have been a mummy."

"But you see," began Frank, then he glanced at the door. "Oh, Mrs. Warren here's a felow dogging me for a subscription. Please let me slip in the private office until he goes."

He opened the door and hastily entered. Instantly Mrs. Warren locked the door.

"Now," she muttered, "they can scratch each other's eyes out or kiss and make up, one or the other they'll do before they come out. The window has iron bars, and they can't get out."

Freddy, the office boy, had contemplated the darling deed with open-mouthed astonishment. He was an eager reader of detective stories and he assumed that a trap door would open in the floor and engulf the entrapped Mr. Strong. Anxious to witness a scene of which he had frequently read, he slipped into the alley and peered into the window.

Mrs. Warren's satisfaction at her stroke of diplomacy was tempered with the thought that her lunch was locked up with the captives, but she consoled herself with the hope that their emotions would interfere with their appetite.

Matters did not come to any conclusion in the prison, for there were no demands for freedom and Mrs. Warren wealed. Finally, she somewhat noisily opened the door. There was a scuttling of feet, and two red-faced, but rather jubilant looking captives confronted her.

"I'll be up tonight, darling," said Frank, preparing to go.

"Don't you want you coffee?" asked Mrs. Warren, grimly.

"I forgot all about it," exclaimed Frank, confusedly.

Mrs. Warren entered the prison; the cream puffs were gone.

"Where are the cream puffs?" she demanded of Janet.

"I believe I ate them," replied that young lady, guiltily.

"Your appetite appears to have come back," comented her sister.

"Mumma," said Freddy, as he ate his supper, "there was a lark at the store today. Mrs. Warren locked a cove up in the private office and there was a gal in there. I pecked in the alley winder and they looked at one another for a while like two roosters goin 'to fight, and then they just tumbles to one another and begins to kiss and hug. Oh, I laughed—"

But his mother, scandalized, bade him go to bed.

Wife Beater In Jail at Escanaba Tries Suicide.

Escanaba—Fred Paul, recently sent to the county jail at Escanaba to serve sixty days for wifebeating, attempted suicide in his cell this week. He made a rope out of a towel and his suspenders, but he wasn't game. When the noose began to tighten around his neck and choke him he cried out loudly for help, and the sheriff rushed in and cut him down. He was unconscious for a few minutes. The cause of his attempt to take his life was despondency attributed to the failure of his friends to secure his release. He has been very brutal in his treatment of his wife and she appeared before Justice Glaser to implore him not to allow the fellow's release. All told, it appears that there is no particular reason for congratulating the community on Sheriff Perow's act in cutting him down.

Menominee—A proposition to buy the K. C. mill site was considered by the Menominee council this week, the proposed price being $30,000 but no definite decision in the matter was reached, a final consideration being postponed for thirty days. The description of the property was not satisfactory, some of the aldermen maintaining that it did not include certain valuable lots and portions that should properly be included. Previous to the next meeting the matter will be thoroughly investigated.

St. Ignace—The final account of George M. Stellwagen, executor of the estate of George H. Stellwagen, shows a total value of $42,253.27, including $24,750 of real estate. The total income of the estate goes to the widow for life. The heirs after her death are George M. Stellwagen, son, and Isabel and Louise Stellwagen, daughters, all of Wayne, and Florence Bailey, daughter, of St. Ignace.

Gladstone—Nearly fifty saloon keepers of Delta county have failed to pay the required license tax, despite the fact that the tax is several days over due, and Sheriff Richard Perow has been instructed by Assistant Prosecuting Attorney John Cummiskey to notify all delinquent saloon keepers that unless a settlement is made at once prosecutions will follow within a few days. It is said that fifteen saloon keepers of the city have failed to pay the required license while the remaining delinquents are conducting their business in all parts of the county, and have shown no disposition to comply with the provisions of the law.

Grand Marais—Mrs. Alex Meshow of Grand Marais, one of the oldest residents of the upper peninsula, born at Sault Ste. Marie in the year 1831—ninty-four years ago—is declining rapidly, due to her extreme old age, and her friends and family look for her final summons before many days. For a number of years Mrs. Meshow has been blind and of late her mental faculties have been more or less affected. She resides with her husband and daughter in the same house that was built for her when she went from the Soo to Grand Marais twenty-five years ago.

EXPRESS CAR BURNED.

Completely Destroyed on Reading—Contents Unknown.

Philapelphia, May 19.—An express car on a Washington and New York train on the Reading road was destroyed by fire last night at Bethayres, a few miles north of this city.

The train which was bound for New York, reached Jenkintown about 9 o'clock. As the train pulled out from that station the conductor saw a blaze on top of the sealed express car. There being no means to fight the flames the train was stopped and the car sidetracked at Bethayres.

The car with all its contents was completely destroyed. It is thought the fire originated from a spark from the engine.

It is not known what the car contained. The Reading officials refuse to say anything about the fire.

Much interest is being shown by a large number of people outside the club women in the work undertaken by the Women's Council of Duluth in the school gardens and summer school of domestic science. The financial support which has been given the council is most gratifying, and another means of adding to the treasury was presented. "The Merchant of Venice," which will be presented next Wednesday evening at the Lyceum, under the management of John Milton, will be under the auspices of the Women's Council and a most generous precentage has been arranged for the work of the council. Tickets may be secured at the library.

In the school or vacant lot gardens, a project which has been most successful in other cities was begun this year, and the value which the employment will be to many boys, and the improvement of the property, assures the undertaking the support of all thoughtful citizens. Five gardens have been arranged for, and the one near the high school, at the northeast corner of First avenue east and Second street, is perhaps attracting the most attention. The lot has been fenced, and the gardens laid out nicely. The work is directed by a skilled gardner, and the boys are enthusiastic over the opportunity of raising vegetables and garden stuff.

The summer school of domestic science, which will be maintained during July and August, at the Adams school, is also a plan which originated with the council, and promises to do a great amount of good during the eight weeks of summer. Applications have been made in excess of the number that may be accommodated. The teacher has been engaged, and the school is receiving the support and approval of many of the most prominent women of the city.

Aside from the interest felt in "The Merchant of Venice," through the connection of the Women's Council, the play in itself promises to be most interesting. The cast is a most attractive one, including as it does the most prominent readers of the city. The costumes to be used are most beautiful ones, and the Lyceum next Wednesday evening will undoubtedly be the place where Duluth society will gather.

The beneficent degree of the order of Modern Samaritans last night gave one of the prettiest dances of the season at Elks' hall. The only difficulty was that the crowd was almost too large but each participant seemed to be enjoying the evening to the fullest degree. A large class was initiated before the dance began and then La Brosse's orchestra played a dance program of strictly up-to-date music.

At the next meeting of the degree another large class will be initiated at which time the officers will wear their new robes.

HAND MADE THINGS.

Girls Handy With Needle Can Keep Busy.

A girl who is handy with her needle nowadays need not want for useful and interesting work. She may not be a seamstress. She need not know any of the mysteries of cutting out and seam fitting, and yet she may be the busiest girl in the house, doing things that mean far more in the general effect of her summer wardrobe than the most intricate machine work. There never was a time when there was such a rage for hand made things. All the knowledge that every young girl has about fancy work may be practically applied now to gowns. She may be busily doing stuffed embroidery, long and short and cross stitch; even darning on her blouses and gowns, and she will be just twice as smart in her summer gowns as her richer cousin who can hire them all made, but who doesn't know how to embellish them, says the New York Globe.

She may make teneriffe wheels. These are perfectly lovely in finest of linen thread for sheer and dainty under muslins. They are equally pretty in colored linens or silks of larger design for the yokes of thin gowns. A gown seen recently which was indescribably beautiful had the entire yoke and bertha and upper part of the skirt's flounce made of teneriffe wheels of cobwebby blue. The gown was a blue organdy. The maiden who wore it was fortunate in having a maiden aunt who was an invalid and had time to make the wheels. Teneriffe wheel work is rather slow, though very interesting pickup work for those who have much time.

The more effective shirt waist things, turnovers, collars and cuffs, etc., appeal more to the younger girl's needle. A certain young woman has made a nice bit of spending money this spring making and seling stock bands to be worn with shirt wait gowns. These are not simply stocks like you buy in the shops, by any means. Her most popular seller was an adjustable band or collar with a long strip fastened to it that extends down the shirt front. The whole thing was done on huck toweling entirely covered with a design darned in mercerized linen. The darning stiffened the collar sufficiently to make it stand up. Some were done in reds and blues; the white ones were most popular. Such a stock and band is easily adjusted, no trouble to launder, and gives a smart touch to the plainest shirt waist.

Revers and collars and cuff sets are the order of the day now. Indeed, no jacket suit, whether linen or otherwise, is complete without such adornments. The variety and originality of these depends entirely upon the girl's own taste and ability to work. She may get the simplest of patterns and cut them out of plain white linen or pique for general wear. Or she may put an unlimited amount of ingenuity and work upon those of daintiest Swiss and organdy. Valenciennes flouncings, real lace insertions, French knots, appliqued medallions, etc., all add to their richness.

The embroidered monogram is always a smart touch upon a shirt waist. A lovely shirt waist gown was seen the other day. It was made of white linen with short skirt and perfectly plain blouse. The waist had no plaits, and was cut with good shoulder breadth. A round pocket on one side of the front was covered with a hand-embroidered monogram. This was the smart touch of the gown. The monogram was done in heavy white linen and white arrow heads were embroidered at the head of the hidden plaits in the skirt, which commenced at the knee.

CUPID AND COFFEE

By J. C. Plummer.

(Copyright, 1905, by Daily Story Pub. Co.)

If Capt. Jim Warren hadn't gone gunning Tuesday morning— But he did go, he and his friend, Capt. Peter Hawkins, with infinite greater chance of shooting each other than of bagging game, and they were to return early Wednesday. In the meantime, Mr. Crowley, the bookkeeper, was to look after the affairs of Warren & Co., importers of coffee.

Wednesday morning arrived with exemplary promptness, but Capt. Warren did not accompany it. Mr. Crowley was a good accountant but he was good for nothing outside of that line and when the fact become apparent that Capt. Jim had not arrived the executive of the firm of Warren & Co., became so harassed with responsibility that he lay the case before Mrs. Warren.

Mrs. Warren was a pretty woman, and she was also resourceful. She at once informed her sister, Janet, that she was going down to the office and assume the management of the business until her husband's return.

"But, my dear," objected Janet, "you don't know anything about business."

"Nonsense," retorted Mrs. Warren, "it's nothing like as hard as keeping house. You come down about noon and we'll have lunch in the office. It'll be better than a picnic in the woods."

"I'm glad it happened," murmured Mrs. Warren, as she tripped her way to the wharf, "it'll do Janet good to come down, poor thing." As a matter of fact Janet was mopey. She had been engaged to be married to Frank Strong, a merchant in the same line as was Captain Warren. The match was eminently suitable from whatever point of the compass it was viewed and the problem of a trousseau for Janet was troubling the brain of Mrs. Warren, when a cloud arose on the horizon of the pair's relations which hurled the bark of love a wreck on a lee shore. It is useless to go into details. Mrs. Warren loyally upheld her sister and stigmatized Mr. Strong as a wretch. Doubtless Mr. Strong's sister, if he had one, would have espoused as loyally her brother's side and declared Miss Janet a flirt. Be the fault of the break where it belongs, Mr. Strong began assiduous attentions to another lady and Janet wept copiously and moped.

Captain Warren, who viewed these tender emotions from a grossly material standpoint, declared living on one chocolate cream a day was no way to conquer unrequited love and suggested a diet of pork and beans, a prescription which was treated with merited contempt by both ladies.

"Jim," said Mrs. Warren to her husband, "don't sell anything to that wretch, Frank Strong; don't speak to him."

Captain Warren promised readily. His idea of navigating the matrimonial ship was to promise whatever he was called upon to promise and trust to luck that his wife would forget about it.

Mrs. Warren found business unexciting. It was a dull day and the few people who called were handled by Mr. Crowley without recourse to the protempore executive in the private office, and Mrs. Warren found herself longing for Janet and lunch hour. Then a crisis occurred. A burly drayman handed Mr. Crowley an order and he came in the private office with it.

"Here's an order from Mr. Frank Strong for a hundred bags of coffee the captain sold him last Monday. I'll deliver it to the drayman."

"Mr. Crowley," exclaimed Mrs. Warren, with a gleam in her eyes, "do you mean to say that my husband sold Frank Strong some coffee?"

"Why, yes'm, he did," replied Mr. Crowley, "and the drayman's come for it."

"Oh, the perfidy of that man," groaned Mrs. Warren, "after promising me. Won't he catch it when I see him."

"Shall I deliver the coffee?" asked Mr. Crowley.

"You will not deliver it," snapped Mrs. Warren, "tell the drayman that Warren & Co. won't sell Frank Strong a bag of coffee for ten million dollars."

"But it's already sold," expostulated the worried Mr. Crowley, "and Mr. Strong's as good as wheat."

"He's a vile wretch," retorted Mrs. Warren, "and you do what I tell you, Mr. Crowley."

Mr. Crowley, with the air of a man who is in a trance, obeyed and the dayman, uttering a shrill whistle, departed.

"What deceitful, heartless creatures men are," murmured Mrs. Warren, "but here comes Janet."

A tempting lunch of cream puffs was spread out before the ladies and the mopey Janet was pecking at one of them like a sick canary, when some one bustled into the outer office and Mr. Crowley was heard in animated conversation with the visitor. Presently he came in the private office, perturbed.

"Mr. Frank Strong is here," he said, "and he's mad as a hornet. He wants his coffee."

Janet turned pale, but Mrs. Warren boldly informed Mr. Crowley that she would confront Mr. Strong, and walked into the outer office, closing the door behind her.

"Mrs. Warren," exclaimed Mr. Strong in amazement, "where's the captain?"

"He's not here," replied Mrs. Warren coldly.

"Well, he sold me a hundred bags of coffee Monday, and I want it. I must ship it today."

"Frank Strong," said Mrs. Warren with energy, "I'm surprised at your brazen effrontery. Do you suppose the firm of Warren & Co. would sell you a bag of coffee after the way you've acted?"

"But, Mrs. Warren," lisped Frank "it wasn't my fault. She'd no right to waltz with that fellow, Ferguson, when I had forbidden her."

"Nonsense," retorted Mrs. Warren "if I'd obeyed all the things Jim commanded me I might as well have been a mummy."

"But you see," began Frank, then he glanced at the door. "Oh, Mrs. Warren here's a felow dogging me for a subscription. Please let me slip in the private office until he goes."

He opened the door and hastily entered. Instantly Mrs. Warren locked the door.

"Now," she muttered, "they can scratch each other's eyes out or kiss and make up, one or the other they'll do before they come out. The window has iron bars, and they can't get out."

Freddy, the office boy, had contemplated the daring deed with open-mouthed astonishment. He was an eager reader of detective stories and he assumed that a trap door would open in the floor and engulf the entrapped Mr. Strong. Anxious to witness a scene of which he had frequently read, he slipped into the alley and peered into the window.

Mrs. Warren's satisfaction at her stroke of diplomacy was tempered with the thought that her lunch was locked up with the captives, but she consoled herself with the hope that their emotions would interfere with their appetite.

Matters did not come to any conclusion in the prison, for there were no demands for freedom and Mrs. Warren waited. Finally, she somewhat noisily opened the door. There was a scuttling of feet, and two red-faced, but rather jubilant looking captives confronted her.

"I'll be up tonight, darling," said Frank, preparing to go.

"Don't you want you coffee?" asked Mrs. Warren, grimly.

"I forgot all about it," exclaimed Frank, confusedly.

Mrs. Warren entered the prison; the cream puffs were gone.

"Where are the cream puffs?" she demanded of Janet.

"I believe I ate them," replied that young lady, guiltily.

"Your appetite appears to have come back," comented her sister.

"Mumma," said Freddy, as he ate his supper, "there was a lark at the store today. Mrs. Warren locked a cove up in the private office and there was a gal in there. I peeked in the alley winder and they looked at one another for a while like two roosters goin 'to fight, and then they just tumbles to one another and begins to kiss and hug. Oh, I laughed—"

But his mother, scandalized, bade him go to bed.

DECISION IS FILED

By Commerce Commission on Differential Freight Rate Case.

Commission Acted as Arbitrators For All Interested Parties.

Washington, May 19.—The interstate commerce commission yesterday, in a lengthy opinion by Commissioner Prouty, announced its decision in the "differential freight rate case," involving the seaboard differentials as between New York, Boston, Philadelphia and Baltimore. The case was submitted to the commission for arbitration by all the parties interested.

The finding of the commission, is with respect to differentials on export traffic, first, that the differential per hundred pounds below New York on flour, all-rail and lake and rail, should be reduced to 2 cents at Baltimore, and 1 cent at Philadelphia; second, that the existing differential on ex-lake grain from Buffalo, Erie and Fairport should be reduced to three-tenths of a cent per bushel below the rate to New York and Baltimore between both to Baltimore and Philadelphia; third, that otherwise, the present export differentials should remain in force.

By agreement of all parties domestic traffic was excluded from consideration. For that reason, no opinion was expressed concerning the relative rates on import traffic.

Commissioner Clements filed a dissenting opinion opposing the fixing of any differentials by the commission in this case. The decision is regarded by the members of the commission as one of vast importance, as it is more than thirty years since an adjustment was reached by which the rates to New York were made the basis of those to the other ports, Boston being charged the New York rate, Philadelphia, being allowed a rate of 2 cents per 100 pounds lower than New York, and Baltimore a rate of 3 cents lower. Norfolk and Newport News have been accorded the same rates as Baltimore. These so-called differentials, however, have been the subject of repeated controversy and at time demands for their discontinuance or modification have caused struggles between rival ports and the lines serving them, terminating in so-called rate wars.

The proposition to submit the case to arbitration first came from the Merchants' association of New York city and was promptly acquisced in by the joint committee on maintenance of freight differentials, created by commercial bodies of Boston, Philadelphia and Baltimore, and by the presidents or traffic officials of the principal trunk line railways.

In his opinion, Commissioner Prouty states that the commission has endeavored to find some fundamental principle by the application of which this dispute might be laid at rest, but entirely without success. Taking up the contentions of each of the four cities the commissioner declares that if it could properly be done these ports should all be kept open for the transaction of this export upon terms that each one might fairly compete for it, and that no marked advantage should be given and certainly not by the creation of artificial conditions, to any one port over the other.

"The ideal condition would be," says the commissioner, "the establishment of such rates that enterprise at either port in the way of improvement in service or facilities might be rewarded by increased business and that there might exist that healthy struggle of locality against locality which is the best security for proper commercial development. This is justly demanded by the interests of the communities involved." He declares that in disposing of this question the interests of the carriers which serve these communities should be none the less kept in view, and the suggestion is made that if it properly can be done these rates should be so adjusted that this competitive traffic will be fairly distributed between the different lines of railway which serve these ports. Continuing, the decision says:

"The ability of a railroad to adequately discharge its duty for a reasonable charge depends upon the business which it can obtain, and no one of these systems should be deprived of its fair portion of this enormous export traffic. The purposes of these differentials from the first has been to distribute this business between the different carriers and this is not improper unless the means used are improper."

"This traffic," says Commissioner Prouty, "in point of fact, originates at a great number of interior points and reaches numerous foreign destinations, but," says he, "we may assume for the purpuose of illustration that it all comes from Chicago and all goes to Liverpool. It is apparent that it may be transported between these points by any of the four ports in question. The entire through distance does not greatly vary. In other words this traffic is fairly competitive and rates ought, therefore, to be so adjusted that rival routes can fairly compete for it."

The opinion points out that the most important factor in determining the route is undoubtedly by the rate, but there are other items to be considered such as insurance, quicker and more reliable service, more frequent sailings, the ability to report a greater number of ports, superior banking facilities and better storage facilities, and that in all these respects New York is superior to its competitors. It is manifestly impossible by any prior process of reasoning, the opinion says, to determine what inland differential will equalize all the advantages and disadvantages, and the best that can be done is to examine the effect of these differentials. Summing up that feature of the decision, Commissioner Prouty holds that "about the only thing which is made reasonably certain by the statistical table offered in evidence is that Boston has distinctly lost and that Baltimore and especially Philadelphia have distinctly gained in exports of flour."

Not having any knowledge as to the movement of iron and steel articles upon which the differentials were reduced in 1904, the commission expresses no opinion as to their propriety.

In furnishing a reason why a distinction should be made in the amount of the differential between the ex-lake traffic and the all-rail routes, the decision says: "These four cities are seaports. This is a fundamental advantage of location which entities each and every one of them to participate in this export business and the public interest requires that this right shall be recognized. But each has certain subsidiary advantages peculiar to itself which should be preserved in so far as is compatible with free competition. It may well be, therefore, that Baltimore should be given a somewhat more favorable rate on all rail than on rail and water traffic, for it possesses an advantage in the former case which it has not in the latter." Commissioner Prouty disagrees with the contention of New York that the effect of these differentials is to force traffic out of natural channels and to impose an enormous burden upon the public. With respect to ex-lake grain, he holds that to decree that traffic should move by the cheapest route would be to entirely eliminate competition, which, within reasonable bounds, is for the interest of the general public."

The decision concludes as follows:

"This is not a proceeding in which the commission could make an order, nor do we intend to intimate that the facts appearing would justify an order in any proceeding. Our impression is that the above modification would be fair to the various communities and lines of railways interested and that it is in the public interest that these differentials should so be adjusted that all the ports and the various lines serving them may fairly compete for this traffic."

FOURTEEN YEAR OLD BOY ENDS HIS LIFE.

Milwaukee, May 19.—Charles Abram, aged 14 years, has committed suicide at his home here by taking carbolic acid. The youthful suicide was to have graduated as the valedictorian of his class next month, and it is thought his act was due to the results following close application to study.

GARDNER TO FIGHT STIFT.

Ogden, Utah, May 19.—George Gardner of Lowell, Mass., and "Billy" Stift of Chicago, have been matched to fight here May 29.

A SHOCK FOR RAISIN-GROWERS.

Fresno, Cal., May 19.—A bomb has been thrown into the camps of the leading raisin-picking firms as well as the California Raisin Growers' company, by the announcement that a company had secretly bought up all the patent rights on raisin-seeding machines and would hereafter monopolize the seeded raisin business. It is feared that this consolidation of patents will prove a severe blow to the raisin-growers' company.

GREAT CHANGE.

From Change In Food

The brain depends much more on the stomach than we are apt to suppose until we take thought in the matter. Feed the stomach on proper food easy to digest, and containing the proper amount of phosphates, and the healthy brain will respond to all demands. A notable housewife in Buffalo writes:

"The doctor diagnosed my trouble as a 'nervous affection of the stomach.' I was actually so nervous that I could not sit still for five minutes to read the newspaper, and to attend to my household duties was simply impossible. I doctored all the time with remedies, but medicine did no good.

"My physician put me on all sorts of diet, and I tried many kinds of cereal foods, but none of them agreed with me. I was almost discouraged, and when I tried Grape-Nuts I did so with many misgivings—I had no faith that it would succeed where everything else had failed.

"But it did succeed, and you don't know how glad I am that I tried it. I feel like a new person, I have gained in weight and I don't have that terrible burning sensation in my stomach any more. I feel so strong again that I am surprised at myself. The street noises that used to irritate me so, I never notice now, and my mind is so clear that my household duties are a real pleasure."

Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

There's a reason.

Now why this great change made in this woman?

The stomach and the brain had not been supplied with the right kind of food to rebuild and strengthen the nerve centers in these organs. It is absolute folly to try to do this with medicine. There is but one sure way, and that is to quit the old food that has failed, and take on Grape-Nuts food, which is more than half digested in the process of manufacture, and is rich in the phosphate of potash contained in the natural grain, which unites with albumen and water—the only three substances that will make up the soft gray filling in the thousands of delicate nerve centers in the brain and body. Grape-Nuts food is a sure road back to health in all such cases.

WEST END.

HUNDREDS SIGN

Petition Against Park Pavilion Will Have 1,500 Names.

Parents Claim Former Place Was Corrupting Children of Vicinity.

There will be 1,500 signers to the petitions which are being sent around the West end in an effort to prevent a permit from being issued to W. J. Chestock by the council for a dancing and roller skating pavilion at Lincoln Park.

There are about ten or twelve lists out and being circulated. Business and professional men, as well as those living in the vicinity of the park are signing without question. The opinion at the West end seems to be unanimous that the dancing pavilion should not be allowed at Lincoln Park.

There was formerly a dancing pavilion at the park but about a year ago it was burned down and a sigh of relief went up from all of the parents surrounding the place. The parents claimed that their children were being corrupted and that the park was being used for the most outrageous purposes. They do not charge that the keeper of the pavilion was at fault, but say he could not help conditions had he tried.

The residents of the West end will be liberally represented at the council meeting Monday night. There will be all of the ministers of churches in this part of the city and most of the business men, besides those who live near the park. The matter of granting a permit is going to be fought hard. Mr. Chestock, who asks for the permit, threatens to sue if it is not granted, claiming that he has as much right to it as has the pavilion at Lester Park. West end people assert that this is not a fair parallel for the reason that Lester Park is not in as crowded a district as is Lincoln Park.

Rev. J. A. Anderson, pastor of the Swedish M. E. church, is one of the hardest workers against the pavilion idea and says that he does not object to the action of the city taken some time ago preventing religious meetings at the park. Said Mr. Anderson yesterday:

"I am against using the park for anything but for what it was originally intended. This dancing pavilion should not be permitted and neither should religious meetings be allowed. People should be permitted to enjoy the pleasures and outing which the park affords without having their finer sensibilities offended by things which will accompany the dancing pavilion, or have themselves bothered by religious meetings. There is a time and place for everything."

ALICE ROOSEVELT

Prefers Plain Yankee Gumdrops to French Candy.

Washington, May 19.—Even in candy Miss Alice Roosevelt proves her patriotism. She spurns the productions of the finest French shops for plain Yankee gumdrops.

Most of her purchase of confectionery are made at the F street branch of a New York candy concern. The president's daughter buys candy 15 cents' worth at a time.

Miss Roosevelt is driving a neat little runabout this season, with a bay cob between the shafts. When she drives up to the confectioner's the ribbons are held by her companion—sometimes her maid; sometimes an elderly woman—while Miss Roosevelt herself buys the candy.

In wearing apparel Miss Roosevelt is showing a preference this spring for black-and-white shirtwaist suits, trimmed with blue embroidery, and jaunty sailor hats, with blue wings.

UNIFORMED CLERKS.

The opening of a new retail haberdashery shop in the Union Square neighborhood the other day revealed among other innovations a rule of uniform dress for salesmen, all of whom wore, says the New York Sun, black suits, with white shirts and cravats. This style is to be the practise with all the help on the selling floor. A somewhat similar departure was introduced several years ago by certain department stores for its saleagirls.

TO EXTEND SERVICE

Gas Will Be Supplied to Large West Duluth District.

Zenith Furnace Company Puts Up Ten Per Cent Guarantee.

Steps were taken by the board of water and light commissioners, at the meeting held yesterday afternoon, looking toward an important extension of the gas system in West Duluth. On representation of the Zenith Gas company that it would guarantee a 10 per cent income on the investment, Manager Case was directed to confer with Mr. Andrews and request the city attorney to draw up a contract carrying the provisions.

It is proposed by the Zenith Furnace company that the gas mains be extended so that Central avenue and the territory north of Grand avenue, between Fifty-fifth and Fifty-ninth avenues west to Elinor street and as far north as Highland street will be supplied with gas at once.

Instead of going through the usual form of getting a subscribed guarantee from the prospective consumers in the district to be supplied, the furnace company, in its efforts to increase gas consumption, has gone ahead and pledged the guaranty itself. Under this agreement, if the gas consumption does not equal the guaranty, the company will pay the city the difference.

The board directed that Richardson & Day, agents for non-resident property owners, be asked that permission be granted the city to occupy the street and avenue adjacent to the proposed 10,000,000 gallon water reservoir in Lloyd's division, West Duluth, and that prices be secured on an adjacent block. The plan was adopted of building one 5,000,000 gallon reservoir on the land already acquired for the purpose, and the other 5,000,000 gallon reservoir on land to be acquired, the two reservoirs to be connected by a pipe. This plan is said to overcome the objections of those who were opposed to occupancy of the street with one large reservoir.

City Engineer McGilvray will be requested to draw plans for two detached reservoirs, one of which will be built at once.

The water board has received notification by the government engineers that the government parks either side of the ship canal are to be improved at once. The board directed that the work of the department on Park Point extension be immediately hastened ahead of all other extension work.

No action was taken on the proposed renewal of the water front line on Railroad street west of Sixth avenue west.

AN OCEAN TRAGEDY

Is Recalled By Trial of Alleged Murderer In Arizona.

Proved an Alibi to Satisfaction of Territorial Judge.

Phoenix, Ariz., May 19.—Courtenay W. Bennett, British consul-general of San Francisco, accompanied by his legal adviser, T. E. K. Carmac, have been here attending the trial of Deputy Sheriff Lee Hobbs of Arizona, charged with the murder of John B. Nixon, second mate of the British ship Leicester Castle, on Sept. 2, 1902, in the South Pacific Ocean.

The murder of Nixon, brutal and apparently uncalled for, is a tragic page from the history of the sea, and the trial of Hobbs was no less thrilling to the British consul-general, who had grave doubts whether he would reach San Francisco alive.

Although Hobbs was identified by a member of the crew of the Leicester Castle, he succeeded in establishing an alibi, and the case, which consumed three days, was dismissed by Judge Kent.

The mutiny, resulting in the wounding of Capt. Robert D. Peattie and the killing of Second Mate Nixon occurred about 100 miles from Pitcairn Island. The Leicester Castle arrived in San Francisco from Hongkong in ballast, May 14, 1902, and shipped as able seamen fourteen men, among whom were three Americans, who gave their names as James Turner, aged 21, of Idu Falls; W. A. Hobbs, aged 24, of Litchfield, Ill., and Ernest Sears, aged 21, of McKoy, Or.

Hobbs was a stout smooth-shaven man, tanned by the sun. Sears was of gentlemanly appearance and slighter build. Turner was like Sears, but thinner.

The ship sailed July 26, with a cargo of wheat for England, and was barely under way when it was discovered that the three Americans were ignorant of the sailor's duties. Hobbs was ill in his bunk and was ordered out by the first mate, but refused to go, and told the first mate, "If you knew who you was talking to, you would let me alone."

The men were disrated by Captain Peattie, and after they got their sea legs the first mate made it unpleasant for Hobbs, according to the landsman's thinking. The latter had boasted to his mates that he was a bad man from Arizona.

On the night of Sept. 2, when the ship was making three knots an hour in a smooth sea, with a light wind blowing, Hobbs stole the second mate's revolver and approached the first mate, who saw that it was run or get shot. He fled to his cabin, where he barricaded himself. Failing to dislodge his enemy, Hobbs attempted a ruse. He sent Sears to the captain's cabin with the report that a man had fallen off the forearm and broke his leg. The captain prepared the table for the victim and turned to the door of the cabin to go on deck when he was confronted by Hobbs, revolver in hand.

"Now, then, captain," he quietly remarked, and, with the muzzle six feet from the captain's heart, pulled the trigger. The bullet lodged in Peattie's chest, but, full of fight, he rushed at Hobbs, who fired again, the ball passing through the muscles of the left arm. The captain staggered, but did not fall, and Hobbs drew at him with a belaying pin. He battered him on the head, and as he fell fired two more shots into his body.

The report of the pistol brought Nixon to the scene, just as Hobbs believed he had killed Capt. Peattie. Turning, he shot Nixon through the heart. The second mate dropped in the doorway and the murderer stepped over his body.

While some of the crew attended to the captain's wound Hoobs, Sears and Turner kept the first mate and crew at bay, one standing guard, revolver in hand, while the others constructed a raft of planks taken from the wheat bulkhead, cork cylinders from the lifeboat and ends of the jib downhauls. Provisioning the raft, they launched it during the night and dropped astern amid a fusillade of shots from the crew, who had been armed by the first mate.

A lookout was kept for the raft the following morning, but it was not sighted, and it was thought that the three men had been drowned.

The mutiny was reported at Queenstown on the arrival of the Leicester Castle, and a British cruiser was ordered to search Pitcairn Island, the nearest land.

But the murderer and his companions lived on the frail raft until they were sighted and picked up by a schooner which landed them in San Francisco.

Christian Wolz, an able seaman, who witnessed the mutiny and subsequently left the Leicester Castle, was making his way to Clifton, Ariz., where he intended to settle, when he encountered Turner at El Paso. Turner told him that they had been picked up. He informed him that Hobbs was living at Clifton.

Wolz had no desire to meet the murderer, and in fright changed his plan of locating at Clifton. But in passing through Arizona his connection with the Leicester Castle was learned by the Arizona Rangers and they detained him to identify Lee Hobbs, who was arrested.

Hobbs took the arrest coolly, but it aroused the community, and cowboys attended the trial by the hundreds.

Hobbs, as deputy sheriff and cousin of Sheriff J. V. Parks, was well known in the territory, and when, armed with extradition papers, Consul General Bennett arrived here, he was less interested in the picturesque setting of the groups of cow punchers than he was disquieted by their scowls and hitching of their "guns."

Wolz declared Lee Hobbs, the deputy sheriff, was W. A. Hobbs, who signed on the Leicester Castle as an able seaman, but a number of witnesses swore that Lee Hobbs was in the state when the mutiny took place, and even produced a newspaper that had a paragraph relating to a visit Hobbs had made on that date.

If the consul general can prove that they were landed in San Francisco after they were rescued from the raft, the British government will reopen the case and make a vigorous search for the accused men.

TOUR FRANCE ON A BICYCLE

Assistant Secretary of State Adee Going on Trip.

Washington, May 19.—Fifteen hundred miles awheel through South and Central France is the manner in which Alvey A. Adee, second assistant secretary of state, will spend his vacation this summer.

Mr. Adee left Washington a few days ago to start for Europe. When he boarded the steamer for France he took with him as one of his most precious possessions a stoutly built bicycle of most improved make. Mounting this wheel shortly after he arrives at Havre, Mr. Adee will begin a leisurely journey along the highways and byways of France, by which he expects to gain much pleasure and renewed health.

For several years it has been Mr. Adee's custom to spend his vacation on bicycle tours through Europe. Last year he devoted himself to Switzerland and Italy. Mr. Adee is an expert rider and covers fifty or sixty miles a day with the greatest ease.

The assistant secretary expects to derive special pleasure from his trip through France this year. The beautiful roads in that part of Europe are unusually good for bicycle riding, and Mr. Adee will speed along from one town to another. He will be accompanied part of the way by Alexander M. Thackera, a personal friend, who is consul at Rouen.

Part of Mr. Adee's pleasure from vacation tours is derived from anticipation. He spent many of his leisure moments before his departure in mapping out his trip. While the greater part of his trip will be confined to the vineyard land in Southern France, he expects to cross over into Spain also and will ride along the Pyrenees to San Sebastian, at which point he will turn back and by a circuitous route wheel across the border into France again. Altogether Mr. Adee will spend about two months on his bicycle trip. He will not return to Washington until July.

Mr. Adee is one of the hardest working officials of the state department. For thirty years he has been identified with this branch of the government, and his knowledge of our foreign consulates and the working of our foreign service is said to be almost marvelous. On several occasions he has been acting secretary of state and in that capacity has had to deal with many perplexing questions.

BUSINESS BETTER

Warm Weather Brings Decided Rivival In Commission Business.

Strawberries Are Becoming More Plentiful—New Potatoes Lower.

The fine warm weather of yesterday gave a decided impetus to the business among the houses in commission row, and today the street wears its regular summer appearance of activity. The cold and wet weather which has lasted for over three weeks has had a bad effect on trade in the commission lines, and has kept down the demand that should be experienced at this season of the year. The warm weather is therefore hailed with delight by the commission men, as it means solid, round dollars to them.

This is normally the busy season in the commission business, and from now until the fruit season is over in the fall, Michigan street will be one of the busiest centers of the city. The berries and green vegetables are special features which stimulate trade in the regular lines, and by the time these are exhausted the California fruits will begin to come in.

The heavy rains in the strawberry territory have caused some of the consignments to come in a little rain-soaked during the last week, but the last shipments have escaped the rains. Arkansas and Southern Missouri are now the source of supply for the Duluth market, and during the next week some especially fine berries may be expected to arrive. The trade in berries this year is especially heavy, and there is not a house along commission row which does not receive car lots almost daily.

The price on Michigan street is now $2.25 to $2.35 for a twenty-four quart case. The prevailing retail price for the best grade is two boxes for 25 cents, although there are some to be had for 10 cents a box.

• • •

The black Tartarian cherries from California are now on the market, and have been for two or three weeks past. This luscious fruit is selling for $2.50 per box. Shipments are being received almost daily from California.

• • •

New potatoes are gradually coming within reach of the average housekeeper. The price has now reached the $2 mark and within a week or ten days they should be selling for $1.50 per bushel, at which price the old potatoes were quoted a year ago. The supply for the local market is being received from Florida and Louisiana.

The low price of the new potatoes has had its effect on the demand for the old stock, and if it were not for the sales of the old potatoes for seed, the market would be at a standstill, and the old crop would be practically given away. Gardeners about Duluth are just beginning to put in their potatoes and the demand for seed is brisk.

• • •

The apple market is very firm this week, and the prospect is for higher prices next week. The supplies are getting low.

• • •

Prices on the different kinds of green vegetables are practically unchanged from last week, and the demand for them is brisk.

• • •

Butter prices are about the same as last week, and the decline in prices appears to have been temporarily checked. Creamery prints are now quoted at 20 cents on Michigan street. The warmer weather will doubtless bring a further decline and the receipts should be heavy during the next few days.

The price always reaches low water mark early in June, and then the dealers commence storing the surplus stock for the winter months.

• • •

Eggs are firm at 16 cents. The receipts have been very heavy during the last few weeks, but the surplus supply is absorbed by the firms that store eggs for the winter, and they are not likely to be allowed to drop lower.

• • •

Cheese is very firm at the figures quoted a week ago. Speculation and a rather small supply have combined to put the price up very high and it is being kept there.

• • •

No change has taken place during the week in poultry prices or the conditions of the market. All kinds of poultry are very high and there is little or no demand for anything but hens.

The week has been a very busy one for the wholesale meat dealers.

"This is the time of the year when our small shipments commence," said one of the dealers. "As the warm weather comes on the retailers buy enough to last them for only two or three days, whereas during the winter they will lay in stock sufficient to last them for a month or more. The result is that during the summer we have a number of small accounts for each large account during the winter. It keeps our office men and shippers busy, but we don't do as much trade with it all as we do in the winter."

Pork loins and veal are slightly lower this week, while mutton and beef have remained unchanged.

WOMAN WEDS IN HOSPITAL

Marriage Not Delayed By Wreck and Lost Trousseau.

Louisville, Ky., May 19.—Miss Mabel Clarke of Cincinnati, the young woman who was injured in a railroad wreck near Sulphur, Ky., and whose trousseau was destroyed in the same wreck, was married at St. Joseph's Infirmary to John S. Wilson of Bardstown, who is editor of the Kentucky Standard. The latter stood at the bedside while the ceremony was performed.

When injured Miss Clarke was on her way to Bardstown, where the wedding was to take place. Mr. Wilson being unable on account of the rush of business to go to Cincinnati. Mr. Wilson was driving to Bardstown to meet his fiance when he was informed by a telephone message that the train had been wrecked and that his bride, probably severely injured, had been taken to St. Joseph's Infirmary in Louisville.

After learning by wire of the extent of Miss Clarke's injuries and having procured her consent to an immediate marriage, Mr. Wilson, bringing with him the Rev. C. H. Prather of the Methodist church at Bardstown, who was to perform the ceremony at that place, came to Louisville.

The marriage took place in Miss Clarke's room at the infirmary. Mr. Wilson stood beside the bed of his bride, who is too severely injured about the knees to sit up. The Rev. Mr. Prather stood at the foot and read the ceremony. As witnesses to the procedure were a trained nurse of the infirmary and Richard Newman, a friend of the groom.

The bride, though a native of New York, has been a resident of Cincinnati for several years. She is a talented woman and an accomplished elocutionist. Her parents are dead. Mr. Wilson is well known throughout the state as the editor of the Kentucky Standard. He was a widower and has a boy, John Price Wilson. Mrs. Wilson's injuries, while painful, are not considered serious, and it is expected that she will be able to leave for her new home in Bardstown before many days.

EX-MARSHAL RICHARDS

Made Assistant Librarian of Iowa Penitentiary.

Des Moines, Iowa, May 19.—Ex-Deputy United States Marshal W. A. Richards has been appointed assistant librarian for the state penitentiary at Fort Madison. His hard labor for the next fourteen years will consist of handling books and papers in the library, under charge of Warden Jones.

Word from Fort Madison states that Richards is much pleased with his assignment. He is given a number of privileges in his position as assistant librarian which naturally he could not get if compelled to work at hard labor with the ordinary prisoners.

The meeting between Richards and Warden Jones and his deputy, T. C. Hollowell, was pathetic. Richards has taken dozens of men to the penitentiary while Jones was in charge, and he broke down when the doors closed behind him for an eighteen-years' sentence.

Warden Jones immediately made preparations, in view of the increasing age of Richards, to make the rigors of punishment as light as possible. The assistant librarian is always chosen from among the prisoners, and, there being a vacancy, the ex-marshal was selected for the place.

TO KEEP SERVANTS.

A Brooklyn Woman's Rules Are Effective.

Here are a few rules given by a woman who enjoys a reputation for never having trouble with her numerous servants and retaining them in her service for years, says the Brooklyn Eagle.

She pays good wages; that is, she pays as liberally as she can afford, and is always punctual in payment.

She allows her servants a reasonable share of all the dainties served the family and is liberal in the matter of their food, maintaining that good work cannot be done on an empty stomach.

She rarely criticises, but when reproof is needed gives it with firmness and without fear, but kindly.

Praise is always given when due; she thinks it well to acknowledge good service to encourage.

She allows each reasonable time for outings and to attend church. And she does not require service when a girl is taking her afternoon off.

She allows her maids time to keep their clothes in order and requires them to be neat, cleanly and orderly about their sleeping apartments.

She is never familiar; only evinces a kindly interest in the general welfare without becoming in any way involved in the family affairs of any one of her servants.

If a matter goes wrong, she takes time to investigate before reproving and never scolds or rebukes when angry.

If necessary to dismiss a servant, she never does so when in a temper, but waits until she can control herself, so as to command respect.

She will not allow her maids to gossip about her neighbors' affairs, nor to make remarks about one member of the family to another.

She will not allow her children to be rude or insolent to the servants, nor will she allow too great familiarity.

And her servants remain with her decades and are devoted to her.

NOT WHAT HE MEANT.

Landseer, says a biographer in Tit-Bits was exceedingly fond of telling the following story of his meeting with the king of Portugal and the latter's unexpected greeting.

At one of the court balls Landseer attended, and when the king of Portugal who was also a guest, was made aware of the presence of the great animal painter, he expressed his desire for an introduction. Landseer was presented accordingly, when the king, in his imperfect English, said:

"Oh, Mr. Landseer, I am delighted to make your acquaintance—I am so fond of beasts!"

How Nature Provides.

OUR BEAUTY, HEALTH AND HAPPINESS.

Is it not possible, if not probable that elements necessary for the body-health are contained in the vegetable roots found in the earth, digested in the plant laboratory of nature and made ready for man or animal?

Something New in Science.

Vienna scientists are experimenting along this line because they find that adding hydrate of iron to the soil, in which spinach seeds are planted, the amount of iron represented in the plants grown upon soil so treated is seven times greater than in plants grown in unprepared soil.

The medicinal virtues of many American plants and roots were known to the early Indians. Thus a root known to modern physicians as Caulophyllum or Blue Cohosh was known to the Indians as "Squaw root." Another, known to the Indians as "Rattleweed root," is used in modern medicine as "Cimicifuga."

Prof. King's American Dispensatory, an authority in these matters, says: "Our Indians set a high value on Rattleweed root (Black Cohosh) in diseases of women. It is surpassed by no other drug in congestive conditions of the parts where there are dragging pains and tenderness."

After many years of study and experiment Doctor Pierce, the eminent specialist and medical director of the Invalids' Hotel and Surgical Institute, at Buffalo, N. Y., put up a prescription of his own containing the two above mentioned ingredients, together with Golden Seal and Lady's Slipper root.

Learn the Truth.

The one medicine for the cure of woman's peculiar weaknesses and ailments, the ingredients of which are printed on the wrapper of every bottle leaving the great Laboratory in Buffalo, N. Y., where it is made, is called DOCTOR PIERCE'S FAVORITE PRESCRIPTION.

It Stands Alone not only in respect to its ingredients, but also as the only specific advertised remedy for woman's diseases which absolutely CONTAINS NO ALCOHOL.

It Stands Alone as the one medicine for women, the makers of which take their patients fully into their confidence and tell them exactly what they are taking. This Dr. Pierce can afford to do, because his "FAVORITE PRESCRIPTION" is made of such ingredients and after a working formula that has hundreds of thousands of cures to its credit placing its merits above criticism.

It Stands Alone as Nature's cure for the diseases of women because the earth supplies the ingredients, which are as follows:

Lady's Slipper (Cypripedium Pubescens).
Black Cohosh (Cimicifuga Racemosa).
Unicorn root (Chamælirium Luteum).
Blue Cohosh (Caulophyllum Thalictroides)
Golden Seal (Hydrastis Canadensis).

With all the recent talk about patent medicines and the determined effort in certain quarters to cast discredit upon all household remedies which come under that head, the fact remains that some of these medicines are so firmly established in popular favor and confidence, have so proved their worth and value, that all the denunciations of bigots can not destroy the people's faith in them.

GREW RICH TOO FAST

To Please the Whites and Negroes Were Threatened.

Whitecaps Organized to Drive Them Out of Mississippi.

Jackson, Miss., May 19.—The indictment of 208 citizens of Franklin county by the Federal grand jruy in Jackson, which has created such a profound sensation throughout the commonwealth, is the culmination of troubles that have been brewing in that county for nearly three years, and it is believed that the interference of Uncle Sam will mean the deathknell of whitecapism in that section of the state.

The history of the whitecap organizations in Lincoln, Franklin and Amite counties forms one of the most remarkable chapters in the criminal annals of Mississippi. The organization has fortunately been confined to these three counties, with the occasional sporadic but inconsequent demonstrations in Pike, Copiah and Jefferson counties, and in extent of its ramifications has been almost as formidable as the Ku-Klux Klan of the reconstruction days.

A conservative estimate places the number of citizens in Franklin, Lincoln and Amite counties who have been connected with whitecap leagues during the past three years at fully 400. All of these members, of course, have not participated in the numerous outrages that have been committed from time to time, but in every instance they have taken the horrible oath of the order and fully realized that to reveal its secrets meant punishment by death.

Even among those who are thoroughly familiar with the whitecap organization it is impossible to fully understand its motives and purposes. The outrages committed, of course, have had negroes as their principal victims and the organization was doubtless inspired by racial prejudice, but what the members hoped to accomplish by driving all the negroes from that section of the country is impossible to fathom.

Jealousy has also played a large part. Many of the negroes in these three counties prior to the incipiency of the troubles were in a very prosperous condition. Unlike the negroes of the delta, they were a frugal, hard-working set, and many of them owned their little farms and were making modest headway in accumulating worldly goods. Supply merchants were enabling them to purchase tracts of land on easy terms, and the number of negro farmers on the realty assessments rolls was increasing steadily year by year.

This was not at all satisfactory to the white husbandry of the three counties. Envy rankled in their bosoms. They did not like to see the negro sharing with them ownership of the lands, and it was especially objectionable because of the fact that when a negro farmer purchased a small tract of land and started to till the soil on his own account it immediately deprived some white farmer of a tenant of laborer.

This was the beginning of the troubles, which have grown steadily worse from month to month. The whitecapper leagues were formed, and at first they held open sessions, but kept their purposes very quiet. Under a misapprehension as to what motives were really behind these leagues, many good, peaceful and law-abiding citizens readily joined, until the membership assumed most formidable proportions.

Then the outrages commenced. Negroes who were working on their little farms received written notices, posted on their doors at night, to leave the county, accompanied by threats of dire punishment for failure to do so. Many departed at once. Others, more venturesome in nature, remained. Every threat was made good. Whippings were frequent, and dead negroes found by the roadside or in the fields were quite common.

It would be interesting to know just how many murders and cold-blooded assassinations are attributable to the whitecap organizations in Lincoln, Franklin and Amite. Unfortunately no accurate record has been kept, but if it were known the mortality list would be appalling in length.

Killings were so frequent that they attracted no more attention than a disturbance of the peace. An exodus of negroes, of course, followed. The members of the race moved out by the hundreds until some sections were almost depopulated. And still the outrages continued. The whitecaps had been given a taste of blood and thirsted for more.

Month succeeded month and -- betterment of conditions was shown. The courts were powerless to punish the offenders. The organization was of such proportions that the tribunals of the law were held completely in its clutches. No man could be convicted of a crime who belonged to the whitecap league, no matter how heinous his transgression. He only had to give the sign of the organization to the jury by whom he was being tried and a verdict of acquittal promptly followed. The sign was made by passing the left hand across the face. It was answered by passing of the right hand across the face. Brotherhood in crime was thus established and the prisoner went free.

Two years ago Governor Longino issued a proclamation setting forth the deplorable conditions existing in these three counties, calling on the officers of the law to perform their duty, and declaring every member of a whitecap organization an outlaw.

The campaign of agression was first taken up in Amite county, and here the troubles were speedily settled. Lists were obtained and evidence secured showing the membership of the whitecap league in that county, and a grand jury was empaneled that performed its work most effectively. The result was the arraignment of about 900 citizens before the circuit court.

Fortunately, the troubles in Amite had not been so serious as in Lincoln and Franklin, and many of the members who had joined the league were genuinely penitent. Nevertheless, they realized the trouble in which they were involved, and employed the ablest criminal lawyer in the state, Hon. R. N. Miller of Hazelhurst to defend them.

Mr. Miller declined to carry the cases into court. In the first place, it would have been impossible to give trial to all the accused parties, for there were not enough innocent men in the county to serve as jurors. A conference between the court officials and the attorney for the members of the whitecap league in which they acknowledged the error of their ways and consented to abandon the organization and become peaceful and law-abiding citizens.

This settled the trouble in Amite. At that time it was the only logical solution that presented itself, and has since proven quite satisfactory. With but one or two exceptions, there have been no labor or racial troubles of any nature whatever in the county since the agreement was signed.

Lincoln county traces its whitecap organization to the league in Franklin, as the parent body, and this is doubtless correct. At any rate, the outrages became so frequent and the crimes so heinous that two years ago the law-abiding citizens were thoroughly aroused and determined to suppress the organization at any cost. But again the courts were powerless, and relief did not come into sight until the last session of the legislature when, at the urgent solicitation of many citizens, the governor asked the lawmakers to set aside a special fund to be used in suppressing whitecapping outrages. This was done and the governor employed A. J. Hoyt, a detective, to co-operate with the Lincoln County Law and Order League and collect evidence against the members of the white-capper league.

Hoyt worked steadily for six months, and finally achieved complete success. He obtained the name of every member of the league and proof of the most convincing sort against them. At the term of the circuit court in Lincoln county last November a grand jury was secured that was not afraid to do its duty and about three hundred Lincoln county citizens were indicted for whitecapping.

Serious trouble was feared when the parties were brought into court and arraigned, but fortunately it was averted. The governor had troops in readiness to send to the scene if their services should be needed.

The Law and Order league, being assured of the repentence of scores of members decided to prosecute only those who had been guilty of murder and felonies. As a result of these trials sixteen persons were sent to the penitentiary, among the number being several of the wealthiest farmers in the county, notable among the number being David Posey, whose life sentence was recently affirmed by the supreme court after a spirited legal fight. The others accepted their sentence without a murmur.

"Suspend prosecution" was entered against the passive members of the organization. In other words, the indictments were held up pending good behavior. Included in the batch of true bills was one member of the legislature, a young fellow named Montgomery, who is likely to have trouble before the bar of the house at the next session. A member of the board of supervisers named Willis was also indicted. The organization was effectively broken up. For four months Lincoln has been one of the most law-abiding counties in the state.

Hoyt next moved his scene of operations to Franklin county. Here he pursued a somewhat different plan of work, but it was none the less effective, as the 308 indictments now pending in the federal court abundantly prove. Hoyt incurred the enmity of Dr. A. M. Newman, sheriff of Franklin county, who is among the number indicted by the federal grand jury, and in whose case the principal fight will be made.

All of the Franklin county parties against whom true bills were found will be in Jackson next Wednesday to answer the charges pending against them. How they will manage to get out of their troubles with Uncle Sam is a problem that is giving them much serious thought, and advices from the county state that the news of the wholesale finding of the grand jury has created almost a panic, and nearly every member of the whitecap organization is ready to plead guilty and beg the mercy of the court if they could be assured of squaring accounts by the payment of a nominal fine.

INDIANS ARE MADE POOR

In One Generation By Alleged Injustice and Cupidity.

Muskogee, I. T., May 19.—John Bullett of Claremore is one of the few men living who removed with the Delaware Indians in 1868 from their home in Wyandotte and Leavenworth counties, Kan., to the Cherokee nation, in Indian Territory.

He has seen the Delawares pass from a rich and powerful tribe with millions of dollars in invested funds to their credit, to a people without national existence and with merely a pittance compared with the riches of the civilized tribes and the Osages.

The full-bloods, within Mr. Bullett's memory, have been reduced from nearly 500 to not more than a dozen. All the other members of the tribe now living in the Territory are of mixed blood through the inter-marriage with non-citizens or Cherokees, to which people they were made subservient by the treaty of 1866.

John Bullett was only a boy when the head men of the tribe sold their lands to the railroad company that was afterward merged with the Missouri Pacific and consented to move to a new and strange country, where they were to be subject to the government of the Cherokees. Head Chief John Connor and Assistant Chief Charles Journeykake and other leaders of the tribe bargained with the railroad company to sell all the land of the 985 members of the tribe for $25 an acre. The railroad company had scarcely bought this land until it was resold at from $30 to $40 an acre. The individual members of the tribe could have obtained their price as well, but they trusted the transaction to their leaders and were thus robbed through dishonesty or incompetence of their vast estate.

Thus, robbed of a large part of their heritage through the acts of members of their own tribe, the Delawares were further reduced to comparative poverty by the failure of the United States government to keep its agreement in paying for lands it had purchased of the tribe. Mr. Bullett says that he and others of his tribe have figured out that the United States government is actually indebted to the Delaware Indians in a sum running over $14,000,000. In liquidation of this debt the government has agreed to pay the Delawares $150,000, the payment of which will begin in a few days. Before they could get this sum they signed a release of all claims against the United States.

The $14,000,000 claimed by the Delawares included interest and face value of invested funds and money from the sale of lands. Included in the claim is a provision for reimbursement for the difference in the value of paper money and gold, the government having paid interest to the Indians in paper money of depreciated value during the period of the Civil war instead of gold.

If the Delawares had received their just dues from the government, according to Mr. Bullett's figures, each member of the tribe in the next few weeks would draw something over $12,000 instead of a meager $150 or less, and each would have been in possession of a snug fortune outside the value of his allotment. The Delaware allotments amount to about seventy acres each. Some of them have surplus holdings, but the most of the surplus land has been taken up in large tracts of from several hundred to thousands of acres by a few of the members of the tribe. The Delawares are thus shut out of the per capita payments that are made so often to individuals of the five civilized tribes.

TERRIFIC RACE WITH DEATH.

"Death was fast approaching," writes Ralph F. Fernandez, of Tampa, Fla., describing his fearful race with death, "as a result of liver trouble and heart disease, which had robbed me of sleep and of all interest in life. I had tried many different doctors and several medicines, but got no benefit, until I began to use Electric Bitters. So wonderful was their effect, that in three days I felt like a new man, and today I am cured of all my troubles." Guaranteed at all druggists; price 50c.

OLD PEOPLE

Their Pains and Ailments

Any taint of the blood quickly shows itself with old people, and troubles, which a younger, more vigorous constitution holds in check, take possession of those of advanced years. A mole, wart or pimple often begins to inflame and fester, terminating in a sore that refuses to heal. Wandering pains of a rheumatic character are almost constant, the joints get stiff and the muscles sore, while sleeplessness and nervousness make life a burden. The natural activity of the body is not so great in old age and all the organs get dull and sluggish, failing to carry out the waste matters and poisons accumulating in the system and they are taken up and absorbed by the blood, rendering it weak and unable to properly nourish the system. There is no reason why old age should not be as healthy as youth if the blood is kept pure and strong. S. S. S. is purely vegetable and is the safest and best blood purifier and tonic for old people, because it is gentle, but at the same time thorough in its action, purifying the blood of all poisons and foreign matter, strengthening it and toning up the entire system by its fine tonic effect. Almost from the first dose the appetite increases, the general health begins to improve and the pains and ailments pass away.

SSS

I had a severe attack of La Grippe, which left me almost a physical wreck. To add to my wretched condition, Rheumatism developed. In a short time after beginning S. S. S. I was relieved of the pains and have gained in flesh and strength and my general health is betterthan for years. I heartily recommend S. S. S. for all blood diseases.

LICENSE IS REVOKED

Mayor Dunne Make Good His Threat to Cab Drivers.

Chicago, May 19.—Mayor Dunne today carried out his threat to revoke the license of any cab driver who violated the city ordinance by refusing to carry passengers to the strike-bound stores. The driver who will no longer be permitted to do business in this city, because of a refusal to break the boycott of the union, is Thomas D. Doherty, president of the Cabmen's union.

The evidence was procured by a detective who laid a trap for the union official and not only, it is alleged, caught Doherty violating the ordinances providing that passengers shall be carried to their destination, but also found the cabman disregarding the fare regulations of the city ordinance and making an overcharge.

SLANG IS OFTEN VIVID.

Rochester Democrat: "Slang is of two kinds," said President Rush Rhees of the university, digressing from the subject of remarks he was making to the men students. "There are those slang expressions which are vivid figures of speech and which by reason of their aptness appeal to all and readily pass into good idiom and current usage. And then there are those phrases which are the result of intellectual indolence and are in no way actually descriptive.

"I do not know," said Dr. Rhees to a reporter, "just how the phrase 'to get left' is regarded today. Years ago, I know, it was slang. If a man miscalculates in some venture today a person of culture might say without reproach, I believe that he got left. How long it will take this expression to be accepted in literature, or whether it ever will be accepted, I am not prepared to say.

"Some of the expressions we hear today seem to have a quality about them that may result in their having a permanent place in the language. The expression 'It's up to you' is a vivid presentation of an idea that we desire frequently to convey. 'To make good' is another phrase that expresses forcibly an idea that in ordinary speech requires at least half a dozen words to present. I can't say I'd like it. Neither can I say that it will not finally be accepted as good English idiom. 'To win out' is another phrase of the same character. I do not regard it as justified. 'To win,' it seems to me, does the work, and yet the fact that 'to win out' expresses the ultimate success of an effort may cause it to live."

NEW HIGH RECORD

Established By Commerce of United States In April.

Imports and Exports During Month Valued at $225,000,000.

FROM THE HERALD WASHINGTON BUREAU.

Washington, May 19.—(Special to The Herald.)—The commerce of the United States (imports and exports) during the month of April established a new high record for that month, the total being valued at $225,000,000, as against $193,000,000 in April, 1904; $197,000,000 in April 1903; $197,000,000 in April, 1901, and $194,000,000 in April 1900. Prior to 1900 there is no instance in the history of our commerce in which April imports and exports aggregated as much as $180,000,000, the highest levels reached during the past five decades being $89,000,000 in April, 1899; $109,000,000 in April, 1872; $145,000,000 in April, 1880; $179,000,000 in April, 1897; while for April of the present year the total was, as above indicated, $225,000,000.

A notable feature of this marked growth in the commerce of the United States is the sustained preponderance of exports, despite the ever-increasing home demand for manufactures, agricultural, and other products. April exports amounted to $129,358,229, the highest record ever made in April of any year, exceeding by $9,000,000 the best record made in April of any preceding year, viz: $120,750,000, the total reached in April, 1901. April imports were also unusually large, being valued at $95,750,000 as against $101,250,000 in April, 1897, the banner April in the record of earlier years. Reviewing April commerce in the period from 1875 to 1905, imports have grown much less rapidly than exports. In 1875 the April imports amounted to $43,000,000, in 1885 that month showed a total of $48,800,000; in 1895, $68,750,000; and in 1905, $95,675,000. April imports having thus increased 2ut $52,000,000 or 119 per cent over the total shown by April, 1875.

Meantimeexports have grown from $39,000,000 in April, 1875, to $53,000,000 in April 1885, $65,250,000 in April, 1895, and $129,350,000 in 1905, the last-named month showing an increase of $89,700,000 or 227 per cent as compared with April, 1875. The balance of trade has frequently shifted from one side to the other during the past thirty years, usually resting on the export side, especially since 1897. April, 1875, showed an excess of imports over exports amounting to nearly $4,000,000; by April, 1885, the balance had so shifted as to show an excess of exports of over $4,000,000; April, 1895, showed an excess again in favor of imports, amounting to about $3,50,000, and April, 1897, showed an excess of imports of $23,675,000, this abnormal balance on the side of imports being due to the heavy importations in anticipation of the new tariff measure then pending. Since 1897, however, exports have shown an excess over imports during every month of the year, the amount of that excess, however, varying from $97,000,000, the high record made in December, 1903, to $7,333,000 in August, 1903, the lowest point reached since July, 1897, the initial month in the unbroken period of preponderating exports extending from that date down to the present time. The excess of exports over imports during April of the present year was $33,700,000 dollars, as against $26,400,000 in April of the preceding year.

The falling off in exports noticeable in the earlier months of the present fiscal year has entirely disappeared, so that the ten months already elapsed show a total exportation of $1,275,000,000 or but $2,600,000 less than that of the corresponding ten months of the preceding year. Imports during the lest ten months were valued at $985,000,000, as against $829,000,000 in the ten months of the preceding year.

Details showing the articles contributing to the high record made by our commerce during April are not yet available, but comparatively accurate information as to their character may be obtained through an analysis of the corresponding March and of the nine months' period ending with March 31, 1905. During March, the closing month of that period, products of agriculture contributed 54 per cent, manufactures 37¾ per cent and other products 8½ per cent of the total exports; and of the imports, manufacturers' materials supplied 47.6 per cent, articles of food and animals 26.9 per cent, manufactures ready for consumption 13.8 per cent, and luxuries and articles of voluntary use 11.7 per cent of the total. Applying these proportions to the April exports, and adding the figures thus obtained to the actual totals for the nine months it may be assumed that of the domestic exports during the ten months ending with April agricultural products amounted to about $710,000,000, as against $779,000,000 last year; manufactures to about $440,000,000, against $372,000,000 last year, and other articles $104,000,000, as against $106,000,000 last year.

On the export side agricultural products thus show a decrease of about $69,000,000 and miscellaneous articles $2,000,000, a combined decrease of $71,000,000. Manufactures, however, show an increase of nearly $68,000,000, so that the net decrease in total exports during the ten months is but $2,600,000, with indications that by the end of the fiscal year this decrease will have entirely disappeared and been supplanted by a small increase.

Of the imports during the ten months of the present fiscal years manufacturers' materials supplied about $434,000,000, as against $381,000,000 last year; articles of food and animals, about $240,000,000, as against $194,000,000 last year; manufactures, ready for consumption, $138,000,000, as against $142,000,000 last year, and articles of voluntary use, about $124,000,000, as against $112,000,000 last year. The growth in imports extends throughout each of the great groups, with the exception of finished manufactures, amounting to about $53,000,000 in manufacturers' materials, $46,000,000 in food products and animals, and about $12,000,000 in luxuries and articles of voluntary use, while manufactured articles ready for consumption show a decrease of about $4,000,000 in comparison with the corresponding ten months of the preceding year.

DECISIONS BY SUPREME COURT

Three Unimportant Decisions Are Handed Down.

St. Paul, May 19.—(Special to The Herald.)—The supreme court today filed decisions in three unimportant cases. One was a reversal of the St. Paul municipal court in a garnishment case of J. O. Cavanaugh vs. S. S. Fenley, appellant, and the second was a reversal of the Minneapolis municipal court in a case of Fannie G. Lane vs. he Metropilitan Music company, for the possession of a piano. The third was a ruling sustaining the St. Louis district court in the case of W. J. Johnson, creditor, vs. P. J. Neff, receiver of the Motor Line improvement company. The trial court denied the petition of the creditor to file his claim after the stipulated period and the supreme court upholds the ruling.

CASE OF COUNTY COMMISSIONERS

Of Beltrami County Is Heard Before Governor Johnson.

St. Paul, May 19.—(Special to The Herald.)—The final hearing in the cases of the two suspended county commissioners of Beltrami county, F. O. Ogiesby and Wesley Wright, who are charged with malfeasance and nonfeasance in office, was held before Governor Johnson today.

Royal A. Stone, of the attorney general's office, presented the evidence for the prosecution. One of the defendants, W. Wright, was present, accompanied by the attorneys for the defense. Chester McKusick and B. J. Russell. Editor Hitchcock of Bemidji Pioneer, was an interested spectator.

Mr. Stone consumed the entire morning in reviewing the charges against the two commissioners, quoting extensively from a transcript of the testimony taken at a recent hearing in Bemidji. He said the charges could be classified under six heads: First, wrongful payment of improper and fraudulent bills; second, unlawfully allowing improper bill of county officials and themselves receiving part payment; third, letting the county printing for 1903, 1904 and 1905 to highest bidder; fourth, creating an excessive tax levy; fifth, being interested in county contracts; sixth, neglecting to prosecute or collect unpaid county bills.

He took up each of these subdivisions in turn, quoting at length from the transcript.

Summing up Mr. Stone said that if the testimony did not show criminal liability, it at least absolutely demonstrated negligence so gross as to demand the removal of both, who were chairman and vice chairman of the board in the period in which the irregularities were alleged to have been committeed. This afternoon, attorneys for the defense replied to Mr. Stone's argument.

Race For Supremacy.

It is interesting to watch the race for supremacy among Minneapolis-St. Paul-Chicago trains. First place is securely held by the Pioneer Limited and the second place by the Fast Mail. Both trains are entirely owned by the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul railway. There are three other fast trains tia this line from the Twin Cities to Chicago every day, and there is no extra fare to ride on them. Address W. B. Dixon, northwestern passenger agent, St. Paul, for further particulars, lowest rates, etc.

UNEXPECTED RESULT.

How Ventriloquist's Trick Panned Out.

"Some time ago," said a traveling man to the Baltimore American, "I was in Kansas City, Mo., at the ramshackle building they humorously call their union station. An Irishman who had been standing until his legs ached sat down to rest. In sitting down his form deposited itself on a rough box whose contents he had not considered.

"A well known ventriloquist named Fred High, a Western Pennsylvanian who travels the lyceum circuit, saw what had happened. Tipping me the wink he began. In half a minute the Irishman was standing ten feet away on the spot where he had alighted after a clear bound through the air.

"From the depths of that rough box had come the words: 'Oh, please take me out of here! I'm dying!'

"Before the startled Irishman could recover his power of speech the voice came a second time from his late seat: 'Please get me out of here!'

"With eyes protruding from his head the Irishman asked dazedly of the bystanders: 'Is this th' dead shpakin'?' The only answer to his startled query was a faintly moaned 'Oh, oh!'

"Then the Irishman showed that he was both humane and game. In spite of the supernatural and uncanny features of the case, in spite of his tremendous scare, he called some friends to his assistance and proposed to liberate the suffering person.

"At that moment a woman in widows' weeds, heavily veiled, who had been standing by, entered a decided objection. She declared she was not going to have her late lamented husband's remains tampered with by hands profane. The Irishman retorted that he was not going to let any fellow being suffer premature burial. The widow spiritedly replied that she knew positively her husband was dead, but the Irishman was not to be denied.

"Borrowing a hatchet from the depot express office he opened the rough box, and to the surprise of everybody the supposed coffin was found to contain a complete assortment of intoxicating liquors, so prepared for shipment into Prohibition Kansas.

"I can say with the utmost truthfulness," concluded the traveling man, "that the depot employes and other observers of this remarkable incident entered into the spirit of the joke. Also, that the spirit that had filled the coffin box entered very rapidly into the bystanders.

"While the man who had started the fun with no intention of starting a temperance reform or smuggling exposure boarded a Rock Island train and sought his destination."

WHEN REPTILES DIE.

A Viennese naturalist declares that nearly all reptiles that die from natural causes close their lives between nightfall and midnight only a few between midnight and mornings, and fewer still in daylight. Most reptiles seem aware of their approaching death, seeking out particular places, and there awaiting the end, while those whose lives are spent underground come to the surface before death.

CHOOSING SENATORS.

An important experiment will be tried in Illinois next April, when for the first time the people will express their choice for United States senator. This choice will not be legally binding upon the legislature, which will still be the power that formally elects, but it is doubtful if a legislature will dare refuse to obey the will of the people when expressed as it will be in this case, even though legislatures repeatedly disregard the public will not so concretely expressed.

Under the new primary law of Illinois the people of that state will express their choice for senator by ballot on the last Saturday of April, 1906. The man who receives the most votes will have his name presented to the next legislature, which will elect a successor to Senator Cullom. That legislature will beyond doubt elect that man, though legally it may elect any man it chooses.

The indications are that the politicians are going to accept the new plan in good faith, for while he has not exhibited marked enthusiasm about it, Senator Cullom has announced that he is ready to go before the people.

A bill providing for exactly the same thing was presented to the Minnesota legislature last winter, and it did not even get the courtesy of consideration. Yet there can be no doubt that the overwhelming mass of the people of Minnesota think it is safer that they should express their choice rather than that the legislature should elect almost at will. This was a clear evasion of a chance to give the people what they wanted, but it was not the only chance of that sort the Minnesota legislature neglected.

Popular election of United States senators is generally recognized as the remedy for the present condition of the United States senate, but that is a slow reform, involving an amendment to the constitution that must go through a painful process against the opposition of powerful and united interests. The Illinois plan is a simple substitute that should have the same effect, and which each state can adopt while waiting for the constitution to be changed. It is difficult to imagine any reasonable objections to the plan, or to appreciate the good faith of a legislature which refuses to adopt it.

THE WHITE PLAGUE.

The campaign against tuberculosis, that dread white plague that is carrying off more thousands yearly than all the other plagues of history combined, is progressing to such an extent that there is now being held in Washington, D. C., a meeting the object of which is to make the fight a national affair. It will be the first annual meeting of the National Association for the Study and Prevention of Tuberculosis, and the fact that it is the first meeting of a national organization of this character has peculiar significance.

For years the appalling progress of the disease was well-nigh unimpeded, owing to a complete misunderstanding of its nature. It was supposed to be hereditary, and when it broke out in a family the science of medicine threw up its hands, appalled, and gave way to the onward march of destruction. Then it was discovered that it was not hereditary, but highly contagious, and this was the greatest step. This fact once known, the pathway lay clearly-defined ahead. It was found that the germs of the disease thrived in unwholesome surroundings, and that a weakened physical system was an invitation to the disease. To stop its progress by preventing contagion, to cure it by fresh air, sunlight and wholesome, nourishing food, were obviously the next steps.

One step, a most important one, and one that has not been fully followed up because of its pathos and difficulty, is just as obvious as any other. That is the isolation of the afflicted for the protection of the healthy. This calls for the separation of the unfortunate victim of the disease from the sympathy and tenderness of his relatives and friends, but it is coming, just as surely as isolation of smallpox cases came, for it is just as necessary and just as important.

Great work toward the defeat of consumption has been done, and the meeting of the national association will undoubtedly mark the beginning of a new era. This unites the scattered battalions opposed to the disease into a compact, effective army, which can wage the necessary battle against the insidious advances of the white plague. The meeting will have the prayers and good wishes of thousands for its success.

IMPORTANT IF TRUE.

A couple of weeks ago a paragraph in The Herald referred to a floating newspaper yarn about a French scientist who had discovered an acid that would materially increase the strength of those who used it. The story was taken by most people with a grain of salt, and forgotten. Since then, however, a Paris journal has come over, bringing fuller details of the discovery, and showing that it is treated in Paris with perfect good faith. There is a possibility, therefore, that the discovery may be important.

In effect, the Paris scientist has extracted the energy of the ant and made it available for the use of the sluggard. Formic acid, which used to be obtained from ants, though now produced synthetically in the form of a powder, is the basis of the discovery, and some interesting experiments have been made with it. A Prof. Huchard made the discovery, and described his experiments in a paper read to the Paris Academy of Medicine. Before taking a dose of the stuff Prof. Huchard was able to register 9.900 kilogrammeters on the ergograph, an instrument for testing energy. After taking two grams of the acid, his record went down to 8.750 kilogrammeters. The second day, after a similar dose, he registered 20.625; the third day, with four grams, he registered 20.975; the fourth day, on a similar dose, he registered 20.210; and on the fifth day, with three grams, he made it 30.650 kilogrammeters. He quadrupled his working power, therefore, in six days. Ceasing the use of the acid, his record dropped to 18 kilogrammeters, and then held between 14 and 17, so that there was a marked and apparently permanent gain.

Tests were then made with such morbid physical states as neurasthenia, diabetes, asthma, anaemia, senile weakness, etc. The results, according to the Paris paper, were most satisfactory. One result of the tests was the discovery that there were no poisoning effects, even from larger doses than are mentioned here. Of course the discovery will have to be watched with infinite care through a long series of experiments before it is generally adopted, but there appears to be some possibilities of value in what has already been done.

FOOL HEALTH HINTS.

Somebody, who is said to be a scientist, has announced that we should be careful about getting too much light and air, as they are not good for us, and a surplus of them will make us ill.

This is characteristic of a lot of balderdash advice that manages to find its way into public print. No sooner do we begin to believe that a certain course of diet or conduct is hygienic, than somebody comes along and with an air of wisdom like unto that of the owl, solemnly announces that we are going in exactly the wrong direction, and that in the other way lies health.

If they were all as easy to settle as this one it would not be so bad. Many of them are matters requiring expert knowledge, and on such subjects the people necessarily have to depend upon experts, or disregard the whole question entirely. But in this instance no expert advice is needed. In the opinion of The Herald, the alleged scientist who makes this claim is no scientist at all, but a solemn, empty-headed old humbug. For anybody can test for himself the truth of his claim, and in everybody's experience is ample material for the test.

Who's face shows the ruddy hue of health; that of the man that lives in the air and sunshine, or that of the man perpetually condemned to darkness and foul air? What sends the blood coursing healthily through one's veins; exercise in the open air, or imprisonment in a damp, dark and noisome interior? Did you ever hear of open air and sunshine bringing the pallor of ill-health to the face, or of sedentary occupations causing red cheeks and clear complexions?

In fact, if the wellsprings of charity flowed as freely as do those of bad advice, this would be a charming world indeed, and fit for the early coming of the millenium. There is nothing on earth so freely offered as advice on how to get well and keep well. Fortunately, too, there is nothing on earth so little used as this same advice, for if a man started to follow all of it he would be eating meat one day and refusing it with horror the next; living on milk today and abstaining from it tomorrow; taking exercise this week and abhorring it as dangerous next week; in short, taking up with a new fad every day to have it cancelled by a fresh one the next day.

The rule of plain, old-fashioned common sense applies just as readily and effectively to this question as it does to any other.

Hotel Gossip.

P. G. Harcourt of Cedar Rapids, Iowa, created quite a bunch of excitement at the Lenox yesterday, and the services of a policeman were necessary before the disturbance was finally settled to the satisfaction of all. The police was called in to arrest an alleged counterfeiter in the person of Mr. Harcourt, whose general personal appearance would indicate that he was anything but a criminal, and it took voluble explanations on the part of the gentleman from Iowa, and the testimony of an expert witness, to save him from going behind the bars. And even then the blue-coated guardian of the peace did not appear entirely satisfied, and his stern countenance wore a puzzled expression when he left the hotel.

Mr. Harcourt, with a number of other men, all strangers to each other, were lounging about the lobby yesterday morning. As Duluthians will remember, the day was a beautiful one. The city appeared at its best, and its best proved interesting to the Iowan. He decided that he would sally forth and "take in" the town. Such an operation, he knew, would probably call for the expenditure of a little cash for souvenirs and the like before he got through, so it was evident that he would do well to have some change about his person before starting out. He walked up and threw a roll of bills on the polished marble in front of Manager Barto. It was a fat, comfortable-looking roll. A peculiar thing about it was that it was a roll in the true sense of the word, for it was rolled round and round like a yard of ribbon, and was a continuous sheet. The number tens which were visible showed the bills to be worth $10 each.

"Can you change a tenner for me?" inquired Mr. Harcourt of a man who was standing by.

"Certainly," said the stranger, pulling a heavy purse from his pocket and producing the desired amount of silver. His eyes opened wide and a look of doubt crossed his face as he saw the other take a little pair of scissors from his pocket and calmly clip off a ten-dollar bill from the roll.

"Thank you," said Mr. Harcourt, pocketing the change and giving the new bill in return.

"Rather queer way you have of carrying your money," ventured the man.

"Isn't it. Very convenient, though," and the man from Iowa walked out of the lobby.

The individual who had parted with $10 worth of good, hard cash for a piece of paper clipped from a green roll tried to make himself and others believe all the morning that he had not been buncoed, but he did not entirely succeed in doing so. His suspicions were aroused, and were seemingly confirmed in the afternoon with the reappearance of Mr. Harcourt.

"You wouldn't think that bill I gave you was a counterfeit, would you?" said Mr. Harcourt easily.

"To tell the truth, I have been thinking something of the kind. If you don't mind I wish you would give me back the sliver for the bill."

This Mr. Harcourt positively refused to do, which made the stranger all the more suspicious. He became quite heated in his remarks, it is said, and after the powers of language and threats had been exhausted to no avail he left the building, returning a very few minutes later with a burly policeman in tow.

"Officer, arrest that man," he exclaimed, dramatically, pointing his finger at the culprit. "He is a counterfeiter."

"Any more bogus bills about you?" inquired the copper, laying his hand on the offender's arm.

Mr. Harcourt laughed in seeming enjoyment of the situation and threw his roll of bills on the counter again. Other guests remarked that they admired his nerve.

"Those are counterfeits sure," observed the policeman, turning the roll and counting fifteen ten-dollar bills.

"Pardon me, but they are not," said the prisoner. "You will notice my signature on each one of them. That makes them genuine."

At this further display of nerve the bystanders laughed.

The copper was not at all convinced, so the Iowan offered the further explanation that he was cashier of the Citizens' National bank of Cedar Rapids, and all the notes bore the name of this institution on their face. The signature on the bills was found to closely correspond with the one on the hotel register, but the policeman was not convinced until the teller of one of the local banks was called in. He glanced at the bill and immediately announced that his bank would willing give $150 for the roll of bills. He said they were just as good money as any afloat. This finally settled the controversy, and the obliging stranger admitted that the joke was on him.

* * *

"Logging operations were a good deal more extensive in the Michigan country last winter than they were through Northern Minnesota, because they had more snow down there," said Gilbert Wilson of Chicago, timber inspector for a Chicago firm, at the St. Louis. "In Michigan they had good sleighing late in March, and even into April, for the snowfall was heavy.

"I spent most of the winter in Escanaba, looking after the purchase of cedar poles, which my firm deals in extensively. The demand for poles is very brisk this season, and the prices are good. It looks as though the demand might exceed the supply before the year is ended, if it continues as active as it is at present. I am up in this country to look over some Minnesota cedar which was cut during the winter. It is a noticeable fact that the poles you have here average much shorter than through the Michigan district, where some are as long as seventy feet, while the Minnesota cedar for this purpose measures from twenty-five to fifty feet."

Said By the Babes.

Lippincott's: Her mother had been trying for some time to break her of the habit of running in constantly to the house of a certain neighbor, fearing that she might be troublesome. One day the temptation proved too strong, and the child made a long visit at the forbidden house. When she came home her mother met her with a look of most unnatural and alarming solemnity.

"Well, Janie," she said. "I think you had better go upstairs and pack your trunk, and go over to live with Mrs. Smith."

The child burst into tears: "Oh, dear!" she wailed, "and I was just beginning to get acquainted with you and papa!"

Just an "Old Guy."

Marie Cahill tells this story:

"I was playing on one occasion in Minneapolis with one of Daly's companies, when a committee waited on me and asked if I would not consent to appear at a benefit to be given for the next afternoon in aid of the families of several firmen who had been killed in the performance of their duties. I was told that Joseph Jefferson had consented to appear and deliver a talk on the drama. Of course I consented.

"That next afternoon I found myself one of a great gathering of professionals of all kinds—mostly vaudeville performers, I fancy. I stood in the wings as Mr. Jefferson began his address on the drama, and was deeply interested, when suddenly I became aware that a young woman was peering over my shoulder. Her hair was blonde, and she wore short pink skirts. The song-and-dance artiste was stamped indelibly on her. At that moment Mr. Jefferson, with rare eloquence, was referring to the comedies of Wycherley and Sheridan and Goldsmith, and for a second I lost sight of my companion, when I was startled to hear, in a loud whisper from somewhere back in the wings a shrill, girlish voice saying:

"'Hi, Mame, who's on now?'

"The song-and-dance fairy beside me turned her head and whispered back:

"'I dunno. Some old guy doin' a monologue.'"

A Political Story.

Chicago Tribune: When Hiram Hollister was elected to an important and responsible office, in which he exercised large powers and was intrusted with the care and keeping of immense sums of public money, he resolved that he would be an honest and faithful servant of the people, regardless of whatever pressure might be brought to bear upon him.

He carried out that resolution.

Political influence personal friendship, and opportunities for self-aggrandizement were ignored in his management of the trust imposed upon him. Not a dollar of dishonest money clung to his fingers, and his appointees to subordinate positions were men of the same pattern.

Nevertheless, in his faithful administration of the office to which his fellow-citizens had elected him, he made many influential enemies, and when his term had nearly expired and he announced himself as a candidate for re-election, it was generally predicted by the knowing ones that his name would not even be mentioned in the convention.

It wasn't.

A Monument of Reform.

Lincoln Star: The juvenile court will involve Omaha in an expenditure of $10,000. In spite of this the juvenile criminals obstinately refuse to appear. The court, however, must be deemed a monument of reform.

Money Well Spent.

Indianapolis News: Still a deficiency of $10,000,000 or so caused by rural free delivery is a good deal easier for the country to tolerate than some other deficits it has been called on to face. Here at least it gets something for its money.

Keeping Out of the Game.

Pittsburg Dispatch: It naturally pains Japan to observe the lack of enthusiasm which England manifests over the chance that it may have to take a hand. From that defensive alliance it was expected that England would be aching to mix in, but its aches are wholly in the opposite direction.

Rival Crops in Nebraska.

Portland Oregonian: The president found the crop of boys and girls in Nebraska much more interesting than the corn crop. It is on record, however, in the farmers' homes of that state that it takes a big corn crop year after year for many years to bring the crop so much admired by the president to maturity and dependable effectiveness. Let not the value of the corn crop of the great Middle West suffer by this comparison. Children in abundance are only to be desired when there is plenty upon which to bring them up. It means something to launch a child upon the great sea of industrial activity in these times, and much depends upon the successful launching.

Moves to "Save" Niagara.

Springfield Republican: The Canadians are at last awake to the grave menace which threatens Niagara. The Ontario government has refused to ratify an agreement between the Electrical Development company and the Niagara Falls (Canadian) Park commission, by which the company would be allowed to develop double its present limit of power. It has also been declared in the Canadian parliament, within the week, that no further inroads upon Niagara will be permitted until a royal commission has made an investigation. This is welcome news, and suggests that the Canadians may yet be found willing partners in the preservation of the falls. An international agreement or commission to govern the taking of water from Niagara for power purposes cannot come too soon.

Sounds Well.

The Japanese Imperial Educational Rescript says: "Advance learning and regulate your pursuits, developing the intellectual faculties and perfecting the virtuous and useful elements. In any emergency, exert yourselves in the public service, and exhibit voluntarily your bravery." This exhortation hangs on the walls of every Japanese schoolhouse, and is read in unison aloud daily.

MIRTHFUL REMARKS.

Chicago Record-Herald: "I see," said Mr. Henpeck, "that a New York man killed himself the other day to make his wife happy."

"Oh, well," she answered, "what's the use bringing up such a disagreeable subject as that. Your policy has a suicide clause."

Philadelphia Ledger: "He seems to have gone to the bad completely."

"Yes; I believe he found himself between the devil and the deep sea, and he realized that he couldn't swim."

Washington Star: "Do you believe that the public will approve of government ownership?"

"No," answered Senator Sorghum; "with government ownership or any other system there will always be reformers."

Philadelphia Press: "Not much in this life for me," growled the chronic kicker. "Everybody else seems to get along, but I'm left out in the cold."

"Well, that won't happen to you in the life to come," said Miss Sly.

Somerville Journal: Dick—I thought you said Miss Westerly was entrancingly beautiful. I saw her yesterday out riding in her automobile and she wasn't even good looking.

Tom—Oh, well, she had on her automobile rig.

Washington Post: "Are you a friend to William Biggins?"

"That ne'er do well? I should say not."

"Then you'll hardly be interested to hear that he has inherited $1,000,000."

"What? Dear old Bill?"

Cleveland Leader: Judge—You are charged with blowing open a safe and absorbing $200 in coin therefrom. Have you anything to say?

Prisoner—Is it true that I overlooked $10,000 in bills?

Judge—Yes.

Prisoner—My plea will be insanity.

Philadelphia Ledger: "How do you get out o' here?" asked the customer from beyond the suburbs, who had lost himself in the department store.

"You asked me that a few minutes ago," replied the floorwalker, "and I told you to follow your nose down the aisle to the left."

"I did begosh, an' it led me to the cheese counter!"

MINNESOTA OPINIONS.

Anoka Union: Thousands of immigrants landing in New York, and nothing doing towards inducing them to settle in Minnesota.

Owatonna Journal: If you don't think that the Standard Oil company is greater than a diamond mine, just realize that on March 1 a 15 per cent dividend was paid, and that a 9 per cent dividend has been declared for June 1. That makes a 24 per cent dividend for six months, or 48 per cent for the year. No wonder John D. Rockefeller can keep up the Chicago university, give $100,000 to the foreign missions, besides numerous other startlingly large gifts, and yet have his revenues come in so fast that he don't know what to do with all his money.

Sauk Center Herald: If a corporation, firm or individual does any business he must go after it. Business does not go around hollering for someone to pick it up.

Red Wing Republican: Thirty-three per cent of the deaths in Minnesota during the past year were from consumption. No wonder that a sanitarium is to be built.

Itasca News: International Falls has ordered three miles of sidewalk built. Great Winds! Three years ago good section lines were a joy!

Pointers By Pease.

Anoka Union: The Collins-Dunn crowds still persist in showing their teeth.

Just now the railroads are beginning to be let alone. The awakening among the people suits them not.

A hundred or two men have already been mentioned as good gubernatorial candidates, and this an off year.

Better support of newspapers; better for the people.

Folly—and Foreign Trade.

New York World: The Pacific coast "views with alarm" an alleged boycott by Chinese merchants against American goods. So long as Chinese immigrants are barred here, the tale of horror runs, so long will the Celestial merchant princes taboo our wares.

Terrible if true! China bought from us in 1904 $12,862,000 worth of goods, almost exactly 3 cents' worth for each of her people.

There is in Europe a little country smaller than Texas, nineteen times smaller than China, that bought of us in the same year $213,723,000 worth of goods, or $3.81 per person. That country is the German empire.

A Chinaman at home patronizes Uncle Sam's shop to the enormous extent of 3 cents. Every German spends in it nearly $4 a year. Yet we are pouring out money by the hundreds of millions for power and prestige on the Pacific, with fatuous eyes fixed on "the future trade of the Orient." And we do not even take the trouble to attempt to frame a reciprocity treaty when our present trade with Germany is threatened with serious diminution!

Was ever commerce with such folly sought—or shunned?

Resented the Imputation.

Ladies' Home Journal: The man in the smoker was boasting of his unerring ability to tell from a man's looks exactly what city he came from. "You, for example," he said to the man next to him, "you are from New Orleans?" He was right.

"You, my friend," turning to the man on the other side of him. "I should say you are from Chicago." Again he was right.

The other two men got interested.

"And you are from Boston?" he asked the third man.

"That's right, too," said the New Englander.

"And you from Philadelphia, I should say?" to the last man.

"No, sir," answered the man with considerable warmth; "I've been sick for three months; that's what makes me look that way!"

Couldn't Qualify.

Anthony, Kan., Republican: J. Ben Lee had a caller from the country the other day. "Be you the man who makes picters?" she asked. Mr. Lee admitted that he was.

"Can you make picters of little children?"

"Certainly."

"And what do you charge for 'em?" was the next query.

"Three dollars a dozen."

"Oh, shucks!" said the woman, in a disappointed tone; "here I'll have to wait till next year, for I've only got eleven."

Hedging Weather Prophet.

"When in doubt," said Senator Bacon, "we should imitate the example of the astute weather prophet.

"This prophet walked into his inner office one day and said to his junior clerk:

"'Well, how are the indications for tomorrow?'

"'Mighty uncertain, sir,' the junior answered. 'I hardly know what kind of a prognostication to make out.'

"'Oh,' said the chief, 'just make it fine weather, with local rain. Then, if it is fine, we are all right, and if it storms, that will be one of the local rains of our prophecy.'"

Reflections of a Bachelor.

New York Press: The devil asks no salary because he likes his work so much and it is so easy.

A woman makes such plans for the unexpected that she would put on open-work stockings to go down a well.

There is no girl that could make herself understand that a good figure was to be seen only in the looking glass.

When a man is a father for the first time he can't help wondering how all the strangers he meets don't look at him enviously.

Waiting for the Decision.

New York Press: Two of the well known members of the exchange dropped down into the power house at No. 9 New street, and one said to Fred. Eberlin: "See here, general; we have made a bet of the best luncheon you can get up. We want to eat it now, and when the bet is decided the loser will come in and pay the bill. What do you say? Is it all right?" "You can bet your sweet life it is," said the genial Fred. "Just go ahead and order the best in the house." After the pair had feasted right royally to the extent of about $7 worth, Fred said: "By the way, what was that bet?" "My friend here," said R., "bets that when the spire of Old Trinity falls it will fall across Broadway; into Wall street, and I bet it won't."

The Good Old Days.

Oh, give me back the good old days;
I want the simple life.
The care free times before we knew
Bacteria were rife.

We never boiled the crystal stream
The oaken bucket drew,
And if our mud pies reeked with germs,
At least we never knew.

But now we boil, and bake, and steam,
And disinfect and burn;
We wash and spray and shake and stir
And fume and scrape and churn.

We think it will prolong our days,
No nook or cranny shirk,
And just as every microbe flees,
We die of overwork.

—Puck.

No Such Hope.

New York World: President Roosevelt, it is said, intends that the Panama Canal commissioners shan't be held up by trusts and made to pay high prices for material. The "plain people" haven't the government's privilege of dumping over the tariff wall and buying where it pleases.

American Humor Abroad.

London Telegraph: "The Dictator" is splendidly, outrageously American. The characters "tall elegant," their humor is redolent of the Broadway, their action is swift, their energy inexhaustible. Their conversation is a curious blending of heroics and commonplace matter; they are imbued with the best instincts of melodrama tempered by an active spirit of sheer merriment. "Is your husband dead?" the hero asks of a fascinating Spanish lady. "Yes," is the answer. "Did he leave you much?" the questioner rejoins. "Every night," and the reply is so unexpected, yet comes so pat that the audience roars with delight.

A New Version.

Atlanta Journal: Nothing succeeds like success except failure.

And Then Wait For Results.

Memphis Commercial Appeal: If we should ever write a book we are going to dedicate it to John D. Rockefeller, J. Pierpont Morgan, Andrew Carnegie, William H. Vanderbilt, George Gould and W. W. Astor.

Laugh Is On the Other Fellow.

New York World: For "laughsome" read "rebate" in the Armour company's private car code. A corporation may be soulless without prejudice to its sense of humor.

GOVERNMENT

To Give Farmers Instruction In Cheese Making.

Washington, May 19.—Marked advances in the art of making cheese and butter and in general dairying are assured, according to the dairy division of the agricultural department.

At the rate of progress now being made, it will not be long before the importation of foreign cheese will be limited. Instead of the bringing in of about 1,000,000 pounds of various kinds, such as one is accustomed to think can be made only in France and some other European countries, all, or nearly all, will be made here.

Directions will soon be sent out to the farmers and dairymen of the country telling them how to make Camembert cheese, now chiefly made in France. For some time government experts have been conducting experiments at Storrs, Conn., and have studied minutely the molds and bacilli which enter into the flavoring of this famous brand. The process is simple, and the farmers of the country will soon be able to turn out a product quite equal to the imported.

Before many months similar directions will probably be sent out touching the other kinds of foreign-made cheese in demand in America.

The dairy division is also sending a chemist and a bacteriologist out to Ames, Iowa, to the state college there, where important butter experiments will be carried on in a new creamery recently built by the college. The object of the experiments is to ascertain how a number of improvements in butter made by farmers and dairymen can be brought about.

An important departure, too, is the sending of an official out through the South, known as a demonstrator. He is a man skilled in practical dairying, the making of butter, the care of cows, and all related subjects.

The division is also about to carry on important experiments in the cold storage of butters and cheese and other dairy products.

PIGEON RACES WITH TRAIN

Flies Ahead of Passenger Engine Each Daily Trip.

East Hampton, Conn., May 19.—A tumbler pigeon that makes a trip daily along the Air Line division, following, or rather keeping just ahead of freight and passenger trains, is the latest thing in freak birds. For the past two weeks the pigeon has followed this practice, usually chosing the "Rawhide" train for a companion. Occasionally, when the train is at a station, the bird will light on cars or tender, and is fed by the men.

Several mornings of late the pigeon has arrived here pust before the 8:48 east-bound passenger train, remaining perched on too of the flagstaff of the Center schoolhouse. As soon as the smoke of the engine is seen the pigeon soars high in the air and then performs the stunt common to tumbler pigeons. In tumbling and upward flying it keeps straight ahead of the engine, and was watched out of sight by a number of spectators, who were at first incredulous concerning the pigeon's performance.

The railroad men consider it a good omen, and woe unto the person who tries to harm the bird. In color it is of a rich buff and of good size.

LONE HIGHWAYMAN

Holds Up Express Train In Portugal.

Lisbon, May 19.—An express train from Oporto to Lisbon was held up by a single brigand.

The train had slowed down to round a curve in a wooded country when a man, armed with an old-fashioned carbine, suddenly mounted the tender and leveled the weapon at the driver and stoker.

The latter immediately jumped off and bolted down the line. The driver threw up his arms and allowed himself to be tied by the bandit, who proceeded to go through the luggage car next the engine.

By this time the passengers had learned what was the matter, and about twenty or thirty men, armed with sticks and revolvers, approached the robber, who made off into the woods and escaped.

UNITED AT LAST

To Man Who Caused Her Twenty-Five Years Woe.

Love Thwarted Quarter of Century Ago Rights Itself.

Hartford City, Ind., May 19.—Eliza Cunningham Sage, after a quarter of a century of waiting, twenty years or more of the time being spent as a prisoner in a cell at the Indiana Women's Prison in Indianapolis, has become the wife of the man whose unlawful love in the early '80s caused all her woe, and is now living as Mrs. Perry McNeill at Orange, Tex.

The marriage of Eliza McNeill occurred at Lake Charles, La., some days ago.

Mrs. McNeill has written to friends at Hartford City to tell of the event.

After a generation of sorrow, pain, vain regret, hard labor and repentance in the sackcloth and bitterness of penal servitude, Eliza Cunningham is united in a quiet home with the man who won her first love in the days when she was comely and attractive to many men. She emerged some three years ago from the woman's prison on parole.

Mrs. Sage drowned her 2-year-old child in Lick creek, Blackford county, Ind.

John Sage, the woman's husband, carried the litele one from their home to the creek and aided the woman when she found herself unable to keep the gasping, struggling child's curly head beneath the water.

Perry McNeill found the body of the wee victim in the creek and gave the story to the law's officers.

Perry McNeill was the father of that baby. The child was not born in wedlock.

The innocent, prattling child was an eyesore in the dwelling of John Sage, who had married Eliza Cunningham, the mother. He twitted the woman and urged her to part with the baby. Finally he declared that there must be an end of the situation. He was insanely jealous of the child and vindictive against McNeill.

He declared that the baby must go or that he would go himself and not return. The two talked the thing over and the man made the suggestion that if the baby were found in Lick creek no one would believe but that it had toddled to the bank and had fallen into the water. The woman protested, but in the end she yielded, and the deed was done.

All this came out in the end, at the trial of John Sage for alleged complicity with the woman in the murder of the child.

It is not reasonable to suppose that a child, falling into a creek and drowning, will bear upon its throat the marks of human fingers. The telltale purple prints upon the tender neck of the baby told such a story as gave a jury reason to send Eliza Cunningham Sage to prison for life for infanticide.

The woman, in her devotion to the strong-minded man, shielded Sage and held him guiltless. She went to her cell and he went back to the world professing righteousness and expressing abhorrence for the woman who had slain her own child.

Then the man went into the divorce court to release himself from the yoke that galled his neck; the link that bound him to the women-felon, the child-killer.

John Sage has made a new conquest of woman's heart and planned a union more pleasing and suitable to his sensitive nature. He wanted to rid himself entirely of the past, and to forget the woman, who at her prison task, was serving sentence for a crime in which he himself had a hand.

All the furies pent up within the breast of Eliza Cunningham Sage rose and called for revenge.

The woman in prison became the nemesis of John Sage.

Her testimony, her new story, told upon the witness stand, was the means of sending Sage to serve the state in stripes and hardship for his part in the brutal murder on Lick Creek.

John Sage was paroled only a short time ago. It is said he lives at Terra Haute.

What of Perry McNeill? Betrayer of a young girl, main witness against her in her trial for the murder of his child, he is now that woman's husband, after twenty-five years.

Is it possible for such a love as that of Perry McNeill, the betrayer, to last for a quarter of a century? The answer is found in the wedding papers that tell of the union of two persons who are faithful after all these years of dreary separation.

Still, at the trial, he was the chief witness. McNeill's story convinced court and jury. He did not spare his old sweetheart. He was filled with the horror of the sight of the baby, bone of his bone, blood of his own blood, white and ghastly in the pool.

McNeill saw Eliza Sage go to prison. He had small compunction. Apparently he had lost all the love he might have had for the woman.

It has been a long wait and a hard struggle for the woman. She has run the gamut of emotions. She has known the frenzy of the woman scorned. She has known what it means to be trebly spurned by lover, by husband and by outraged society. With all the gall of this knowledge and with all the despair that comes to the outcast whose lot is toil and penance, she has lived with her conscience. She has known the agony and cold sweat of dreams in which a baby's cries and choking grasps came to her over the lapse of years to give her the awful paralysis of fear. She has had the dismal, unhappy drag of month after month in voiceless confinement.

Today she has freedom and the hand of her old lover is linked with her own for the stretch of life that may remain.

The wedding in Louisiana of Eliza Sage and Perry McNeill is a fit sequel to an uncommon tale of rude but virile and thoroughly human people, human in their inherent and vital weaknesses.

HALF BREED INDIAN MURDERS HIS WIFE

Menominie, Wis., May 19.—Word has been received here that Joseph Gane, a farmer of the town of Eau Galle, this county, murdered his wife yesterday and now stands guarding his house with a gun and resisting arrest. Sheriff Smith and Under Sheriff Ralph have started for the scene of the murder. Gane is a half-breed Indian.

After standing off for several hours neighbors who were attempting to capture him, Gane left the house and started for Menominie for the avowed purpose of giving himself up. The murder was caused by jealousy.

ATTORNEY LOUD DENIES MRS. SULLIVAN'S CHARGE

Bemidji, May 19.—County Attorney H. J. Loud of Beltrami county denies the charge of Mrs. Sullivan of Minneapolis that evidence had been submitted to him that would warrant him in arresting anyone for the murder of J. C. Sullivan, who it was supposed, had been killed by wolves at Black Duck.

Mrs. Sulivan complained to Governor Johnson Wednesday that detectives in her employ had secured evidence tending to show that her son had been murdered in a hotel at Black Duck and that the officials of Beltrami county refused to issue warrants for the arrest of the persons accused of the crime.

HUGE DRY DOCK

For the Philippines, Building In Maryland, Nearly Ready.

Capacity Will Be Ample to Float the Biggest Warship.

Baltimore, May 19.—Except for the painting, the largest floating dry dock in the world, which is being built by the Maryland Steel company at Sparrow's Point, is completed, and probably will be launched this month. The painting has been in progress since early in March, but so much bad weather has been encountered that the work has not progressed very rapidly. About 400 men have been employed for nearly two months in cleaning and painting the big dry dock, but it will take half a month of good dry weather to finish the job.

Just why so many painters should be employed on one job has been a source of much speculation to many laymen who have viewed the dock ,but when it is known that there are over 1,500,000 square feet of steel plates in the dock to be given three coats of paint, this will be understood. Over 130 tons of red lead are required for the job. The painting can be done only in dry weather.

The dock is for the United States government, and is for service in the Philippines, and even if it is not launched before June 1 it will be more than a month ahead of contract time, July 20 being the date named for the expiration of the contract. Had it not been for the severe winter and the damp weather encountered since the painting was started the dock would have been completed now. In addition to being practically completed in advance of the time named in the contract, the company has gone the government one better in regard to the lifting capacity of the dock. In the contract it is stipulated that it shall lift a 16,000-ton battleship. This has been exceeded, and its maximum lifting capacity is placed by the builders at 20,000 tons.

There will be no ceremonies connected with the launching of the huge dock like there are with the launching of vessels. While in the course of construction the dock rests in a huge basin, which has been excavated for the purpose. The bottom of this is twelve feet below the ordinary water level. This basin is inclosed at the outer end by a coffer dam, which will be removed after the water has been admitted to the basin and permitted to rise to the height of the water in the bay. It can thus be seen that the launching is far different from that of a vessel.

As soon as the dock is afloat it will be made fast to tugs and towed down the bay to the Patuxent river, where tests will be made with one of the largest battleships in the navy. The name of the vessel is yet a secret. Much interest is being taken in the tests by naval officers, and the government will have a number of guests at the trials. After the tests it will be turned over to the government by the Maryland Steel company and towed to the Philippines, a distance of over 14,000 miles.

The dock at Sparrow's Point is the largest in the world, and there are only two other floating drydocks that can be fevorably compared with it. One of these has a lifting capacity of 17,500 tons, and was also built by the Maryland Steel company for the government in 1902 and is now in service at New Orleans. The other is owned by the British government, and was built in England. It has a lifting capacity of 16,500 tons. There are numerous floating docks in the world, ranging from 125 tons up. The first floating drydock ever built was constructed in England in 1860. It was towed to Bermuda by two men-of-war, the Agincourt and the Terrible. These vessels were paddle-wheel boats and were also fitted with sails. The first dock was semi-circular in shape and had the appearance of a huge rocker.

The modern docks are square-shaped, and consist of bottom or pontoons and two side walls. The dock now at Sparrow's Point has the appearance of a huge box with two ends and the top missing. Provision has been made on it for quartering nine officers and twelve men. It is fitted with an electric light service and a distilling apparatus for securing fresh water for drinking and cooking purposes. In addition, it has a complete machine shop on board fitted with all tools and machines for making ordinary repairs to vessels while in the dock.

A SERIOUS MISTAKE.

Don't make the serious mistake of neglecting the signs of a simple indigestion.

You must know that even such a seemingly unimportant matter as wind on your stomach is much more serious than it seems.

It is a gas, the result of the decay of the food you have eaten, which is actually lying inside you, rotting instead of digesting, away.

Now, of course, you can easily appreciate the horrible danger of allowing a mass of festering food to lie in your stomach and taint all the sources of your life and health.

For, after putrefaction (instead of digestion) has turned this food into a liquid (poisonous) form, your glands and other organs of assmilation suck it up and distribute it through your blood current into every part of your body.

You see these glands have no power of distinguishing the bad from the good in a case like that.

They suck up all the stuff they can get, and take it to the liver and kidneys, leaving it to these organs to purify the whole reeking mass.

And these delicate organs then overwork themselves trying to clean out the poison.

So then you have kidney or liver trouble.

And what they fail to get out, goes somewhere else, and poisons that part—may go to your brain and give you a headache, or to your big toe and give you a gout or rheumatism.

And so on.

All because, when you found a slight sign of indigestion, you didn't take the antidote—Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets.

You see, the whole proposition just simmers down to this.

It depends on yourself whether to be sick or well.

One way to be sure, never to have any of the troubles which always follow in the train of an attack of indigestion, is to—Diet.

Eat little. Eat nothing that you know gives you any distress during digestion.

Another way, not quite so strenuous, is to eat what your appetite craves for, and still your stomach's distress with Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets.

Perhaps a combination of both plans would give the best of all round results.

But the main thing to remember is this: Never neglect indigestion, for if you do, you will surely live to regret it.

Another important thing is that no medicine of any kind will do you the same good, for all forms of indigestion, from the simplest to the complicated, that Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets will.

They are not cathartic.

They are scientific.

LEASE NOT POPULAR

People Call City Council of Philadelphia Thieves.

Philadelphia, May 19.—Amid scenes of disorder unprecedented in the annals of Philadelphia's legislative body, the city council last night voted to lease the city's gas works to the United Gas Improvement company for a term of seventy-five years for the total sum of $25,000,000, the money to be paid in various amounts before the end of 1907. Council chambers and committee rooms were crowded with excited citizens protesting against the lease to the Gas Improvement company from 1 p. m., when the proceedings opened in the finance committee room, until 8 p. m., when the select council passed the bill and sent it to the mayor.

The climax was reached when the vote in common council was announced after three hours of debate.

The moment President George McCurdy of the common council announced the vote, a great protest was started in the gallery, which was crowded to the doors. From all over the gallery came hisses and cries of "thieves."

The outburst was somewhat startling to the presiding officer, who made a vain effort to quiet it. Finally he sent for a squad of police to clear the gallery, which started the disorder anew. The crowd continued to hiss and call the councilmen thieves and other names, until the police arrived and started to clear the gallery. As the crowd moved out they sang uncomplimentary songs. In clearing the galleries there were several passages between the police and the crowd.

Throughout the proceedings there was much disorder. In the select council there were so many speakers that on one dared to interrupt the proceedings. There was neither a cheer nor a hiss when the bill passed that body.

The opposition to the passage of the bill resulted in the common council amending the measure, so as to provide for a slight reduction in the price of gas. The amendment as adopted provides that the price of gas from the date of the lease until Jan. 1, 1911, shall be $1 a thousand cubic feet, the same as the preseth price; from 1911 to 1921, 95 cents; from 1921 to 1936, 90 cents; from 1936 to 1956, 85 cents, and therafter until the expiration of the lease, in 1980, 80 cents.

Mayor Weaver has announced himself as opposed to the lease and in favor of a postponement until 1907, when the first ten years of the present thirty years' lease to the United Gas Improvement company will expire. At that time the city has the right to take back the works on payment to the Gas company of the amount of money expended in improvements. Mayor Woodward is expected to veto the bill, and in that event both chambers will probably pass it over his veto.

The vote in the common council was 74 to 8, and in the select council 37 to 6. There is only one Democrat in each body and both voted against the lease. There is talk among citizens who foughtt he lease to take the matter to the courts.

PURCHASED HER SHROUD

Because Clairvoyants Said She Would Die on Sept. 1.

Omaha, May 19.—Believing that she is going to die on Sept. 1, because all of the clairvoyants of Omaha have so predicted, Mrs. M. Bratlein residing in suit 16, Martin flats, at Seventeenth and Webster streets, has, from her meager funds, purchased her shroud and is now saving money with which to buy a casket for her own body.

So thoroughly is she imbued with the idea that she is to pass away on that date, Mrs. Bratlein, fearing she cannot save a sufficient amount from her usual income for the casket she has already selected from a local undertaker, has secured a number of "mottoes" and pictures of the "Madonna" which she is selling from house to house, every penny thus derived being placed in a little bank, which she is jealousy guarding.

One month ago Mrs. Bratlein's husband who is away from home, wrote her a letter, so she says, in which he stated that he had consulted every clairvoyant in Omaha, all of whom told him that she was going to die on the first day of September, 1905, ending the communication with "Prepare to meet your God, for I have forgiven you as did Christ forgive the thieves who were crucified with Him."

For a short period after receiving the letter, Mrs. Bratlein secreted herself in one of the little rooms in her wretched apartment and wept continuously. In her dreams, she declares, the angels would hover over her pleading that she prepare to meet her Maker.

Then came a period of praying, which was kept up almost constantly throughout the day and night. During this religious period, Mrs. Bratlein refused to eat, declaring that she would save the money which should go for her food toward buying her burial raiments. The family's rations were reduced to almost nothing until the woman had secured the desired amount with which to prepare herself for a decent burial.

She purchased her shroud and laid it carefully away in a bureau drawer, keeping it under lock and key. She talks freely with any one about her coming demise, as would a man condemned to die at a certain date upon the scaffold, and she says she is now prepared, all but the coffin, which she will have before the arrival of the fatal day.

SAVED BY DYNAMITE.

Sometimes, a flaming city is saved by dynamiting a space that the fire can't cross. Sometimes, a cough hangs on so long, you feel as if nothing but dynamite would cure it. Z. T. Gray, of Calhoun, Ga., writes: "My wife had a very aggravated cough, which kept her awake nights. Two physicians could not help her; so she took Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, Coughs and Colds, which eased her cough, gave her sleep, and finally cured her." Strictly scientific cure for bronchitis and La Grippe. At all druggists, price 50c and $1.00; guaranteed. Trial bottle free.

ASKS TO BE CHLOROFORMED

Veteran Says that He Has Outlived His Usefulness.

Indianapolis, Ind., May 19.—Van Buren Vance, 79 years of age, a veteran of two wars, sat for thirty minutes in the office of Dr. S. P. Woodward and begged the physician to end his life by chloroforming. He insisted that his days of usefulness were ended, and that there could be no brighter side to the afflictions which had befallen him in the evening of his life.

His body, after death, he offered to sell to the physician for money with which to supply a few present needs and with which to finally bury him.

Dr Woodward remonstrated with him and argued that he should live and cheer up, but the aged man would not listen. Not knowing what to do with his unusual caller, and fearing that he might attempt his own life, Dr. Woodward sent for Bicycle Officers Hull and Shine, who took Vance to the police station.

They stated him for drunkenness, although Vance asserts that he is not a drinking man. He had no money, and it is probable some steps will be taken to communicate with his relatives, or to provide him with a place where he will be cared for.

He carries with him papers showing that he was honorably discharged from an Indiana regiment at the close of the civil war. He was a soldier in the Mexican war. Relatives live in Chicago. For some time, the police say, he has managed to eke out a bare living by the sale of herbs.

WHEAT HAS SLUMP

Demands of Shorts Satisfied and Market Has a Setback.

Decline Is Greatest In September Option—Foreign Markets Higher.

Duluth Board of Trade, May 19.—The frightened shorts were pretty well filled up yesterday and today, the market was weaker and closed materially lower. There was little interest in the May options owing to the very limited trading. July in Duluth fell 1¼c, in Minneapolis 1¾c, in Chicago 2⅜c, in New York 2½c, in St. Louis 1½c and in Kansas City 2½c. The September option which was so strong yesterday was very weak. In Duluth it fell 2⅜c, in Minneapolis 2½c, in Chicago 2½-⅝c, in New York 2½c, and in St. Louis and Kansas City 2c.

Denials of yesterday's crop damage reports were strong and numerous. Reports from the interior of Kansas were to the effect that the outlook is excellent. Oklahoma reported some damage in parts of that state, but not to exceed 25 per cent. It was also pointed out that Oklahoma is not large enough to cut much figure in the establishment of prices. At the same time Kansas City wired that the June report for Kansas would probably show a decline of 25 to 30 points in the condition there.

The damage reports nevertheless had considerable effect on the other side. Liverpool was up ¾@1d. Paris ½@¾c, and Antwerp 1¼c. Berlin was ½c lower and Budapest ¼c. The small shipments from Argentina aided the strength at Liverpool and Antwerp.

Stocks at Duluth are estimated to decrease 300,000 bus this week. Minneapolis shows a decrease of 750,000 bus for the week.

The Modern Miller's report for the week tells of unfavorable weather, saying: "Weather conditions for the week have been unfavorable for the maintenance of a satisfactory crop promise over a large part of the winter wheat belt. Rains were too plentiful and the temperatures too low most of the time to permit of a seasonable growth. In low lands, where there was standing water, the plant lost color. Reports of rust and fly have been more numerous, although no serious damage from this source is indicated as yet. The condition of the crop has improved in Texas where the harvest will begin about June 1. The plant has made favorable progress generally in the section south of the Ohio river. The crop as a whole is in need of clear and warm weather."

Car receipts at Duluth were 8, against 8 last year, and at Minneapolis 153, against 78 last year, making a total for the Northwest of 161, against 86 last year. Chicago received 3, against 5 last year.

Primary receipts of wheat were 343,800 bus, last year, 147,781 bus. Shipments 289,574 bus., last year 185,197 bus. Clearances of wheat and flour aggregated 126,000 bus.

Argentine shipments this week were 1,704,000 bus., against 3,296,000 bus., last week and 2,584,000 bus. last year.

Corn in the Liverpool market closed ⅛@⅝d higher, July corn in the Chicago market closed ¾-⅝c lower. July oats closed ⅝c lower. Primary receipts of corn were 146,650 bus., last year 207,040 bus. Shipments 371,547 bus., last year 292,185 bus. Clearances were 160,000 bus. Argentine shipments of corn this week were 2,186,000 bus., against 1,364,000 bus., last week and 1,066,000 bus. last year.

In the Duluth market trading in wheat was very dull. The July option opened ¾c lower at $1.04¾, sold up to $1.06 at 9:55, fell back to $1.04¾ at 10:50, and advanced again to $1.05¼ at 11:10. It then fell off again, selling at $1.04½ at 1 o'clock, and closing at $1.04¾, a loss for the day of 1¼c. The May option was not traded in at all and the closing bid was $1.05, a loss from yesterday of 1c. September lost 2⅜c of the gain made yesterday, closing at 83¾c. It opened ¾c lower at 84¾c, fell to 84c, rallied to 84½-¼c, and then fell to 83¾c.

Cash wheat was dead but prices continued on the basis of May price for No. 1 northern.

Flax was very dull, all of the interest being in the October option. It advanced 1c to $1.25 and closed at $1.24¾. July closed ¼c higher at $1.45 and other options were unchanged and not traded in. Stocks of flax at Duluth are estimated to decrease 50,000 bus. this week. Argentine shipments of flax this week aggregate 696,000 bus., against 1,136,000 bus. last week, and 1,080,000 bus. last year.

Oats lost ⅜c.

Following are the closing prices:

THE CHICAGO MARKET.

Wheat Weak, as Result of Profit Taking.

Chicago, May 19.—General belief that crop damage reports had been greatly exaggerated caused heavy profit-taking in wheat here today, resulting in a weak market. More liberal receipts in the Northwest also tended to increase the selling pressure. An advance of over 1d at Liverpool failed to check the declining tendency in this market. July opened ⅝@⅞c to ⅞@1c lower at 88½ to 88¾c, and sold off to 87¼@87c. Minneapolis, Duluth and Chicago reported receipts of 164 cars, against 90 cars last week and 91 cars a year ago.

Price continued to decline until July had dropped to 86¾c. The market lacked any material support, shorts being the best buyers. The close was weak with July off 2¾c, at 87@1¼c.

Weakness of wheat had a depressing effect on the corn market. Trading was mainly in the distant deliveries, business in the May option being of extremely small volume. July opened ⅝@1¼c to ⅞@1c lower at 48¾c to 48½c. After selling off to 48c, the price rallied to 48¾c on covering by shorts. Local receipts were 129 cars, with six of contract grade.

The low point on July was reached at 47¾c. The market closed weak, July down ¾@⅞c at 48¼c.

Declines in other grains created an easier tone in the oats market. July opened 1¢ to 1⅛@⅜c lower at 29⅜@⅞c to 30c, and for a time held within the opening range. Local receipts were 159 cars.

Moderate selling by packers caused an easier feeling in the provisions market. Weakness of grain was a bearish factor. A decline of 5c to 10c in the price of live hogs also aided the bears. July pork opened 5c lower at $12.70 and sold off to $12.62½. Lard was off 2½c at $7.35. Ribs were down 2½@5c at $7.25.

Close: Wheat—May, 85¾c; July, 87@1¼c; September, 86¾c. Corn—May, 53⅝c; July, 48¾c; old, 48¾c; September, 47½c; old, 47¾c. Oats—July, 30¾c; May, 29½c; September, 28½c. Pork—May, $12.42½; July, $12.60@12.62½. September, $12.82½@12.85. Lard—May, $7.22½; July, $7.32½@7.35; September, $7.52½; November, $7.30@7.35. Ribs—May, $7.07½; July, $7.25; September, $7.47½@7.50. Rye—May, 77@78c; July, 66c; September, 57@59c. Flax—Cash, northwestern, $1.42; southwestern, $1.26; May, $1.26. Barley—Cash, 42@50c. Timothy—May, $2.50; September, $3.20. Clover—May, $12.60@12.50. GRAIN GOSSIP.

Logan & Bryan, Chicago: Wheat—A better weather map and the trade having had time to think over crop damage reports caused a reversal of opinion as to the amount of damage done through the wheat belt and gave to the market a lower opening and a sagging tendency. While some little rally saved the market from closing right at the bottom, the market closed weak with sentiment mixed as to the immediate course of prices. Trade was on a much smaller scale and the excited buyers in yesterday's markets were for the time this morning equally anxious to get rid of wheat bought on yesterday's bulge. The cash situation is healthy and stocks in all markets are decidedly smaller. The weather from this time on will be the dominating factor and will continue to shape price making. In view of the cash situation which we consider healthy, we feel would still buy wheat on the setbacks. As yet we see nothing very bearish in the wheat market.

Corn—Trade in this market was again extremely limited, with corn for sale on every show of strength, presumably by the principal bull holders. The cash situation owing to the advance in the speculative market has petered out, and while receipts are small, they are ample for present requirements. Between now and the closing of the month some further demonstration is likely to be made against the outstanding short interest in May, in which the future option will likely participate. In the event of sharp advances we feel that the deferred futures should be sold.

* * *

Ben. Bryan, Chicago: Wheat cables higher on the strength in this market yesterday caused by Oklahoma, Indian Territory and Texas. As said before think it a little early to talk calamity in those sections. It is true there has been some damage as we have been wiring daily for a wek. Would only buy wheat on the soft spots. Think some good scalps can be made on short side on all bulges.

* * *

McQuiston, Chicago: After all the shorts came in yesterday there was one left to buy wheat and the wheat dumped this morning was on stop orders for outside longs. Take very little stock in crop damage reports.

* * *

F. P. Frazier, Chicago: We have had a good break in wheat and I believe both July and September are a purchase.

* * *

Chicago Inter-Ocean: The first annual crop scare in winter wheat was given the trade yesterday. There have been indications of it coming for several days, but the trade thought that predictions of better weather made by the weather bureau would bring about a change. A later forecast of showers over the greater part of the winter and spring wheat sections caught the trade short.

* * *

Omaha wires: "Burlington road weekly crop report says but one complaint of hessian fly in wheat. Both wheat and oats looking well. Corn planting delayed some by wet weather."

* * *

R. W. McKinnon, Chicago: Southwest people have taken a complete change about. Reports from interior Kansas points are excellent, Oklahoma is still complaining, but conservative people say the damage will not exceed 25 per cent with normal crops elsewhere. The Oklahoma yield so far as establishing prices goes is not much of a factor.

DECLINE IN STOCKS

Closing Was Weak and Practically at the Bottom.

Entire List Under Pressure Whenever Strength Was Shown.

New York, May 19.—The American department in the London stock market was violently unsettled this morning and opening prices here were lower in sympathy. Declines ran to 1¼ and 1½ in St. Paul, United States Steel preferred, Copper, Locomotive and Lead, and to a point in Reading, Northern Pacific, New York Central, Rock Island, Illinois central, Sugar, United States Steel, American Car and Colorado Fuel. There were running sales of 17,000 shares of United States Steel at 27½ and 27 compared with 28 last night.

After the initial declines had proceeded to a level attractive for the short interest, stocks began to be picked up and there was a pretty general recovery. Union Pacific, Southern Pacific, Reading, Louisville & Nashville, Atchison, Illinois Central, Brooklyn Transit, Sugar, Consolidated Gas, Locomotive and Smelting rebounded to fractionally above yesterday's closing prices, and Tennessee Coal and Metropolitan Street Railway to 1¼. Before this result had been attained a number of important additions to the opening losses were made, ranging from 1 to 1½. Renewed offerings on a large scale undermined the market again and there was a general drop in which some of the Western stocks and specialties sold lower than at the start, notably Union Pacific, Atchison, New York Central, Pennsylvania and the United States Steel stocks.

The market met support again, but losses were only partly made up as a rule before the demand died out and left the trading almost stagnant. Northern Pacific rose 2 over last night and lost it again. Fort Worth & Denver City Stamped gained 5¼. Consolidated Gas 1, and Metropolitan Securities 2⅜. There were losses in New York, Chicago and St. Louis of 3½. General Electric 3, Westinghouse Electric 5 and Snuff 9½. Bonds were heavy at noon.

Some sympathetic effect resulted from a further decline to the low level by the United States stocks. Evidences, however, of a demand for Union Pacific and St. Paul and concession brought those stocks to about the previous close and the Northwestern and Kansas City Southern preferred ran off 3 points, Pittsburg, Cincinnati, Chicago & St. Louis 4, and Westinghouse Electric 7 points. There was some further selling, which carried a number of leading stocks back to the lowest, but support was again forthcoming. There were losses for Chicago, St. Paul, Minneapolis & Omaha of 5½. Great Northern preferred 3, Colorado Southern first preferred 2 and Westinghouse Electric 11. Hocking Valley and People's Gas rose a point. Pressure was renewed against the United States stocks and Copper and they were forced to the low point of the day. Closing was weak.

Quotations furnished by Edwards-Wood Co., room A, Torrey building.

STOCK GOSSIP.

Logan & Bryan to Paine, Webber & Co.: The market closed weak and practically at the bottom. Pressure was not confined to the Steel stocks today, but the entire list being under pressure on every little show of strength. Fears of a bad bank statement tomorrow, and bear raiding here and there through the list seems to have unsettled confidence in the entire market. For a time after the early break the market seemed as if it would do better and close higher, but late in the session another wave of selling swept over the market closing the list very weak. Sentiment has received a very rude shock from which the market will not recover immediately. It looks as if we would have a lower range at the opening tomorrow.

* * *

Gates to Paine, Webber & Co.: Lawson is out with his usual announcement in which he repeats his previous statements regarding deposits in national banks and the amount of money in the country and again predicts a financial cyclone. He proposes to make a call on the people to withdraw their deposits from the banks on a specific day and promises to give the signal which will crush the system when he makes his address in Kansas City.

THE COTTON MARKET.

New York, May 19.—The cotton market opened easy at a decline of 2@5 points. Under lower cables and good weather in the belt, which promoted some selling for short account as well as a continuance of the liquidation noted yesterday. On the decline some of yesterday's short sellers seemed to be taking profits, apprehending possibly a renewal of bull manipulation on any further decline, and the market during the early hours was quiet and barely steady within 2 or 3 points of the opening figures.

Cotton spot closed quiet; 10 points lower; mid ups, 8.20; mid gulf, 8.45. Sales, 1,900 bales. Futures closed steady: May, 7.70; June, 7.61; July, 7.69; August, 7.69; September, 7.73; October, 7.79; November, 7.80; December, 7.84; January, 7.88; February, 7.90; March, 7.96.

HURONIC DUE

To Come Monday on First Trip of This Season.

Boat Will Make Weekly Trips to Duluth From Then on.

The steamer Huronic of the Northwestern Transportation company of Sarnia, Ont., will arrive in Duluth next Monday noon on her first trip of the season. She will leave here the same evening at 8 o'clock and from then on until the close of the season will make regular trips to Duluth, arriving each Monday noon and leaving each Monday evening.

This steamer has sailed here for several years, ever since she came out of the shipyards at Collingwood, Ont., and has had a great deal of traffic from this point and Port Arthur. She is rated as one of the finest of the first-class type of passenger steamers on the lakes and is fitted out palatially. Capt. Robert Foot is her master again this year.

JUNIATA A FINE BOAT.

Chicago, May 19.—The new passenger steamer Juniata of the Anchor line left last night for Milwaukee after being fitted out for service between Buffalo and Duluth. Local vesselmen who visited the new steamer pronounced her to be the highest development of naval construction yet produced in the lake shipyards for the passenger traffic. After a thorough inspection yesterday afternoon, it was said the Juniata is a marked advance in shiplike qualities over the Tionesta, the first of the new modern fleet of the Anchor line. Certainly no finer ship has ever appeared in the Chicago river than the Juniata as she steamed past the bridges down the river last night. At Milwaukee the first down-bound cargo will be taken aboard, and the Juniata will then go to Buffalo to take her regular service to Lake Superior.

LIGHTERING THE HARVARD.

Sault Ste. Marie, May 19.—(Special to The Herald.)—About 1,000 tons of the iron ore cargo of the steamer Harvard, badly damaged by collision with the Palmer a few days ago, is being put on the steamer Coralia, so that temporary repairs can be made to the injured steamer to allow her to proceed to dry dock.

GRAIN IS SCARCE.

Chicago, May 19.—(Special to The Herald.)—Grain shows no signs of coming into market faster than it has for the past three weeks, farmers being generally occupied throughout the West in planting the new crop. Two small boats had to be taken off the market today and sent for ore, as no grain could be found for them. Line steamers are again experiencing considerable trouble in getting enough grain to fill out cargoes.

CATHERINE THE GREAT.

A recent writer says of Catherine the Great, empress of Russia, from the year 1762 to 1796:

"She rose at 6 and lit her own fire. Her table was ideally simple: from the reproach of overeating and overdrinking she was free. Though she could not sing a note she and Prince Dashkoff, who could sing no better, occasionally performed in a concert. A sudden burst of the most exalted and ridiculously discordant tones was the consequence, one seconding the other with scientific shrugs and all the solemn self-complacent airs and grimaces of musicians. From this, perhaps, she passed to a cat concert, and imitated the purring of a cat in the most droll and ludicrous manner, always taking care to add appropriate half-comic, half sentimental words; or else spitting like a cat in a passion, with her back up, she sudenly boxed the first person in her way, making up her hand into a paw and mewing outrageously."

TWO BUDDING FINANCIERS.

Two budding Rockefellers have been unearthed by the police in the north of Europe, says the Chicago Chronicle. These boys, aged 12 and 14, have in a single day made 9,000 per cent on the with this sum to a lavatory, No. 1 removed his nether garments. These were pawned by No. 2 for a florin (50 cents). With the capital thus capital of a penny. Obtaining entrance brought into the business he bought a watch on the installment system. A loan of 10 shillings ($2.50) was now floated with the aid of the watch at a second pawnbroker's. He returned to pawnbroker A and took "out" the trousers, which were then resumed by Financier One—and the two divided between them the 8 shillings ($2) minus working expenses, friction on boot leathers, etc. Allowing for Sundays and short holidays for the directors of the Riviera the company's annual profits at this rate would be nearly $3,000,000 per cent.

LITTLE DETECTIVES WITH "EYES OF ARGUS."

It has been said that "A Herald Want Advertisement has a thousand eyes." Sherlock Holmes had but two, although they were uncommonly good ones.

However, Holmes could not have found for you, over night, the one man in the city who most wanted to buy your house, or your store, or your horse, or your yacht, or your library, or your securities, or your automobile, or your old desk, or your piano; or the one man in the city who would be the best partner for you, or the best clerk, or coachman, or handy man; or the one woman in the city who would be the most valuable stenographer for you, or cook, or housekeeper.

But the thousand-eyed little Herald Want Advertisement finds these people for you—and finds them quickly, presenting no bill for "extras" or "disbursements," as Sherlock Holmes would have been apt to do.

When You Want Anything, Is It Not Better to Set a Thousand Eyes Looking For It Than Only Two?

PEACE TERMS RATIFIED BY NATIONAL PRESIDENT SHEA OF THE TEAMSTERS

Endorsement of Joint Council Only Remaining Formality.

Expected That Teamsters Will Be at Work Monday.

Express Companies Refuse to Take Back Their Drivers.

Chicago, May 20.—Peace terms tentatively accepted by the teamsters' joint council were ratified by International President C. P. Shea today. The acceptance has still to be fully endorsed at a meeting of the joint council tonight. Unless well laid plans for a termination of the struggle are overthrown by radicals in the ratification meeting, the teamsters, it is expected, will be back at work on Monday—as many of them as can find employment. That the union committee, A. J. Reed, secretary of the Furniture Drivers' union, President C. P. Shea and President W. J. Gibbons of the teamsters' joint council, did not represent all of the elements within the teamsters' organization was a report current today about labor headquarters.

According to Attorney Mayer of the Employers' association, a union committee today accepted peace terms proferred by the Employers' association. This announcement was made by Attorney Mayer during a conference of the employers' executive committee. Formal announcement that the strike is off, he said, was expected in a short time.

Confirmation of Mr. Mayer's statement was obtained from a labor official who, however, declined to be quoted by name. President Shea was a visitor today at Attorney Mayer's office.

Little time was consumed by the strike committee in Attorney Mayer's office in announcing their acceptance of the employers' terms in general. A long debate ensued, however, over the attitude assumed by the seven general agents of the express companies.

A transcript of the several propositions submitted last night to the teamsters' joint council includes the following points:

The strikers are to be reinstated wherever vacancies occur, except that employers will not consider applications of men convicted of violence or violation of the law. The settlement does not include the express companies; union men must deliver to the express companies when ordered to do so; the Employers' company to continue having non-union men—the open shop to prevail; working conditions, wages and hours to remain the same as before the strike.

Chicago, May 20.—Formal conclusion of peace in the teamsters' strike waited today upon the efforts of President C. P. Shea and an associate, A. J. Reed, to secure terms of some sort for the former employes of the railway express companies, all other matters in controversy having apparently been settled. The express drivers had been refused reinstatement even in a single instance. At the solicitation of the union leaders the express companies' representatives here had agreed, however, to communicate with the offices in New York as to possible concessions. This phase of the situation threatened today to prove a rock upon which possibly the peace plans might be wrecked. Anticipating a refusal by the New York officials of the express companies to modify the stand taken by Chicago representatives it was conjectured that the labor leaders might endeavor to center a fight upon the express companies, lifting the ban from all other concerns. No definite steps in that direction were taken, however, pending a reply from the higher officials of the express companies.

Today committees from the various local unions of teamsters visited the employers to make the best terms possible regarding reinstatement. A committee of coal teamsters called on the officers of the Peabody Coal company, another committee visited the officials of the Commercial exchange, the organization of wholesale grocers; still another committee made a call upon the express managers. The various department store managers received committees from the delivery wagon drivers.

Notwithstanding that the strike seemingly was at an end, ten drivers of flour wagons quit today. They were teamsters for John W. Eckhart & Co., and they went out because they were ordered to deliver goods to boycotted stores.

President Gompers of the American Federation of Labor returned today. His arrival was in accordance with his announcement that he would come back to aid if possible in the settlement of the strike.

Policeman Patrick E. Blackwell died today at the Mercy hospital. His death is the tenth ascribed to the teamsters' strike. Blackwell was injured while guarding a Wells-Fargo express wagon.

SMALL PERCENTAGE

Of Strikers Will Get Their Places Back.

Chicago, May 20.—Opinions vary as to the number of strikers who will be reinstated, now that the teamsters' strike practically is ended, but the general belief is that 35 per cent is a conservative figure. This estimate comes largely from union sources. The employers, maintaining that the employing team company was a permanent institution, placed the percentage of strikers who would get their old places back at even a lower figure. The Employers' Teaming company will employ no union men at all. The number of men on strike, including 500 helpers, at the end is 3,772. From the most trustworthy estimates 1,300 of these will get their places back in the course of time, leaving 2,472 who will have to seek other work.

THE MONOPOLY OF THE BOOKMAKERS BROKEN

Important Step Taken By New York Race Track Owners.

New York, May 20.—One of the most important steps since racing in New York state has been conducted under the present law, has just been taken. Every racing association in the state has announced the absolute severance of all business relations, directly and indirectly with the Metropolitan Turf association and all other organizations or individual bookmakers.

Hereafter, while there may be layers of odds and a betting ring, as of old, it will be absolutely without restriction, free of admission to any person purchasing one ticket, known to the track police as personally reputable and financially liable for the amount of their wagers.

The innovation will begin today at Belmont park, $5,000 received yesterday from the bookmakers for extra tickets bought according to the prevailing custom, having been returned to them.

While there has been growing friction between certain elements and the bookmakers for some time, which recently came to a head when an opening wedge was driven by breaking the monopoly, the bookmaking fraternity held in the "big ring" at the Eastern tracks by the Metropolitan Turf association, reasons for the latest move are said to be two fold. One is stated to be that the owners of the race tracks of New York state have made up their minds to clear themselves of any alliance with bookmakers associations, to the end that they may not be attacked by any crusade against racing or in any suits instituted by any influence opposed to betting at the tracks.

Whether the condition has been hastened by the fear of a determined fight to be made by pool room interests cannot be learned. The second reason assigned is that the racing association had declared themselves against further attempts to dictate by outside organizations in the conduct of affairs about the tracks.

Just what will be the outcome, is a little uncertain. One thing is certain—the racing associations having voluntarily shut off dealings with the organized bookmakers, have cast aside a revenue for 200 racing days in the season, amounting to nearly $1,200,000. Various schemes are being broached to make up for the lost revenue, but it is generally expected that admission fes will either be raised to $3 for men and $1.50 for women or that race-goers will have to pay for the privilege of betting by purchasing at extra cost a ticket to the betting rings.

By refusing to accept as heretofore, the voluntary contribution of $57 daily from each bookmaker, the Jockey club will be freed from legal entanglements, which are said to have been carefully prepared by an old time pool room proprietor, who had planned to begin proceedings against the racing officials on the opening day at the Gravesend track, May 25. The courts have held that it is not a violation of law when one man makes a bet with another. The bookmakers have been allowed to operate under this ruling.

In England, the bookmakers operate in a portion of the track set aside for them. This inclosure the race-going public may enter on payment of an extra fee and it is possible such a plan will be in future developed on the New York tracks.

HAY STARTS FOR HOME NEXT WEEK

Bad Nauheim, Germany, May 20.—Secretary Hay will have finished the prescribed cure next week and leaves May 27 for Paris. Then he will go to London and will sail for New York on the White Star liner Baltic, leaving Liverpool June 7. The secretary intended to go to Berlin, but Prof. Groedel advised against the tiring railroad journey. While in Paris Mr. Hay will call on Foreign Minister Delcasse and probably will be received by President Loubet. These calls will be socially for no international business will be discussed seriously. Secretary Hay has sent word to the American embassy in Paris that he regrets that he will be unable to accept invitations while there. That will also be his course in London.

Mr. Hay will go directly to Washington from New York and remain at the state department until the president leaves for the summer. Then he will go to New Hampshire.

Consul General Mason has returned to Berlin from Bad Nauheim. Mrs. Hay will remain in Paris until Mr. Hay joins her there.

GREAT CELEBRATION OF ROYAL WEDDING

Marriage of Crown Prince and Duchess to Be Notable Affair.

Festivities Will Last Four Days From Arrival of Bride.

Berlin, May 20.—The entertainments in celebration of the wedding of Crown Prince Frederick William and the Duchess Cecilia of Mecklenburg-Schwerin will last four days beginning Saturday, June 3, the day the bride and her family arrive here from Schwerin and take up their residence at the Brandenburg palace. The duchess will be received at the Brandenburg gate by the chief burgomaster and the city fathers and by 100 young women of known families who have been drawn by lot from several hundred candidates and who will present flowers to their future empress. The girls will be dressed alike in Gretchen costumes with their hair in braids down the back. Behind the crown prince and his bride will ride of right, the butchers, postmen and deputations from other trades and occupations, according to immemorial custom. Those chosen to form the cavalcade are now in training at the garrison riding school.

The emperor has commanded that this entrance into the city which will be the only public celebration shall be as simple as possible. The three quarters of a mile of Unter Den Linden from the Brandenburg gate to the palace where the emperor and empress will await the Duchess Cecilia, will be hung with garlands of roses. Artificial ones naturally will be the only kind used as they will have to stand four days exposure. Eighty thousand garlands have been ordered. Seats and windows along Unter Den Linden have been selling for from $7.50 for the former, to $125 for the latter. There are so many princes each of whom must be treated ceremoniously that the imperial courtmarshal's office is perplexed over questions of princely precedence. The ambassadors probably will be invited to only one or two functions so as to avoid placing them below members of small German houses.

The wedding gifts will be presented in the palace on Monday morning, June 5, when deputations with congratulations will be received.

CANAL EMPLOYES IN DANGER FROM FEVER

The Dreaded Yellow Scourge at Colon Causes Alarm.

New York, May 20.—Sanitation and preservation of health is the one great problem which confronts the American authorities in the Panama canal zone, according to a statement given out by John Barrett, the American minister to Panama, who arrived here today on the steamer Avance from Colon. He considers as alarming the report of five cases of yellow fever at Colon—"Alarming," he says, "because up to the time these cases were reported no yellow fever had appeared there, and it was hoped that the situation was in hand."

"I do not believe in deceiving the public in these matters" said Mr. Barrett. "It is far better that the truth should be known. Existing conditions on the isthmus present many difficulties, and while it is not a case for pessimism, it is not the engineering, it is not the administration problem that is confronting us. These are of secondary consideration to the problem of health and sanitation. Here we have engineering problems that have been solved elsewhere and can be met, but the sanitation problem is new and presents many difficulties. The climate is against us and is ever present. Under the efficient care of Dr. Georgas, the eminent yellow fever expert, everything possible is being done to offset the increase of mortality.

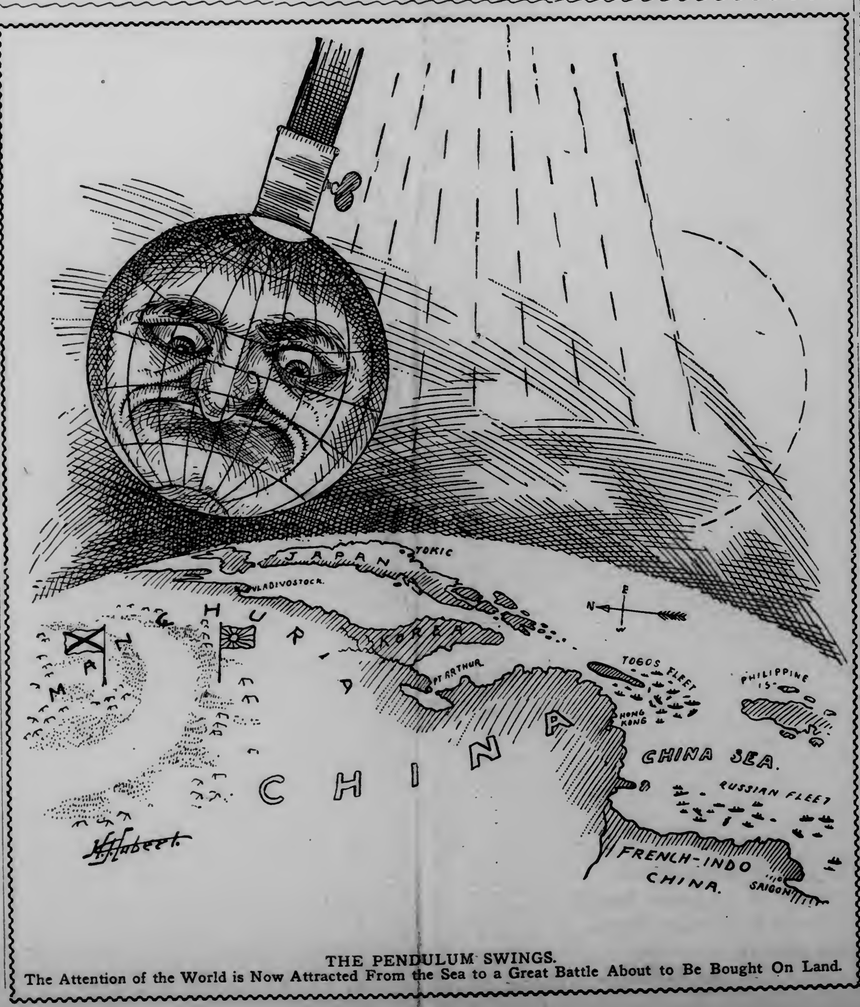
An alarming condition is the report of five cases of yellow fever in Colon. It is alarming because up to the time these were reported no yellow fever had appeared and it was hoped that the situation was in hand. Considering the enormous number of canal employes on the isthmus, a very small per centage of illness prevails, but you know how these things are. If one half were sick with malaria nothing would be thought of it, but a case or two of yellow fever appears all the employes want to quit and get away. I believe these sanitary and health problems will be met successfully but they far overshadow all others.

"I am going to Bogota and hope to accomplish something to establish most cordial relations between Colombia and our country. Panama is now ripe for a full re-establishment of cordial relations to Colombia and all feeling of enmity caused by the revolution has disappeared. My personal relations have been most cordial at Panama and there is no truth in the report of friction. On my departure I received a cordial letter from the foreign minister. At Bogota I hold pleasant relations with Gen. Reyes, the president."

Herman Dietrich, United States consul general at Guayaquil, and about twenty canal employes, also arrived on the Advance.

DANISH WOMAN TO JOIN SHIP CAPTAINS SOCIETY.

Chicago, May 20.—For the first time in the history of the famous Danish Ship Captains' society, a woman will be received this afternoon as an honorary member. Miss Laura C. Peterson of Chicago, the Danish emigrant who saved the lives of thirty passengers from the wrecked steamer Norge a year ago, will be honored by the organization. The action will be taken at a dinner given for Miss Peterson at the residence of the Danish consul. She will be given a gold medal and a membership in the society.



THE PENDULUM SWINGS.

The Attention of the World is Now Attracted From the Sea to a Great Battle About to Be Bought On Land.

LAND BATTLE IMMINENT; JAPS BEGIN TO ADVANCE

Oyama Deploying Heavy Forces Against the Russian Left.

Which Wing Will Deliver Main Blow Is In Doubt.

Believed Gen. Linevitch Intends to Accept Decisive Battle.

Gunshu Pass, ten miles north of Tie Pass, Manchuria, May 20.—A general engagement is imminent. Field Marshal Oyama is deploying heavy forces against Gen. Linevitch's left, and is contracting his troops along the center, but his base is opposite the Russian right. It is not clear which wing is making a demonstration and which will deliver the main blow. It is evident from Linevitch's preparations that he intends to accept a decisive battle.

New York, May 20.—All news from Manchuria indicates the imminence of a battle, according to the views of the Times' Tokio correspondent. The Russians occupy a line forty-two miles in length and strongly entrenched. The Japanese are advancing in three columns. The Russian main position is at Haitung, where Gen. Matorioff commands.

Tokio, May 20, 7 p. m.—It was announced this evening from the headquarters of the Japanese armies in the field that three Russian columns of mixed forces, advanced southward, May 18, to the vicinity of the railroad. The Japanese engaged them and drove the Russians northward. Simultaneously 500 Russian cavalry attacked a Japanese field hopsital at Kangpin, on the right bank of the Liao river. Japanese artillery and infantry dispersed the attacking cavalrymen, inflicting heavy less upon them.

St. Petersburg, May 20.—The war office confirms the report from Gunshu Pass that Field Marshal Oyama is on the eve of taking the general offensive, and no doubt is entertained here that Gen. Linevitch will accept battle in his present position. The general staff believes Oyama's advance was precipitated by the doubt regarding the issue of the coming naval battle between Admirals Rojestvensky and Togo. With an unbeaten army in front of him Oyama's position might be critical if his communications with Japan were interrupted even temporarily.

DE JONQUIRES SAILS NORTH.

Saigon, Cochin China, May 20.—Admiral De Jonquires, the French naval commander, sailed from here today on the cruiser Guichen. His destination was not announced, but it is understood that he is going to make another inspection of the coast to see if French neutrality is being infringed.

SUPPLIES FOR ROJESTVENSKY.

Hongkong, May 20.—According to information received here today, the 150 deep laden junks (presumably loaded with provisions for the Russian fleet), which were sighted May 16, twenty miles off Capt St. John, by a correspondent who proceeded from here to Kwanchau bay, north of the island of Hainan, have left the vicinity of Cape St. John and it is added are probably seeking to effect a junction with Admiral Rojestvensky's fleet.

RIVERS VERY HIGH.

Immense Volume of Water Pouring Into the Missouri.

Cheyenne, Wyo., May 20.—The streams of Wyoming are carrying a larger volume of water down into the Missouri through the Platte, Laramie, Big Horn, Shoshone and other waterways than at any time in the recollection of the oldest inhabitant. Every stream is out of its banks, while dry creeks and canyons that have not contained running water for many years are torrents.

Many bridges have been carried out and most of the fords are unsafe. Some stock has been lost and hay meadows have been damaged. Two lives have been lost on account of the high water. Rain falls almost every day on the watersheds, and there appears to be no immediate prospect of a material decrease in the flow of the streams.

ORDER FOR WAR VESSELS.

Vienna, May 20.—The minister of marine has placed a preliminary order for six torpedo boat destroyers and ten torpedo boats with a firm of shipbuilders at Fiume. They will be the first of such vessels to be built in Hungary and will cost $3,060,000.

MASSACRE THREATENED.

Vienna, May 20.—It is reported from Belgrade, Servia, that 2,000 Albanians have surrounded the town of Gulliane, Albania, and are threatening to massacre the Servian population of that place.

GROSS IRREGULARITIES IN TAXES

San Francisco, May 20.—The Chronicle today says a scheme which has been in operation in the tax collector's office for many months, has just been uncovered by which nearly $1,500,000 worth of property has been secured for little more than $100,000. The victims are the city's taxpayers, who are charged, in some instances it appears wrongly, with delinquency. The profits have gone to a ring of tax scalpers who were assisted in every possible way by the alleged defaulting Tax Collector Smith and his subordinates in office. Records have been manipulated to keep the truth from coming out and many poor people have had the title to their homes placed in jeopardy, without so much as knowing that a shortage is charged against them.

A thorough investigation will be made at once into the matter, to develop, if possible, the extent to which these irregularities have been carried on.

BACK FROM RANGE

R. D. Haven Confident That Census Will Make a Fine Showing.

Some Big Districts—State Will Not Pay Interpreters.

R. D. Haven, supervisor of census in St. Louis county, returned this morning from the Mesaba range, where he went Wednesday in connection with his official duties. The organization of the range into districts has practically been completed, and the names of quite a number of qualified would-be enumerators, who, however, have not yet received their official appointments, have been placed on file. Mr. Haven will leave for the Vermilion range next Tuesday, and probably his work there will take no more than two days.

"I believe the ranges will make a very good showing when the reports of the enumerators have gotten far enough along to show the population of their respective districts," said the supervisor today. "The people in the range towns are manifesting a good deal of interest in the work, and they will endeavor to see that as nearly as possible the exact number of people in the several townships is obtained. They have even gone so far in two or three instances as to draw up petitions largely signed, recommending the appointment of some particular man who can be trusted, to the position of enumerator. We will have a very select lot of men up there, and I believe they can all be depended upon.

"A number of interpreters are going to be necessary in the mining regions. In some cases one enumerator will have to engage the services of two or three interpreters, if he cannot himself speak two or three languages besides his own. The settlements are not of one nationality, as might be supposed, but are mixed, and one interpreter will be unable to handle any single one of them, with very few exceptions, unless he has the assistance of a brother interpreter who can talk to one nationality while he looks after the other. There are Italians, Austrians, Scandinavians, etc., all in together. As the state makes no provision for paying the wages of interpreters, this expense will have to come out of the pockets of the enumerators.

"Where five years ago the census gave Virginia 2,900 people, it is expected the population will be shown to be a good deal more than this this year. There are 1,100 school children alone. Hibbing has more than doubled her population in the last five years, and the same may be said of other cities and districts on the range. Stuntz township, which includes Hibbing and Chisholm, has, it is estimated, a population of 15,000 people.

"The largest district in the county to be handled by one enumerator will be a sparsely settled region on the range. It measures about thirty-eight miles wide by fifty miles long. The settlers' cabins are few and far between, but we will employ the services of a man we have in view who knows every man in the big stretch of country, and who is thoroughly acquainted with the roads and other conditions, so that he will meet with no great difficulty in getting over the territory, and will not be likely to miss any families."

HAS FIRE LOSS

Wm. Johnson Loses Barn and Contents Worth Two Thousand.

Firemen Have Hard Time Getting Hose to the Scene.

William Johnson, who keeps a livery stable at the corner of Fifty-fourth avenue west and Ramsey street, had a fire loss this morning of about $2,000, not covered by insurance. The property burned was a barn on Sixty-first avenue west between Huntington and Herman streets and most of the goods it contained.

The contents consisted of cutters, sleighs and other winter stuff, as well as furniture and street grading equipment this being between seasons and both of these kinds of material being stored for the present.

The fire was beyond the hydrant line and the firemen had to run a long line of hose up the hill to it. To get the hose to the fire after connecting up, the firemen had to cut barbwires and, all told had a hard experience getting there. They managed to save a house on the same property after its roof had been considerably burned, but could not get water up in time to do anything with the barn. The barn and contents were not insured but the house was.

HE OBJECTS TO CALLERS

St. Paul, May 20.—(Special to The Herald.)—Wm. Williams, who was convicted and sentenced to be hanged for the murder of John Keller, last night, sent word to Sheriff Meisen that he did not want to be visited by callers or interviewers.

"I have been before the public long enough and now that I am sentenced to die it is my wish that I be not disturbed. As for the jury, it did what it thought was right, and I have no fault to find. I prefer to hang rather than spend the rest of my days behind prison bars. I am thankful to all those who took a friendly interest in me."

When Williams was brought back to the jail last evening after being sentenced, he was divested of all his clothing and given an entirely new suit. This was done to prevent the concealment of anything in the way of weapons or poisons, which might be made use of in cheating the gallows.

The condemned man was removed to another cell upon the same floor, and the death watch at once established. Williams does not appear to be worrying and while displaying nothing like nonchalance, takes his fate manfully.

PLANS BIG FARM

G. G. Hartley Will Start Stock Farm at Island Station.

Will Comprise Over 2,000 Acres With Many Buildings.

G. G. Hartley of this city will, inside the next few months, establish near Island station, on the Great Northern road, between Cloquet and Swan river, what is likely to be one of the largest and most complete stock farms in the Northwest.

The farm will be known as "Island Farm," and will comprise some 2,000 or 3,000 acres of land which Mr. Hartley owns in that vicinity, and all the facilities i nthe way of buildings that are usually found on a model stock farm. Judging from the plans and specifications of the buildings, which were filed this afternoon at the Builders' exchange in this city, the project will represent a very large investment.

The bulletin at the exchange calls for all bids to be submitted by next Wednesday, the inference being that Mr. Hartley intends that work on the construction of the buildings shall begin right away.

With the plans and specifications, which were prepared by Architect J. J. Wangenstein of Duluth is a map showing the immense area of the proposed farm.

The project is expected to be a very important factor in the development of the vast district between Cloquet and Swan river, which from the excellence of location and nature of its soil is said to be splendidly fitted for farming and stock raising. The land is well watered and has plenty of the wild grass which in this section of the state is regarded as so valuable an adjunct for grazing purposes.

All the farm buildings will be substantial frame structures. The superintendent's house will be a two-story frame structure with a cellar, 24 by 28 feet in dimensions. The barn will be 42x200 feet with immense storage capacity in the second story for hay. The machinery and blacksmith shop will be 24x56 feet in dimensions. The hog house will have dimensions 28 by 50 feet. The poultry house will be 16 by 60 feet in size.

Judging from the size and the completeness of the details called for in the construction of the hog house and the poultry house it is to be inferred that aside from the cattle business Mr. Hartley will give considerable attention to the raising of pigs and chickens.

FRATERNAL INSURANCE IS ON THE INCREASE.

St. Paul, May 20.—(Special to The Herald.)—Fraternal insurance societies doing business in Minnesota made heavy advances during the year ending Dec. 31, 1904, according to a preliminary report just issued by Insurance Commissioner O'Brien. Of fifty-six societies furnishing the department with statements, a total income of $1,977,774.59 is shown. This was in premiums received. The losses amounted to $1,516,764.24. In all 25,104 certificates were issued. The number of certificates in force was 163,948. These certificates represented $233,686,569. Eleven exclusively Minnesota fraternal insurance societies reported a total income of $222,556.57 for the year. They paid to the members the sum of $163,441.75.

WANT MORE CHAPLAINS

Winona Lake, May 20.—The Nassau, N. Y. Presbyterian church has presented to the general assembly of the Presbyterian church overtures asking the substitution of a brief statement of faith for the Westminister confession. The overture has been sent to committee.

The stated clerk announced the vote by the Presbyterian general assembly on the proposed consolidation with the Cumberland Presbyterians. One hundred and ninety-four presbyteries voted yea and thirty-nine voted no. A special committee was appointed to canvass the vote and report a plan of consolidation. Dr. H. C. Kirkwood of Colorado presented the report of the committee on ministerial relief.

Assistance was given to 926 persons by the board of relief during the past year. Of these more than half were women, widows of ministers who had died in the service of the church. The average amount paid to those on the cash pay roll was $188; to those on the honorably retired roll, restricted to ministers over seventy years of age, who had been thirty years in the service, $290; and to widows in the Merriam Home at Newton, N. J., $150. The maximum appropriation paid was $300. Toward the support of these dependents 4,351 churches contributed. From 3,402 churches no contributions were received. The whole amount collected distributed by the board during the year was $325,140. The cost of administration, the report says, was four and one-half per cent of the gross receipts.

The assembly adopted the recommendations of the relief committee. In its report on Christian work among seamen the committee asked the assembly to increase the committee membership and to extend the scope of their work to the chaplains of the United States navy and ask the president of the United States for larger representation of the Presbyterian church in the appointment of naval chaplains, the church now being represented in the navy by one man. Speaking briefly to this report Justice John M. Harlan strongly urged that the Presbyterians be given greater representation in this direction.

Moderator Moffat today announced the new committee on evangelistic work. An evangelistic campaign is planned for every city of the United States.

The Cumberland Presbyterians was made a special order of business for Monday morning.

THE ASSETS OF BIGELOW

Milwaukee, May 20.—The Journal today prints a long list of assets of ex-Banker Frank G. Bigelow, not before made public which goes to show that he was interested in a large number of enterprises, including stock in many mining properties and other concerns considered valueless.

The papers from which the list is made up were contained in a large tin box and with the assistance of Mr. Bigelow, the Wisconsin Trust company, receiver for the estate, has been able to arrive at some conclusion regarding the value attached to these various interests.

The list is divided into three classes; "No good," "Doubtful," and "Of value." In the first named class Mr. Bigelow has papers showing that he had stock in about twenty different mining or oil companies and ten other business concerns.

In the "doubtful" list are securities in eight mining companies and four other business concerns, together with several notes.

The list marked "of value" shows that the bank superintendent had stocks or notes in connection with about fifty different companies or individuals ranging in amounts from $300 up to $100,000, the large amounts being contained in the schedule filed in the court and already published.

HIS STORIES CONTRADICT

Chicago, May 20.—"I have not heard a more pleasant piece of news for sixty days. I congratulate the public and the whole community on the settlement of the strike." This was the statement with which Mayor Dunne greeted the information that Mr. Mayer, attorney for the Employers' association, had declared that the strike is ended and that the teamsters had accepted the terms of the employers. The mayor received no official notification of the settlement, but accepted the statement of Mr. Mayer as an indication that the entire dispute had been adjusted.

This afternoon Attorney Mayer of the Employers' association made this statement:

"Mr. Shea and Mr. Reed, who are now with me, join with me in saying that the question as to whether the strike will be continued or be called off has not been determined, but depends upon the conclusion which Messrs. Shea and Reed arrive at when they take up the matter with the teamsters joint council this evening. In the meanwhile, none of us will, or can, predict what the outcome will be. This statement is authentic and any reports to the contrary are unfounded and mere guess work."

An exodus of strike-breakers began this afternoon. More than 300 men who had been imported to take the places of union teamsters started in a body to one railroad depot.

New York, May 20.—In the absence of Senator Platt, president of the United States Express company, Vice President Crosley said today: "Our company will reinstate none of the men in Chicago who, with no grievances against their employers, went on strike."

RIVAL FACTIONS

Fight For Possession of Woman of Wealth.

New York, May 20.—When the big Deutschland came alongside her pier in Hoboken last night an exciting battle occurred between rival factions of the family of Mrs. Mary Schwartz, formerly of Brooklyn, but later of Hamburg. Mrs. Schwartz is reputed to be very wealthy. She formerly lived with one part of the family in Brooklyn, but the rival clan, the head of which is David Trautman, has been laying plans to get Mrs. Schwartz to live with them. With David Trautman came his wife, a daughter of Mrs. Schwartz, and his daughter Julia. Julia ran afoul of her aunt, Mrs. Fuhrman, who had come to the pier with her baby. Mrs. Fuhrman began to accuse the Trautmans of plotting to get control of her mother's wealth. Miss Trautman brought her parasol down with a whack upon her aunt's head. A temporary peace was patched up when Mrs. Schwartz came down the gangplank. They all tried to kiss her at the same time, some pulling others away, while there were exclamations of "Why can't you let mother alone?" "You're no good." After kissing her children and grand children all around, Mrs. Schwartz decided to go with the Trautmans.

THE THIRD TRIAL

Of Koch For Murder of Gebhardt Will Be Delayed.

It Cannot Be Started Before the Last of June.

Mankato, Minn., May 20.—The attorneys on both sides in the Koch case now agree that it cannot be brought on for its third trial before the latter part of June. It has been thought the defense would ask to have the trial commence May 25, but this is not considered seriously. Judge Cray is engaged in holding court at St. James, and his term there may continue until the Blue Earth county term comes on, the first part of June. The term will last about three weeks, so it will be seen that the earliest the Koch case can be brought on will be the latter part of June. The exact date will probably be settled on Monday.

Sheriff Williams expected that the matter of the list of names said to have been furnished him by a friend of the defendant, from which to select his first special venire, would be brought officially to the attention of Judge Cray as soon as the jury was discharged, but this was not the case. The attorneys for the state were not ready. In just what shape the matter will come up is uncertain at this time. Sheriff Williams says he will give the public the details in a few days if the state's attorney does not act.

Dr. Koch continues to receive daily visits from his Mankato relatives, and they cheer his apartment with fragrant bouquets. He passes much of the time when he is alone in reading or pacing the exercise corridor. He asked to be given a portion of the jail by himself, and his wish was granted, so he is alone most of the time.

Koch's attorneys and relatives make the statement that they have learned from members of the jury that seven of them were for acquittal and five for conviction. They say their information is reliable.

FAKE BOMBS.

New Ulm, Minn., May 20.—New Ulm citizens were not aware they were in the thick of "another sensation" until yesterday morning's Twin City newspapers reached them. Then they discovered that a dynamite plot had been hatched with the object ostensibly of removing Asa P. Brooks, editor of the Review, and the chief witness for Dr. Koch.

The "sensation" was based upon a fake bomb made out of a cell of dry battery by some practical joker, and placed under the door of the office of the Review. The bomb had some "real thing" characteristics, but a slight investigation by the editor proved it to be a rank imitation.

Correspondents of morning Twin City papers saw a good opportunity to pad waning "strings" by uncovering a plot to blow up the Review office, and its editor by persons who believe in the guilt of Koch.

A second bomb of similar construction was found in front of the Dakota house. All the town treats them as the pranks of practical jokers, and common report has it that Adolph Wagner, superintendent of the electric light station, could shed strong light on the affair if he would.

CUBA CELEBRATES

Third Anniversary of Inauguration as Republic.

Havana, May 20.—The third anniversary of the inauguration of the Cuban republic was celebrated today. The weather was cool and the sky cloudy. The holiday which was universally observed was similar to a Fourth of July celebration in the United States. There was a parade of artillery, infantry, mounted rural guards and police which traversed the Malecon and Prado. The parade was reviewed by President Palma from a flag decorated pavilion erected on the bastion at Punta Castle point, where the Malecon rounds into the Prado. Big crowds gathered along the line of march and the buildings were decorated. By order of the city council fifty sewing machines were presented at the mayor's office to deserving poor people. There were boat races this afternoon and fire works in the evening.

LOSES HIS PAPERS

Entiji Giuseppe Has His Certificate of Citizenship Canceled.

Convicted In Federal Court of Fraudulently Obtaining Papers.

Entiji Giuseppe, an Italian, formerly residing in this county, has had his citizenship papers canceled, the order for the cancelation being filed in district court this morning by Judge Dibell. The reason for setting aside and vacating the papers is that Guiseppe obtained them through fraud.

Not only has Guiseppe lost his citizenship, but he has been convicted of perjury under the United States law provided to cover such case and is now being punished by the federal government.

The order made by Judge Dibell follows the motion of Assistant United States District Attorney Joel M. Marr of the Southern District United States Circuit Court of New York, where Guiseppe was convicted.

The papers in the case comprised a signed admission by Guiseppe that the citizenship papers which he obtained from J. r. Johnson, clerk of the district court of this city, July 28, 1904, were obtained through fraud and false swearing, and with the admission is the written consent of the Italian that his papers shall be canceled.

In a letter to the judge of the district court Assistant United States District Attorney Marr states that Guiseppe has been convicted under the federal laws of fraudulently obtaining his certificate of citizenship and that under provision made by law the federal court has minimized the penalty in his case on the provision that he has admitted the fraud and given his consent to the cancelation.

The courts of this country exercise much discretion in the granting of citizenship papers and require the affidavit of several witnesses who are citizens and who testify to the applicant's residence in this country and to his good moral character. In spite of the precautions it is realized by the federal authorities that fraud sometimes creeps into the granting of citizenship papers through the false swearing of the applicant or of his friends and whenever there is ground for suspicion the federal authorities conduct a rigid investigation and punish the person who thus attempts an imposition.

From the fact that the investigation was conducted by the federal authorities in the East and that Guiseppe's trial was held before the federal court in the Southern district of New York, the details of the prosecution are lacking, there is no data in the office of the clerk of district court here to show from which part of the county Guiseppe came, but from the fact that the papers were issued direct from the clerk's office it is surmised that he formerly resided in Duluth.

The canceled citizenship papers are filed among the court records of this county.

It is claimed that the investigations and prosecutions by the federal government where there is fraud in obtaining citizenship papers usually has a salutory effect in all communities where there are many applicants from persons who wish to become citizens of this country in that it deters them from attempting to get their papers through false swearing as to the facts of their residence.

AN INSURANCE INVESTIGATION

Like Beef Trust Inquiry Is Asked of the President.

New York, May 20.—President Roosevelt has been requested to take cognizance of the situation that has been brought about by the Equitable Life Assurance society trouble and institute a national investigation of the insurance business. The inquiry into the beef trust and the present Standard Oil investigation are quoted as precedents.

This request was made by W. F. King, former president of the Merchants' Association of this city, who has written the president, as a policyholder in several companies, asking that such an investigation be made under the interstate commerce law, that should this course be deemed not practicable, Mr. King asks the president to appoint a national commission on the lines of the coal commission that settled the coal strike to make an inquiry and report.

"In case the president decides that he has no jurisdiction," said Mr. King today, "it is my purpose to form a committee prior to the convening of congress in the fall, to start an agitation in every state in the Union by sending out literature to every merchant and manufacturer, to the number of 151,000, having a mercantile rating of $50,000 and above. I will ask these men not only to interest themselves, but their employes, in petitioning their members of congress and senators, providing the president has not the power to make a thorough investigation and put these great insurance corporations under governmental control."

PRESIDENT ELLIOTT

Of Northern Pacific Discusses the Regulation of Rates.

No Rebates or Private Car Abuses on His Road.

Washington, May 20.—Howard Elliott of St. Paul, president of the Northern Pacific Railway and former operating chief of the Burlington system, said in part today in an address before the senate committee on interstate commerce:

"I have been engaged in railroad business for nearly twenty-five years; from July 1, 1880 until October 1903, with the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy company, beginning as level rodman in Northwestern Missouri; then as clerk in various capacities; then auditor and assistant treasurer; then general freight and passenger agent; then general freight agent; then general manager; and later, vice president, giving up that place upon my election as president of the Northern Pacific company in October, 1903.

"Until within the last six or seven years my relation to the business was such that I was in direct touch with the details of the freight and passenger business in the Mississippi and Missouri Valleys.

"Since then my work has been more general and in the line of administration, operation and construction. My remarks therefore will reflect the views formed during the business experience just outlined by one who has always tried to look at the whole subject in a reasonable manner, not only as a railroad officer and employe and as a railroad owner in a small way, but also as a citizen interested in the general development of the Western country.

"There are, of course, differences of opinion about the relation of rates as there always will be under any system. Railroad business, being conducted by human beings who are no more infallible than those in other walks of life, is not conducted with absolute perfection. For the errors made in the conduct of the enormous railroad business of this country, the plan of control and management should not be condemned and dislocated any more than that the general scheme of our government should be condemned because there are frauds in the administration of the land and postoffice departments and inefficiencies in the administration of the government in places.

"With the growing railroad business of the United States, the distribution of railroad securities, and the demand for manufactured articles used by railroads, it is not an unfair statement to say, counting railroad employes and owners, and employes in industries furnishing material and supplies to railroads, that there are from 2,500,000 to 3,000,000 people whose daily bread and butter and general position in life depend very largely upon the railroad business and its development along wholesome lines. Multiply this number by four and we have 10,000,000 to 12,000,000 people or from one-eighth to one-seventh of the population of the United States who either fail to realize the importance of the policy under discussion or if they do are generally silent through lack of opportunity or ability to make any statement in their own behalf. Ultimately, any step under which the federal government charged by railroads will affect them adversely by introducing an economic force into their scheme of life which will mean repression and curtailment of the chance of success due to hard individual effort. In the clamor for fixing railroad rates, much of which comes from those who want some personal advantage, either political or commercial, and from those who hope to obtain through governmental aid success which they have not obtained through their individual effort and ability, the rights of this large number of people should not be lost sight of, and they should not have imposed upon them governmental conditions which they do not obtain in other forms of commercial and business life in this country. When this large class of people come to understand fully what is contemplated their vote will be heard most plainly against the socialistic plan now proposed.

"One hears much comment upon the fact that great fortunes have been made out of the railroad business, and those who comment name a small number of individuals who through superior ability, energy, foresight and hard work have built up large fortunes. It is true that a few large fortunes have been made in the railroad business, but no more than in the iron, coal, lumber, manufacturing and other lines of business, if as much. These are the capital prizes in the lottery of life that are open to every ambitious American. But of the great army of railroad owners, officers and employes, a very small proportion obtain more than enough for their daily living, whatever their position in society may be, and some saving for old age and their children, outside of that.

"The railroads of the United States are today in an unfurnished condition, and need to attract capital, administrative talent and wage-earner. The country wants in the railroads the same things that are being furnished in older and smaller countries, like England, France and Germany; that is to say, better roads, tracks, and bridges, higher speed trains, greater safety, more beautiful station facilities—all of which means an enormous investment of capital and a considerable period of time, the training of many men, and the least interference possible with the development of the business. Hamper the railroads by too much restrictive legislation and take away from the men who has to provide the money for these expanded facilities the naming of the price to be charged for the use of these facilities, and this expansion will gradually be stopped. You can give to a branch of the federal government the power to fix rates which the owner of property shall receive for the use of his property, but you cannot make him improve his railroad, buy more cars, build more branch railroads, and expand his business.

"One argument advanced for changing the present federal laws about rates is that there has been during the last few years a gradual elimination of competition. That there has been some elimination of certain kinds of competition is no doubt true. It has resulted, however, very largely from the better experience and sense of the railroad owner and manager, who, each year, in conducting his business on a more scientific basis so as to produce the greatest amount of good transportation at the lowest possible figure, and who has eliminated considerable waste and foolish competition, thus permitting a great decrease in rates during the last twenty years.

"There has been, however, no elimination of competition as to markets, which is the real competition in a country as large as the United States. The wool growers in Montana must sell wool in competition with the wool growers of Arizona, of Kentucky, of Ohio, of Australia, and the railroads in order to assist in the development of Montana, Arizona, Kentucky and Ohio, are all striving to place the wool of their respective states at the point of consumption at the lowest price possible. The Northern Pacific does not fix the rates on wool from Montana. The price of wool in Boston, accounted for by the number of sheep on the Australian farms and on the amount of tonnage controlled in Liverpool; elements beyond the control of the American railroads and American government. The Northern Pacific cannot charge an infinitesimal fraction of a cent more than will enable the Montana man to place wool in the common market at a common price, grade for grade. The makers of woodenware in Menasha, Wis., and in Tacoma, Wash., are competing to reach the same markets and the railrods leading from those two points through self-interest are making the rates as low as they can in order to help develop the trade in their respective territories. The producers of lumber in Idaho, Montana and Washington, and the producers in Minnesota, Arkansas and Louisiana are all trying to sell in the markets of this country and abroad, and the railroads from the respective districts, if the business is to move at all, must meet competitive prices and adjust rates accordingly.

"There is an erroneous idea that rates are fixed arbitrarily, and that a few so-called 'railroad magnates' fix and control all of the rates in the United States and that their chief idea is to fix them at a high level. Nothing can be further from the truth. A railroad rate is the result of a large number of commercial and geographical forces and conditions, working one upon the other; consultation between shippers and railroads; consultation between officers and employes of one railroad and another; a study of all the conditions surrounding the problem, of the density or volume of business, of grades, engines, car supply and cost, and this process is going on every day, among thousands of railroad officers and shippers.

"An added element that is effective in the direction of causing a gradual reduction in rates, if the railroads are left reasonably free, is the fact that railroad transportation cannot be stored up and saved for future use. Railroads are forced to create a demand for idle motive power and equipment, and to force a movement of traffic between points where there was no business before.

"The present law grants ample power to regulate, to say that is unfair and unjust, and if it were enforced fairly and if the powers now in the hands of the interstate commerce commission were used, much of the alleged popular demand for giving the power to fix the actual rate would disappear. It is a question whether we are not going even too far in the direction of regulating for the best expansion of trade.

"Our neighbor, Canada, encourages its railroads so much that today products of the factories of the United States are reaching the Pacific coast via Canada in constantly increasing quantities, because the Canadian roads can and do make rates which the American roads cannot make without being charged with violation of the interstate commerce law.

"The demand by the commission that every inland proportion of the rate necessary to move products between the United States and foreign countries be published, is a restriction that hampers the American roads in effort to expand trade and increase foreign commerce.

"The complaint of insufficient facilities is a steady and constant complaint and it requires much time, money and energy for the railroad owners and officers to keep a supply of transportation on hand which will meet the demand. The complaints come for, more freight cars, more passenger trains, better passenger stations, more sidetracks, more engines, for under-crossings and over-crossings in growing cities, for branch lines into new and undeveloped sections of the country, and every railroad west of the Mississippi river must spend every year sums equivalent to from five to twenty per cent of its gross earnings for providing what is needed on the road already in existence. Similarities, causing complaints of the relation of rates between communities produce most energetic demands by mercantile organizations, commercial clubs and other agencies that this town or that town have the rates so adjusted that it can enlarge its sphere of operation and diminish rival territory. Much of this complaint is caused by the competition of water routes and Canadian roads that are not subject to the interstate commerce law. Freight officers spend as much time if not more on this subject as on any other, endeavoring without fear or favor to harmonize conflicting interests.

"Complaint is made of relative rates between individuals. Let it be understood that if the federal authorities will enforce existing law, against both shipper and railroad, this complaint will cease.

"There are occasional complaints that the power of deciding questions is being centralized too much. Investigations must be made if intelligent decisions are to be rendered. Give a commission power to fix rates and you would not help this difficulty but increase it.

"The complaint that rates charged by the railroads are in themselves too high is not very common. As a whole, rates are very low, and in most cases the man who pays the freight is satisfied with the rate in itself, provided he feels sure that no one else is securing a better rate. Enforcement of existing law will give the shipper this protection.

"I have stated these complaints in the order of their relative importance.

"On the Northern Pacific road, comprising about 6,000 miles, there are no rebates, there are no private car abuses, there are no sidetrack abuses.

"There are some abuses connected with the private car, but the private car has served a most useful purpose during the last ten or fifteen years in helping to care for the commerce of the country. The owner of the private car helped to depelop the oragne business, the butter, egg and dairy business, the fruit business and the meat business. The owner of the car has naturally tried to get as high a rate as possible on his investment, and in some cases there there have been unreasonable charges. The tendency is for the railroads to eliminate the private car and to provide their own special equipment, and this alleged evil, if left alone, will correct itself in time, because a railroad, like every other business, must make use of all the by-products and cut out all waste—and will, therefore, buy and own all the cars needed in their business.

"What are the remedies for these abuses? In my judgment they will correct themselves through the good sense of the American business man and the friction of the business. In addition, the interstate commerce law, with its amendments, provides ample machinery for correcting absolutely every discrimination as between individuals. If that law is effectively enforced, it will drive out the few remaining cases of personal discrimination as to freight shipments. I think the effect on railroad management, on the governmental machinery and on the public generally would be good if the principles of the interstate commerce law were applied strictly to the passenger business as well as to the freight business.

"That is to say, I would stop the making of preferential arrangements for transportation of passengers free, or at reduced rates, because they occupy positions of more or less power, responsibility and trust. As is well known, it is customary for the officers of the government, municipal, county, state and federal to ask for and to receive more or less transportation; and some also to their families and friends. The revenue involved in this practice is relatively insignificant, because the great bulk of this travel would not take place if a free pass or reduced rate ticket was not given.

"The effect, however, on the mind of the public is bad, and indirectly the impression is created that the railroad owner through the free pass has a great deal more influence than he really has, and there is much more interference by the railroad in the machinery of the government than there really is, and that there is much greater obligation on the part of the recipient of a pass than there really is.

"Most passes are given to the officers of the various governments as a compliment, and not with the idea that any direct benefit is to be received—possibly with the hope, in some cases, that any unfair action within the power of the receiver of the pass will be postponed or prevented. In the long run, however, the railroad owner, the government officer and the public generally would be in a better relation each to the other if this discrimination as to passenger transportation were eliminated. Such a step would go far toward making the general public feel that the railroad was not interfering improperly with politics, and that it did not have something within its power to give away to lawmakers and others in authority that others did not have.

"Let the officers of the government from the highest to the lowest set the example of obeying the law and pay the same rates for traveling that other people do.

"The attempt by the federal government to fix in detail the exact rates to be charged by the railroads of the United States will be unfortunate for the country as a whole. It is un-American because it tends to subject a large part of our citizens to an economic restriction that does not apply to those engaged in other classes of commercial industrialand agricultural business. It is unjust because such a plan would apply to the large number of American people interested and engaged in the railroad business as a rule not applicable to others. It is unnecessary because the development of the railroad business in this country has been such that we have the most effective service as a whole, the lowest rates, the highest wages, and the most progressive management of any country in the world. It would be unwise because it would tend to a complete and arbitrary centralization of power in the making of rates for the entire country, accomplishing at one stroke something which is already occasionally complained of.

"The course that the commission would ultimately be driven into and that every state commission is gradually being driven into would be to adopt a mileage basis of rates. The effect of such a basis, on a country the size of the United States with its past history of commercial development of the country, rates had been fixed arbitrarily on the basis of mileage, the states west of the Mississippi river would still be thinly populated with few railroads, and with little business of any kind. Inland cities without access to water transportation would not have been built up, and the whole growth of the railroad and commercial system of this country would have been different. On a mileage basis of rates, the business of the states and of the commercial centers west of the Mississippi would be destroyed. Cities on the ocean and Great Lakes would have advantages, but the inland cities and agricultural districts would dry up.

"Further the difficulties existing under the present system of commercial freedom than to turn to a rigid governmental plan of fixing railroad rates."

Dr. MITCHELL

Has Established a Complete School of Magnetic Healing and Suggestive Therapeutics.

If you are thinking of taking up a profession, call and see Dr. Mitchell.

No other system of therapeutics has attracted the popular attention, as has the Magnetic treatment, combined with suggestive therapeutics.

In a long and eminently successful practice, in this city, Dr. Mitchell has proved himself a master of this science and his method, of teaching what he knows, to others, is the best system ever devised.

Whether you take Magnetic Healing, for a life work or not, it is worth many times the cost of the course, in the home alone.

A knowledge of this science, not only teaches how to get the body in perfect condition, and keep it so; it also improves the mind, strengthens the moral character, improves the business ability, and in fact assists in every way to build up the best that is in mankind.

If you are suffering from any disease, consult Dr. Mitchell. He takes no case, unless he is sure he can materially benefit the patient. He has cured many others, who were in worse condition, than you may be. It costs you nothing to get his opinion on your case, and he may save you much needless suffering.

Mrs. Fredricka Hallquist of 2826 Huron street, says: "When I went to Dr. Mitchell I was in a hopeless, helpless condition. I had kidney and heart trouble and my friends all thought I would die; medicine did me no good. When Dr. Mitchell took my case I weighed 212 pounds; I was reduced down to 170 pounds; I am now enjoying good health. While treating at the office I saw many that came as a last resort to Dr. Mitchell, and they were all convalescing. Several of my friends are treating with him and they are being restored to health. I will be glad to substantiate this statement to anyone."

Anthony Johnson of 4524 Cody street, says: "I was about to have an operation performed for an abscess in my side; I had been in bed for weeks, was all run down and so weak I did not think I could stand the operation, and I decided to call Dr. Mitchell. He examined me and said I was in bad condition, but he would cure me. I recommend his treatment to anyone suffering as I did, for I am now built up strong and healthy."

Mrs. Gust Johnson, 429 Ogden avenue, West Superior, Wis., had a tumor removed by Dr. Mitchell. Would weigh about five pounds. Her home physician was going to operate but she consulted Dr. Mitchell the day before she was to be operated upon and decided to try his magnetic treatment first. She was cured—the tumor was removed. That was four years ago and Mrs. Johnson is enjoying good health.

My Dear Doctor:

I feel it is due to your ability to acknowledge my obligation to you inasmuch as you cured me of deafness and ringing in the ears. I had given up all hope of ever being able to hear again, I tried many doctors, without help. I did not understand Dr. Mitchell's treatment and did not believe in it, but a friend of mine who understood Dr. Mitchell's famous treatment, insisted on me going to see him, for which I shall always feel ever grateful. I want to say to anyone who is suffering with deafness and ringing in the ears (like myself) they should go and consult Dr. Mitchell, for his system is scientific and the only cure for deafness. I earnestly recommend anyone that is afflicted with any ear trouble to apply to Dr. Mitchell, for I know he can treat them with perfect safety. Yours truly,

FALLS DOWN STAIRS.

Drunken Finn Painfully Injured in Lodging House.

While under the influence of liquor, John Mattila, a Finn, fell down the stairs in a Lake avenue lodging house last evening and suffered severe injuries.

His scalp was cut along one side of his head, and on the other side an enormous swelling was raised by the fall.

He was taken to St. Luke's hospital, where an examination showed that his skull was not fractured, and no serious results are likely to follow.

The funeral arrangements have not yet been made.

ENRAGED NEGROES FIGHT WITH RAZORS

Bloody Battle on Lake Front In the Early Morning.

One Combatant Is Dangerously Wounded—Assailant Escapes.

In a fight with razors, which occurred about 7 o'clock this morning on St. Cloix avenue near the lake front, Jocko Sims, a colored man, was dangerously cut, and may die from the effects of the encounter.

The cutting is claimed to have been done by another colored man, Frank Casey, who escaped.

Both men are employed as porters in St. Croix avenue resorts. Sims is a short, fat, heavy-set negro, while Casey is long, lean and muscular. The two men became engaged in an altercation early this morning near the lake shore. The cause of the quarrel is not known, but words soon gave way to blows and then both men are claimed to have drawn razors. Sims evidently feared he would get the worst of such an encounter, as he suddenly turned and started to run. But his opponent was after him. Brandishing his razor above his head the big man's long legs took him over the ground with far greater rapidity than Sims was able to achieve, and in half a dozen bounds the pursuer had caught up with his victim.

One quick stroke of the razor laid open Jocko's side, cutting the flesh to the ribs. Another stroke cut open his forehead, and in some manner his wrist was broken during the melee.

Casey then made his escape leaving his victim bleeding on the ground.

Residents of the vicinity who had seen the affray summoned the ambulance and had the wounded negro taken to St. Mary's hospital, where his wounds were dressed. He is greatly weakened by the loss of blood, but it is not thought that his wounds will prove fatal.

Meanwhile Casey was making good his escape. The people who witnessed the scrap neglected to report it to the police, and nothing was known of it at headquarters until over an hour later, when one of the patrolmen happened to hear of it by accident and immediately reported it to headquarters. A general search of the city is being made by the police, and the Superior department has also been notified, but no trace of Casey had been found up to 1 o'clock.

This is not the first cutting scrape in which Casey has been mixed up, but on the former occasion he was the victim rather than the aggressor. Two years ago he was the complaining witness in a case which resulted in another negro being sent to Stillwater for a term of years for cutting him with a razor. Casey was badly slashed across the stomach in that affray.

Both negroes are well known to the police, having lived in the city for several years.

RAILROAD NEWS

The Traveling Passenger Agents to Hold Meeting In Duluth.

About Forty "Body Snatchers" Will Be Here June 12.

What might be called an informal convention of traveling passenger agents, who regularly visit the Head of the Lakes in their official capacity, will be held in Duluth on Monday, June 12. It is expected that at least thirty-five or forty of the "body snatchers," as they are termed, will be in attendance. The gathering will be purely of a social nature, and will have no relation whatever to the convention of the Western Passenger association, to be held here in July. The latter will be for members of the association, which is made up of general passenger agents and thei rassistants.s

The idea of the meeting originated with W. S. Chadwick, ticket agent at the Union depot, known by all the passenger agents who make this territory. They always make a call at the Union depot when in the city, and last November Mr. Chadwick hit upon the plan of keeping a special register for their benefit. Not only names but quotations, original reternary contributions and a variety of illustrations, most of them pertaining to railroads and railroad work, occupy positions on the pages of the book, which now makes quite an interesting exhibit. In glancing through the volume the other day the happy thought struck Mr. Chadwick that there would be a mighty good time for everyone concerned if all of "the boys" could be gotten together in Duluth on the same day, and lay aside business worries for a few hours of pleasure. He found that upwards of forty-five names of the traveling agents, aside from the other classes of railroad men, were registered. He copied the names of all of them and sent each an invitation to be on hand in Duluth, June 12, to be present at the convention of the G. A. M. B. A. Y. C. association, which is translated to mean Get As Much Business As You Can association.

The idea seems to have taken well with the prospective guests, and all of them enthusiastically favor the plan, and promise that the writers will be here on the day designated. Business may keep some of them away, but the majority will, it is believed, be able to arrange it so as to be in Duluth to attend the social session. Mr. Chadwick is busying himself with arrangements for the gathering, and from what has already been decided upon it looks very much as though there would be a good time for those who are so fortunate as to be here to take part in the pleasures of the day.

There will be a boulevard drive in the morning, to be followed by a boat ride up the St. Louis river to Fond du Lac, where an elaborate lunch will come in for attention before much heed is paid to the scenic and other beauties of the place.

The grand climax of the day's events will be a banquet at the Spalding hotel.

MAY CHANGE TIME.

Fair Patronage Given Duluth-Cloquet Train.

The time of the new train which was recently put on the run between Duluth and Cloquet by the Northern Pacific will probably be changed slightly within the next few weeks, probably early in June, so that it will pull out of Cloquet at about 8:30 o'clock every morning. This is a change of only about half an hour from the present schedule.

While the train is being fairly well patronized, the number of tickets sold is not as large as might be desired by the railroad people and Duluth and Cloquet people, who are interested in seeing the service maintained. As the season advances, however, and as the fact of the service becomes more widely known, it is expected that more people will take advantage of it to come to Duluth. The time of running, coming in the morning and returning late in the afternoon, leaves the people of Cloquet and intermediate points nearly a full day in the city. Local business men feel that the train will prove to be beneficial to Duluth.

New Folder Issued.

The Northern Pacific has just issued a new folder setting forth in an interesting manner the manifold attractions of the Yellowstone Park, and giving detailed instructions to those who desire to take a trip through the park. The itinerary of the trip, with the various side trips which may be taken, is given in detail, together with necessary information regarding expenses and the time required for taking in either a part or all of the sights. A variety of handsome photographic reproductions add to the attractiveness of the folder.

Making Panama Healthy.

The United States is playing health officer as enthusiastically in Panama as it did in Cuba and the Philippines. As a result the isthmus is enjoying a freedom from disease that it never knew before. Persons who take an occasional dose of Hostetter's Stomach Bitters will also enjoy better health than ever before. It will stimulate the digestive juices, which are so necessary to the perfect digestion of the food, and thus prevent sick headache, nausea, bloating, costiveness, liver and kidney troubles, indigestion, dyspepsia, insomnia and biliousness. Women and young girls who suffer from ills peculiar to their sex need the Bitters above everything else, because it has often cured when others had failed. We urge every sick man and woman to try the Bitters at once. Avoid substitutes.

Copper Stocks Dull.

Trading in copper stocks locally was very dull today. The attention of speculators seems to be on the New York market for the present and especially today. There was some trading in North Butte to the extent of about 100 to 125 shares, raging between $26 and $27. Junction sold at $70 and Pittsburg and Duluth at $21, for t he full paid stock.

With the flurry in the New York market over copper stocks should become more active.

BOODLE TRIALS

Are Faced By Several Arkansas Legislators.

Memphis, Tenn., May 20.—Three more members of the Arkansas legislature, two senators and a representative, have been indicted on a charge of bribery. The accused are Senator A. W. Rison of Polaski county, Senator William C. Gross of Crawford county, and representative George P. Chapline of Monroe county.

Four members of the late general assembly are now under indictment for bribery, Representative Andrews of Nevada county having been arrested a week ago. All are charged with offering bribes in connection with a measure authorizing a big bond issue for levee purposes.

The indictments charge the men with offering ridiculously small sums for the votes of others, the average tender being about a hundred dollars, although one was only $50.

SUITS AGAINST SUBSCRIBERS.

St. Louis, May 20.—More than 300 suits were filed today by the Louisiana Purchase exposition company to collect stock subscriptions aggregating $50,000. Among the suits was one against Former Mayor Henry Ziegenhein for $5,000, which it is alleged he subscribed.

Milwaukee, May 20.—The Journal today says that Francis B. Keene of Milwaukee, United States consul to Milan, Italy, has been transferred to Geneva, Switzerland, the change to take effect on June 15. It is said the transfer is in the nature of a promotion.

OPPOSES CHANGE

A. D. Thomson Against Making No. 2 Northern Contract Grade.

Would Be to Advantage of Professional Short Seller.

The proposition to make No. 2 northern the contract grade of wheat in the Duluth market finds a strong opponent in A. D. Thomson, one of the most prominent and largest grain dealers on the Duluth board of trade. The board of directors, in response to the expressed wish of the members, have presented a rule providing for changing the contract grade from No. 1 to No. 2 northern, and it will be submitted to a vote next Saturday. Mr. Thomson believes the change to be inadvisable and calculated to injure this market, and also the farmer, and he does not hesitate to say so.

"To make No. 2 northern the contract grade of wheat," said Mr. Thomson this morning, "will be to largely increase the amount of wheat available to deliver on contracts, by admitting wheat of a lower grade. This will place in the hands of the professional short seller an additional club to pound down the price of the farmers' wheat. If this change is made the Duluth board of trade, in principle, will have gone on record as being opposed to the advancement and prosperity of the Northwest and the farmers as a whole.

"The adoption of their recommendation will increase the antagonism of the grain grower, and the market here will suffer accordingly. The farmer, in this argument for a change of grade, has not been directly represented, nor have his interests been considered, though he is the principal party interested, and it is unfair for any board of trade to place him in this position. I say, give the farmer a chance.

"Furthermore, I believe that the stato inspection department at St. Paul, if this rule is passed, will take measures to protect the farmers' interests. This can be done in part by raising the test weight and conditions of No. 2 northern to those now required for the No. 1 northern grade. This would be calling No. 1 northern No. 2 northern, and would be giving a good egg a bad name, so doubtless they would find some other way to correct the error.

"Wisconsin has just passed a new inspection law, and West Superior is beginning another fight to establish a board of trade. Seeing the error made by the Duluth board of trade—if it is made—the board over there will unquestionably make the contract grade No. 1 northern, and attract both the producer and consumer. Then, if one or two good firms locate there, the Duluth board would lose a large part of its business. This, in my judgment, would be the result.

"Another thing that seems to have been lost sight of is the fact that the bulk of the new wheat crop may be No. 1 northern in grade. Last year is no criterion, for the crop was poor in quality, but it does not follow that all other crops will be, and conditions may be exactly opposite to what they now are."

Claims Wife Was Unfaithful

A divorce action, service of the summons in which was made in the province of Vasa, Finland, was filed in district court this morning. The case is on in which Nikolai Koivisto, who came to this country Nov. 15, 1900, leaving his wife, Serauhia, in the old country, seeks a divorce on the grounds of unfaithfulness and desertion. In the complaint filed by Marshall & Whipple, Koivisto says that after he came to this country he regularly sent money back for his wife's support, but that a little over a year after his departure she gave birth to a child. He accuses her of infidelity and asks that he be given the custody of their own child, which was born before he left the old country.

THE VALUE OF CHARCOAL.

Few People Know How Useful It Is In Preserving Health and Beauty.

Nearly everybody knows that charcoal is the safest and most efficient distinfectant and purifier in nature, but few realize its value when taken into the human system for the same cleansing purpose.

Charcoal is a remedy that the more you take of it the better; it is not a drug at all, but simply absorbs the gases and impurities always present in the stomach and intestines and carries them out of the system.

Charcoal sweetens the breath after smoking, drinking or after eating onions and other odorous vegetables.

Charcoal effectually clears and improves the complexion, it whitens the teeth and further acts as a natural and eminently safe cathartic.

It absorbs the injurious gases which collect in the stomach and bowels; it disinfects the mouth and throat from the poison of catarrah.

All druggists sell charcoal in one form or another, but probably the best charcoal and the most for the money is in Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges; they are composed of the finest powered Willow charcoal, and other harmless antiseptics in tablet form, or rather in the form of large, pleasant tasting lozenges, the charcoal being mixed with honey.

The daily use of these lozenges will soon tell in a much-improved condition of the general health, better complexion, sweeter breath and purer blood, and the beauty of it is, that no possible harm can result from their continued use, but on the contrary, great benefit.

A Buffalo physician in speaking of the benefits of charcoal says: "I advise Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges to all patients suffering from gas in stomach and bowels, and to clear the complexion and purify the breath, mouth and throat; I also believe the liver is greatly benefited by the daily use of them; thy cost but twenty-five cents a box at drug stores, and although in some sense a patent preparation, yet I believe I get more and better charcoal in Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges than in any of the ordinary charcoal tablets."

FOLLOWS SUIT

Minneapolis Is Agitating Similar to Duluth Board of Trade.

Would Make No. 2 Northern the Contract Grade of Wheat.

The directors of the Duluth Board of Trade, in line with the sentiment expressed at the meeting of the members of the board held early in the week, have submitted a rule making No. 2 northern the contract grade of wheat in the Duluth market. The rule is to be voted upon by the members of the board Saturday, May 27, and if adopted, will become effective on all contracts made for September or later delivery after that date.

There is a feeling among the members of the board that the state inspection department should stiffen up the requirement for No. 2 northern a little. In the present rules it is provided that hard flinty wheat of good color, testing 55 pounds, can be carried into No. 2 northern if it is fit in other respects than weight. Ordinarily the weight must be 56 pounds. The effect of this rule has been to make practically all No. 2 northern but 55 pounds in weight. There is a strong belief that if No. 2 northern is to be the grade, the full weight should be rigidly required.

It was predicted that the action of the Duluth members would be immediately followed by a similar movement at Minneapolis and it has already come to pass. The Minneapolis Journal of last evening said:

"Chamber of Commerce directors discussed the matter of a change in the contract grade of wheat at a meeting this afternoon, but took no important action. Ten Minneapolis grain firms have signed the petition urging the substitution of No. 2 northern for No. 1 northern as contract grade. The directors sent the appeal to the chamber committe on rules on minor technical grounds. This has delayed the matter, but only for a time. The directors could not ignore the appeal even if such were the disposition, and sooner or later it must be submitted to an open vote.

"Defeated twice before, on similar appeals, the advocates of a change believe that they will have the necessary majority vote this time and will carry it through. The proposition is one of the greatest importance to Minneapolis. While the local board has been going slow the Duluth board has taken the matter up, and, although formal action is still necessary to make it a rule, sentiment at the Head of the Lakes is so favorable that its adoption appears certain.

"The old contest between millers and elevators may be expected again when the Minneapolis chamber votes on the proposition. The men who favor the plan contend that No. 1 northern is becoming so scarce that its maintenance as contract grade hurts the market. Buyers of cash wheat are afraid to hedge it here, for fear they may be caught in a squeeze or corner. This injures legitimate business. Making contract grade of No. 2 northern would, they contend, widen the market and benefit all.

"The opposing argument comes from the millers, who say the move would hurt them. As often as they sell flour they buy wheat futures, and it is necessary, they say, that they should know that they are to get the high-grade wheat when they take delivery of it. Delivery of a low grade, even with payment of a penalty, would not help them out.

"If the plan goes through, Minneapolis and Duluth will lose their distinctive positions as markets where only No. 1 northern is deliverable on contract. In Chicago, New York and other markets a seller may deliver No. northern, No. 2 red or No. 2 hard winter on contract."

MOVES FOR A DISMISSAL

W. D. Case's Action Against Dr. Graham Ends Abruptly.

The malpractice case of W. D. Case of West Duluth against Dr. David Graham of this city came to an abrupt end, so far as this term of district court is concerned, yesterday afternoon, through a motion for a dismissal of the action by Theodore Hollister, representing Mr. Case, the plaintiff. The motion for a dismissal was objected to by H. T. Abbott, attorney for Dr. Graham, who insisted that the trial proceed, but as the defendant was acting within provisions made by law, even though a jury had been called and sworn, the motion was granted, without prejudice to a similar action which may be started at a following term of court.

Mr. Case was injured in an accident June 27, 1904, breaking the two bones of one of his limbs between the ankle and the knee. He alleges that the fracture was improperly treated by Dr. Graham, and sued to recover damages in the amount of $10,000.

This was the second alleged malpractice case to come up for trial at the present term of district court, with the same attorneys opposing each other, Mr. Hollister for the plaintiffs and Mr. Abbott for the defendants.

In the first case, that of David McTaggert against Dr. C. G. Shipman, for damages in the amount of $10,000 for the alleged mistreatment of an amputated leg at the knee joint, the jury returned a verdict in favor of Dr. Shipman.

It is said that fully one-half the jurors chosen on the Case-Graham case were among those who served on the McTaggert-Shipman case.

OFFICER FAINTS.

Falls Exhausted At Corner Of Third Avenue.

Weakened by an illness of several days to which he has refused to succumb, Sergt. Gillen of the Duluth police force fell forward in a dead faint while on duty at the corner of Third avenue west and Superior street, this morning.

He was picked up by some bystanders and carried into the office of the Western Union Telegraph company, where he soon revived sufficiently to take a car to police headquarters. After resting there for a time he was sent to his home in a carriage.

HEALTH is the Most Important

In buying food-articles, you must consider several things: Economy, Results, Easy Handling, Reliability; but the most important is Health.

Health means everything. In clothes, furniture, etc., if the buyer gets a poor or imitation article, the only harm is loss of money. In buying food-articles, if imitations are supplied, there is a loss of money, and probably an injury to health —which is beyond price

Remember these facts when buying baking powder.

SHOOTS FINE BLACK BEAR

Big Game Hunting Within Six Miles of City.

Bear hunting is getting better in Duluth and the vicinity.

Joseph Acker, a farmer, living four or five miles back of the hilltop, went out gunning yesterday afternoon and brought down a full-grown black bear with his first shot. "It was brought in to Duluth this morning and sold to a local butcher, who has it on exhibition.

The animal does not show the effects of its long winter's sleep and fast, but is fat and glossy.

"I knew about where he was," said Mr. Acker this morning. "I had seen his tracks and yesterday I went out to look for him. I found him easily enough and one shot did the trick."

The place where the animal was shot was not over six miles from the Duluth postoffice.

LA FOLLETTE TO RESIGN SOON

Rate Bill's Passage Leaves Him Free to Be Senator.

Madison, Wis., May 20.—Now that the senate has unanimousiy passed the railroad rate bill, interest is centered in Governor La Follette's plans. His most intimate associates says he will sign the bill as soon as it passes the assembly, where no opposition is looked for, and will then appoint the commission and resign the governorship to take his seat in the senate.

The governor will devote part of the summer to his Chautauqua and other engagements, of which he has more than 100. When congress meets in December he will be found in Washington.

The personnel of the new railway commission is the subject of some speculation. It has been assumed that Railroad Commissioner J. W. Thomas and Labor Commissioner Halford Erickson would be two of the three appointees, but the dragging in of Mr. Thomas' name in the senate debate on the question has rather weakened his chances.

T. A. Edmonds, a member of the La Follette state central committee, and a La Follette appointee on the board of regents, is said by some to be slated for a place. A rumor has been going the rounds that Judge Charles M. Webb, who was a candidate for the senate against the governor, will be given a place on the commission as a reward to the Webb supporters in the senate for voting for the bill.

An early adjournment of the legislature is now looked for. "Two weeks more" is the slogan of the rural members.

The railroad rate commission will be appointed and Governor La Follette will resign within two weeks after the adjournment. This was given out yesterday by a close friend of the governor.

RAW BLEEDING SCALY ECZEMA

Looked More Like a Piece of Raw Beef Than a Human Being. Doctors Useless.

CURED BY CUTICURA

Blessed Relief After First Application and First Real Sleep in Weeks—Facts of This Wonderful Cure by Cuticura Vouched for by Mrs. Hunt's Neighbors.

"Words cannot describe the terrible Eczema I suffered with. It broke out on my head and kept spreading, until it covered my whole body. I was almost a solid mass of sores from head to foot. I looked more like a piece of raw beef than a human being. The pain and agony I endured seemed more than I could bear.

"Blood and pus oozed from the great sore on my scalp, from under my finger nails, and nearly all over my body. My ears were so crusted and swollen I was afraid they would break off. I could not sit down, for my clothes would stick to the raw and bleeding flesh, making me cry out from the pain.

"My family doctor did all he could, but I got worse and worse. My condition was awful. I did not think I could live, and wanted death to come and end my frightful sufferings.

"In this condition my mother-in-law begged me to try the Cuticura Remedies. I said I would, but had no hope of recovery. But oh, what blessed relief I experienced after applying Cuticura Ointment. It cooled the bleeding and itching flesh and brought me the first real sleep I had had in weeks. It was as grateful as ice to a burning tongue. I would bathe with warm water and Cuticura Soap, then apply the Ointment freely. I also took the Resolvent for the blood. In a short time the sores stopped running, the flesh began to heal, and I knew I was to get well again. Then the hair on my head began to grow, and in a short time I was completely cured. But I kept on taking the Cuticura Remedies, as they did me so much good I did not want to stop them.

"My cure was so wonderful I thought I would write you about it. I cannot praise Cuticura enough. My condition was so terrible that what cured me cannot fail to cure anybody of this awful disease. If any one doubts the truth of this letter, tell them to write to me. "135 Thomas St., Newark, N. J. MRS. WM. HUNT."

"The undersigned are acquainted with and neighbors of Mrs. Wm. Hunt, of 135 Thomas St., and have knowledge of her wonderful cure of eczema by the Cuticura Remedies, as stated by Mrs. Hunt in her letter. (Signed) Mary E. Cooper, 135 Thomas St., Newark, N. Atlanta, Ga., May 20.—At a meeting yesterday of the employing printers of the Southeastern states resolutions stating that the employing printers were unalterably opposed to the eight hour day and under no circumstances would submit to it, were unanimously adopted. The preamble to the resolutions stated that the "proposed reduction is not required for the physical comfort, moral, mental or religious improvement of the people whom it is sought to affect."

Uprising of the Mujiks.

To the Editor of The Herald:

The history of nations discloses that there have been frequent periods when the ordinary principles regulating social conditions seem to have been lost sight of; when new passions, aroused by a cognizance of injustice, have agitated and forced the populace into unreasoning, revolutionary activity; when the steady current of events is broken by contact with rapids which precede precipitous falls, in flowing over which its rapid progress is obscured by mist and foam and furious splashings, until calm deliberation again reduces the chaotic to the normal flow. Then is seen the beneficial effects of that wild dash—the improper motives of action; the prejudices that hindered progress and the unreasonable restrictions swept aside—and in the deeper channel excavated by the torrent's power a clearer, purer and stronger current flows on towards the ocean of universal harmony.

Such an experience the Russian nation now seems to be undergoing. The regular current of popular thought has changed into a wild flow of popular passion aroused in its passage over rapids formed by the undermining and obstructive elements of autocratic power. A deep sense of injustice hurries and disturbs the current of Mujik thought. Reason is prevented from exercising its regular functions, and the mist and foam, generated by the struggle of this people to be free, so obscures the vision that, until these rapids are passed and the deep channel of equal rights is entered, the effects of this mighty upheaval, this tumultuous flow of popular passion cannot be determined. It now appears doubtful if this deep and broad channel of equal rights will be reached until greater falls are encountered and the flow of popular thought into greater depths shall have furnished the power to wear away the bed rock of oppression.

CONSUMPTIVE COUGH CURED

ELISHA S. TABORN.

Mrs. E. S. Taborn, Wife of a Department Store Manager, Cured of a Cronic Cough by Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey.

Young Lady, Who Had Lost 40 Pounds In Six Months, Is Quickly Cured of Distressing Cough.

Manager Taborn, Cured of Chronic Constipation and Bowel Trouble, Tells of His Remarkable Recovery.

"During the fall and winter of 1903-4, my wife had a chronic cough which ran down her system, reduced her weight and sapped her strength to such an extent that we became alarmed and feared she had consumption. Her doctor gave her very little relief, and we tried different medicines in vain, but nothing benefited her until she began to take Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey, which we heard of through a testimonial of a temeprance advocate. Before the first bottle was taken, the cough had almost ceased, and by continued treatment in a very short time she was cured.

"Another wonderful cure was that of a young lady employed by me in a department store in Baltimore, who was troubled with a chronic cough, and who had lost 40 pounds in six months. Medicine did her no good, and she was in despair, when I advised her to take your grand medicine. In a short time she was entirely cured.

"Personally my experience with 'Duffy's' has been little short of marvelous. For years I had chronic constipation, which brought on bowel trouble and bleeding piles. For five years I doctored with pills and other medicine, but received no relief until I commenced to take 'Duffy's.' The first bottle had a magical effect, and in a short time I was restored to complete health."—E. S. TABORN, Baltimore, Md. March 2, 1905.

Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey

Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey is the only positive cure and preventive of pneumonia, consumption, grip, bronchitis, coughs, colds, diseases of the throat and lungs, malaria, fevers, stomach and bowel troubles, and all wasting, run-down, diseased conditions of the body.

Over 4,000 centenarians owe their long life and continued health, strength, activity and usefulness to this grand medicine, which has the matchless record of over 4,000,000 cures in fifty years. It is absolutely pure, contains no fusel oil, and is the only whiskey recognized by the Government as a medicine.

CAUTION.—When you ask for Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey be sure you get the genuine. Unscrupulous dealers, mindful of the excellence of this preparation, will try to sell you cheap imitations and so-called Malt Whiskey substitutes, which are put on the market for profit only, and which, far from relieving the sick, are positively harmful. Demand "Duffy's," and be sure you get it. Look for the trade-mark, "The Old Chemist," on the label.

The genuine Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey is sold by all druggists and grocers, or direct, at $1.00 a bottle. Write for free medical booklet containing symptoms and treatment of each disease to the Duffy Malt Whiskey Co., Rochester, N. Y.

EVIDENCE ALL IN

The Murder Case to Be Argued to Jury Monday.

Longer Gives Testimony Against Lenich, on Cross-Examination.

The murder case of the state against Lenich and Longer will be given to the jury Monday. Practically all the evidence for the defense was in last evening when court adjourned and it is expected that the arguments to the jury will begin Monday morning.

The feature of yesterday afternoon's session was the testimony of Frank Longer, one of the accused, under cross-examination by County Attorney McClintock. Longer admitted that he saw Lenich strike Kracovitch in the head or neck. Witness said he was about 20 feet behind at the time. After Kracovitch fell, Longer said Lenich turned to him and said: "He's got enough; let's go back."

Longer also stated that after the fight Lenich showed him a knife with the words:

"He hasn't got it; let's go."

During the fight Longer heard one of the men exclaim:

"It is my blood or yours."

Longer testified as to the fight between himself and Kracovitch during the earlier part of the evening and, that later, they were fighting near the Zidar home, when Lenich mixed in. He claimed that he ran down the street after Kracovitch, when the latter attempetd to get away, solely to prevent any injury to Lenich, who was also in pursuit.

Frank Lenich was also on the stand yesterday afternoon. He denied that he had attacked Kracovitch with a knife and said that he did not strike the dead man with a weapon of any sort while they were fighting on the street.

BREAKS CAR WINDOWS

Golf Ball Passes Through Lakeside Car, But Injures Nobody.

Fifteen passengers on a Lakeside car were startled yesterday afternon by a crash of glass, followed almost instantly by a second.

They looked up to find a window in each side of the car broken, and on investigation it was found that the breaks had been caused by a golf ball which had passed through both windows and fallen to the ground at the other side of the car.

The car was just passing the grounds of the Northland Country club, and it happened to intercept a vigorous drive given by one of the members of the club.

Although there were 12 or 15 passengers in the car at the time, no one was injured, as the ball happened to pass through a part of the car which was unoccupied.

THE DREADED DISEASE

A Duluth Man Dies of Cerebro Spinal Meningitis.

Felix Lampinski, a butcher who lived at 15 East Eighth street, died yesterday of cerebro spinal meningitis, the disease which recently caused such a large number of deaths in New York city, and for which the physicians have been unable to find a cure.

Lampinski was seized with a violent headache several days ago, and Thursday night grew worse. About midnight his wife heard him moaning and attempted to question him, but he made no reply. A short time later he became unconscious and died before a physician could reach him.

Coroner McCuen held an investigation yesterday afternoon and it is his bellef that death was due to the disease mentioned.

There was a case of the disease in West Duluth about three or four weeks ago.

The health commissioner ordered an immediate burial to prevent contagion.

CRANK PASTOR IS SECURED

Dr. S. S. Lappin Meets Requirements of Peoria Church.

Peoria, Ill., May 20.—The Central Christian church of this city has decided to issue a call to the Rev. S. S. Lappin of Atlanta, Ill., because he, among hundreds of applicants, was able best to meet the following sworn requirements for a pastor:

1. He must be a young man.
2. He must be a married man.
3. He must be an evangelist.
4. He must be a lodge member.
5. He must be a mixer.
6. He must be a crank.
7. He must be a burden bearer of the flock.

The following is the text of the letter written by the Rev. Dr. Lappin, through which he secured his call:

"1. I still lack a little of being 35 years old. I can set my foot on a wall ten inches higher than my head, and can "chin a limb" ten times hand running.

"2. I have been married twelve years and my wife and I are still living together.

"3. I am an evangelist, and never turn persons away if they want to join the church where I am preaching, especially if I have reason to believe they are in earnest.

"4. I am a lodge man. I belong to four lodges, and would not object to joining some more, provided the brethren will pay the admission fees and keep up the dues.

"5. You don't define the meaning of 'mixer' clearly, but I guess I would fill the bill. If you mean socially inclined, I'm your man. Whoever comes near my church near service time must be fleet of foot if I don't make him shake hands before he gets away.

"6. I am a crank; not a fool, understand, but the kind of crank that 'moves things.' As you suggest, things move where I preach. If I cannot make them move, I generally get some of the cranky brethren or sisters to lend a hand till the thing starts. On several occasions I have succeeded so well in moving things that my family, household goods, and all were moved into another pastorate.

"7. Now, as to being willing to assume the burdens of the flock, I had best be a little less positive in my answer, for I am not sure what you mean by that. I do not propose to take care of the pocketbooks of the brethren while they go fishing, or to speak knowingly about the bigness of the hats worn by the good sisters at Eastertide. I will not engage to salve the consciences of the brethren who hurrah for Jesus and vote for the devil, and I will not usher any such up to the pearly gates. I will not engage to write or to deliver eulogies for those members who regard their religion as a kind of spiritual life insurance."

And now, since these qualities have been disclosed by the letter, the Atlanta congregation has tightened the strings on its minister and is loath to give him up. He has the call under consideration, and the Peoria congregation is anxiously awaiting a decision.

Goes Back to Finland.

Oscar Bask, an Eveleth miner, examined for insanity before Probate Judge Middlecoff, yesterday, was turned over to the United States authorities to deport. Bask has been in this country only twenty months and he will be deported to Wausean, Finland, his native city. Bask has no relatives living in this country. His people in Finland are said to be in circumstances ample to take care of him.

Gets Penitentiary Sentence.

C. H. Allen of Minneapolis, who pleaded guilty to an indictment for forgery in the second degree, was sentenced to the state penitentiary, on the reformatory plan, by Judge Ensign, yesterday afternoon. Allen passed several checks for small amounts purporting to contain the signature of Commercial Agent Kennedy of the Milwaukee road.

Returns Sealed Verdict.

Until the court convenes Monday morning none of but the twelve men who served on the jury will know whether A. T. Seyler's dog met his death through negligence on the part of a motorman on a West Fourth street car, or what the pup's value was if the jury decided against the street railway company. The case was given to the jury yesterday afternoon and no verdict was reached until about midnight. The verdict was sealed and cannot be opened until the jury assembles in court Monday. Mr. Seyler sued for damages in the amount of $125.

USE OF WINDOWS.

"Have you ever noticed that about nine-tenths of the people—both men and women—who seem to be interested in displays are really using show windows for a looking glass?" asked a little Jap.

Just then a youth with football shoulders and a rambling gait strolled up the avenue, says the New York Sun. A roll from a trim girl in a passing hansom and his chest rose perceptibly. No sooner was the vehicle a block away than he side-stepped to a jeweler's window, and with apparent admiration of a pair of diamond garter buckles, pinched his four-in-hand into shape and, lifting his hat, gave his hair a quick brush.

A few blocks below an actress dismounted from a motor car, swept with nonchalant unconcern past a number of wide-eyed pedestrians into a store. As she reached the shop her chin lifted with a silent peacock tilt and turned straight to the plate glass window. Her gloved hand came promptly to the left brow and she pushed a refractory lock into place.

THE CLERK'S PROBLEM.

It is impossible to withhold sympathy from a correspondent who presents his case in a communication to The Herald, published on another page. He says he is a clerk in this city, making $50 a month, on which he has to support two besides himself, and he wants to know how he can follow the advice given in an editorial in these columns a week ago on starting a bank account. He presents a schedule of his expenses, and they take up the entire $50 a month, without leaving any margin for savings, charity, church, travel, or, indeed, much of anything besides the bare necessities of life.

The correspondent has, indeed, a hard row to hoe, yet he is one of many. His pay is small, and The Herald wishes it was larger. It wishes everybody's pay was large enough so there would be no such financial perplexities as those of Mr. Clerk. But this cannot be, it seems. It is, therefore, up to this correspondent and those similarly situated to make the best they can out of it until better days come. To start with, in spite of this correspondent's case, The Herald's statement of a week ago that the way to have a bank account is to start one, and that nobody will ever have one unless he starts it, is still true. The fact that in this instance Mr. Clerk is unable to figure out a margin for saving does not obscure the issue.

The Herald's correspondent, it must be admitted, is down to bed rock. But is not the question one of whether he will save more money than he does now when his salary is increased? Will his expense not broaden out with each increase, and when he is getting twice his present salary will he not still be able to make up a schedule and point to it as he points to his present one, demanding to know how he is going to save any money? If he is not, he will be an exception, for many that receive twice as much as this young man does are confronted by financial problems that seem just as hard to them, or even harder.

The Herald can hardly undertake to remodel its correspondent's schedule of living so as to leave a margin for saving. Its efforts would probably be misunderstood and resultless of thanks if it did. The schedule is not extravagant; that much must be admitted. Here it is: Rent, $15; groceries, $13; meat, $8; insurance, $3; fuel, $4; doctor, $1; dress, $3; Herald, 50 cents; amusement, $1; light, 50 cents; car fare, $1; total, $50. There is not an item here that could be called extravagant. Yet it is likely that on some of the principal items, people with twice his income do not spend more. This is especially true of meat and groceries. The rent is modest, yet it may be possible that instead of having a house, several rooms could be had at a lesser rate until those better days arrive which of course Mr. Clerk confidently expects, and which The Herald hopes will soon come.

The Herald could hardly be otherwise than flattered with the use made of the portion set aside for enlightenment, inasmuch as 50 cents is dedicated to a subscription to The Herald. But here is a nickel that might go into the savings bank, because The Herald only costs 45 cents a month. True, that is a small item, but if a few nickels could be taken off here and there the foundation for a bank account would result, for it is the small items that large ones are made of. Pitiful and difficult as it is, the man who earns so small an income must shave off every unnecessary expense, and keep close watch of the pennies. In that way only can he make his meager income meet his necessities.

Aside from the case of this correspondent, is it not true that the reason many salaried people save no money is that they do not cut their garments according to their cloth? Are there not too many $50 clerks with an ambition to live like the $75 clerks; too many $75 clerks trying to emulate the $100 clerks; too many $100 clerks trying to keep up with the $200 men? And so on clear up into the millions?

As to the $50 salary, it is true that it is a small return, but is that not partly because too many young men seek the particular occupation that this correspondent follows? Would it not have been better for the young man if he had learned a trade, if he had equipped himself for some special service that commanded better wages? He speaks of those willing to take his place merely for the experience, and that is proof enough that the field of unskilled clerical work is too crowded.

People in his situation are to be sympathized with, of course. Yet they might learn something from the common laborer. When common labor is paid $2 per day it is said to be well paid. But the worker does not get work every day, and does not earn more than $50 a month. Still, hundreds of them have larger families than has this correspondent, own their own homes, eliminating the rent problem, and have their bank accounts, too.

This letter opens up an interesting field, in which thousands are every day confronting similar problems. It involves many questions, such as the question of whether a man with such a salary and such tastes as this correspondent probably has should marry on such a wage. There is the question of whether he has made a proper division of his $50 a month. There is the question of whether he would save $10 a month if his salary were increased that much, or whether his expenses would not increase in proportion, and still seem just as necessary to him as the items he now presents.

The Herald is always glad to receive such communications, as discussion of these subjects cannot help but do good. It will be glad to hear from anybody that has suggestions to offer this correspondent and others in his situation, and asks only that such correspondents be as brief as may be, that they write on one side of the paper only, and that they accompany their communications with their names, which will not be published unless it is desired.

TAXING MORTGAGES.

An example of what a beautifully inconsistent piece of patchwork is Minnesota's tax law is being shown to Duluth holders of real estate mortgages. It should be effective in getting them interested in the adoption of the proposed constitutional amendment permitting changes in the tax code, if it does nothing else. It is the cumulative effect of just such incidents as that described in the local columns of The Herald last evening that is giving strength to the move to change the fundamental law of the state so it will permit the enactment of fair tax laws.

According to the local story referred to, it appears that under a law passed last winter the register of deeds has made a list of the real estate mortgages owned in this county, and the city assessors are going to place them on the lists for taxation. Naturally, as the holders are getting 6 or 7 per cent out of the mortgages, and this income would be cut in two by taxation, they do not like it.

And the tax is radically wrong, even though under the law mortgages are personal property and therefore taxable on just the same basis as any other property. A mortgage of $1,000 on a lot worth $1,500, bearing 6 per cent interest, would yield $60 a year, and the tax, if applied at the lawful limit, would be $30. Yet that lot has been taxed as real estate, and on a basis of 50 per cent of its real value has paid a tax of $22.50. In effect, therefore, this is double taxation. Massachusetts has a scheme by which the lot-owner only pays on his equity, and the mortgage-owner pays for the value of the mortgage, but even this is unfair. The proper tax on credits is a tax on the income from them, but this, as the Minnesota constitution stands, is unconstitutional.

Another leak in the law passed last winter is that it will result in taxing only the mortgages held by residents of the county, permitting nonresident property owners to escape. But no matter how hideously wrong it is, taxation of mortgages is lawful in this state, and it is an evasion of law to permit them to escape taxation, even though to tax them is to work injustice to the owners. This is a pretty state of things, and one not calculated to breed an unadulterated respect for law.

SUMMER BAND CONCERTS.

By all means, the suggestion of band concerts in the public parks during the summer should be taken up by the city authorities and if there is any possible way to do it the plan should be adopted.

The expense will not be great, and undoubtedly a popular subscription would raise part of it if the remainder could be spared out of the city's funds in some manner. The money would certainly be well spent, whether it came from the public treasury or from private purses, and the subject should be taken up at once by those in authority and settled so that the concerts could be held during the summer months.

The benefits would be entirely out of proportion to the expense. The people would appreciate the treat that would be afforded, and during the pleasant summer evenings would fill the parks in which the concerts are held to overflowing. Most of them would come out after a hard day's labor in the shop, the store or the home, and the music would be deeply appreciated.

Duluth has an excellent band, one of the best in the West, and the support that this expenditure would give to such a musical organization would be merited. There should be public band concerts in the parks during the summer, and those who are pushing the project should have the fullest measure of popular support.

THE SCHOOL ELECTION.

By a modification of the primary election system the board of education of this city is trying to get the public interested in the important matter of electing school directors, and this excellent effort should meet with a hearty response from the voters of the city.

A large number of blank petitions are to be put out, and on these petitions voters are to indicate their choice for directors. Three are to be elected, to fill the places left vacant by the expiration of the terms of Directors Smith, Le Tourneau and Phelps. Anybody interested in the re-election of these directors, or in the election of new directors in their places, may secure copies of the petitions upon application. At the June meeting of the board the names of those receiving a noticeable indorsement by petition will be put upon the ballots for the election, which will be held July 15, and in which women as well as men may participate.

Usually a school election does not receive the attention its importance deserves. The directors that are elected have control of the expenditure of large sums of money contributed by the taxpayers, and have full charge of the direction of the public schools, in which the coming generation is receiving strong and lasting formative influences. It is highly important, therefore, that everybody should turn out at the elections and vote for the best men. There may be little to complain of in the results of the scanty attention given past elections, but sooner or later lack of consideration may lead to serious trouble.

AN INTERESTING ISSUE.

It is not to be wondered at that the president and cabinet should hesitate before permitting the Isthmian Canal commission to follow out its proposed plan of buying canal supplies in the world's market. It is not that a great saving would not result, because it would. The trouble is that it would put the government in the embarrassing attitude of compelling the people to pay protected prices for goods, while buying its own goods at half the price in the free markets of the world.

It is true that 50 per cent could be saved in a great many cases by buying abroad, instead of in the restricted home market, and that the cost of the canal could be materially decreased by such a plan. For instance, Chief Engineer Wallace showed that two more ships will be absolutely necessary to carry supplies and material. Secretary Taft found that while he could buy two 6,000-ton ships in Europe for $750,000, it would cost $1,400,000 to build them here.

Perhaps the most significant item of the whole proceeding was the announcement of the commission that while it reserved the right to buy construction material in the world's markets, it would ask American manufacturers to give it the benefit of their foreign prices if they wished to sell goods to the commission. In other words, American manufacturers need to be compelled to allow the government the same prices they freely offer in Europe, instead of demanding the protected prices they get for goods sold at home.

If the plan were adopted, the individual would have to pay tribute to protection on nearly every article he uses, while Uncle Sam, in his canal purchases, would leap over the tariff wall and buy 50 per cent cheaper in the European market.

The incident is enlightening, and the issue will be watched with intense interest.

LOST BY STUPIDITY.

Perhaps in no other way is the deveopment of the Dominion of Canada shown more clearly than in the changed sentiment of the people of that country on the subject of commercial relations with the United States. For years Canada sought freer trade relations with this country, and through a blind adoration of the policy of protection, which closed our eyes to the real good of the nation, her appeals were disregarded. Now she doesn't care half so much about it as we do, for our neglect has forced her to develop her own resources, which she is doing at a rapid rate.

Lieutenant Governor Guild of Massachusetts, one of the publishers of the Commercial Bulletin of Boston, recently addressed inquiries to the leading Canadian newspapers, and a summary of the answers has just been published. Twenty-two papers, with a circulation of 92,223, favor modifying the Canadian tariff in return for equivalent concessions on our part. Six newspapers with 23,014 subscribers favor absolute free trade between the two countries. Seven, with 35,635 subscribers, declare that the United States must make reductions to show its good faith before Canada does anything. Twelve newspapers, with 34,571 subscribers, are non-committal, while three, with 5,700 subscribers, definitely declined to discuss the matter. So there is little consolation in these fifty papers with their combined circuation of 191,143.

On the other hand, 109 newspapers, with a combined circulation of 519,878, absolutely oppose any reduction in the present Canadian tariff, no matter what inducements we offer on our side.

Such a large majority cannot be considered otherwise than as reflecting Canadian sentiment on this question, and the radical revolution in that sentiment will be astonishing to many who think that we have but to ask for reciprocity with Canada to get it.

The opportunity that has been stupidly thrown away by the advocates of a protective tariff regardless of reason has been a great one, and one that we will long regret. It was possible during many years to have made Canada commercially as much a part of the United States as Minnesota. Her industries were undeveloped, and she had need of our products in exchange for her raw material. Now she is making her own goods, and has profited materially from our blindness.

The chance may not come again, but it ought to teach that protection is no more a remedy for all evils or a universal preventive of commercial illnesses than calomel is a cure for all the ills that flesh is heir to. Both protection and calomel are good, but both should be used with judgment.

THE TRADING STAMPS.

The pestiferous trading stamp has come to the end of its days in one more city. St. Joseph, Mo., after giving it a trial, has concluded that it is a great nuisance to all concerned, except to the people that print and sell the stamps, and the merchants have agreed to stop their use after June 10. Even those who have been toiling painfully to accumulate stamps with which to procure cheap trinkets are gladly hailing the end of them with a sigh of relief.

While this nuisance has never gained a foothold in Duluth, it has in many cities, and most of them are coming to the point that St. Joseph has reached. At first the merchant that introduces them imagines that they are trade producers, and that people will buy more goods so as to get more stamps. They appeal to the patrons of the stores because they seem to promise something for nothing. Before the scheme has been in operation very long both find they are mistaken, and that they are working solely for the benefit of the trading stamp promoter. The merchant finds that people will not buy groceries or meat simply to get trading stamps, and that even if they did the fact that one merchant handles them forces others to do the same, and no one would get any special benefit. When they find how many bushels of stamps it takes to get any tangible return from them, the patrons begin to weary, and especially do they protest when they discover that in one way or another they have to pay a double price for all they get out of the stamps.

Hotel Gossip.

Col. J. V. Hillyer of "Alice A" fame, who has been stopping at the St. Louis for several days past, after quite an extended absence from Duluth, still expresses confidence in the future of the Rainy lake mining district, which he was, and is yet, heavily interested in.

"I believe that some day the mining properties up there will be worked with profit," said the colonel. "I hope so, at least, for my friends and myself are still interested in that region. I put a lot of money in there and as far as I can learn it is still where I left it. We had a great deal of faith in the Alice A proposition, for it certainly looked rich on the surface. The trouble was that a little deeper in the ground the indications were not so encouraging, but I believe now that if the shafts were sunk deep enough ore would be found in paying quantities, but to do this it would need a $300,000 or $400,000 company. To mine successfully in the Rainy Lake country means an expenditure of a vast amount of capital, although we did not realize this when we started in. It looked then as if just the contrary were the case, judging by surface indications. As it was we probably would have made it a paying proposition if we had had a large enough stamp mill.

"We met with a good deal of difficulty in getting our machinery into the region. We were pioneers on the ground, and transportation facilities were deplorably poor. I guess they are not very much improved even now."

"Indianapolis is having an unusual amount of building this spring, and an unusually large number of new buildings are being planned," said T. S. Ross of Indianapolis at the Spalding. "The building that the city is proudest of is the new federal structure, which will be ready for occupancy by July 1. It will not be completely finished by that time, but will be in such a state that the various branches of the government represented at Indianapolis may move into it. The cost of the building is to be about $1,000,000, and it is probable that by the time the structure is complete in every detail the entire cost will have reached $2,000,000. Work was begun on it early in 1902."

"Probably few persons know there was a time when life insurance was regarded as an impious attempt to change the decrees of Providence," said Joseph Clark of Minneapolis at the Spalding, "but not more than sixty years ago a New England preacher firmly denounced what he called the wicked attempts of the unholy persons who sought to thwart or control the fixed decrees of the Almighty by money meddling and gambling on the eternal verities of life and death, or something like that. That day has long passed, however, and now life insurance is more generally regarded as a religious duty than otherwise.

"The religious opposition to life insurance was probably the reason why fire insurance antidated it by many years. Both had their origin in Hartford, Conn., which is still an insurance stronghold. The Hartford companies first set the example, since followed by many others, of paying heavy losses promptly, even at the risk of their existence. In the great New York fire of 1835, when the losses were so great it was feared no company could pay them, the president of a Hartford company drove all the way to New York in a sleigh in freezing wather, with the secretary of the company and the money to pay the losses.

"This prompt action gave the company great prestige. Five out of the nine Hartford companies were destroyed by the great Chicago fire, their losses amounting to over $11,000,000. But every loss was paid in full, even by the companies that were wiped out of existence.

"Insurance in all its departments has become so strict a science and is now so interwoven with the habits and the financial affairs of the whole people that the proper comprehension of its intricacies requires a trained mathematical mind."

SATURDAY NIGHT TALK

Work, Temperance, Fun.

Chauncey M. Depew is considered a famous American humorist, but he has his serious intervals when he says things well worth quoting and pondering, and it could not have been a mere jest when he remarked the other day that the secret of longevity is work, temperance and fun. To these three elements in proper proportion he ascribes the satisfactions and successes of his long and happy life. He has no monoply on these ingredients that make up joy and length of days. They are within easy reach of any one of us, and if we have not honestly and earnestly tried to blend them in our own lives, why not begin today? The experiment may be well worth trying, and may take "that tired look" out of our faces, and discontent and despair out of our hearts.

Work—How much of latent blessing is wrapped up in that little word. The drift, to be sure today, is in the other direction. Shorter hours and easier jobs are coveted. Multitudes—either hate their work or else endure it while it lasts. But if they did but know it, their work is their salvation—not too much of it, to be sure, not too hard work, but a sufficient measure of regular useful work to call into action one's physical, mental, and moral energies. A business man strains to lay up enough money to permit him to retire from business, but when that longed-for day arrives, he often is at heart miserable. He really wishes he could be back at his desk or counter having an active part in the world of affairs. No discipline is much harder for a literary man or a scholar than to be denied the health wherewith to perform his daily task.

But brain work, you say, is quite different from mentonous manual toil or from household druggery. I admit it. But can't you force yourself to love your task instead of hating it? Can't you realize that multitudes must do just your kind of work if the world is to go on, and that in God's sight your labor is just as honorable as that of a college president. It is true, as the quaint old writer puts it, that a woman with a broom in her hand and the love of God in her heart, as she sweeps the rooms day by day, is making drudgery divine, and is helping the world to advance just as truly as is the minister who preaches a sermon. Mrs. Browning has beautifully depicted the resignation and contentment of one who accepts the work God gives him, is grateful for it and cheerful in it.

And ever at each period
He stopped and sang, Praised God,
Then back again his curls he threw
And meekly bent to work anew.

Temperance—No life is worth much to its owner or to the world, which in any sense is intemperate. In the matter of eating and drinking certain persons in order to be temperate have to become total abstainers. Because of their inheritance or because of their own acquired tendencies, moderate indulgence with respect to this edible or that liquid is impossible. And the safest way for young men is not to presume upon their ability to cope with their appetite when once it is aroused. But temperance means much more than one's attitude toward what one eats or drinks. It means self-mastery, the power to discern when one has had enough of anything. It means also temperance in speech, in moral judgment, in dress, in general decorum. Be a temperate man, then, not in a narrow or partisan sense, but in your whole attitude toward life.

Fun—Don't leave this element out. Life at best is serious and strenuous enough. Have your times of let-up. Even a Gladstone needed to chop down trees occasionally and presidents have to go fishing or bear-hunting. We cannot keep up to concert pitch all the time and do the best work. Let the clock run down occasionally and don't think that, because you cannot take a trip to Europe or sport an automobile, you cannot have any fun. Put your dignity aside and sport with little children now and then. Condescend to the birds and flowers. Let your dog or your kitten amuse you; or have a hobby. I know a man with great business interests who gets his pleasure and respite in hunting for and acquiring old furniture. No man's life ought to be so full that he cannot avail himself now and then of a good concert, a clean comedy, a pleasant social evening with friends. Thus we freshen ourselves for future tasks.

Work, temperature, fun—They may not be all the elements that make up a happy and well-balanced life, but when rightly blended they go far not only toward insuring for us a green old age, but toward making each day as it comes and goes "worth while."

THE PARSON.

A Prayer.

Grant us, O Lord, the grace to bear
The little prickling thorn;
The hasty word that seems unfair;
The twang of truths well worn;
The jest that makes our weakness plain;
The daring plan o'erturned;
The careless touch upon our pain;
The slight we have not earned;
The rasp of care, dear Lord, today,
Lest all these fretting things
Make needless grief, oh, give us, pray,
The heart that trusts and sings.

"Well, we are here."

Mrs. Brown heaved a mighty sigh and toppled over onto a cracker box for a rest which she felt was well earned.

"Yes, thank God," said Mr. Brown, wearily rubbing the back of his hand across his forehad.

"Don't I get any credit at all?" asked Mrs. Brown, with a display of unexpected spirit.

"No, hang it; you get the blame. If it hadn't been for you we wouldn't be here."

"That's just what I'm saying. If it hadn't been for me we would still be eating cold beans and bread on the back piazza, with nothing to sit on but boxes."

If it had'nt been for you we would have staid at home, wouldn't we? The house wouldn't even have been torn up. As for boxes, I don't see that they aren't as comfortable as that Morris chair you now occupy. Crazy notion, anyway, our picking up and hiking down here. Just as if the rain and wind weren't cold enough up town, without moving into the very place where they are manufactured. Damit, woman, I'm froze to the bone."

"Now, John, don't be unpleasant. Who would have thought we would get another cold spell after that week of lovely weather? I never dreamed of such a thing."

"Who'd have thought it? Why, anyone with a grain of common sense. This is Duluth, ain't it? And this is the first part of May ain't it? There you are. What wouldn't you expect at this time of the year?"

"What makes you so ugly, John? There's no use quarreling. We are here, and have got to make the best of it. It can't rain always. Help me set up the kitchen stove."

John growled out some unintelligible reply, and rose to do his wife's bidding. He was in anything but a pleasant frame of mind. A load of household goods had just been shoved off the flat car the Park Point street car people run for the accommodation of summer visitors, and various and sundry articles were standing about on the wet sand. It wasn't raining, but there was a heavy fog, almost wet as rain, and above the fog there were heavy clouds, which held out a rich promise of rain. The wind was from the northeast.

The house where they were to put in the summer appeared bare and cold. The stove, sitting sadly on the ground, twenty feet from "Camp Cheerful," looked woefully out of place. The litter of boxes, chairs and bedding scattered about advertised the fact that a change in the camp's name might not be at all out of place. Brown wondered why he had been such a fool as to be induced to leave the comfortable home on the hill for this desolate abiding place. The enthusiastic ravings of his wife's friends had been responsible for it, he admitted to himself. Never having been camping before the prospect they held out was an alluring one, and when Mrs. Brown announced at dinner one day that she had been able to rent just the dearest, sweetest, cutest little cottage in the world for the summer at a most reasonable figure he agreed with her that it would be lovely to put in the season on the Point.

"When shall we go?" she asked.

"Whenever you like, dear," he had replied, with a loving smile at her across the table.

So she had set upon an early day in May, and here they were.

Brown decided that camping wasn't so much fun, after all. It looked much better in pictures than it did in real life. He looked in a discouraged way at the small but weighty stove, and groaned aloud. How they were to keep warm, or keep from starving to death without the useful article being in the house he didn't know, and how he was to get it in the house, alone and unassisted, he didn't know. At this juncture two friendly neighbors, who had already established themselves in their summer residences, appeared on the scene and offered their assistance. Their appearance added a bit of cheer to the mournful event, and with their help the stove and the few articles of furniture were put in their places.

"Much obliged," said Brown, and handed out two good cigars.

"Don't mention it," they advised. "Always glad to help, I'm sure."

"They seem to be real nice and neighborly, don't they?" asked Mrs. Brown.

Mr. Brown agreed that they did, and Mrs. Brown then expressed the hope that their wives and daughters, if they had any, or both, would be just as nice and neighborly.

"Great Scott, Mattie," said Mr. Brawn, after the two had disappeared within their respective cottages, "we haven't got any wood. I plum forgot all about it."

"Don't be foolish. There's the ax; go over on the lake shore and cut up some drift wood."

"But Jim told me there wasn't enough of the right sort of driftwood to go around, and that a lot of people had to bring their fuel from the city."

"Never mind what Jim said. I saw a big load over there a little while ago myself. I am sure it is ours if we want it bad enough to go after it."

Brown found the log referred to. It was old and rotten and watersoaked. He didn't see how any use could be made of it for fuel, but it was the only thing in sight which appeared ready to receive the ax, so he applied the blade vigorously, and in the course of half an hour had an armful of the soggy stuff. It wouldn't burn when he carried it to the house, even when liberally soaked in kerosene, and finally Mrs. Brown went to one of the friendly neighbors and asked for the loan of a few sticks of wood, just enough to get supper with, she explained.

She was warmly greeted, but her request met with a cold reception. The aspect of affairs changed at once, and in the place of the genial spirit of hospitality, there arose an invisible but forbidding something that Mrs. Brown could not exactly explain to her husband when she returned to her summer home with a scant armful of wood.

"They didn't seem at all anxious to accommodate me," she said. "I wonder why?"

"If you had asked to borrow their bed, or their stove, it would have been different," observed her grumpy spouse, dryly.

"Why, what do you mean?"

"I mean that this ain't in the city, and that wood, from common report, is not a commodity that anyone will readily part with."

"How absurd, but if you think it is really true I will take it right back. I would hate to make a bad impression on our neighbors before we really have a chance to get acquainted with them."

"Oh, we'll get acquainted fast enough. Don't waste any good worrying material on that score, but banish that evil though commendable thought about returning the wood from your head. Keep it, now that you have got it; for heaven's sake, keep it! What do you suppose we are going to do? Fry eggs and boil coffee in the warmth of our love? Not on a day like this. If we had been married longer I would be tempted to say that even my love had frozen."

"John, what are you saying?" ejaculated the scandalized Mrs. Brown, who noted, however, that Mr. Brown, through the good offices of a fragrant cigar, was fast getting in better humor with himself and the world in general. She kept the wood. Soon a merry fire was blazing in the stove, and the cooking meal was filling the little dwelling with most delightful odors.

"Not so bad after all," submitted John, stretched out flat on his back on the lounge, when the cigar was half smoked. His wife was flying around the room, putting things to rights, and it wasn't long before the little place began to take on quite a cozy and homelike appearance.

The next morning there was still a little of the borrowed fuel left, enough to start breakfast with. Mr. Brown's countenance wore a worried expression as he gazed thoughtfully at the scanty supply.

"This will never do," he said. "It must be a beastly job getting any wood down here from town. I suppose the only way to do is to get up early in the morning and go out on the beach and watch for driftwood, before anyone else gets around."

"That would be a splendid plan," agreed Mrs. Brown enthusiastically. You had better try it tomorrow."

The man of the house did not look very well pleased with the prospect, but admitted that he could see no other easy way out of the difficulty.

The next day, an hour after daylight, Brown walked leisurely over to the lake shore with the ax in his hand. He was somewhat surprised to see three other men and two women there before him. Each man had colected a modest pile of wood, and the two women appeared to be standing guard over what had been gathered, but they cast envious glances toward the third pile, which a tall man in boots without the help of any member of the opposite sex had gotten together. It was a little larger than the others. Brown was surprised that he should find rivals on the scene, and so was Mrs. Brown, who arrived a few minutes later. Looking down the beach he was further surprised to see, at irregular intervals, sentries like the five he had already encountered. He could not tell just how far the line extended, for the heavy fog which still prevailed doubtless hid many from view.

"Good morning," he remarked to the nearest man.

"Good morning," the other growled, rather surrily.

The other members of the party extended a cold welcome. Mr. Brown felt sheepish, but he was there to stand up for his rights and determined to do it.

"These are our nice and neighborly neighbors," he said to Mrs. Brown, and grinned wickedly.

"Isn't it horrid of them," she replied.

"Very, they might have known that we, being newcomers, wanted the wood for our own use."

"Now, don't you go and get disagreeable, too."

"Me? Why, I never felt happier in my life."

"I must say you look it."

"You always were such a discerning woman, Mary."

"I think that sometimes I show better discernment in selecting husbands than neighbors."

"Sometimes? Thank you, my love. But do you happen to discern anything in the shape of a piece of wood tossing shoreward?"

"Oh, John, there is something," she exclaimed excitedly, and pointed down to the right, where a spike-like branch of a tree, pointing heavenward, like a finger, was marking the progress of a small tree trunk that rode easily along with the waves.

"I saw it first; it's mine," shouted Brown, and he made a dash for the spot where he thought the prize was going to land.

But two of the men were already making their way down the beach, with their eyes fixed on the floating object, while the third was pulling in a scrap of board by means of a pike pole.

"Sorry," observed one, "but the rule here is that whoever gets hold of the wood first keeps it."

"Oh," said Brown dejectedly, and looked from the short handle of his ax to the long handle of pike poles in possession of the others. "I didn't know that," he ended lamely.

"Live and learn," came the encouraging bit of advice, coldly given.

"Hanged if I see how I am going to even live, let alone learn, if this keeps up," growled the unfortunate newcomer. "But I envy you your nerve."

"Emerson says that envy is ignorance," said the exasperating neighbor.

"And that imitation is sulcide," commented Brown, as the third individual dashed down the wet trail of a receding wave and made a futile jab at the log with his sharp-pointed pole, getting out of reach of the next wave before he even allowed his feet to become wet. "The great man's words seem to be appropriately chosen for this occasion. I plead my ignorance, and am willing to admit the suicide part."

By this time two more men were on the spot, and others were rushing along the sand, like buzzards gathering for a feast. The log tossed about just out of reach in an aggravating way for several minutes, and then, riding triumphantly on the crest of a wave, was tossed several feet up on the beach. Three pikes were buried in the wood at about the same time, and the prize was divided into three equal parts.

"John, John," urged Mrs. Brown, pulling at his coattails, "there is a lovely log just landed a little ways up the shore."

The others were too busy to notice what he was about, until he he had made a quick run and buried his ax in the stick of timber. The log was his. It hadn't been in the water long enough to be more than slightly soaked, and he felt that he was well repaid for his morning's work. The friendly neighbors looked on with envious eyes, while Mrs. Brown's every action showed the pride she felt in her husband's grand achievement.

And every morning this little comedy is repeated, and every morning Brown looks hopefully at the clouds, hoping for a ray of sunlight. And next winter he will tell his friends of the lovely time he had camping on the Point.

A certain Duluth man went fishing one Sunday recently. It so happens that he is a highly respected citizen and a man of standing in the community in which he lives. He is also a member of the church, and his wife is a regular attendant. In view of these facts he did not deem it wise to advertise that he was breaking the Sabbath, or, after his trip was over with, that he had broken it. So he said little about the matter, except to a few bosom friends at the time, and took all necessary precautions in the way of hiding his tackle and necessary equipment when on his way to and from the fishing grounds. But later surprising developments made a different ending than anticipated to the adventure, and he is now telling the story as a joke on himself.

The sportsman arrived at the stream he had chosen without being detected by any members of his church. He did not meet with very good success after his arrival there, however, so that when he started home, along towards evening, the fish were not conspicuous enough about his person to attract attention. He had a good time, though, and was not altogether sorry that he did not have a string of trout to take back with him, for it would have worried him to determine what to do with them when he reached the city. The fact that he had a fising rod with him caused little worry on this score, for he likewise carried an umbrella. The rod was one of the jointed variety, so it was an easy matter to slip it inside the umbrella and thus conceal it completely from view. He congratulated himself on the smoothness of the trick, at the same time thanking his lucky stars that it was not raining when he finally drew near the end of the street car that was to carry him home.

He reached his residence without mishap and sat the umbrella in the hall while he went upstairs to change his clothes. The next time he thought of the fishing rod was a week later, when his wife returned from church in a fit of rage and mortification. She had not been gone from the house long, and he wondered what had brought her back so soon. She had scarcely time to reach the place of worship, let alone attending the services. But it was not necessary for him to inquire as to the cause of her return. She had barely entered the door before the reason was made known to him in a tone of voice which he had learned meant trouble.

There was sufficient cause for her wrath. When she left the house the sky was overcast with clouds, so she took with her the self-same umbrella that her fond husband had carried on his fishing jaunt the preceding Sunday. It did not begin to rain until she was within a short distance of the church. Then, as she was walking along in the midst of a number of other people, bound for the same destination, it began to sprinkle. People around her began to raise their umbrellas, and she did likewise. She lifted the handy little article above her head, pressed her thumb on the spring and shoved the cover upwards. With a clatter which could be heard half a block the ill-fated fishing rod dropped to the stone flagging at her feet, and, of course, everyone in her immediate vicinity turned to look. It was but the work of a moment to chuck the pole back into the place from whence it came, but the morning was spoiled for her. She felt that in her state of mind the services would do her little good, and so turned her footsteps homeward.

DUN'S WEEKLY TRADE REPORT

Unseasonable Weather Has Been Only Drawback to Trade.

New York, May 20.—R. G. Dun & Co.'s weekly review of trade says:

Unseasonable weather is the chief cause of complaint, both as to distribution of merchandise and agricultural development. At many leading cities retail trade in spring and summer wearing apparel is falling behind expectations and there is less than the customary reorder business in wholesale and jobbing departments. Although no actual reduction in the crops is yet assured, sufficient uncertainty has appeared to render dealers in the farming districts somewhat cautious regarding the accumulation of supplies beyond current requirements. Otherwise the trade situation is satisfactory. Manufacturing is fully maintained, the percentage of idle machinery being smaller than any recent date, and the textile industries make notable progress under the stimulus of advancing raw materials.

The few strikes now in progress cause little interruption, and some of the July 1 wage scales have been adjusted, but others are still under discussion.

Railway earnings thus far available for May show an average gain of 8.8 per cent over last years', and foreign commerce at this port for the last week increased $3,957,157 in value of exports, while imports declined $593,312 in comparison with the same week in 1904.

Structural shapes have taken the position of prominence in the iron and steel industry. Building operations that were retarded by inclement weather are now under way, and the tonnage of steel required will keep mills fully occupied for some time. The industry as a whole is well engaged and the output for May promises to attain a new record.

Higher raw materials have given more stability to the textile manufacturer. There is no disposition to advance cotton goods, buyers limiting their operations to immediate needs, despite the difficulty frequently encountered in securing deliveries. Frequent withdrawals of lines of woolen indicate that agents have had a successful season, particularly in worsteds. Comparatively few cancellations are reported. An advance of over a cent in the average of domestic wool price quotations makes the highest average level of recent years.

Sales of harness leather and belting are restricted. Supplementary orders for spring shoes are still coming forward at New England factories.

Failures this week numbered 234 in the United States against 236 last year, and 11 in Canada compared with 12 a year ago.

STUCK PINS IN WITNESS.

Crawfordsville, Ind., May 20.—In a crowded court room directed by the presiding judge, two physicians yesterday stuck pins into the body of William Hostetter of Ladoga and held burning matches to his flesh without producing any effect.

The physical experiment was made to test the truth of an allegation that Hostetter was shamming paralysis during a damage suit against A. R. McCamp.

The only trouble that unionism now has in Duluth is that between the union of painters, paperhangers and decorators with Isaac Deatherage of West Duluth. This matter has been pretty well aired in the columns of the daily papers as the strike has progressed and it is hardly necessary to review it in this department. The men walked out because, they claimed, Mr. Deatherage was employing a non-union man in violation of his agreement with the union; that an effort was made to have the man brought into the union, which, the union claims, was prevented by Mr. Deatherage. The man himself claims that he was induced by Mr. Freshney, the business agent of the union, to make application for membership and to give an order on Mr. Deatherage for $25, the initiation fee. Gaspard, the man in question, said that afterwards, having formerly been a member of the union, he considered that to pay up his back dues would be sufficient and countermanded the order on Deatherage, offering to pay up back dues, which amounted to something over $12. This was refused and Gaspard would not go in. Both sides are accusing the other of violation of agreement and the situation has resolved itself into a quarrel of "did-didn't." It is hoped the matter will be straightened out soon.

The Herald reported the death of Edward Marie of the Painters' union last Tuesday. It may here be mentioned that much grief is felt among the associates of the dead man over his passing. He stood high in union circles and was repeatedly honored by being elected to office in his local. He has held every office in the gift of the painters' union up to that of president. The funeral will be held tomorrow afternoon under the auspices of the union, which will turn out in a body to do the last honors. A committee, consisting of Thomas Freshney, R. I. Munkevy, James Powers, B. A. Diers and John Carlson has charge of the arrangements. Mrs. Marie is sick in St. Mary's hospital with pneumonia, the same malady as carried off her husband. Her condition is very serious. It is hoped that she will be spared for the care and protection of her two small children, who have been deprived by death of their father.

MINNESOTA MAKES FAST TRIP.

Chicago, May 20.—According to advices received here by Passenger Traffic Manager P. S. Eustis of the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy railroad, a record beating trip has been made by the Great Northern Steamship company's twin screw steamer Minnesota, between Seattle, Wash., and Yokohama. The Minnesota, with a big passenger list and a large cargo reached Yokohama yesterday. She left Seattle, May 5. Her time of fourteen days is twenty-four hours better than the steamer's contract speed called for. This time is believed to be the best ever made between Seattle and Yokohama. The trip just concluded is the second voyage of the Minnesota.

THE COAL INDUSTRY.

Few New Features in the Western Trade.

Chicago, May 20.—The Black Diamond, official newspaper of the coal industry, reviewing Western trade conditions, says:

There are few new features in connection with the Western coal trade this week. Prices on most of Eastern bituminous product continue fairly steady, but on Western domestic coals the market continues extremely weak, and, if anything, on some grades of coal is lower than it was. The teamsters' strike continues to be a feature in the Chicago trade, and, while deliveries are being made with more regularity, there is no doubt but what considerable industrial business is being held back by the crisis caused by this trouble. Contracts continue to be closed up, and in some instances substantial progress has been made in this direction. The anthracite demand is dull and stagnant and the shipping companies are making considerable complaint at the lack of business. Production of coals in the Western bituminous fields continue more or less restricted, even for this season of the year, and probably will not average more than two or three days a week in most of the fields north of the Ohio river and this side of Pittsburg.

THE IRON ORE TRADE.

Rapid Shipments Point to a New Record.

Cleveland, May 20.—The Iron Trade Review says: Shipments are being made so rapidly that it seems probable they will make a new record, possibly 5,000,000 tons shipped from upper lake ports. Steel companies have within a few days sent out inquiries for about 50,000 tons of ore, but no sales of consequence have been made. Quotations are as follows: Old range Bessemer (56.70 per cent iron natural, .05 phosphorus), $3.85 to $4; Mesaba Bessemer, same content, $3.65 to $3.75; old range non-Bessemer (52.80 per cent iron natural), $3.35; Mesaba non-Bessemer (52.80 per cent iron), $3.20.

INTERCLASS TRACK MEET SATURDAY

Selection of Athletes Who Will Represent High School at the Meet at Ironwood June 10 Will Then Be Made—Interscholastic Rules as to Attendance May Bar Some Candidates.

Next Saturday, May 27, the interclass track meet, at which the candidates will be chosen to represent the local school in the meet at Ironwood, June 10, between Ironwood, Bessemer, Ashland, Duluth and Superior, will be held.

Much interest in the event is being manifested by the entire school as well as by the contestants. Many good men are being developed, and it is expected that several of the school records will be broken next Saturday. In the pole vault Jefferson has already equaled the record, making nine feet without difficulty Thursday afternoon on the campus, while in the shot-put Parks is throwing within a few inches of the record. Several of the men have run the hundred-yards in eleven seconds, but with consistent training they will undoubtedly lower this. Those who have entered in the high and broad jumps are also showing up well, as are the men that are entered in the hurdles and the weights.

At the athletic meeting that was held in the assembly hall Monday afternoon it was decided to purchase a new discus and to procure a new handle for the hammer. The other apparatus is all in first-class condition and ready for use.

Principal Smith spoke for a short time, saying that according to the scholastic rules governing the high schools in this state it would be necessary for all the men who are on the school teams to have been members of the school at least one seamster, or of some other school in the state for a similar time, and to have successfully passed in studies for that term. He said that the law had not been strictly enforced during the football season as he had not notified the boys of the regulations the year before. Henceforth, however, it will be strictly lived up to. It is also necessary that the player be up in his lessons during the time that he is on the team.

ROBERT D. SMITH,
Captain of Track Team of Duluth Central High School.

Exceptions may be made to this for the track men as they have not had a sufficient warning to enable them to comply with the regulations, provided arrangements to that effect can be made with the other schools entered in the meet.

The matter of the annual dues was discussed at some length. According to a motion that was passed by the association last year each boy in the school is to be assessed 25 cents per year to the treasurer for the purpose of assisting the finances so that necessary provisions may be made for the various school teams and all obligations may be met more promptly. The treasury is badly in need of these funds at the present time, as it is obligatory that the expenses of the track team be paid in advance of going to Ironwood next month. And furthermore the baseball team needs at least a little assistance. Collectors have been around to the various rooms in the past two weeks, but they have not met with the desired success. Out of a possible fifty or sixty dollars but twenty or twenty-five have been secured.

* * *

Baseball is also attracting the attention of the school. Outside of the games to be played by the regulars, probably that which is being most eagerly looked forward to is the contest that has been promised between the seniors and the faculty.

In the past several years but two games have been pulled off between the graduating students and the instructors, and in both the latter have gone down to a glorious defeat. As the personnel of the faculty will be much changed next year, the teachers are very desirous of retrieving their lost honors and securing revenge before it is forever too late. At all events the contest will be teeming with excitement and productive of a great deal of merriment for all those who attend.

* * *

The lower classes are beginning to turn out on the campus several afternoons in the week for the purpose of developing a class team that will be able to carry away the laurels over the heads of their rivals. Several close games have already resulted. Wednesday afternoon the sophomores and the seniors played an eleven-inning game on the grounds at Forty-seventh avenue east, the latter winning by a score of 8 to 7. A game may be looked for any time between the "ponsgassanorums" and the "wise fools," provided the former are able to borrow sufficient courage to issue a challenge.

THE AGASSIZ CLUB.

The Agassiz club held an interesting session in the biological laboratory yesterday afternoon.

Miss Lillie Olssen gave a very interesting paper on "How Animals Hunt," after which those present entered into a general discussion of the subject.

Arrangements were then made for the annual outing of the club, which will be the same as that of last year, a launch ride up the St. Louis river to Fond du Lac. Every summer the members of the club plan to have a large outing at which they may observe the beauties of nature together and also have a good time. In the past these excursions have been unusually successful, but an effort is to be made to have this one eclipse any that has hitherto been given by the club.

At the next meeting it is proposed to make a trip into the woods in order to vary the program and at the same time search for some of the things that have been discussed at the meetings during the winter.

Class Night Program.

The senior committee on class night is working hard to produce a novel and interesting program for that occasion, and Principal Smith and Prof. Thomas of the English department are busy looking over the essays of the graduates, the five best of which will be presented on commencement night.

The class night exercises will be given Wednesday evening, June 28, and the commencement exercises Friday evening, June 30. There will be no baccalaureate sermon this year, as was erroneously stated by the morning paper.

School Notes.

The seniors will give their second spread in the high school building Friday evening, June 9. The preparations are already under way, and give promise of the most successful affair of its kind that has ever been given.

* * *

Next Friday the freshmen will give their spread in the high school. The class will first enjoy the spread that is to be furnished by the girls, after which the other classes are invited to come and enjoy the dancing.

* * *

If you have not already brought your quarter for the Athletic association, be sure to do so Monday.

Profs. Thomas and Campbell were absent yesterday afternoon because of illness.

RAIN-IN-THE-FACE

His Story Told In Indian Pictures.

"Revenge!" cried Rain-in-the-Face,
"Revenge upon all the race
Of the White Chief with yellow hair!"
And the mountains dark and high
From their crags re-echoed the cry
Of his anger and despair.
—Longfellow.

Probably the most interesting, if not the most famous Indian in the annals o fthe Sioux is Rain-in-the-Face. For many years he was a war chief of note; and later an exile in Canada. At present he passes his days on the Standing Rock reservation in North Dakota, the last of the great Sioux leaders. He is a full-blooded Unkpapa Sioux and was born some sixty years ago iin the northern part of Sout Dakota, one of a family of six brothers, the most celebrated of whom, excepting himself, was Iron Horse.

Physically he is of splendid proportions and remarkably striking in appearance, although a wound in the right leg necessitates the use of crutches. Time has dealt kindly with him, and he shows but few traces of his years. His career has been a strenuous one fro mthe time of his birth until our last trouble with the Indians at Pine Ridge.

TAKING THE SCALP OF AN ENEMY.

With the hope of adding something new and certainly at first hand to fiction and fact relating to him, the writer asked Rain-in-the-Face some years ago to chronicde in his own way by means of Indian picture writings a few of the most interesting events of his life. The result was a collection of rare drawings, three of which are given herewith. Indian hieroglphics in general are scarce today and more so those executed by so famous a chief.

In one picture he is shown in the battle of the Little Big Horn, the battle in which Custer fell. The five marks on the horse's neck, body and legs denote in Indian writing that he had five horses shot from under him. In another he goes courting and wooes and wins his first wife. He takes with him his finest spotted horse, to make as great an impression as possible upon the Indian maiden he has chosen to wed. In still another picture he kills an enemy, a Crow Indian of note, who stole a horse belonging to the chief. He has drawn in this picture one of the magnificent war bonnets used by the Sioux of the early days, which sometimes measured twelve feet in length.

* * *

THE CUSTER MASSACRE.

It is through his connection with the massacre of Gen. Custer and men that Rain-in-the-Face is principally known. His role in that historic drama goes back some three years previous to the fight, when a surgeon in the army and a civilian trader attached to Gen. D. S. Stanley's expedition were murdered as they stopped to feed and water their horses on the Red river.

BRINGING HOME HIS FIRST BRIDE.

Some eighteen months later Charley Reynolds, a government scout, subsequently killed at the battle of the Little Big Horn, brought in information to Gen. Custer at Fort Lincoln that the Indian who had murdered both men was Rain-in-the-Face, then at the Standing Rock reservation drawing government rations.

Gen. Custer immediately detailed his brother, Col. Tom Custer, and a cavalry captain and escort to arrest the murderer. Rain-in-the-Face was found in the trader's store at the agency and personally arrested by Col. Tom Custer.

When the prisoner and his captors returned he was brought before Gen. Custer. The general questioned the prisoner closely, but to no purpose. The Indian remained imperturable. The next day, however, he confessed to the general that he was the murderer and boasted of it and of the brutal manner in which it was done. That he had shot the elder of the two first, but not fatally, and that he beat out his victims' brains with a tomahawk and had then shot their bodies full of arrows and finally scalped both men. Neither of the murdered men was armed.

In thes pring of 1874 Rain-in-the-Face joined Sitting Bull's band of hostiles, openly proclaiming that he would "cut the heart out of Tom Custer and eat it." Nothing further of him was heard until the memorable massacre of Custer and his troopers, June 26, 1876. In this fight he distinguished himself among his own people by his bravery and generalship.

It has been many times stated that he personally killed Gen. Custer, and that he cut the heart from the body of Col. Tom Custer and rode about the field with a part of the grewsome trophy between his teeth.

Both stories have been affirmed and denied many times. Mrs. Custer, wife of the general, however, is authority for the statement that he cut out Tom Custer's heart.

In the spring of 1874 Rain-in-the-Face admits the deed.

* * *

AN INDIAN'S LOVE AFFAIRS.

The writer, finding Rain-in-the-Face under the influence of "firewater" one night, and consequently in a talkative mood, asked him the truth regarding these tales and he did not hesitate to answer, although the story of the fight is a sealed book among the Indians, as a rule. Rain-in-the-Face said, in substance, that he did not recognize either of the Custers during the fight, although so close to the soldiers at times as to be able to touch them with their "coup sticks," and it was not until after the battle that they knew they had met Custer and his command. The reason given for their inability to recognize Custer was that the general, who always wore his hair long—a fancy suggested by the early frontiersmen—had recently had it cut short, and that he wore a buckskin hunting jacket such as any scout might wear, and was absolutely without insigma of rank of any kind.

Rain-in-the-Face did not escape this battle unscratched. He will carry to the grave undoubted evidence that the men of the gallant Seventh cavalry fought well in their last engagement. While charging over a prostrate soldier, pinioned beneath his dead horse, the chief received a wound from the bullet of a 45-caliber revolver which burrowed the flesh on the right thigh for about four inches, running diagonally upward, showing it to have been fired from beneath him. Shortly after he received another wound, the bullet entering back of the left knee. Rain-in-the-Face dismounted with difficulty, an in order to remove the bullet from the wound used his scalp knift. In doing so he severed the tendons of the leg, which deprived him of its use forever.

Rain-in-the-Face did not fight all his battles upon the field. Some were fought upon the hearth. He admits having had seven wives, few of which lived either long or happily with him, and the final chapter of his domestic life, if domestic it can be called, closed with the violent death of his last spouse. The unfortunate seventh was found dead in his tepee with her throat cut from ear to ear. When asked about the cause of her death, he denied all knowledge of the matter and calmly went about his business. Of course it would be unjust to ascribe this sad ending of his seventh venture to him without proof.

More strangely still, and paradoxical as it may appear, he is now an Indian policeman. Cropped hair and felt hat have replaced the scalp lock and war bonnet, blue coat the war shirt, but beneath his uniform the skin is still the same color—red.

PRISON FOR THE AUTOISTS

Judge Will Make Examples of All Reckless Drivers.

New York, May 20.—Aroused by the great number of persons killed outright or crippled for life by automobiles, the three justices of the court of special sessions have publicly declared war on the reckless scorchers. Hereafter the guilty speeders will be fined heavily for the first offense and sent to prison for a second. Edward R. Thomas, millionaire horse owner, may be the first victim. He will be arraigned Monday and District Attorney Jerome is expected to prosecute in person.

Mr. Thomas, besides being arrested several times, escaping with slight fines, has had more serious troubles with his high-power machines. In one of his cars he ran over and killed a child in New York, and he was reported to have killed a woman in Italy while on a motor car tour. Of a hundred letters received by Mr. Jerome, one is from John P. Peters, president of the Independent club, and another is from Reginald Pelham Bolton of the Washington Heights Taxpayers' association. Both men demand drastic action be taken with Thomas on Monday.

Justice Hinsdale, in special sessions, imposed fines on a banker, a broker and a chauffeur. In sentencing Le Grande C. Griswold, the banker, the judge said: "You are fined $75, with the alternative of going to the city prison for thirty days. You are allowed to get off with this fine now, but another offense and you will be sent to jail." Lewis G. Young, the broker, was fined $35, with the alternative of ten days in jail. William Van Kleeck, the chauffeur, was sentenced to a fine of $50 or ten days in jail. All three men paid their fines without a murmur.

Justice Hinsdale said the imposition of fines, however large, had seemingly no deterrent effect, and he and his associates, Justices Keller and Wyatt, desired to state that those who persistently speeded their motor cars, wantonly defying the law, would be imprisoned for the second offenes.

Did Not Say So.

To the Editor of The Herald:

In last Thursday's issue of The Herald your reporter says of the 17th of May celebration in West Duluth:

M. Wesenberg, editor of the Duluth Scandinav, spoke of the conditions which led to Norwegian independence, and of the remarkable development of Norway since it asserted its independence. He prophesied the still further separation of Norway from Sweden, and predicted greater things, commercially, for Norway as this break develops.

The reporter's early education had perhaps been neglected in the study of the parent language of English, and not been much improved since. Somebody has been stuffing him concerning what Wesenberg said at the celebration. The Scandinavians who were present at the meeting know better, and to others it does not matter very much what Wesenberg said. You will readily admit, however when a person has been reported wrong by any newspaper, he has a just claim to be set right.

Wesenberg did not prophesy the still greater separation of Norway from Sweden. On the contrary, he pointed to the friendly relations between Swedes and Norwegians in this country, where there are no demands of royalty and nobility to cause strife, and said that the rulers in Sweden and in Norway could learn something from that fact. Concerning the strained relations between Sweden and Norway at present on the consular question, Wesenberg said that the Norwegian storting (legislature) should be law provide not only for separate Norwegian consuls, but also for separate Norwegian foreign secretary, responsible to the Norwegian storting. The foreign commence of Norway demanded this, because of its special interests. But this is no separation from Sweden. It would be a black day in the history of both countries, if Norway and Sweden ever separate. But the rights of each country must be respected by the other. And as the union between Norway and Sweden was established on the basis of perfect equality of both countries, Norway has an undoubted and indisputable right to establish her own consuls and her awn foreign secretary whenever she pleases. By the constitution of Norway, the king has only a suspensive veto in Norway; he may interpose his veto twice, the third storting adopting the same bill does not ask the king for his sanction. The bill becomes the law of the land on its adoption by the third successive storting. And the king will have to bow to the law in Norway just as much as will the humblest citizen. Three successive stortings passed the bill for the abolition of nobility in Norway in defiance of the king's twice veto. And on the third passage of the bill, nobility had to go. It will be the same thing in the consular question. But neither Norwegians nor Swedes will ever think seriously of separation—not if they love their country.

Respectfully,
M. WESENBERG,
Editor Duluth Scandinav.

ADVANCE IN WHEAT

Crop Damage Reports Thick and Market Had Advance.

Talk of Rust In Oklahoma and Rain Predictions.

Duluth Board of Trade, May 20.—Crop damage reports were again thick today and the wheat market had a good advance. Oklahoma was again sending in pessimistic stories with talk of rust and predictions of more rain where already there has been too much. The bad news was not confined to that locality either, but came from many parts of the Southwest. The cash demand, too, was very good. Chicago reported shippers having trouble in finding cash grain. Receipts at Minneapolis are running pretty heavy, but much of the grain going there is being shipped from Chicago. In today's receipts of 200 cars there were 75 from Chicago.

The Liverpool market closed unchanged to ½d lower and Paris ¼-½c higher. Broomhall estimates the worlds' shipments for the week at 8,800,000 bus.

The July option in Duluth advanced 1¾c, at Minneapolis 1⅞-¾c, at Chicago 1c, at New York and St. Louis ⅝c and at Kansas City ⅜c. In Duluth the September option advanced 1c, in Minneapolis 1-¾c, in Chicago ⅞c, in New York and St. Louis ⅝c and in Kansas City ⅝-¾c.

Car receipts at Duluth were 3 against 5 last year, and at Minneapolis 200 against 80 last year, making a total for the Northwest of 203 against 85 last year. Chicago received 7 against 7 last year.

Primary receipts of wheat were 284,000 bus, last year 146,000 bus. Shipments 219,000 bus, last year 417,000 bus. Clearances of wheat and flour aggregated 44,000 bus.

Corn in the Liverpool market closed ¼d lower. July corn in the Chicago market closed ⅜c lower. July oats closed unchanged. Primary receipts of corn were 482,000 bus, last year 332,000 bus. Shipments 395,000 bus, last year 444,000 bus. Clearances were 122,000 bus.

In the Duluth market trading in wheat was dull, but the price was strong. The July option opened ⅜c lower at $1.03½ and sold up to $1.06¼ at 11:10. The close was at $1.06, a gain for the day of 1⅜c. September advanced 1c to 84½c. The May option was not traded in and the close was nominally 1½c higher at $1.06½.

Cash wheat was very dull. No. 1 northern continued at May price.

Flax was dead. May closed ½c lower, July and fall options were unchanged.

Oats and rye were unchanged.

Following were the closing prices on the Duluth board:

Wheat to arrive—No. 1 northern, $1.06½; On track—No. 1 northern, $1.06½; No. 2 northern, $1.02. Durum No. 1, 88c; No. 2, 87c; May, $1.06½; July, $1.06; Sept., 84½c. Flax to arrive, $1.41½; on track, $1.43½; May, $1.39½; July, $1.41; Sept., $1.25; Oct., $1.24¼. Oats to arrive, 30¼c; on track, 29½c. Rye to arrive, 75c; on track, 75c. Barley—Feed, 39½@41c.

Cars inspected: Wheat 3, last year 5; rye 1, flax 1, last year 24.

Receipts: Barley, 347; flax, 1,120.

Shipments: Wheat, 59,561; oats, 3,387; barley, 968.

THE CHICAGO MARKET.

Additional Rain Imparts Firm Tone To Wheat.

Chicago, May 20.—Additional rain in Kansas and Oklahoma imparted a firm tone to wheat here today. Commission houses were liberal purchasers, the September option being in especially good demand. At the opening the market was a trifle easier owing to liberal receipts at Minneapolis, but sentiment soon became quite firm. July opened a shade to ¼@¼c lower, at 86⅞c to 87c and advanced to 87½c. Minneapolis, Duluth and Chicago reported receipts of 210 cars, against 89 cars last week and 92 cars a year ago.

On buying on several influential traders the market became strong. An advance at Minneapolis was a prominent factor. July sold up to 88¾c and closed at 88⅝c, a gain of an even cent over yesterday's final quotations.

Strength of wheat offset the effect of improved weather conditions causing a steady tone in the corn market. Pit traders were the principal buyers. July opened ½c to ⅝c lower at 47⅞c to 48c. After selling at 48¼c, the price settled back to 48c. Local receipts were 67 cars, with 9 of contract grade.

The market eased off as trading progressed, July declining to 47⅜c. The close was weak with July off ⅝c at 47¾c.

Excellent weather had a bearish effect on the oats market. July opened ¼c to ⅝@⅜c lower at 29½@29¾c and sold at 29¼c. Local receipts were 153 cars.

A five-cent advance in the price of live hogs created a firm tone in the provision market. Packers were moderate purchasers. July pork opened 2½@5c higher at $12.65 and sold up to $12.79. Lard was up a shade to 2½@5c at $7.35 to $7.37½. Ribs were up 2½c at $7.27½.

GRAIN GOSSIP.

Logan & Bryan, Chicago: Wheat—Firm cables tended to off-set the improved weather map this morning, making for a firm start. For a moment the market hesitated then through the balance of the session steadily advanced. The strong cash situation was reflected by the sharp advance in May. Stocks in all primary markets are decreasing rapidly with good wheat a mighty scarce article. While today's advance was in no way sensational the market was nevertheless persistently bought and this buying being from what was considered very good source. The general situation as we view it remains unchanged. Regardless of the crop damage reported our wheat market for July and September does not look high considering the cash demand from all points. We still feel the bull side is the wise one to follow and continue favoring purchases on set-backs.

Corn—At no time in today's session did this market show any disposition to advance or take part in the advance made by wheat. The trade has been extremely quiet, the feature of the market being selling of the distant futures by the prominent bull interest popularly believed to be on the long side of the market. This market does not act well and gives little evidence of anything being done immediately on the bull side of the futures. The high price in the speculative market has caused a flattening out in primary shipments and if continued will result in stocks piling up. We still feel the proper course to pursue in this market is to sell the futures on the strong spots.

* * *

Chicago Tribune: Cash brokers reported it easier to sell wheat to millers than to buy it yesterday. Total stocks of wheat in all positions here, public and private, are not much over 3,000,000 bus, and as there are said to be 100,000 bus more of such poor quality that it is not fit to mill, and 1,000,000 to 1,200,000 bus already owned by millers and ordered out by them as they want it. This leaves barely 500,000 bus of all kinds of wheat in all positions that are in any sense on the market, and as the stocks decrease, holders are demanding higher premiums.

* * *

E. W. Dennis, Chicago: There is every indication, as far as I can see, for what, by way of contrast, will show like perfect weather conditions, and while stocks will show liberal decrease, yet a year ago the visible decreased 3,900,000 bus, and for the moment July may not bulge much. I feel safe in advising sales of September wheat; if you will sell it judiciously and follow it by sales on scale up, if you have to, until the decline is running at that, always is done from the appearance of new wheat, whatever the price does after that.

CAPITAL IMPAIRED.

Life Insurance Company Made Bad Investment.

New York, May 20.—Following the Equitable Life disclosures comes the announcement by the state insurance department that it has discovered an impairment of $70,257 in the capital stock of the United States Life insurance company, controlled by interests allied with the Goulds, due to unwise investments in securities of the Virginia Passenger and Power company, controlled by Frank Gould, and an over-valuation of real estate amounting to $101,750.

The impairment has been made good by a friend of the company, said to be Frank Gould, or some member of the Gould family, taking over the securities. Dr. John P. Munn, family physician of the Goulds, is president of the company, and Charles A. Gardiner, personal counsel of the Gould family, is one of the directors.

CHICAGO MAN SAYS

His Wife Wanted Him to Commit Suicide.

Chicago, May 20.—In order that she might get the insurance on his life, amounting to $6,000, John Joseph Butler, 5249 Madison avenue, charges in an answer filed to his wife's divorce bill that she came to him with a razor in her hand and suggested that they commit suicide together.

"She threw her arms around my neck," Butler says, "and implored me to die with her, saying we were of no account on earth, and would be better off dead. The plan was that I was to take the razor and cut my throat and she was to follow."

Butler says that he put off his answer and later learned that his wife did not intend to carry out her part of the suicide agreement, but intended to get him to kill himself in that manner, so that she could get possession of his life insurance.

His wife filed her suit for divorce April 13, alleging that he threw a cup of hot cocoa at her, poured a pot of hot tea on her head, and chased her with a furnace shaker.

Butler denied all these charges.

DECLINE IN STOCKS

After Showing of Strength at Opening, Market Slumped.

All the Traders Sold Stocks and Offered Them Down.

New York, May 20.—Some efforts were made to lift prices on the stock exchange early in the week but liquidation developed on account of anxiety over the future of the iron and steel trade. The discussion of the determination of the administration to purchase Panama canal supplies in cheaper markets abroad aroused a fear that the whole subject of tariff revision was to be opened. Confidence in the working out of plans for harmony in the Northwestern railroad field was impaired by the dropping of the Harriman representatives from the Northern Pacific directorate. Unfavorable crop weather also contributed to the depression and political uneasiness abroad induced some selling here for that account. The money market was undisturbed by some large transactions.

New York, May 20.—The holiday in London today relieved the stock market from the recent pressure to liquidate from that source and prices rebounded sharply. There were running sales of 5,000 shares of United States Steel at an extreme gain of a point and gains reached about a point in St. Paul, Baltimore & Ohio, General Electric, New York Central and Locomotive preferred and a large fraction in Union Pacific, Chesapeake & Ohio, Locomotive and United States Steel preferred.

Quite a number of substantial advances were made on relatively small purchases before the rise reached a level that induced real realizing. The most strength was shown by the metal and the railway equipment stocks. Union Pacific got close to 119.

Top price showed advances ranging to about a point for United States Steel preferred, Copper, Lead, Locomotive, American Car, L. & N., Ontario & Western, Cleveland, C. C. & St. Louis and C. & O. Gains were completely wiped out by a movement to realize near the o'clock and most of the standard railroad stocks sold fractionally under last night. Reading ran off rapidly to 89, Illinois Central and Sloss-Sheffield declined 1½, and D. & H., Minneapolis, St. Paul & Soo and Pump 1⅞ to 2¼. Northern Pacific dropped 3.

Free and general liquidation which was checked only momentarily was renewed after the appearance of the bank statement with its heavy expansion and deep cut into the surplus reserve. There were only a few notable exceptions to losses of 1 or more as a result. Northern Pacific dropped 4, St. Paul, Minneapolis, St. Paul & Soo, Rubber preferred and Smelting 2½ to 3. Northwestern, Great Northern preferred, Illinois Central and General Electric 2, Union Pacific, New York Central, eRading, O. & W. and oCpper 1½. Westinghouse Electric a point. United States Steel sold under 2⅝. The profit taking by shorts made no appreciable rally and the closing was weak.

Quotations furnished by Edwards-Wood Co., room A, Torrey building.

STOCK GOSSIP.

Logan & Bryan to Paine, Webber & Co.: The market closed weak. First prices were strong and for a while the market looked as if it would do better, but the pressure was so evident in the last two sessions and was again resumed after the publication of the bank statement, the market slumped sharply. The bank figures were worse than expected. The stock market does not act well. The fact that it shows very little disposition to rally does not speak well for immediate improvement. Liquidation has been thorough and very severe and all that can be hoped for is a speculative rally from the short interest. In the event of a sharp rally we favor selling stocks.

* * *

Walker Bros. to Paine, Webber & Co.: The market was heavy and many stocks broke sharply. All the traders were selling stocks and offering them down. The bank statement was not good and after this there was further selling. At the close talk was bearish. We look for a weak and nervous market Monday.

* * *

Dick Brothers to Paine, Webber & Co.: After a show of some strength at the opening market turned heavy again and broke badly in the second hour. There was urgent and heavy selling for both accounts. Bear traders were very much in evidence. The bank statement was received very unfavorable.

TREASURY BALANCES.

Washington, May 20.—Today's statement of the treasury balances in the general fund exclusive of the $150,000,000 gold reserve in the division of redemption shows: Available cash balance, $123,571,472; gold, $69,947,561; silver, $65,638,845.

THE COTTON MARKET.

New York, May 20.—The cotton market opened firm at an advance of 4@6 points on week end covering, accelerated by good cables and some talk of too much rain in Texas, although the weather showed favorable conditions in most sections. Business was quiet during the morning and prices held within a point or two of the opening figures.

Cotton futures closed steady; May, 7.88; June, 7.65; July and Aug., 7.71; Sept., 7.78; Oct., 7.85; Nov., 7.85; Dec., 7.89; Jan., 7.93; Feb., 7.95; March, 8.01. Spot closed quiet; middling uplands, 8.30; do gulf, 8.55. Sales 27 bales.

COPPER GOSSIP.

Boston to Paine, Webber & Co.: The market today showed evidence of a strong bear party. Stocks were steadily sold all through the session with practically no rally. The coppers which have had only a slight advance held remarkably well, there being no change of price worthy of mentioning. On any further declines Monday we think the market ought to be bought for a turn.

BULLFIGHT ON THE CAMPUS

Cornell Univerity Shut That the Students May Attend.

Ithaca, N. Y., May 20.—President Schurman shut down Cornell university Thursday, so that its 3,000 students might go to a bull fight. The president announced his intention some days ago and it got into the papers. Immediately there came remonstrances from all over the East. One was a strenuous protest from a fellow college president, but Cornell's chief proved faithful to the Spanish sport, and the bull fight was held at noon, with every student a protest from a fellow college president, sat alone in their empty class rooms.

The bull fight was not pulled off on the quiet, but took place right on the quadrangle of the university campus, where a big ring was staked off and surrounded by tiers of seats for the student spectators.

Jose Antonio Ostos, a student from Ozuluama, Vera Cruz, Mex., was the chief matador. He was assisted by three fellow countrymen. The bulls came off the farm of the Cornell college of agriculture, and had been especially fed for the past week to make them ferocious. Twenty-five cents was charged to see the bull fight, and so many clamored for admission that it had to be repeated twice.

Senor Ostos proved a skilled matador and after worrying the maddened bull for a quarter of an hour, to the great delight of the spectators, would despatch him in short order. On one occasion, however, he was thrown from his horse, but was saved from being gored by timely assistance of his fellow matadors.

A number of the women students of the university, many of whom were among the spectators, fainted at this sight and had to be carried out.

The occasion of the bull fight was the annual "spring day" frolic at Cornell. All of the proceeds went to the aid of athletics and more than $2,000 was cleared on the bull fight after the despatched bulls were paid for.

SELECTED COLONY

Of Handsome Men and Women In Russia.

San Francisco, May 20.—A. Ogorondnikoff, a wealthy Russian fur dealer, who has stores in Vladivostok and Moscow, has arrived here on a visit. He tells an interesting story of experiments by his cousin, Rachatnikoff, a rich landowner, near Moscow, who has been devoting himself for years to the propagation of a race of beautiful people. Ogorondikoff says:

"Years ago Rachatnikoff attracted to his estate especially handsome men and girls of more than usual beauty by offering free land to forty or fifty men, carefully picked from among a large number of applicants, and selecting for them as wives fine-looking young women from different parts of Russia.

"This selected colony has flourished beyond all expectation, and over 100 children have been raised from these unions. These children were so pretty as to make the Rachatnikoff estate famous in that respect.

"It was the marriage of two of these children that I attended about a year and a half ago. The bride was 18 and remarkable for her beauty, while the gromo was about 24 and a fit mate for a village queen.

"At the end of the ceremony the couple was conducted by M. Rachatnikoff to a pretty little cottage, surrounded by a small, well-stocked farm, his wedding present. Similar wedding presents will be given to others of these children when they are married."

GAVE A WILEY DINNER.

The Hendersons Entertain at Unique Function.

Washington, May 20.—Former Senator and Mrs. John B. Henderson were hosts at a unique dinner party Thursday night. The menu was made up of fruit, vegetables and nuts, and a leaflet was attached to the card stating the food value of each course, as analyzed by Dr. Wiley, expert of the department of agriculture; Dr. Kellogg of a Battle Creek sanitarium; Prof. Fisher of Yale college, and others. It probably was the first dinner ever given at which the guests were made aware of the amount of the actual fuel supply for the body to be got from the dishes consumed. One of the surprising features of the meal was warm ice cream—a disappointing dish for hot weather—made without milk and cream, and supposed to be healthier than the frozen dainty by the same name. Lurid red was the color scheme of the table decorations, the cover being red silk, with red ruffle, and white silk doylies, trimmed in lace, and white silk napkins. Red Bohemian glass and red roses and redcapped candles further were carried out with sprightly effect. Each guest received a copy of Mrs. Henderson's book.

REAL ESTATE

Look for it here if you want a bargain in investment realty.

A Farm for $10 Down and $4.00 a Month! Think of It!

This will give you 40 acres of good fertile land in the big red clover district of Bayfield, Wis.,—as many acres as you like on the same basis for each 40-acre tract at $5 an acre.

Fine Investment for Young Men and Women

Think of the thousands of young people paying over money to the great life insurance companies every month with the expectation that at the end of twenty years or more they may only get their money back and a very small interest. Then think of the development of the United States in the past twenty years, and look on a map at the location of Northern Minnesota and Wisconsin as related to the head of inland navigation and the expanding markets of growing nearby cities. Will any reasonable man say that the land in this region will not be worth from three to ten times its present price within twenty years? Reason it out for yourself.

Worth $200 to $300 an Acre.

J. Sterling Morton, ex-Secretary of Agriculture, recently asserted that all well-located land in the United States would be worth that price within 50 years.

"I believe," he added, "that money invested in farms is the best possible investment one can make; even if purchased at what some may term 'boom prices,' one will soon see his investment doubled."

We Will Build You a Comfortable House

On any sized tract that you want, from forty acres up, upon payment of only one-quarter of the value of the land in cash, and spread the balance over several years. For a man who wants to get on a farm at small initial cost, this is a remarkable opportunity. All this land is surprisingly fertile, and it will pay you to investigate its possibilities. The Omaha railroad alone placed 900 families in Northern Wisconsin last year. We have about 60,000 acres to choose from.

Best Farming Land in Northern Minnesota.

We also have about 40,000 acres of the richest farming land to be found in this section of the state, all lying within a reasonable distance of railroads and midway between Duluth and the Twin Cities. We will give it to you for one-quarter its value in cash and the balance to suit your convenience. Runs from $5 to $15 an acre.

Chance for Investors.

SALE OF CROSLEY PARK ADDITION

Big Track Comprising 280 Acres North of London Addition Passes Into Hands of Davis Real Estate Company, Seller Being a Cincinnati Bank—Other Deals of the Week.

The transfer records for the week show that Duluth real estate is selling right along, and that the deals involving cheap properties continue to predominate, though several larger sales have been made during the past several days. Inquiry is considered excellent for this time of the year, and much attention is being paid to new improvements now under way. The pleasant weather has very much hastened building operations, and in every part of the city excavations and foundation work is being rushed.

* * *

One of the most important realty transactions announced this week is doubtless the sale of Crosley Park addition of Duluth from the Lafayette National bank of Cincinnati to the Davis Real Estate company, represented here by C. P. Craig & Co., for a consideration understood to be in the neighborhood of $30,000. The deal involves one of the largest recent acreage sales, Crosley Park comprising some 280 acres, all of which is platted, and the lower end of which is already occupied by a number of dwellings. Crosley Park addition lies north of London addition and between Forty-eighth and Fifty-fourth avenues east. The lower end of the property is within two blocks of the street car line, and the whole park is one of the most beautiful locations at Lakeside. What is more important to Duluth than the sale itself is the fact that the new owners intend, instead of holding it as an investment, to place the whole property on the market in lots and blocks of lots. When the park was platted the ground was cut up into 25-foot lots. It is believed that with such location as presented by the property that for home building 25-foot lots are considered altogether too small, and for that reason inducement is to be made to purchasers to take several lots in a bunch where it is desired to have a home sight. The Davis Real Estate company is said to have bought the property very cheap, and intends to sell cheap, the idea being to get the land as soon as possible into the hands of the home builders.

Crosley Park addition was formerly owned by the Crosley Park Land company, by which it was platted. In the course of time it passed into possession of the Lafayette National bank, by which concern it has been held several years.

The deal involving the sale of the park has been under way for some weeks back, and while it is to all practical purposes closed up, there still remain a few minor details to arrange for before the deed goes on record.

C. P. Craig & Co. represented, in this instance, both the buyer and the seller.

The Davis Real Estate company already holds a considerable amount of Duluth business property, and its venture into the residence location is something of a departure, and indicates the confidence of outside capital in Duluth residence and unimproved property, as well as in centrally located business property.

The deeds went on record this week of the sale by the Connecticut Mutual Life Insurance company to J. Uno Sebenius of a 10-acre property, including two dwellings at Lakeside. The deal was negotiated, it is understood, through the office of F. I. Salter, agent for R. M. Newport & Co., and was practically closed some days ago. The property is described as part of block 54, and all of blocks 55 and 57, East Duluth, the consideration being $21,500. This sale includes what is known as the old Howard house, in block 57, which is located between Lake street and Fortieth avenue east. Blocks 54 and 55 are located between London road and Lake street.

* * *

E. T. Horgan has sold Marie Obermeyer the store building property just north of the alley, on the west side of First avenue west, betwen First and Second streets. The consideration was $6,500. The property was described as the southerly 50 feet of lots 18 and 20, West Second street, Duluth proper, First division.

* * *

James Gundry has bought three properties during the week, aggregating in consideration $10,300. From L. J. Emery he puchased for $3,800 the northeast corner of Third street and Twenty-first avenue west. The corner includes two dwelling houses. From Jennie Oss Mr. Gundry purchased an unimproved lot on the upper side of First street, between Thirteenth and Fourteenth avenues west, for $2,500. The third purchase, for $4,000, was lot 11, block 112, Portland.

* * *

George E. Storms has sold Werner Pressentin a building lot on the lower side of Superior street, between Twenty-third and Twenty-fourth avenues east, for $2,500. The property is described at lot 3, block 18, Harrison's division.

* * *

A transfer made this week recalls the fact that Former Governor S. R. Van Sant has been in recent years quite an investor in Duluth realty. The transfer in question is that of lot 7, block 61; lots 5 and 6 in block 66, and a number of other lots in Endian division, to the Van Sant Land company, for $14,000. Ex-Governor Van Sant also transfers to the holding company some acreage in section 17, 62-13 for $1,000.

* * *

One of the large deeds recorded this week marked the transfer of some Superior street business property sold recently, the Hayes block at the southwest corner of Superior street and First avenue east. The deed runs from B. A. Hayes and others to Russell Tyson, trustee. The consideration was $61,500. The property is described as lots 14 and 16, block 3, Central division.

* * *

The Lake Superior & Southeastern Railroad company took over this week right-of-way property in blocks 16, 18 and 20, Duluth proper, Second division, aggregating in consideration paid about $10,000. Lot 248 in block 20 was sold by the Academy of Natural Science for $3,500; lots 305 and 307, block 16, were sold by Homer B. Dibell for $2,600, and lots 285 and 287, block 18, were sold by C. E. Evens for $4,000.

* * *

Stryker, Manley & Buck report a good week's business, including the transfer from Matilda Barber of the southeast corner of First street and Sixth avenue east to I. M. Thomas for $12,000. In this transaction the seller was represented by William Prindle & Co. and the purchaser by Stryker, Manley & Buck. The property is described as lot 96, block 18, Duluth proper, Third division, and comprises several buildings. It lies adjoining other property recently purchased on West First street by Mr. Thomas. Other deals handled through the office for the week were a house and lot on Fifth street and Fifth avenue west, from E. G. Howe to Jennie Osalls, for $1,900; a lot on the upper side of West Third street, near Tenth avenue west, for $640, to Richard Stevens, and a lot on Oneota street, near Forty-eighth avenue west, for $615.

* * *

One of the newest real estate firms in the local field is that of Eaton & Wharton, 402-3 Lonsdale building. William Eaton has for many years past been identified with the pine timber land business here and James A. Wharton has for several years been engaged in the real estate business in the offices of some of Duluth's large realty companies. The new firm deals in real estate, loans, insurance, pine and iron lands and acre property.

LANDS

Duluth and Superior consume $7,000,000 worth of farm produce annually. All of it is shipped in from a distance.

If the Southern Wisconsin, Minnesota and Iowa farmer can sell us his produce so as to allow the commission man at the other end a profit, the railroad that hauls the goods a profit, the commission man at this end a profit, the refrigerator car trust a profit, the man who delivers the goods a profit—AND STILL MAKE MONEY—how much money can you make raising a better class of produce and more of them to the acre, at the door of the consumer, when you can deliver the goods yourself?

But, in order to make eight times as much profit you need the best land—it is the cheapest. If you don't think we have it look the other fellow over and then come and see us.

No stone, sand, etc. $6.00 per acre up—$1.00 per acre down, balance to suit. You should buy your land before everybody finds out that the best land near Superior and Duluth is worth 800 per cent more than we are asking for it. 75,000 acres.

HAPPENINGS IN DAKOTAS

Nick Miller Owns to Killing of Dolman af Fargo.

NORTH DAKOTA.

Fargo—Nick Miller, alias Steinkamp, surrendered himself to the police and acknowledged stabbing Charles Dolman to death. After the crime Miller went to Moorhead and later to Glyndon, ten miles east. By that time the excitement of the crime had passed away and he decided to return. Miller's story largely corroborates that of Carrie Clark, the woman who had spent the night in the Moorhead saloons with Dolman. Miller says that Dolman struck at him. Miller ran and was pursued by Dolman, who struck Miller again, breaking the club. Then Miller stabbed Dolman through the heart. He returned to the Clark woman's room, told her what he had done and fled. Miller was arrested here last winter on a burglary charge. His claim of self-defense in the murder case seems corroborated to a large degree.

Harry Shipley, the mail-route clerk, was one of the seven men first indicted by the United States grand jury, and when arraigned intimated his intention to enter a new plea of guilty. On account of the seriousness of the case, Judge Amidon refused to accept a plea and appointed an attorney with whom Shipley could confer. Shipley was arrested on the charge of rifling registered packages between Larimore and Minot, and confessed when the detectives caused his arrest. He is under 21.

Charles Gunderson was arraigned on the charge of selling liquor at La Moure and Lisbon without a government license. He pleaded not guilty and demanded a trial.

Olaf Halvorson settled his $10,000 damage suit against the Fargo Plumbing and Heating company out of court. The case was to have been heard in United States court today. Halvorson was employed in making some excavations for the company when the trench caved in and he alleged he was internally injured.

A telegram from Hunter announces the drowning of Charles Fisk, a 13-year-old boy. He had gone boating with two companions when he fell into a pool of water about fifteen feet deep. None of the boys could swim. His mother is in the East attending the funeral of a relative.

Grand Forks—States Attorney Wineman is at Devils Lake investigating the finding of a body in a Great Northern car there two years ago. A prisoner in the Stillwater penitentiary confessed to Warden Wolfer that he killed a man in a car between Larimore and Niagara in this county, and his story corresponds with that of the finding of the body at Devils Lake.

At a meeting of the directors of the North Dakota State Fair association for Grand Forks, A. I. Hunter of Grand Forks was elected president; Maynard Crane of Cooperstown, vice president; Dan V. Moore of Grand Forks, secretary, and J. Walker Smith of Grand Forks, treasurer. The first fair will be held Aug. 29 to Sept. 7 inclusive.

Towner—The case of the State vs. Carl Olson was called in district court, Judge E. B. Goss presiding. Olson is charged with the murder of Paul Peterson at Balfour last fall. Most of the time today was taken up in securing a jury. The panel was completely exhausted and Sheriff Jevnager was obliged to draw a special venire.

State's Attorney Webber, assisted by former State's Attorney Christianson, appeared for the state and Blaisdell, Bird and Denoyer of this city represent the defendant.

SOUTH DAKOTA.

Earling—Jack Weston, a cowpuncher at the "W-bar" ranch, is laid up with a broken collar bone and two cracked ribs as a result of an encounter with an infuriated bull in a successful effort to save the life of Miss Mame Hilgers, a school teacher from Nebraska who has a claim near here and teaches school in Medicine Creek. A marriage will follow the episode.

Miss Hilgers was crossing a big pasture in the ranch, when the bull took after her. She ran, but was a half mile from a fence. Her flight was hopeless, but Weston, who was cutting a calf from out of a herd, saw her plight and, digging his spurs into his horse, pursued the bull.

He fired all the shells in his revolver at the animal in a vain attempt to head him. Then he flung himself from his horse and waved his arms before the bull. This drew attention and the animal bore down on him. He attempted to lariat the bull, but slipped and the animal gored him, breaking the bones. Luckily he retained consciousness, and, rising, grabbed the bulls horns, as did the hero in Quo Vadis.

A terrific struggle followed, the animal carrying the man about on his horns, but unable to shake him off. He was being flung about like a rag on a clothesline when a friend came up and dispatched the bull with a bullet.

Deadwood—In the United States court in this city, Mrs. Sadie Ford, assistant postmaster of Hill City, was fined $50 for opening mail which passed through her hands in the office at Hill City. She pleaded guilty to the charge. The sentence was made light owing to the sympathy of the court for her.

Frank E. Lytle of Minneapolis, president of the Minnesota Mines company, is suing H. D. Lemmon for a commission amounting to $2,750, which is alleged to have been received by Lemmon when he made a mining deal in which Mr. Lytle is interested.

Rapid City—One of the most exciting class fights in the history of the school of mines occurred between the freshmen and sophomore classes. The freshmen worked until 2:30 one morning to get a flag fastened to the top of the smokestack of the smelter, near the school of mines, a distance of 166 feet above the ground.

The feat was accomplished finally, and the next morning it was up to the sophomores to take the flag down. All the afternoon the fight waged and finally the freshmen gave the sophomores until 2:30 the following morning to take down the flag or admit they had been vanquished. The flag still remains on top of the stack.

DOINGS IN MICHIGAN

Sault Ste. Marie—Alderman Albert Forest, the boss of both political parties here, was convicted in circuit court of violating the liquor laws. A second case against him is now on trial. Evidence has been brought out of a half dozen violations. Boys testified that they bought liquor of Forest and drank it in his place of business. Sentence has not been pronounced.

A special from Manistique says Henry Deroche was shot and killed by George Scott, a foreman in a lumber camp, who thought he was a bear.

The Lake Superior Land corporation and F. H. Clergue have given a quit claim deed to various properties located in the eastern part of the Soo to the St. Mary's Falls Paper company. The property includes that part of the Pullar farm on which the latter company proposes to erect its new paper mill, and work on the plant is expected to begin in the near future. It is said that the new paper mill will be up to date in every particular; in fact, one of the most complete plants of the kind in the country, including a number of new devices never before utilized in making paper.

St. Ignace—Edward Johnson, proprietor of a restaurant near the railway station at St. Ignace, has had a dozen canaries devoured by rats. The birds were fine singers, and were given the freedom of the office.

Amasa—The Methodist congregation at Amasa, Iron county, is to have a church. About $1,000 has been raised to date, of which amount the Hemlock River Mining company gave $250, the Oliver Iron Mining company $200 and Supt. Lawrence $200.

Manistique—The Manistique Light and Power company will soon have its new plant running. The building is finished and the new 450-horse power dynamo is in position. It was tested, but owing to a slight mishap is not yet in permanent running condition. The plant is complete and of ample capacity to take care of the Manistique business.

Escanaba—The Escanaba and Gladstone Transportation company is going to build an addition, 50x20 feet, to the Maywood hotel. It will provide much additional room, and will make it possible to take care of much larger crowds than were accommodated last season. The company made various other improvements, including the building of additional cottages, at Maywood last winter.

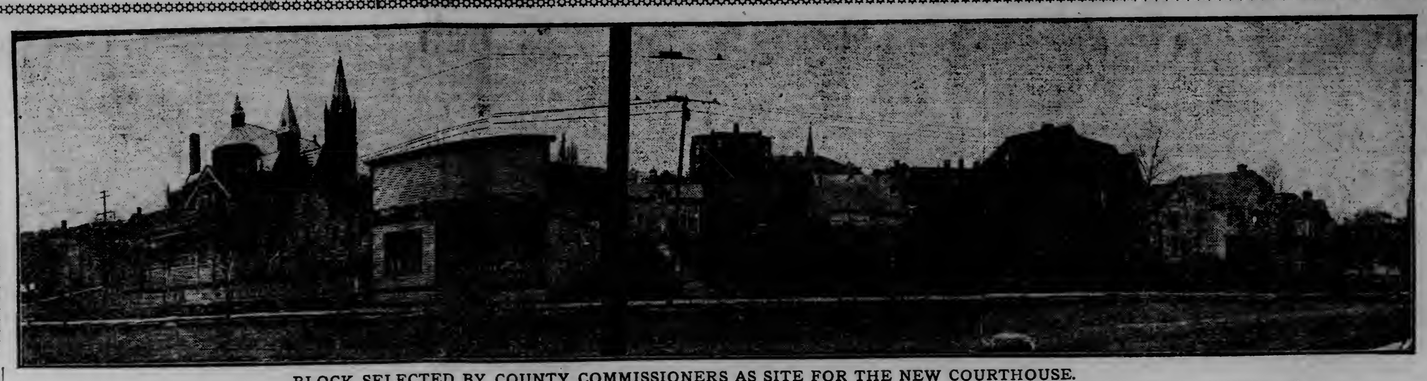
MINNESOTA HISTORICAL SOCIETY.

THE SITE SELECTED FOR ST. LOUIS COUNTY'S NEW COURTHOUSE

One-half Block, Corner of Second Street and Third Avenue West.

Expected That the Site Will Be Acquired By Condemnation Proceedings.



BLOCK SELECTED BY COUNTY COMMISSIONERS AS SITE FOR THE NEW COURTHOUSE.

The accompanying view of the half block between Third and Second avenues west and Second street and Second alley, which is more or less familiar to the citizens of Duluth and to those of the county, who have had business at the courthouse and have passed by in street cars, represents the choice of four out of seven members of the board of county commissioners for the site of the new courthouse, which is to be erected as soon as the board passes a resolution declaring the necessity for such building and fixes the amount of money that may be spent on the project.

By this it may be taken to mean that unless something should come up at a later meeting to change the minds of the commissioners, or conditions arise whereby it will be impracticable to secure the site pictured, the next courthouse of St. Louis county will be located on the ground selected, possession of which is to be acquired by the county through condemnation proceedings.

When the vote was taken at the last meeting of the board, held early in the current month, one commissioner held out for a locaion on Fourth avenue west and Second street, and another thought that half of the ground in the site selected would be enough for a courthouse. Commissioner Fred Kugler refused to vote, on the ground that he thought another site was more advantageous.

So far as expressons have been heard from the citizens generally, the site selected seems to meet with approval. While there are doubtless many people who might have had a preference for some other downtown site than the one chosen, little if any criticism has yet been heard of the board's selection, for the reason that it seems to meet the requirements of the majority of the taxpayers. It is true that some think the board should have selected ground of greater depth, but equally true that about as many others can be found who would favor a smaller area for the new building.

The site which the board has selected has a frontage of 400 feet on West Second street, and is 140 feet deep to Second alley. The estimated value of the half block, made by N. J Upham & Co., a local realty firm, which first presented the location to the consideration of the board, is $90,000, and the supposition is that if condemnation proceedings are had to secure title, the ground will cost in the neighborhood of the amount estimated.

Various real estate men have estimated the value of the present courthouse site at Sixth avenue east and Second street, and while the figures vary, the general impression is that the property should easily bring $20,000, if placed on the market. The district court of this county has decided that the title to the present courthouse grounds is vested absolutely in the county and that the county board has authority to hold, or dispose of it by sale. Under this condition, the county commissioners, if they so will, may sell the old site and apply the proceeds toward purchasing the new site. Providing the board should sell the old site for $20,000 and the new site should be declared by a commission appointed in condemnation proceedings to be worth $90,000, the county would still have $70,000 to pay out of the county courthouse fund toward the new location.

If the board had decided to erect the new courthouse on the old site it has been the general understanding right along that for the period during the construction work, possibly three or four years, the county would be compelled to pay for quarters elsewhere for the courts and county officers, and estimates of this expense have run as high as $10,000 per year. If the new courthouse was four years in getting ready for occupancy, the couny would have paid out about $40,000 for rent. Deducting that amount from the $70,000 which it is proposed might be taken from the courthouse fund to be applied on the new site, there remains practically about $30,000 which the county will be paying for a new site over and above what it would pay if the new courthouse were built where the old building now stands.

The site which the county board has selected scarcely needs a description. In brief, it contains six frame dwelling houses and a frame photograph studio. Of the dwellings only six have any claim toward being at all pretentious, the sixth being a small dwelling sitting well back close to the alley.

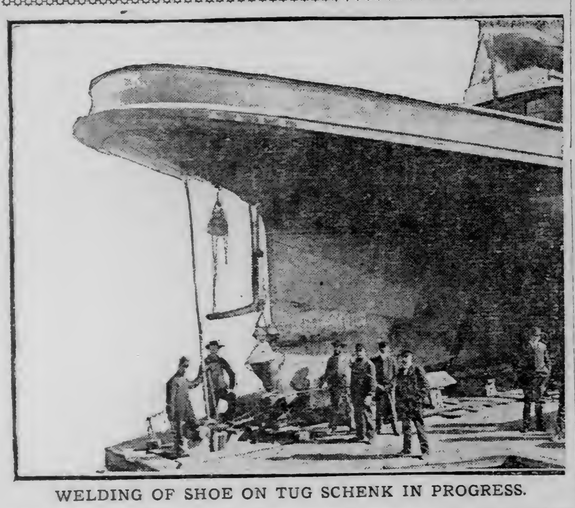
The old Cash residence, one of the landmarks of Second street occupies the corner of Third avenue west and Second street and is the dwelling prominently shown in the picture. Beyond and toward the east end of the half block are three fair-sized houses and another on Second avenue, just below the alley. All the houses were built many years ago, there being no modern, constructed building in the whole half block.

The county board omitted at the last meeting to pass a resolution declaring the necessity for a courthouse, although Commissioner Patterson introduced one to that effect, fixing the amount to be expended at $400,000. Until the resolution is passed the district court judges cannot go ahead and appoint the courthouse commission which is to superintend the building of the new courthouse.

It has been intimated that the resolution will come up again at the June meeting of he county board and the outcome of that session will be looked forward to with considerable interest by the taxpayers.

NEW METHOD OF MENDING BREAKS IN METAL ON BOAT

New Compound Used In Making Magical Cures—Greatly Lessens the Cost of Repairs.



WELDING OF SHOE ON TUG SCHENK IN PROGRESS.

SHOE AS IT APPEARS AFTER BEING WELDED.

The accompanying pictures show a new method of mending breaks in metal on a steamer on the lakes. The craft in the pictures is the large tug Schenck of the Sault, and at the time the pictures were taken she was having her shoe fixed. A new compound in the shape of powder, and which is known as thermit, is used in making a magical cure of ills such as breaks on shipboard. The picture showing the work being done shows the crucible in which the metal is melted.

This crucible is filled with scrap iron and mixed with this is the thermit. The powder is set on fire and melts the metal in the crucible at an almost incredible rate. Then it is poured into the mould with which the break has been surrounded and in a few minutes the break is mended and before long the mould can be taken off with safety. It is claimed that the break will never occur again in that place for the mending metal is stronger than the other.

The new method brings down the cost of such mends to a wonderful extent. Capt. Vrooman, in charge of the Union Towing office here, says that a similar break occurred on the Schenck some years ago and the cost of repairing it amounted to over $1,900. The cost of mending the break shown in the picture was only slightly over $100. The vesselmen are enthusiastic over the scheme and claim that it is of wonderful help to them. It is so extremely simple that it is believed it can be used in mid-lake or mid-ocean for that matter to mend broken shafts and other vital things. And all of this is claimed for it by those who hold its patent rights.

The powder, thermit, is evidently unknown here. It has adhesive qualities as well as others for it forms the cement which causes the molten iron to stick.

The mending is done with remarkable rapidity.

WHERE JOHN HAY AND JOHN G. NICOLAY BECAME FRIENDS

Recollections of Capt. Pressnell of An Old Printing Office.

Pike County Free Press Where Hay and Nicolay First Met.

OLD OFFICE OF PIKE COUNTY FREE PRESS, PITTSFIELD, ILL., WHERE CAPT. T. H. PRESSNELL LEARNED HIS TRADE.

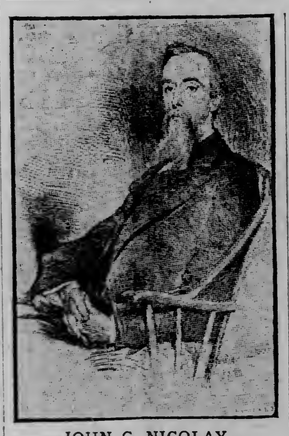
The world's attention so far as it views things diuplomatic between nations, is centered today and has been for several years on John Hay, secretary of state of the United States. Hay has developed in diplomacy from boyhood, almost, making that his specialty in life and is today one of the greatest diplomats of modern times. His bosom friend, companion and co-worker in diplomatic lines, John G. Nicolay, is dead, but had Nicolay lived would likely be today Hay's closest rival for diplomatic honors. This article is not an encomium of Hay and Nicolay, but they happen to be connected with the story.

In connection with this is a picture of the office of the old Pike County Free Press at Pittsfield, Ill., where Hay and Nicolay first met and formed the friendship which lasted for the rest of the latter's life and which brought them together as private secretaries of Abraham Lincoln, the great war president, and later as biographers of that great American. The picture of the building, which stands today as it was when Nicolay and Hay met there, is printed by The Herald by courtesy of Burr H. Swan, editor of the Pike County Republican of Pittsfield.

In this office Capt. T. H. Pressnell, who is now deputy clerk of the United States court here, first began to learn the printer's trade and John G. Nicolay was his first tutor in the business as foreman of the Free Press office. Capt. Pressnell well remembers Nicolay and has a faint recollection of Hay in those days. Hay was not a printer nor did he work in the office, but visited Nicolay there frequently while living with his uncle, Col. Hay in Pittsfield. Nicolay was to young Pressnell a sort of benefactor in those early days and it was under Nicolay's strong Whigism that young Pressnell first began to form his political prejudices. Capt. Pressnell, speaking of his acquaintance with Nicolay says:

"It was in 1852 or thereabouts that I first knew Nicolay. I was nine or ten years of age at the time and Nicolay was about ten years my senior. He was foreman of the Free Press office and took me to work there as 'devil.' J. A. Parks owned the paper at that time, but later, after I left there, Nicolay purchased the paper and ran it until his friend O. M. Hatch was elected secretary of state for Illinois and Nicolay went to Springfield there with him. It was in Springfield that Nicolay met Mr. Lincoln and entered his office to study law. Lincoln, Nicolay and Hay there formed the friendship which became famous and which lasted as long as Lincoln and Nicolay lived.

"I was at the Free Press office between one and two years and then my mother apprenticed me to M. H. Abbott, editor of the Pittsfield Union, a strong Democratic paper of those days. Later I came to Minnesota with Mr. Abbott and worked for him on the St. Croix Union at Stillwater.



JOHN G. NICOLAY.

CAPT. T. H. PRESSNELL.

"I well remember Nicolay. In fact one who was ever associated with him could not well forget him. He was remarkable as a young man and was one of the most untiring and persistent men I ever saw. He was an ardent anti-slavery man, uncompromising and a natural leader in the community in which he lived, even though he was not of age then. I can remember the campaign of 1852 fairly well although I was so young. That was the campaign in which Gen. Winfield Scott was Whig candidate for president, and it is my first recollection of Scott and know of the ringing articles he wrote in support of Scott's candidacy. It was during that campaign that I first saw Stephen A. Douglass.

"You will find in the biographies of Nicolay that he first invented the Army press. I do not knok whether or not he called it the Army press, but I do know that he invented a revolving press which was a vast improvement over the system we had had for printing. I helped him in his work at Bates' blacksmith shop and at the carpenter shop next door in getting the material ready for the construction of this press; and its success made me think at the time that John—or George as we called him—Nicolay was the greatest man that ever lived for the new press let me out of working the ink roller. Of course that press today would not be worth anything except as a curiosity, but it was an immense improvement over what we had been using. Nicolay got a patent on the press at the time.

"I just barely recall Hay. At least I think I do. I recall a boy who used to visit Col. Hay, his uncle, while I was working at the Free Press office and I recall that he and Nicolay became fast friends, so I suppose that that young Hay is the famous John Hay of today, judging from descriptions I have received in the Pike County Republican which a short time ago printed an article on John Hay.

"Of the subsequent career of John Nicolay, the world is well informed as I do not need to mention it. I have a number of letters from Mr. Nicolay in my possession which I would not part with for a good deal. In one letter written to me while he was marshal of the United States supreme court he says:

"'I suspect that both you and I owe that school of adversity in the old Free Press office more thanks than we are quite willing to render it.'

"And it was quite a school, I tell you."

Capt. Pressnell well knew the characters of whom John Hay wrote in his poem "Banty Tim" and can tell many interesting stories of Pike county.

AMONG THE PLANTS

We are coming to the time of making up and planting the flower beds, and the question arises what to use as an edging for the geranium beds. Perhaps the prettiest of all edgings is the white variegated geranium, Mount of Snow. Further south mad sallerol is used to good effect, but here the first named is by far the best of the two. Then there is the Dusty Miller and the Golden Feather, which are pretty if they are kept well pruned, so as to keep them low and bushy. Next we have the bushy, low-growing lobelia with its intense, dark blue flowers, and very pretty it is, too; and lastly, the sweet allysum, which needs a good application of the shears once or twice during the season to prevent it from getting too ragged, and the care is well repaid., for much of the beauty of a bed depends upon the edging, the sharply defined ring of white, yellow or blue showing off beautifully against the green of the lawn.

In planting out the geraniums from pots you generally find some of them very dry, and it is a good plan to have a can of water by you and pour a quart or so in and around the dry ball of roots before the bed is leveled off, for a good soaking with the hose is not a good thing for a newly-planted bed. The plants will root much faster if the surrounding soil is comparatively dry and porous. In using the word porous we mean freshly stirred soil, moderately firm, for oftimes a bed may be so porous that the feet must be used to firm it, but firm a dry soil as much as you will, still there are air spaces in it, and the plant roots will start for them just as they do for the sides of the porous flower pot.

Don't let your geraniums lie around unplanted for twenty-four hours or the chances are the foliage will become yellow. We have never been able to ship in any stock even where they were only one day in transit without losing the leaves and in some cases the plants also, and to leave a package of plants rolled up or in a dark basement is both unwise and wicked.

In filling your window boxes put in plenty; you can easily cut out if there is too rank a growth, but if it is scrimpy cannot fill in very easily, but if, by accident, there is a hole, put in some foliage plants to make it look full. If a box is getting too crowded in the growing season give less water. This treatment will cause more blossom.

Put in a thunbergia every three feet in the box or boxes, for the long, delicate vines won't crowd the other plants, but will creep along the box and every now and then peep out from among the plants and show its pretty blossom, or hang over, as the case may be and it is beautiful beyond compare. We fell dead in love with it when we saw the large quantities of it used further south for box and vase work.

NORWEGIAN STUDENT SINGERS COMING HERE

Singing Society of University of Christiana, Under Direction of O. A. Grondahl, Noted Composer and Musician.

The advent of the Norwegian student singers in Duluth, May 30, will be an event of more importance than the special national interest. It is well known that male chorus singing is nowhere cultivated more extensively than in the Scandinavian countries, and nowhere has the male singing been developed to the artistic height and perfection as in Norway and Sweden by the university students. Both in 1878 and 1900 the Norwegian students went to the Paris expositions and their reception was most enthusiastic. The president of France and the leading academic and musical bodies of Paris tinguish the singers, and their singing was pronounced the finest male singing the world had ever heard.

The singing society of the university of Christiania is fostered by the university authorities, and their director, O. A. Grondahl, who is a composer and musician of exceptional ability, is a member of the faculty.

For the tour of the United States only the most select and best trained voices have been chosen, and a leading newspaper of the capital, the Aftenposten, speaks of one of the last rehearsals of the "America Chorus" before its departure in the following words:

"It was an unmixed pleasure to hear the chorus that will carry the musical message of Norway beyond the sea to our people in the United States, and it is doubtful if anything finer ever left our shores. The chorus commands a group of tenors of charmingly luminous and lyrical timbre and great power. The bassos with its darker coloring sound as a gerat church organ below the fresh radiance of the tenors. With this chorus Mr. Grondahl may go to the end of the world without fear."

The chorus numbers fifty students and several prominent soloists, directors, etc. The personnel is as follows:

Directors—Henrich Thomsen, M. D., president; Gerhard Holm, supreme court attorney; Oluf Herlofsen, student, medicine.

The benefit for St. John's Episcopal church at Lakeside, which will be given at the Lyceum Wednesday, May 31, is one of the attractive musical entertainments of the month. The principal attraction will be the famous tenor, Harold Jarvis, who will be heard in Duluth for the first time. Mr. Jarvis has received the most flattering press notices and his voice is said to be of rare beauty and power. He is especially happy in his interpretation of Scotch songs and this music which appeals to so large a number always finds a prominent place on his programs. The Louisville Commercial of Louisville, Ky., said of him:

"Harold Jarvis proved by his singing last night that he is one of the greatest tenors on the continent. The large Masonic cathedral was filled with musicians and critics who had gathered to hear this greatly heralded artist, and when he had finished his first song the audience unanimously agreed that he was beyond a doubt entitled to the honor of premier tenor of the country. In his homely Scottish ballads and songs of Bobbie Burns, as well as in operatic selections, he showed his ability to be of the highest order. His beautiful voice, full of depth and feeling, thrilled his audience as only a great singer can. 'Afton Water' touched a responsive chord in every breast. The applause was spontaneous and most generous. Such success has rarely been equalled."

Hon. W. I. Nolan of Minneapolis will also be on the program, and as an entertainer he is said to be inimitable.

Last evening the pupils of Miss Mabel Fulton appeared in a pleasing recital at her home, 229 Fourth avenue west. In addition to the regular program, Edgar L. Eva sang a tenor solo and responded to an encore. In the numbers in which the pupils appeared careful training and good work was shown. The two piano numbers were especially pleasing, the numbers being played with splendid ensemble work. Those who took part were Misses Ida Broman, Millie Fisher, Eva Randall, Myrtle Perry, Kate Bethune, Clara Sutton, Jennie Olson, Mart Martha Sanders, Marie Seaman, Lilly Johnson, Eva Baker, Ellen Messler, Esther Anderson, Mathilda Landfald, Pauline Saloni, Lena Max and Gertrude Smith.

* * *

The May musical given last evening by the Altrurian club of the Pilgrim Congretational church was a marked success and a large number listened to the program. The most interesting feature of the evening was the appearance of the orchestra of the club, under the direction of Mrs. Carl Sheldon as this was the first appearance of the orchestra in concert, and the splendid work accomplished in a source of much gratification to all the members of the club. The program opened with an overture, "Hypatia," by Lampe, and the other numbers given were the sextet from Donizetti's "Lucia," the quartet from "Rigoletto," by Verdi. The last number, recollections from "Tannhauser" was also played by the orchestra.

The chorus under the direction of Emily Ellis Woodward sang three numbers and strengthened the good impression which has been by the previous appearances.

The soloists were Emily Ellis Woodward, Mrs. Sheldon and John Martin. Mrs. Woodward sang "The Cadiz Maids," by Delides, and for an encore "Message to Phyllis," by Gilbert, was sung in an exceedingly dainty manner. Mrs. Sheldon played a violin number, "Souvenir de Haydn," by Leonard, and the number was splendidly played. "Reverie," by Faulkner was the encore number. Mr. Martin sang two groups of songs with good effect and the audience was delighted with the program.

* * *

A delightful piano recital was given last evening by the pupils of Louis M. La Salle at Columbia hall. The program was a most interesting one and in the numbers played each pupil proved a credit to his teacher and himself. Miss Effie Brotherton read two selections most charmingly, and Miss Hazel Harris sang "Snow Flakes," by Cowen and "Within a Mile of Edinboro." The pupils who took part were Misses Del Della and Amy Taylor, Selestia Sequin, Bernice Sewrey, Trute Bannen, Alexandrine Boisjolie, Bessie O'Brien, Ruth Wallinder, Esther Wallinder, Anna Becotte, Vesta Randall and Hannah Olsen and Master George Wilton.

THE CHASM OF YEARS

By Nellie Cravey Gillmore.

(Copyright, 1905, by Daily Story Pub. Co.)

Burton watched the cars whizz past with a curious sense of foreboding tugging at his breast. Somehow, the blazing June sunshine, the heavy ordored blossoms, the flockless blue sky—even the faint stir of grateful air seemed in a taunting mood. He had risen in the morning with a dull feeling of oppression, which the succeeding hours served only to intensify. The past, with its gloomy history—the future, a drab sketch of nameless uneasiness and apprehension—the present, almost too infinitely happy in itself—all flashed bfeore his mental vision in a series of mocking panorama.

Finally, he slid the top of his desk into position, drew down the shades and passed out of his office into the crowded street. He caught the first car, and settled back in one corner to read the afternoon paper. But the items were dull and uninteresting and he tossed it aside in disgust. After fifteen or twenty minutes whirling through noisy thoroughfares and dingy side streets, he came to the avenue where he was in the habit of getting off to walk.

As Burton neared his own home, his spirits began to rise a little. If there was anyone in the world who could coax him back to humor, it was Helena. They had been married almost five years, but the relation had not yet lost its honeymoon tints.

She was waiting at the door as he stepped up on the veranda, a queer, half-anxious, half-excited light in her eyes, and a vivid disc of red glowing in either cheek.

"I'm so glad you've come, dear," she commenced, talking rapidly, "I—there's someone here—I don't know whether you are going to approve or not—" she broke off, seeking encouragement.

Burton regarded her with a startled expression. His heart dropped like lead as it came to him all at once that his premonitions had been realized. He did not at all like his wife's look in the ominous pause that followed. Helena was the first to break the silence.

"A little while ago," she resumed, speaking more connectedly now, "A woman—a poor, starving creature—came to the door asking for help. She was not of the ordinary class of beggars; I could see that at once. She was ill too—not able to walk even, so—I took her in."

Burton did not reply for some time. When he did, his face and tone were graver than she had ever seen them.

"My dear little girl," he said, "I'm afraid you've done something very, very foolish—out of the goodness of your heart, of course," he added, more gently.

"But, Richard, think! The poor woman has not had a morsel to eat since yesterday. She was literally dragging herself along the street. I saw her as she came in, and—one could tell by looking at her that her story was only too true."

"Her—story?"

"Yes."

"They all have one, I believe."

Helena turned swiftly, to hide the rush of hurt tears to her eyes. "I did not know," she said presently, "that you could be—be that way. I thought—I was so sure that you would take my view of the case. You always do, Dick."

"And you are always reasonable—nearly," he responded quickly. "But I must say that I think it was rather unwise to give shelter to a woman of her class."

"She is a human being."

"Naturally," he remarked in a cynical voice.

"I suppose, as you are inclined to be so opposed to what I've done, that you would not care to hear the truth about her?"

"Certainly, I should. There may, after all, be something in your point of view. It isn't that I'm in for treading on the unfortunate; not by any means, but there is always a place provided for them, and it seems to me best for all concerned that they be sent there."

"I do not think the woman could have borne up another five minutes. As a matter of fact, I'm afraid she isn't going to live long. She has stood so much, and struggled so all the way through—only to some down like this at the last."

"Where did she come from, here?"

"Somewhere in the West, I think. It was out there—in California, I believe she said, that she began to slip down."

Burton went white all at once. "In—Los Angeles?" he said unguardedly.

"I did not say Los Angeles, but when I come to think of it, she did. Odd, you should have mentioned that place, isn't it? But to continue: A doctor out there told her she was not going to live many more years. There was some one she wanted very much to see before she died—someone who had wronged her very greatly. So she started out to look for—him. Up to now, she has no clue whatever."

They had gone in together, and Burton found himself walking mechanically up and down the floor. He stopped short as she finished speaking, and laughed in a sneering little fashion that was entirely foreign to him. "A vendetta, I suppose?" he questioned carelessly.

"I don't know. She didn't say so. There seems to be something on her mind—something she wants to tell him, you know."

"I know—yes."

"Would you like to see her, Dick?"

Burton flushed to his temples. "Is it necessary?" he asked, a trifle thickly.

"Not exactly—necessary. Of course not. But I told her that you might be able to help her in a way—you know so many people here."

"There are lots of people in New York."

"I know, but not so many in a certain class that you might'nt be able to assist her somewhat in locating the man."

"Is she sure that he lives here?"

"Quite certain of that much, she says."

"She gave his name, of course?"

"No; she did not."

"You gave her—yours?" His tone was eager, almost tense.

"I told her that, yes."

"And her's?"

"Livingstone."

Burton moved over to a window and stood for some minutes, motionless, with his back turned. When he came back again, his face had regained some of its color, but his eyes were almost strained in their expression. "Helena," he began, anxiously, "hadn't you better let me send for an ambulance and have this woman carried to the hospital? It is, I assure you, the very best thing in the world for—everybody."

"Will you see her first?"

Even as she spoke, the sound of halting footsteps reached them from the hallway, and the next minute, the miserable, emaciated outcast stood in their presence.

Burton caught his breath spasmodically, whitening to the lips. For an instant, the world swam black before him; the next, he glanced desperately toward his wife. But her eyes were on those of the woman.

"I'm sorry you tried to get up," she was saying kindly, as she went over and led the other carefully to a sofa. "I was just coming to bring my husband in to see you. He thinks, perhaps, he may be able to help you some. Dick?"

Burton controlled himself by a mighty effort and came up to where his wife stood.

The woman closed her eyes suddenly and a strange pallor crept across her thin features. Her breath kept coming in little sharp jerks. For a long time, she did not look up or move. When she did, her gaze traveled slowly from one to the other, and the lips that framed her words were fast turning gray.

"I'm going now," she said in an almost whisper, her eyes resting for one appealing second on the man's face. "If you ever see him, I want you to tell him for me that I have forgiven him fully and freely—under one condition. She—the other woman—his—real wife—deserves the best he—can—give her. If—he—is—a—man—" Her voice weakened, broke—flickered out altogether, and a sudden look of peace settled over the rigid features.

THE SON-IN-LAW QUESTION

Being the Reverse of the Mother-in-law Joke.

This is spring—said the Married Man—when a young man's fancy lightly turns one way and his thoughts seriously in the direction of the mother-in-law.

Not her mother-in-law, mind you. Whoever heard of her mother-in-law, pray? But his—the one who is going to annex him in June—even though she be a mere slip of a body. Stature, not over five feet three. Weight, somewhere about 110. Features, marked with the humility of a Sister of Mercy's. And voice, scarcely harsher than a kitten's purr.

No matter whether she is a wisp of unalloyed femininity to all her friends and acquaintances, he looks twice at the young lady's mother before he takes the leap which speedily leads to matrimony.

This is because of the picture in his mind's eye. It has been painting there since boyhood, and much of it has been filled in already. The first daub was applied when his young eyes for the first time alighted upon the mother-in-law joke. Since that epochal moment he has read this same joke in its ten thousand different forms, and each variation has added darker colors to the picture. Of late years, in the comic supplements, he has seen depicted the utter dejection of the son in law when he learns that his mother-in-law is coming to his castle on a protracted visit, and his unholy joy when she takes her departure, or a severe attack of smallpox, or some other timely act of Providence, prevents her from carrying out her fell design.

He has beheld men smile in sickly fashion when one asks another how's his mother-in-law. He has heard the mother-in-law roundly berated on the stage by comedians, high and low. He has read of family ructions, in the police court caused by the mother-in-law, and he can cite divorces in which her name was freely mentioned. He is probably storing up for future use the recent decision of a Pennsylvania judge that no man is compelled to entertain his mother-in-law against his will.

In short, ever since he has been old enough to discriminate he he has heard the mother-in-law continuously condemned, publicly and privately, as the one great deterrent to matrimony, the prime cause of about all the domestic infelicity there is under the sun. Not once, I'll wager, has he heard a masculine voice raised in her defense, except in audacious banter. So, in his mind's eye, the mother-in-law is pictured as a hideous monster, possessed of scarcely sufficient patience to let the honeymoon pass before indulging in her traditional pleasure of disrupting the newly founded household.

This, of course, is the picture of his mother-in-law. His picture of her mother-in-law is that of—his mother. Like the rest of the masculine world, he never thinks that a wife is blessed with a mother-in-law. Consequently, the jokes are always about his mother-in-law. Small talk is always about his mother-in-law. Stage caricatures are always of his mother-in-law. It is the son-in-law in the comic prints, who is in the depths of despair over his mother-in-law's presence in his midst, of filled with the ineffable bliss of the seventh heaven over her sudden taking off.

In the latest number of a popular humorous weekly I counted six mother-in-law jokes. All were about his mother-in-law. It has been so for a long time now. The brick books of Babylon contain numerous jests flung at his mother-in-law. So do Egypt's hieroglyphics, and it is scarcely to be doubted that the only man since time began who has not talked more or less lightly of his mother-in-law was old Adam—and he deserves no particular credit on this score.

Since the record runs back so far, there's many a prospective June benedict who undoubtedly feels that there is much reason in it all, urging, probably, that every joke has a basis in fact, and the more ferquently it is sprung the more fact back of it.

Let me see. There's Jones' mother-in-law—the chap who was laid up all summer with typhoid. Well, his mother-in-law did her level best to break up his home while he was burning up. Took advantage of the one time when he was flat on his back and as helpless as a babe.

Came down from up the slate and spent a whole summer with her daughter. Of course, that was contemptible, especially as Jones was not able to counteract such pernicious influence on his wife by his salutary presence. Then, every day she'd go with the daughter to the hospital where Jones was fighting the battle with death. Always carried him flowers. Took them, of course, so that they could be placed upon his bier immediately he was dead. When he got so he could eat she offered him delicacies, trusting, of course, that something would disagree with him and bring on a relapse. But, worst thing of all, which all but made Jones lose what little faith he had in human nature by this time, occurred when she footed the hospital bill and then told the poor man that he could take his time settling with her.

But Smith has decidedly the worst mother-in-law of all, and how he manages to bear up under the strain which she imposes upon him is a seven days' wonder to all of his friends.

It seems that Smith had scarcely got his bride installed in a cozy nest of a home—fourth flight up, rear—when his mother-in-law appeared on the scene and proceeded forthwith to fit up for the couple, at her own expense, a five-room flat, when she could have made it six rooms as easily as not. Further, to tax poor Smith's good nature, she informed his wife that the allowance which had been hers before marriage would be continued; and then, in order to pile on the last straw, announced triumphantly that, now the work of fitting up the flat was over, she would spend a week in it with them, resting up, when, within the hour, there was an express train leaving for her home town.

Seriously—pursued the married man—the mother-in-law is not always a joke. Make no mistake about that.

The more I know about it the more it strikes me that about half of this mother-in-law question is, after all, a son-in-law question, and that there would be less to it if sons-in-law were always careful to remember that their mothers-in-law are undoubtedly the mothers of their wives. Popular opinion to the contrary notwithstanding, the average married man is given plenty of opportunities to forget it.

On the other hand, I'm wondering how many of next month's blushing brides will be listening, six months from their wedding days, to such constant reminders as "This is not the kind of pie mother used to make," "I always could lay my hands on my shirts when mother took care of them," "Now, when mother did this——," and so, ad infinitum.

But I'll wager they will not take them as seriously to heart, by a thousandth part, as their husbands will picayune references to their mothers-in-law.

Modish Displays of Summer Toilettes

THE MILITARY TURBAN

WITH UNDULATING BRIM

The display of summer toilettes that has held the center of the fashionable stage ever since Lent first began—they were really appropriate for the Southern flittings that set in with the Mardi Gras festivals—show no signs of waning with the approach of the warm weather. Rather, indeed, does the interest heighten, for now is the season when the frocks themselves may be brought out and worn, and that without anybody to hint that one is trying to "rush the season" in the least by so doing.

The lingerie gowns are among the most charming effects of the late showings. And to what a pinnacle of extravagance have they reached! The most exquisite of hand embroideries are supplemented by the use, and a lavish use at that, of real laces, and it is no uncommon thing to see a frock with embroideries and several kinds and characters of lace weaves cleverly combined.

One charming model that proclaims Paris in its every line and fold shows a blouse of batiste brodee that has a V-shaped chemisette of bebe Irish crochet, the V lines of this defined with a plaite Valenciennes, and the joining of blouse and chemisette concealed with an applique of banding with a wavy edge worked to match the blouse.

The sleeve combined all three varying materials most cleverly. The upper part is of broidered batiste, then there is a puff of the Valenciennes, ended in a frill of the same; and this drops over a cuff of the bebe Irish crochet. The skirt shows the all-over embroidery for the upper part, this deftly fitted with tuckings over the hips; and at knee depth two flounces complete the length to the hem, the flounces embroidered to match the all-over. Here are three widely varying materials so cleverly combined that there is not a hint of scrappiness to the result, no suggestion of the remnant counter or the family piece bag—and certainly neither the one nor the other is suggested in the price asked for this smart piece of costly simplicity, for which, unlined, the modest sum of $250 is demanded and eager purchasers are found at that figure.

It is this same simplicity in effect, but multiplicity of detail that is the secret of the modishness of all the summer frocks. They may, and probably to the uninitiated do, look as though they might be duplicated for a mere song; but when the trial is made the result is usually lacking in the distinctive smartness which the Parisian lingerie frock of really exquisite materials always displays.

And this same multiplicity of detail is one of the newest vagaries of the silken gown. That this is a silken summer none will attempt to gainsay, and all of the fascinating features of handwork that go to make the success of the lingerie frock are repeated in the silken gown with even better and richer effect.

All sorts of corded shirrings are done with tiny featherbone cords to hold them in shape, and these are looped, twisted, festooned, vandyked and trented to the thousand and one other caprices that the designer of this season takes delight in inventing.

And with those smart gowns there are hats that are very likely to prove decidedly misleading when viewed from one standpoint only.

There are some smart Dolly Varden hats that are the picture of demureness when viewed from the front. Seen from behind, where a deep cache peigne tilts the shape forward almost to the tip of one's nose, a perfect conservatory of flowers is revealed, which makes the chapeau take on a most bewitching air of frivolity and gaiety, and reveals a side to the milliner's art which one would not suspect at all from a front view.

Then there are those smart shapes that are built up on the side only, a deep bandeau giving the modish tilt. Indeed, the hat that does not tilt itself at some point or angle is hardly in the fashionable procession at all this season; and those that tilt at the side show a top that is comparatively untrimmed, the under part of the upward flare receiving all the trimming effects. Ostrich plumes are caught here, the quill end fastened to the bandeau and the tip curling up over the brim.

The massing of the trimming scheme at the back of the hat is a late feature that is receiving much attention. With the extremely abbreviated brims that some of the newest shapes display this seems the only logical point at which to bunch such garniture as may be desired. This, of course, calls for a new style of hairdressing, and the slightly waved front, with or without a center parting, and the back built up to almost chignon style and covered with a coiffura net is the very latest manifestation to accompany these new and novel shapes.

The tiny polo turban has about run itself out. In its original lines it was not so bad after all, but it was a shape that lent itself only too readily to cheap reproduction and consequent caricature. It had to be too carefully fitted, not only to the features, but likewise to the coiffure of the wearer, and this demanded an amount of skill and cleverness on the part of the milliner that it is not always possible to find.

THE MODERN SILKEN GOWN

SIMPLE FROCK IN SILK DOTTED MULL

Charming Effects in the New Hats and Gowns.

With Undulating Brim.

Those shapes with the medium size crown, usually of drum shape, and a brim that is broad on the front and sides, narrowing considerably in the back, are among the best that the milliner produces for summer wear. The brim is variously manipulated, according to the design of the hat and the features of the wearer. The one pictured shows a model that cannot fail to be becoming to the average wearer, especially if she be still in her teens or the early twenties. A Neapolitan straw in pure white has the brim faced underneath with godet-shaped rows of white crin, and the same is used to trim the top of the crown, which is thus disposed in wavy lines that match those of the brim. A broad white satin ribbon is carelessly crushed into a band around the crown, long loops and fringed ends appearing toward one side. Little Scotch roses on white are bunched together at the left side, the loops of ribbon seeming to hold them together, and a similar bunch is tucked in on the bandeau right beneath, this bandeau being trimmed with a twist of the satin ribbon, broad in front and narrowing to nothing at the back.

The Military Turban.

The somewhat severe lines of this smart Panama turban are relieved in the application of small Banksia roses with quillings of velvet ribbons and festooned loops and ends of the same. The crown is low and round, and the wide brim is pinched up into turban shape all around, a smart point coming exactly in the front. Each dent is separately and differently trimmed, the greater part of the trimming being posed just at the left of the front, where a stiff-looking rosette is made with a flower center and a velvet ribbon quilling for the edge. This is joined to the next one towards the back by loops of ribbon, and the other side is simply trimmed with little bunches of the roses tucked into the folds. The back is built up somewhat by a bandeau, and this, too, is trimmed with flowers and velvet ribbon.

One of the Latest Turban Shapes.

The hempen weaves are fast replacing the more expensive chip shapes, a greater durability being claimed for their successor. One in a pretty shade of porcelain blue is pictured, in which the back is pinched in close to the round crown, and the left side flares upward in a most fetching manner. Sprays of the most natural-looking La France roses are posed carelessly on the up side of the brim, these lying flat, just as though they had rested there quite by chance. A border of pale blue velvet, piped at one edge in black, is arranged all around the upper brim, the outer one being left entirely untrimmed. From the crown a group of pale blue ostrich plumes are cleverly draped, three harmonizing shades being observed in these, one short one dropping over the crown towards the front and the other two turning backward over the brim with the tips resting on the hair. The bandeau at the left side is trimmed with roses and foliage, and a spray of these seems to pinch up that hat in the back.

Simple Frock in Silk Dotted Mull.

A smart simplicity is the keynote of many of the summer modes, and this is well exemplified in the frock of white dotted silk mull, the oldtime shower of ball pattern being among the recent revivals from other days. The bodice lining in white silk is fully fitted and fastened in the back. The mull is arranged in yoke fashion, shirred ribbon running from the collar to the edge of the yoke in sun-ray lines, and a double ruche of white satin ribbon defines the yoke all around. A second and similar application of the ribbon trims the bodice around halfway above the many-pointed belt. The sleeve is of the approved elbow length, a double puff of mull being separated by shirrings and ruches of ribbon cleverly used for trimming. The skirt is shirred in yoke style over the hips, and at the knee a full flounce is shirred beneath a ruffled ribbon heading. Rows of the shirred ribbon decorate the flounce and a smart finish is made in the use of a plain white velvet ribbon at the edge for a foot trimming.

The Modern Silken Gown.

A charming design for reception or dinner frock is the one of the illustration. One of the satin finished one-seam crepes, in a dull shade of rose, is fashioned with a draped bodice, the crepe being deeply pleated at the side seams and drawn in upward turning lines to the center of the bust. The neck is cut out in V-shape back and front, and bouillonne bands fashioned over featherbone cordings define the decolletage and crossing on the bust are caught to the top of the very much pointed girdle. The sleeve is a very full affair, pleated to the armhole (this cut demands a dress shield) and shirred on the center to increase the fullness. Its short career ends at the elbow, where a black velvet ribbon band serves to top the full frills of the lace that fall almost to the waist.

The skirt is shirred to the band, a few rows of stitching serving to hold the fullness in place over the hips. Three deep puffed bands are applied at knee depth, each one flaring at the lower edge where it is caught to the preceding one; and the full circular flounce that finished the skirt is draped with a shirred and corded flouncing applied in very deep and wavy lines. The Paquin flounce upon the drop skirt serves to hold the sheer and supple outer skirt in shape, and gives that smart flare at the foot that is the hall mark of the present Parisian productions.

The Omnipresent Ostrich Plume.

Not Only the Milliners but the Dressmakers Delight in it.

The ostrich may well go and hide its head in the sand and hope to escape all prying observation, for if the dictates of Dame Fashion are to be followed the poor fellow will be denuded of many of the best of its plumes ere long to fill the demands of the modish.

That the plume-trimmed hat has led the fashionable procession for lo these many, many moons one cannot help but be aware. Plumes all the way from a curly, nodding tip to one some yard and a-half in length are draped on all sorts and shapes and sizes of hats. The tiny polo turban is almost encircled with a plume that starts from a saucy-looking pompon with a graceful, bu aggressive, aigrette at the side. The torpedo toque has had its plume posed flat on the crown, the quill pointing forward and the fluffy tip reposing gracefully and picturesquely upon the hair behind.

And the picture hat! Well, how could anybody picture to themselves a picture hat without its all-prevailing plumes? The only originality or daring that the milliner could show is in the new and novel arrangement of the same old materials.

But it is in the new uses of the ostrich feathers that Dame Fashion most concerns herself just now.

There are some extremely smart tailor-mades shown with a flat collar and a flatter cuff altogether in ostrich. This really looks as though the ordinary feather were merely laid flat and the flues pressed out; but a close inspection reveals the fact that this is a made piece; the flues are caught to an invisible center, just as they are in the familiar round boa, but in this instance they are made to lie flat in a satin foundation that determines the shape.

These are intented to be worn with the new polo or torpedo turban that is fashioned entirely from clipped ostrich flues. In appearance they are not at all unlike the marabout turbans that were shown a short time ago; but with the curly tip to each flue there is a softness combined with a smartness to the novel ostrich turban that makes them fascinating indeed. The correct trimming for these is simply a round ostrich pompon perched at the side, and with a feathery aigrette standing up from the center of the pompon.

Then there are charming conceits for shoulder wear that will fill in the early season when wraps are somewhat superfluous, but to discard them altogether were hardly wise. There are some new shawl-shaped pieces that come in a point to the center back, just above the waist line, and in the front are crossed over in fichu fashion, the ends passing around the waist and fastening in the back with a splashing sash of velvet ribbons. These are seen in white, gray, some charming old porcelain blues, dull shades of roses, and the browns and blacks that are always so serviceable.

With these there are the most frivolous-looking muffs imaginable. These are usually of the flat, square shape and made entirely without stiffening other than a princess haircloth between the linings. Sometimes a fluffy tail effect is bunched at one side; but for the most part they are left plain and unadorned.

Some of the smartest shops are showing ostrich banding in all sorts of sizes mounted upon a flat satin band, after the familiar way in which fur bandings are put up. These are used to trim the silk and jet wraps that modish old ladies so much delight in; and they also find use on the dancing and dinner frocks of the younger generation, making a very soft framing for the decolletage and appearing to excellent advantage upon some of the trimmed skirts.

And with those same dinner and dancing frocks the new scarfs of ostrich are quite the correct thing. That these frocks are invariably made decollete goes without saying, and a broad scarf of ostrich is quite the correct thing to throw over one's shoulders. The latest caprice in these shows some six or eight boa-shaped strands caught together to form a broad, flat scarf that will fall naturally into almost any shape and may be dropped off the shoulders with the most charming effect in the world.

Some exquisite parasols are on view at a Fifth avenue importer's on which the narrow ostrich bandings are shown; and quite a novelty is the ostrich fringe that edges the parasol all the way around. The imported model is in pink with ostrich banding; and in place of the usual rosette of silk at the tip there are three cunning little feathers curled close to the parasol tip, and three more decorate the long staff handles half-way down.

The ostrich fan has always been modish, but the latest ones will appeal to the debutante as well as to the dowager, who, incidentally, was formerly supposed to have the exclusive right to wield the feather fan.

Odds and Ends of Fashion News.

Hand-painted porcelain set in filigree silver is one of the latest fads in this direction, one's favorite flower being the subject for the painter.

Those exquisitely embroidered shawls of Chinese crepe are being used again as fichus and carriage wraps by elderly ladies when driving in the Bois. Some rather large ones in white with black embroideries are shown draped on figures in the old-fashioned shawl lines in more than one of the smart salons de costume in Paris. One wonders if they will really take and become one of the many features of current fashions again.

There are some extremely smart little coats for summer use fashioned from the printed taffetas, and without a lining. These follow the extremely full box coat patterns, with the back and side seams flaring widely. The sleeve may be either half or full length, but in either case it must show considerable fullness at the shoulder seam, so that the fluffiest of dress sleeves may be accommodated without fear of crushing. The little coat is intended to come only to the curve of the hips, or, in the case of a petite wearer, a trifle above rather than below this point.

In the latest of the frivolous-looking little wraps that go so far to complete the summer toilette the shoulder seam is conspicuously missing. Every effort is made to cut the sleeve, which is oftenest a cape design, and the front is one unbroken line, and the entire little garment is edged all around with a perfect cascade of frills of lace and chiffon.

Those that come but to the waist line or a trifle above it are the very newest and there is simply not the slightest pretense of fitting or of defining the figure in any one of them. They are all of the loose cut that stands well away from the figure, and any attempt to introduce fitted lines into these would surely result in failure.

The Latest Lingerie Frock.

The vogue of the lingerie gown increases daily, and the most exquisite embroideries are now supplemented with the real laces to increase their costly extravagance. In the charming example pictured an all-over embroidered batiste is used, with flouncings and bandings to match. The chemisette is in bebe Irish crochet, and the inserted sleeve puff in a plaite Valenciennes; and yet, with the union of all these various materials there is no hint of patchiness or scrappiness, suggestive of the remnant counter or the family piece bag. The chemisette of crochet is backed with white chiffon, and Valenciennes and banding make a surplice line below this, the all-over blouse beginning only at the bust, and dropping with soft fulness into the featherboned satin girdle. The sleeve shows all of the materials cleverly combined, the batiste, Valenciennes and crochet succeeding each other in the order named. The skirt is cleverly fitted with tucks over the hips, and at the knee the flounces begin, a wavy band of insertion serving for a heading. The skirt length is round, just barely clearing the ground all around.

DRAMATICAL

ATTRACTIONS AT THE LYCEUM

Pittsburg Orchestra and Madam Gadski on Monday Evening—"The Merchant of Venice" by Local Talent on Wednesday Evening.

Next Monday evening, at the Lyceum, the Pittsburg orchestra, one of the greatest musical organizations in the country, and Madame Gadski, a prima donna whose fame is world wide, will be at the Lyceum. Thursday evening they appeared in St. Paul and the Pioneer Press said of them:

"Some famous orchestras have played in this city from time to time, but it is probable that not one of them ever received such a demonstration as was accorded the Pittsburg organization last night at the People's church. With the bitter remembrance of an almost cruelly indifferent reception given the magnificent Thomas orchestra a year or so ago, it was almost an ovation. The presence of Madame Gadski's beloved name on the program was undoubtedly a powerful attraction, but the orchestra and soloist shared royal honors in the proportion which granted each an individual share of praise while shedding over both a glory of enthusiastic appreciation. The audience was only of fair proportions—which was regrettable considering the high character of the concert—but it was one of the most splendidly satisfied audiences of the season.

"Mr. Paur is one of the few big conductors who are courageous enough to come boldly to the front and demonstrate the value of their opinions. A symphony orchestra in the city which supports it purely as an educational institution, may steadily but surely, by the continual droppingfg process which finally wears away even a stone, bring its audiences up to a coveted level where the great masterpieces of the ages may be as readily appreciated as the latest comic opera melodies. But on a regulation tour, where only single concerts are given before mixed audiences, a massive classical program would but waste its unappreciated sweetness and grandeur on the desert air, and only the very few be permitted to wend their elect way home rejoicing. Apropos: Mr. Paur's program last night was a monument to his skill and tactfulness in arranging a combination of elements which at once raised to great heights and bent generously to known levels. With the exception of the Tschaikowsky Symphony and possibly the Beethoven overture, the numbers were light enough to suit even the most frivolous. The Schumann 'Traumerie' has echoed from every band stand in the country, yet what more exquisite melody ever drifted from the instruments of the elect? The second Hungarian rhapsody of Liszt contains all the 'popular' elements, and the Tannhauser overture has actually been ground from a barrel organ, while Handel's largo is a familiar air to school children—yet what more fascinating than the first, with its birdlike thrills and swinging rhythm, more magnificent than the second, with its splendid commingling harmonies, more supremely beautiful than the third, with its hymnlike serenity and peace?

"And then the soloist's numbers. She gave 'Dich Theure Halle' from Tannhaeuser, with the battle cry of the Valkyrie as encore; a dainty French song of Massenet—'Ouvre tes Yeux bleus,' a splendid triumphant song of spring by Weil, and Schubert's 'Erl King,' with the always delicious 'Roeslein Auf die Haide' for an encore. In all a program which in these days of sneering criticism took courage and skill to arrange, but met with a tremendous response which came straight from the heart of every class of music lover in the audience.

Mr. Paur is original in his methods of conducting, strongly emotional, forceful and sympathetic to his finger tips. He never looks at the score, but his eyes flash with lingering swiftness from man to man, keeping each one under control and the whole body in immediate touch. That he thrills to his work is plain to be seen, and that his men follow him heart and soul is also evident. There is confidence in every move he makes, and an immediate and effective response from the orchestra.

Madame Gadski is always superb and last night she was as usual in magnificent voice, singing with that gracious abandon which is so great a part of her intense personal charm. There is a freshness and clear beauty about her voice that defies adjectives—the youth, the purity, the sweetness and strength of it, all parts of a flawless whole! She sang the "Erl King" with all the tenderness, all the fire, all the fear, that makes the composition one of the most dramatic and thrilling ever written. Mr. Von Kunitz, the concertmeister, played the violin obligato to the Weil 'Spring Song,' which Madame Gadski sang twice."

"MERCHANT OF VENICE."

Fine Production of Play By Local Talent.

The production of "The Merchant of Venice" which will be given at the Lyceum next Wednesday evening promises to be one of the most interesting affairs of the week both because of the cast which will present the famous play and because of the interest shown in the production by the Women's Council. The club women of the city are the patronesses of the affair and the most prominent women of the city are interested in the production. A generous percentage has been arranged for the treasury of the Women's council for the financial support of the school gardens and school of domestic science which work has been planned by this organization of women and which promises great results. The cast is as follows:

Duke of Venice	Dr. D. H. Day
Bassanio	Louis Dworschak
Antonio	W. A. Coughlan
Gratiano	Charles Dorrance
Salanio	W. H. Lamson
Salarino	Walter Harris
Lorenzo	J. W. Carkner
Launcelot Gobbo	Harry Howell
Old Gobbo	Dr. D. H. Day

OPERA IN EUROPE

Successful American Singers In London—An Ostend Opera House Which Exists As Yet Only On Paper.

London, May 20.—The opening of the opera season at Covent Garden in London has already brought success to two young American singers. They are Clarence Whitehill and Allen Hinckley. They sang in the opening performance and were singled out for special praise.

Both young men have been in Europe for several years, and last season Mme. Cosima Wagner included Clarence Whitehill among the artists engaged at Bayreuth. He studied first under Sbriglia and signed a contract to go to Marseilles after a successful debut under the name of M. Clarence at the Opera Comique.

Mr. Savage was at that time forming his company for the season in English opera at the Metropolitan, and engaged Mr. Whitehill, who sang Mephistopheles at the opening performance and was one of the most successful singers in the company. After his experience here Mr. Whitehill decided that the only future for an American basso—he has a high bass voice—was as a German singer, and after his return to Europe he went to Germany to study.

He became a member of the company at Cologne and is still under contract there, although he spreads his fame by occasional appearances as guest, in the German phrase, in other cities. Putnam Griswold, the admirable Guernemanz of the English "Parsifal" company, was a member of the same company, which is proof of the quality of the Cologne company.

Allen Hinckley is still younger. Only three years ago he was singing in the Bostonians' last revival of "Robin Hood," at the Academy of Music here. He decided to go to Europe and study for a summer and return to this country if he were not able to secure a permanent engagement there.

He was so fortunate, however, as to be engaged for the Stadt theater in Hamburg and has been a member of that organization for two seasons. He has sung elsewhere in Germany with success and is gaining praise in London.

Among the other German artists at Covent Garden this season—for these young Americans count them as Germans—are Otto Goritz, Anton Van Rooy and Frau Wittich, who has been announced there for several seasons, but could not accept because she had never sung the "Brunnhildes" in her home town of Dresden. She has learned these roles, however, and will divide the principal dramatic parts with Frau Reinl of the Royal Opera house in Berlin.

Selma Kurz of Vienna is to be there again, but she sings the Italian repertoire. Emmy Destinn, who made a sensation there last season, will also be in London again and will sing in the first performance of "Madame Butterfly" in London along with M. Caruso and M. Scotti.

Victor Maurel is to be a member of the company after an interval of some years, and so is Sammarco, a new Italian baritone, who has not sung in London before, although he is almost as famous as Signor Giraldoni in his own country.

The sopranos will include Mme. Melba and Suzanne Adams, who has not sung in London since the death of Leo Stern. A new light tenor named Bravi is announced. He was a member of the company that surrounded Mme. Sembrich in Berlin three years ago and retired after a few performances.

Signor Mancinelli is to conduct during the first two months of the season, but at the end of June will go to South America. There is to be a new conductor in the person of Signor Campanelli, who conducted an Italian season with Cleofonte Campanini in London last fall.

In addition to Puccini's new opera, the revivals are to be "Don Paskuale," "Andrea Chenier," with Mme. Melba, and the two Mozart operas, "Don Giovanni" and "Le Nozze di Figaro," which have not been heard in London in several seasons.

Milka Ternma is too ill to go to London. Mme. Ackte is to sing there late in the season, as her German tour will last until June. There are to be two cycles of the Ring, both under the direction of Hans Richter. The season is to continue until July 24.

Ernest Van Dyck is trying to build a theater at Ostend which will take up the honors of Bawreuth. It exists as yet only on paper, although the tenor says he is certain that the scheme will soon be carried through.

The capital necessary is $400,000, and this has been divided into 200 shares of $2,000 each. The cost of the ground and the building will be $520,000. The opera house will be similar to that of Bayreuth in its internal arrangement and will seat 3,900 persons. The prices will range from $10 to $1 and the season is to consist of twenty-two performances every year, beginning in the first week of May and continuing to August.

In spite of the dedication of the theater to Wagner and his operas, the first work to be sung there will be "Don Giovanno," which will not be entrusted to German singers. This will be followed by two cycles of the ring. It is intended to give later a cycle of the Berlioz operas, including "La Damnation de Faust" in operatic form.

Since Jean de Reszke built his famous opera house in Paris on a sheet of Gilsey house paper and outlined a plan of campaign which remains unfulfilled to this day, public confidence in tenors' opera houses has not been great. But M. Van Dyck's scheme is nevertheless interesting.

Richard Strauss has finished all but the final orchestration of the opera he founded on Oscar Wilde's play, "Salome." The drama has frequently been acted with great success in Germany and was once given in Paris. It is, of course, prohibited in England on account of its Biblical subject, but might readily be acted here. The opera will be sung in Dresden next autumn.

Richard Strauss is hot to be the only conductor of note in Berlin. Felix Weingartner is to devote all his time to the Royal symphony concerts of the opera house orchestra, having resigned the post of leader of the Kaim concerts in Munich.

NEW YORK THEATERS

Cassie Chadwick As the Bad Woman In a Melodrama—Wicked Svengali Throwing Poor Trilby Into a Trance Again—Clara Morris Gives a Monologue In Vaudeville.

New York, May 20.—Cassie Chadwick hasn't been so foiled by all the law courts of Ohio as she is by two dramatists in New York. Her downfall and general confusion bring each of the four acts of "The Millionaire Detective" to a climax of joy and a triumph of virtue. Mrs. Chadwick, allased, but not disguised as Mrs. Sedgwick, has the Lawsonesque title, "The Queen of Frenzied Finance." Her villainous accomplices are the firm of Rand & Levy, and considering the prosecution of Nan Patterson by a district attorney named Rand, and her defense by a lawyer named Levy, the ultimate failing out of the two now comes as no surprise.

Cassie appears first in a stock broker's office, where she steals a mysterious paper or two every time the office boy steps out to get a glass of water, or turns his back to do his well-known and much admired buck and wing specialty. She has ruined the heroine's father, a bank president with a fine coat and that air of ease, and she fills her handbag with all the stocks and bonds that are lying around loose, when she suddenly realizes she has reckoned without Sedgwick, the Detective. This person is a mystery no one has ever seen, but his great power is known to all. Indeed, one of the characters declared that compared to him Sherlock Holmes is a dub. In number two she accepts commissions by telephone only, but we—the astute audience—know that the hero, poetically named Robert Rose, is really the great discerner of crime and frustrater of infamy. He connects himself intimately with every one in the play as himself and as Sir Robert Bancroft. The remarkable disguise consists of a Chumley wig and mustache, which, gay wag that he is, Actor-author Howard Hall dons and doffs in quick rapidity when bowing to curtain calls.

Dr. Sedgwick, a mild-mannered man, accompanies his wife on all her excursions into crime. With the finger-nail-biting, ponderously plotting Rand, and the squeakily queer Levy, they make quite a party when they set out to do dirt. Cassie wears simply elegant clothes, and recoils every time she is reminded that she used to be known as Madame de Vere in Chicago. This is flung in her face by Rand every time they all start on a pleasant robbery or a merry little murder. Dr. Sedgwick protests his virtue, weeps and then stands in the corner, while the gallery cheers. This tension is relieved by a comic fall from Levy, and sin progresses. But the time comes when the worm turns. The doctor has had murder enough that evening—one old man brained and another asphyxiated in a trunk—and he becomes quite peevish about participating in a poisoning. He retires amidst the sneers of Cassie, Rand and Levy, and the cheers of the audience. Little do they know it is the Millionaire Detective they are attempting to dose when the Queen of Frenzied Finance drops a death pill into his wine. They all turn their backs conveniently while he throws the liquid away and substitutes a similarly red handkerchief in the glass, and, pretending to swallow the rag simulates death. Rand feels the heart of the supposed Sir Robert and declares he is dead.

Then ensues the great scene. Sir Robert is the inventor of a "resuscitator" which gives life to the dead. Though pronounced defunct, Sir Robert gets onto the machine somehow, and then perhaps the sparks don't fly! All sorts of wheels go round, flashing forth electric streaks and weird blue lights. The corpse is stretched out in the midst of these fireworks. They are efficacious and the ghost walks, or rather the dead arises, scaring poor Cassie nearly to death. Rand snaris "curses on the ill luck," Levy indicates comic surprise, and the curtain falls. Then Mr. Hall again bows condescendingly, removing and replacing many times his blonde disguise, showing us dull souls how easy it all is to a mind like his, and at last consenting to speak his thanks in a "few well chosen words."

At a spring bargain sale of Shakespeare we get "Romeo and Juliet" for 17 cents, marked down from 75 cents. About the quality, we have to take it "as is," and in quantity we must buy tickets in bunches of six for a dollar. Of course, that's too cheap to be very good. Percy Haswell is the first-rate Juliet, but the Romeo is much the worst I ever saw, and the mounting is no better than that which Edwin Booth once gave to "Hamlet." That asperation on the memory of Booth demands explanation. After the great tragedian had bankrupted himself with magnificent productions at the theater bearing his name and when his artistic ambition was utterly crushed, he went on a tour for revenue only, with a company of incompetents and scenery on a par with what it inclosed. Edwin Booth's own Hamlet was deteriorated. The venture was a sorry incident in the portion of Booth's career between his decline through his own lack of commercial instinct and his rise again through Lawrence Barrett's business shrewdness combined with professional liberality. So Booth and Barrett died wealthy and at the height of a joint fame.

We have a reminder this week in Sarah Cowell Lemoyne's revival of "The Blot in the 'Scutcheon," that not all of Lawrence Barrett's brave risks were wisely taken. There is no safety in Browning's tragedy even in this late day in dramatic advancement. The story of the proud Tresham's daughter, who falls from virtue with the Gaul who asks her hand, and thereby brings death to nearly all concerned, is full of poetical thoughts and theatrical impossibilities. Mildred faints at her brother's accusation, whereupon her loving cousin pays no attention to her physical plight, but delivers a long harangue on the subject of mercy in such a case of immorality as hers. Half of the fourth act passes between the wounding of the girl's lover and his death, the while being occupied by his dissertation on the passing from this world into the other. In the fifth act Mildred is so distracted by news of his death that she declares she will straightway expire, but she doesn't till she has spoken three pages of pretty but not profound poetry. This fashion of antemortem prolixity is observed by Treshham, who seems to finally die of exhaustion brought on by protracted vocalism.

When Barrett brought out "The Blot in the 'Scutcheon," with Viola Allen for an assistant, he cut the poet's play profusely, and Browning thanked him for it, but Mrs. Lemoyne makes no abridgement and her superfine elocution—she was a noted reader of Browning before she became an actress—does not save the undramatic drama from tedium. It has been in her mind to perform it ever since she associated with Otis Skinner and Eleanor Robson, got a deal of praise with Browning's "In a Balcony," and she has tried in vain to interest Julia Marlowe with Skinner in the venture she is now making with "The 'Scutcheon." So we have a common cast, with the star striving to shine in the role fourth in importance. To set down the truth bluntly "The Balcony," which is but one act of an unfinished tragedy, is just four acts better theatrically than this five-act composition.

Wilton Svengali Lackaye is hypnotizing Virginia Trilby Harned, after letting her alone these ten years. His eyes are as wild as before, and his whiskers scraggy. Her feet and ankles are again fair and bare, and she gets spellbound in the same old way. Burr Taffy McIntosh and John Laird Glendinning, of the "three musketeers of the brush," remain constant in their love of the model, but Alfred Little-Billee Hickman, their chum and rival, is one of the several missing from the studio community of a decade ago. Hickman went from Miss Harned to Blanche Walsh when that stalwart actress made a tour with the mesmeric drama, and one day Miss Trilby Walsh took her nice Little Billee Hickman out from fiction and married him. That change of climax from a funeral to a wedding wasn't meant for the public to know of, and the secret was kept until two years ago, when the actress divulged it in a decree of divorce. So the private effort at a happy ending for one Trilby and one Billee was a failure. Hickman is still playing youthful parts, but Miss Harned hasn't taken him back for the present reproduction. In his stead we have William Courtenay, who is as much too tall for the Du Maurier pictures of Little Billee as Miss Harned is too short for the typical Du Maurier girl—a creature as long and thin as the Gibson girl.

The first-nighters had a hullaballoo time over this recurrence of "Trilby," and their applause went far beyond that which had greeted any new play this season. They came ready to be hypercritical, but as soon as it was sure that the piece hadn't become obsolete, and that the actors had gained proficiency during ten years, they let themselves go wild with delight. The curtain had to be raised fourteen times after the scene of Trilby's collapse and Svengali's death. I say had to be raised, not merely that it was raised, because there was no need to play first-night tricks with the curtain. The usual process is to have the claque, composed of friends in the audience re-enforced by the ushers, incite and maintain the applause until signaled to stop. The signal consists of turning down the footlights and turning up the lights throughout the house. But here the honest applause kept on after the signal was given, and wouldnt' cease even when the band began to play. A speech was demanded of Lackaye, and, for a wonder, he made one without a cynical whack at anything or anybody. He is a Mansfield for oratorical exploits before the curtain.

The uncertainty whether "Trilby" would be regarded as preposterous, after a decade of dramatic progress, was small by comparison with the dread of ridicule at the original production. The late A. M. Palmer had lost prestige and fortune at the theatrical game of chance, and was ready to try almost anything for a change of luck; but Paul Potter's idea of a "Trilby" dramatization seemed a play that could hardly win. Making a great singer out of an unwilling novice by keeping her in a hypnotic trance might be amusing as a joke on mental phenomena, but could it be made a sane proposition in a serious drama?

"Very well," said Eugene Presbrey, who was Palmer's stage director, "when Laura Don, playing what had been intended for an emotional part in a new piece with John T. Raymond, was laughed at in a scene which struck the audience as absurd, she instantly took her cue for a change of manner to burlesque, and so saved the piece. Now, we will have Lackaye and Miss Harned ready to do just that same thing with Svengali and Trilby, if it becomes necessary."

Presbrey was to give the word to turn the tragedy into a comedy if the audience began to laugh at the hypnotism, but no such course became necessary, and the experiment enriched Palmer sufficiently to postpone his bankruptcy several years. He decided to reap the harvest before the grain had time to spoil in the field. Who knew how short the Trilby fad might be? Within a month twelve companies were on as many routes, every one connected with the affair profiting richly. The royalty paid by him was 10 per cent of the gross receipts, of which 4 per cent went to the publishers of the novel, Harper & Bros., and 3 per cent each to Potter and Du Maurier. I don't suppose that as much money has ever been made with any other play in a single year.

Helena Modjeska and Clara Morris have stood forth simultaneously in appeals for theatrical consideration, yet contrastingly as actresses posed on pedestals of distress. Mrs. Modjeska Bozenta wanted money with which to pay off a mortgage on her ranch in Southern California, but she declined as an indignity to accept $30,000 for acting half an hour twice a day in vaudeville, and took $9,000 at a charity entertainment given in her behalf on the strictly legitimate stage. Mrs. Morris Harriott has a nonproductive husband, like Modjeska's Count Bozenta, and a mortgaged homestead on the Hudson. Coincidental with Modjeska's disdain of vaudeville, Clara Morris sets out to earn money with a monologue at a concert hall, and I am glad to believe that the manager tells the truth when he says she is paid $200 a week for her loss of professional dignity. As to that—well, Modjeska is a great artist, and no one had to buy a ticket for her entertainment unless expecting to get their money's worth.

* * *

Clara Morris is a pitiful sight. Nervous pains have wrenched her these many years, and she is feeble. Her voice is unsteady and her hands tremble. But the old-time pathos is in her speech, and eloquent expressions come into her face. Her monologue is made up of three anecdotes already published in her reminiscences of the stage—about her substitution, while playing Camille, of a celery top from the supper table for the camelia which should have been in her bodice, to give to Armond for a love token; about a careless dunce of an actress who chewed gum and bit her lines into pieces while personating the player queen in "Hamlet," and about the little girl who, while taking a merry part in a comedy, heard that her twin sister was dying at home, and was sustained in a song by the voice of a weeping woman in the wing. Clara doesn't let probability hamper her in writing anecdotes of the theater, nor does she in telling them on the vaudeville stage. And the pronouns "I" and "me" are very numerous. But in both kinds of narration she has a potency all her own, and the audience which I saw her face, though it didn't respond to her as we used to in the days of her dramatic power, still seemed interested and entertained. She uses two chairs and a table to sit in and at, and to saunter to and from, during the quarter of an hour which she occupies, and they seem to be devices for relieving her restless nerves rather than to give variety to her attitudes. She characterizes the persons who figure in the stories, and infuses them with considerable of her own engrossing individuality.

* * *

Three hundred vaudeville names were used to draw people to an Actors' Fund show, and the owners of fully 200 of them were not on the stage, though there wasn't time between 8 o'clock and midnight for more than thirty to get their usual specialties into the program. The others merely served in choruses and ballets. It was a good show, yielding $4,000 to the fund, yet it contained no new thing, and the only thing to pick out for mention was so old as to be Tony Pastor singing "Down in a Coal Mine." There still is a Tony Pastor's theater among the thirty-six in New York devoted to varieties, but Tony himself, aged, affluent and bountiful, has retired to a country home on Long Island. So it was a novelty to see him once more shove his silk hat away back on his head, cock it over one eye, grab it off and thump it, all in the by-gone way. There was a stageful of vaudeville youngsters to join him in the chorus and at length the whole audience broke in with him and them.

"I was looking," Tony remarked as between verses he peered here and there among his companions "for Mme. Modjeska."

GOSSIP OF THE RIALTO

Two Theatrical Managers Cut Off In the Height of Their Success—Sam Shubert and Kirke La Shelle Were Energetic Managers—Blanche Walsh's Plans.

New York, May 20.—The death of San Shubert, the theatrical manager, in the wreck at Harrisburg, last week, was a sad blow to the admirers of that energetic little manager. Shubert was a midget in stature, but a giant in direction. He came originally from Syracuse, New York, and up to a few years ago was only known as a hustling local manager in the New York town. He gathered a few theaters into his fold before he was 25, and about this time branched out as a manager of touring companies. Musical comedy was his forte, and his first success in this line was with a road company in "The Belle of New York," after it had about run its course in the high-priced theaters. Shubert made that a go, and the next heard of him he began planning big things. Before anybody realized what he was up to he had secured the American rights to "A Chinese Honeymoon," and made a lot of money out of it. The memorable run of that piece at the Casino theater and its subsequent success on the road is well known. Shubert at this time was allied with Nixon and Zimmerman, the powerful Philadelphia theatrical men who are part of the big syndicate. He secured the lease of the Casino theater in New York when Lederer lost his hold on that great piece of property. He also had the Lyric theater built, and he successfully managed it. He revived interest in the old Schiller theater in Chicago, remodeled the Garrick and made it a fine piece of property. He evidently was planning larger development, for it is commonly understood that he was on route to Pittsburg to secure a house there when the fatal accident cut short his wonderful career. In road attractions Shubert was interested with various managers in a number of successful plays, including his "Chinese Honeymoon" hit with "The Runaways," which was a big go, and "Fantana," which is now the musical comedy hit of the season in New York. He was also interested in DeWolf Hopper's tour in "Wang," and was planning bigger things for that star. Lillian Russell's tour in "Lady Teazle" was also under his direction. Just what effect the death of Mr. Shubert will have on all these varied interests is a question that cannot be decided, but there is no question that the sudden end of Mr. Shubert's brilliant career, just when he was fairly beginning, is a loss to the business. Personally he was an energetic little hustler who had little time for anything but business. The theater was his world, and he knew the ropes pretty well, as has been demonstrated by his varied successes. He had unbounded confidence in himself and the courage of his convictions. No matter how big the speculation he was ready to risk it if he liked the proposition. It used to be a subject of wonderment where he got his resources, but, whatever his connections, he made good.

Another shock was received by the dramatic profession on Tuesday of this week when it was announced that Kirke La Shelle had died at his Long Island home after an illness of but a week's duration. Few people even knew that he was ill. Mr. La Shelle first came into public notice in Chicago as assistant foreman of the old Chicago Mail, then run by Frank Hatton and Alden J. Blethen, the latter now owner of a string of newspapers in the state of Washington. Stanley Waterloo, who was managing editor, had started a column on the editorial page of the Mail called "Clubman's Gossip." Finally Mr. Waterloo left the paper. Charles A. B. Dillingham, the hotel reporter, now a theatrical manager, wrote this column for a while, and when he was busy or tired he used to print contrubutions that came anonymously from the composing room. These were distinguished by buoyancy and a facile touch, and it soon became known that their author was the assistant foreman, Mr. La Shelle. When Dillingham left to become a press agent La Shelle moved downstairs into his office, and stayed there, writing "Clubman's Gossip," continuing into the regime of Joseph R. Dunlop, until John R. Walsh and the late James W. Scott started the Chicago Evening Post. The Post's managing editor, Cornelius McAuliff, previously night editor of the Herald and now managing editor of the Record-Herald, sent for La Shelle and offered him the dramatic editorship of the new paper. La Shelle accepted, and for a year or two wrote dramatic criticisms notable rather for glitter than depth. In 1892 he became one of Charles Frohman's press agents, and for the next two years toured the country in advance of various actors.

His first venture as a manager was with George Lederer, when the two produced a farce, "Incog," by Mrs. Romualdo Pacheoc, wife of a former governor of California. The company included Charles Dickson, Ella Burgi and Clara Lipman, and it made some money. The next year La Shelle and Lederer produced comic opera, "The Isle of Champigne," featuring Thomas W. Seabrooke, who thus first became known to fame. This, also, was moderately successful. Then La Shelle took the management of Frank Daniels and kept it long enough to make a good deal of money, some of which he invested in the production of a comic opera, the libretto of which he wrote himself, "The Princess Chic," in which he featured Marguerita Sylva. This was never much of a success.

Since that time, however, Mr. La Shelle has never had a failure. He produced "Arizona," Augustus Thomas' enormously successful play, after most other managers had refused it; the same author's "The Earl of Pawtucket," which had been regarded with disfavor by Charles Frohman—with Lawrence D'Orsay as the star; "Checkers," by Henry M. Blossom, Jr., "The Virginian," by Owen Wister and himself; "Beside the Bonnie Briar Bush," with the venerable James H. Stoddard as the star, and, last of all, "The Heir to the Hoorah," by Paul Armstrong, now running in New York.

Blanche Walsh's plans have practically been completed for next season's tour. She will be seen in a repertoire including "Resurrection," "Fedora," "A Woman in the Case," "Cleopatra" and several new plays, which she will play in New York, Philadelphia, Boston, Chicago and Pittsburg, gradually working her way toward the coast, sailing from San Francisco about May 1, 1906, for Australia, where she will play the repertoire for a year. The closing of the present season leaves Miss Walsh in quite ill health.

Now that the thespians are returning from their season's wanderings to the great theatrical Mecca, Broadway, there are many tales, some amusing and some with a tinge of pathos, culled from the road cities from the one-night stands. Macklyn Arbuckle of "The County Chairman," always a good story teller, brings in a fresh assortment of "nigger" yarns, of which this is among the number: "There was a Southern gentleman of my acquaintance who was in every respect a good fellow and rather noted for his tendencies to gaze on the wine, or rather corn juice, when it was red. He attained some prominence in his home town and was invited to be the guest of honor at the county seat. He journeyed there accompanied by his faithful serving-man—an old colored relic of the days that have fled. Immediately after the dinner the gentleman proceeded to get himself into an extremely jovial state, and was last seen about midnight being helped into the house by his colored servitor. The next morning the host met the negro and spoke to him of how troublesome the mosquitoes had been the night before, and expressed the hope that his guest had not been annoyed by the pests.

"No, sah," replied the darkey. "I noticed the 'skeeters was pretty bad mah own self, but dey nebber bothered Massa Dick none. He was too drunk to notice them last night, and this mornin' the 'skeeters is too drunk to notice him."

The election of John Drew to the presidency of the Players' club, as successor to Joseph Jefferson, is said to have been in deference to Mr. Jefferson's wishes. Edwin Booth, who founded the Players' club, was succeeded by Jefferson, and from him the honor falls to John Drew, thus keeping the presidency in the line of the most distinguished and notable families connected with the American stage—Booth, Jefferson and Drew.

The Eastern stock managers are reported to have formed a combination of sixteen houses, which they will operate on "the wheel" system of booking. Sixteen stock organizations will be formed, and each in turn will visit one of the sixteen houses during the limited season. This experiment will be watched with interest, as it has always been maintained that the permanency of stock and its success depended entirely upon the established following of the various people in the company.

Owing to the illness of Lionel Barrymore the time held for "The Other Girl" in Chicago has been purchased by Fred. Whitney, and for the succeeding fortnight Schumann-Heink, who has scored a great hit in Chicago, will be transferred to the Powers theater and play "Love's Lottery" there instead of Frohman comedy, which was originally booked.

The news from young Barrymore is that he is in a bad way. His nervous system is completely broken down and it will likely be some time before he will appear in public again. The sad part of it is that Lionel should suffer such a fate coming so closely after the death of his father under the pathetic circumstances of his declining years.

The younger Barrymore has in the past two years made the success of his career and was practically the star of "The Other Girl." He is now resting at the home of his sister, Ethel Barrymore, who is reported to be in poor health and cannot hope to recover if all statements of her condition are correct.

Henry W. Savage anounces there will be two "College Widow" companies next season. The interest to see this George Ade comedy has been unprecedented in New York, where the final metropolitan performance was given last Saturday night. The piece has attracted large audiences since last September and has run thirty-four weeks, and a total of 284 performaices. The two "College Widow" companies will be known as the Eastern and Western companies. The Western company will be just as strong as the Eastern, for several members of the cast which enjoyed an all season run in New York will be transferred to the western organization. By this method Mr. Savage believes that the companies will be of uniform strength and evenly balanced.

Mrs. James Brown Potter has closed her season in London and is said to be in a bad way financially. It is reported that her gorgeous production of "Du Barry" completely failed, and at a cost which has cut into her private resources considerably. As a result of the disappointments and losses Mrs. Potter is reported to be on the verge of nervous prostration, and has been advised to take a long vacation.

The utter failure of "Du Barry" in England is another illustration of the fact that there is a marked prejudice against American players and American plays in England. We hear now and then about successes sent over from this side to London, but the real truth of the matter is they have been so few and far between that they are only the exceptions. While this country, with a mingled sense of snobbishness and poor discrimination, has opened its doors to Englands' players quite often and permitted many of them to revive their shattered finances, there has been no reciprocity in the deal. It appears high time that America should stand upon her own bottom. We have better actors and make better productions in this country than England can claim in the average. In every branch that a real player is needed we can excel them. Why, then, in the face of these repeated and unquestionably concerted efforts of the English critics, players and their friends to cry us down, should Americans bolster up the declining fortuno of such ungrateful neighobrs? America is big and broad enough in art now as it is in everything else to stand upon its own merits. We have all the players we need in this country until England at least shows a disposition to play half fair and accord our plays and players the same treatment that we extend to theirs.

John Cart, the big theatrical magnate of the Pacific Northwestern circuit, reports that a concerted movement is being made in that country to do away with the so-called "store shows." In the past several years in the Western country mushroom vaudeville houses have bobbed up all along the ville, any old sort of an abandoned store being used to present the bills. They have become very popular and cut into the revenues of the larger houses considerably. The general admission price was ten cents, and fairly diverting shows were given for that money. To counteract this influence the big managers are turning their older houses into vaudeville theaters and will operate better shows than the store managers can secure. The prices will range around the old 10, 20 and 30 cent scale, and in this way it is hoped that they can drive the smaller managers out of the field.

Henry Guy Carleton, the dramatist, who was stricken with paralysis in Florida last week, is slowly recovering, and the word from Jacksonville is that he now has a fair chance for his life.

Gertrude Rennyson of the English Grand Opera company was in her early career a newspaper reporter. She worked on a Pennsylvania paper as society reporter and sang in a church choir. Her magnificent soprano attracted the attention of Mme. Nordica, who advised the girl to study abroad. After two years at the Boston Conservatory she studied under Koenig, in Paris, for three years and was signed to sing leading soprano roles by Henry W. Savage. Miss Rennyson's voice has a remarkably sweet tone and great dramatic intensity.

Mrs. W. G. Jones, the actress whose long years of service on the stage have made her known to people all over the country, announces that with next season she hopes to terminate her active career and seek a few years of rest in retirement. Mrs. Jones, if she remains on the stage, will have served exactly seventy years in the harness. She went on when she was a mere slip of a girl hardly 10 years of age. She has been in the grind ever since, and has no other ambition now than to retire gracefully from the world where she has so long been a great favorite. Since the death of Mrs. Gilbert the other veteran has been looked upon as her successor. Her best remembered part is the nurse in "Romeo and Juliet," in which tragedy the dear old lady has played the nurse to all the budding Juliets of our time. She was here earlier in the season with Sothern and Marlowe, but at present is playing with Maud Adams, whose particular pet she is. Miss Adams looks after Mrs. Jones as tenderly as if she were her own mother, and has made her declining stage years as pleasant as possible. For this reason Mrs. Jones hopes to end her career in Miss Adams' company the coming season.

Paul Armstrong, the author of "The Heir to the Hoorah," was a visitor to Belmont Park race course one day last week. Incidentally he came home with money which had recently belonged to Joseph Ullman, bookmaker. Mr. Ullman dropped into the Hudson theater that night to see Mr. Armstrong's comedy. It cost him $2. At the end of the third act Mr. Ullman greeted Mr. Arstrong in the lobby.

"Say, Paul," he declared, "with a mascot like that infant child up your sleeve, you keep away from my book in the future—see? Or else give me a cut-in on "The Heir to the Hoorah" by way of compensation. My odds on that proposition now is 100 to 1 to win and parallel percentage for place."

Grace Filkins, who is at present playing in "The school for Husbands," is writing a history of the Hebrew in the drama, as a playwright and as an actor. She has spent all of her spare time the last three years on this work, and the final chapters will be the work of her summer vacation, and the book will be published early in the fall.

Lawrence D'Orsey will play his celebrated role of Lord Cardington in "The Earl of Pawtucket" for the last time (barring possible future rivals) at His Majesty's theater, Montreal, on Saturday night of next week. The new comedy now being written for his use next season by Augustus Thomas is expected to be completed in time for rehearsals to bgin early in August, and Mr. D'Orsey will spend the intervening time at his home in England. He will visit Mr. Thomas for a few days in Paris, however, to go over with him some of the details of the new play.

Why Physicians Recommend Castoria

CASTORIA has met with pronounced favor on the part of physicians, pharmaceutical societies and medical authorities. It is used by physicians with results most gratifying. The extended use of Castoria is unquestionably the result of three facts: First—The indisputable evidence that it is harmless: Second—That it not only allays stomach pains and quiets the nerves, but assimilates the food: Third—It is an agreeable and perfect substitute for Castor Oil. It is absolutely safe. It does not contain any Opium, Morphine, or other narcotic and does not stupefy. It is unlike Soothing Syrups, Bateman's Drops, Godfrey's Cordial, etc. This is a good deal for a Medical Journal to say. Our duty, however, is to expose danger and record the means of advancing health. The day for poisoning innocent children through greed or ignorance ought to end. To our knowledge, Castoria is a remedy which produces composure and health, by regulating the system—not by stupefying it—and our readers are entitled to the information.—Hall's Journal of Health.

Letters from Prominent Physicians Addressed to Chas. H. Fletcher.

Dr. W. L. Leister, of Rogers, Ark., says: "As a practicing physician I use Castoria and like it very much."

Dr. W. T. Seeley, of Amity, N. Y., says: "I have used your Castoria for several years in my practice and have found it a safe and reliable remedy."

Dr. Raymond M. Evarts, of Santa Ynez, Cal., says: "After using your Castoria for children for years it annoys me greatly to have an ignorant druggist substitute something else, especially to the patient's disadvantage, as in this case. I enclose herewith the wrapper of the imitation."

Dr. R. M. Ward, of Kansas City, Mo., says: "Physicians generally do not prescribe proprietary preparations, but in the case of Castoria my experience, like that of many other physicians, has taught me to make an exception. I prescribe your Castoria in my practice because I have found it to be a thoroughly reliable remedy for children's complaints. Any physician who has raised a family, as I have, will join me in heartiest recommendation of Castoria."

Dr. W. F. Wallace, of Bradford, N. H., says: "I use your Castoria in my practice, and in my family."

Dr. Wm. I. McCann, of Omaha, Neb., says: "As the father of thirteen children I certainly know something about your great medicine and aside from my own family experience, I have, in my years of practice, found Castoria a popular and efficient remedy in almost every home."

Dr. Howard James, of New York City, says: "It is with great pleasure that I desire to testify to the medicinal virtue of your Castoria. I have used it with marked benefit in the case of my own daughter, and have obtained excellent results from its administration to other children in my practice."

Dr. J. R. Clausen, of Philadelphia, Pa., says: "The name that your Castoria has made for itself in the tens of thousands of homes blessed by the presence of children, scarcely needs to be supplemented by the endorsement of the medical profession, but I, for one, most heartily endorse it and believe it an excellent remedy."

Dr. B. Halstead Scott, of Chicago, Ill., says: "I have prescribed your Castoria often for infants during my practice and find it very satisfactory."

Dr. William Belmont, of Cleveland, Ohio, says: "Your Castoria stands first in its class. In my thirty years of practice I can say I never have found anything that so filled the place."

Dr. R. J. Hamlen, of Detroit, Mich., says: "I prescribe your Castoria extensively as I have never found anything to equal it for children's troubles. I am aware that there are imitations in the field, but I always see that my patients get Fletcher's."

Dr. Channing H. Cook, of Saint Louis, Mo., says: "I have used your Castoria for several years past in my own family and have always found it thoroughly efficient and never objected to by children, which is a great consideration in view of the fact that most medicines of this character are obnoxious and therefore difficult of administration. As a laxative I consider it the peer of anything that I ever prescribed."

Dr. L. O. Morgan, of So. Amboy, N. J., says: "I prescribe your Castoria every day for children who are suffering from constipation, with better effect than I receive from any other combination of drugs."

Dr. H. J. Taft, of Brooklyn, N. Y., says: "I have used your Castoria and found it an excellent remedy in my household and private practice for many years. The formula is excellent."

Dr. Wm. L. Bosserman, of Buffalo, N. Y., says: "I am pleased to speak a good word for your Castoria. I think so highly of it that I not only recommend it to others, but have used it in my own family."

Dr. F. H. Kyle, of St. Paul, Minn., says: "It affords me pleasure to add my name to the long list of those who have used and now endorse your Castoria. The fact of the ingredients being known through the printing of the formula on the wrapper is one good and sufficient reason for the recommendation of any physician. I know of its good qualities and recommend it cheerfully."

GENUINE CASTORIA Bears the Signature of Chas. H. Fletcher.

At the end of the play the galery cheered and cheered until the star had to make a speech. Mr. Collier, visibly nervous, expressed thanks and then, as somebody began talking in the balcony, a "gallery god" shouted "Shut up!" Mr. Collier took this as his cue, and said: "All right, I will." The curtain went down, but the gallery thought he was offended and cheered and stormed until he had to speak again. The Daily Telegraph says: "'The Dictator' is an uproarious, bright, mirth-provoking farce—which nevertheless reveals genuine power of observation and a keen sense of irony on the part of the writer. Above all 'The Dictator' is splendidly and outrageously American. The characters 'talk elegant;' their humor is redolent of Broadway; their action is swift and their energy is inexhaustible. Nothing, in truth, could be pleasanter than to watch the rapidity of their movements, to know that they really are so superbly alive. The conversation is a curious blending of heroics and commonplace matter, they are imbued with the best instincts of melodrama, tempered by an active spirit of sheer merriment."

America's foremost purveyors of vaudeville enterprises are now in Europe preparatory to the establishment of houses of entertainment in London similar to those which have been so successful in the United States. B. F. Keith, his son, Paul Keith, and F. F. Albee, general manager of the Keith system, and Fred. Procter, son of F. F. Procter, have passed through London to the continent on a "still hunt" for talent with which to enter the English field. Keith has bought the Princess theater.

Marguerite Sylva, who spent the winter at Nice and Monte Carlo, has returned to America. While abroad Miss Sylva occupied her time in study for grand opera under Mme. Deschamps-Jehin at Monte Carlo. She returns to America at this time to fulfill a short engagement in vaudeville. After spending the summer at her country place at Lake Mahopac, N. Y., Miss Sylva will return to Paris and London for another year's study.

Maggie Mitchell's summer home at Long Branch was named after her most popular character. The walk leading from the street has a large white post on either side; on one of these posts is the word "Cricket" and on the other "Lodge." Maggie Mitchell had starred extensively in different characters before she produced "Fanchon, the Cricket," an adaptation by August Waldauer from a German version of George Sand's "La Petite Fadette," at the St. Charles theater in New Orleans in 1861, the cast including Charles Pope, Alvin Read, Robert F. McClannin and Mrs. Hind. The play was an immediate success and was the leading feature in her repertory for more than a quarter of a century. When she came North she brought out "Fanchon" at the Boston museum during the course of an engagement. On June 10, 1861, "Fanchon" was given for the first time in Boston. It was acted at every performance that week excepting Saturday evening, and on the anniversary of the battle of Bunker Hill, Miss Mitchell, who had been playing the part of Fadette, for which she was expressly engaged, had a benefit. In the cast were William Warren, W. H. Whalley, Mrs. Vincent and Jennie Anderson.

An American correspondent in London says: "With all due respect to Clyde Fitch's talents it would be better for the reputation of American dramatists in general if the managers would stop trying to please London audiences with his plays. The thing cannot be done, and 'Her Own Way' is further proof of it. Even Maxine Elliott's personal charms fail to attract attention from the thin theatricalness of the play as seen through London eyes. The first night performance at the Lyric on Tuesday was warmly, even enthusiastically, received by the Americans in the stalls, but the Briton in the pit said 'boo' at the final curtain call and the British critics mostly said 'boo' in the papers next morning, although there were many kindly words for Maxine Elliott's beauty. There is an unfortunate tendency here to accept the vulgarities satirized in the play as typical Americanisms, and the sardonic Times critic gets almost a column of amusement for himself in viewing the whole thing as an entertaining ethnological exhibit, not to be discussed seriously as drama."

Wilton Lackaye, who took the part of Svengali in the original production of "Trilby," has never done anything to compare with his hit in this role. He made his dramatic beginnings soon after he was 30 and he is now on the shady side of 45, so that he has been known to the American public for a score of years, at least. It is said that he was fond of playing handsome parts only when he was younger, but before he was 40 that particular brand of nonsense was entirely knocked out of his noodle, and when the chance came for him to play Svengali he went at the task of transforming his own pulchritudinous self into the living embodiment of Du Maurier's idea with an enthusiasm that was remarkable. Mr. Lackaye is said to have created more new parts than almost any other man now on the stage. Du Maurier's real distress over the enormous success of "Trilby" as a book and a play will long be considered one of the most remarkable psychological phenomena in all history, and to very many it will forever remain distinctly unexplainable.

It was at Vancouver, B. C., according to a veracious press agent, and a florid faced youth of British extraction was dealing out tickets for "The Marriage of Kitty." An American short-skirt tourist ambled up and requested seats for that night's performance. "Two aisle seats in G or H; no farther back," she said. "Very sorry, ma'am," returned the florid youth, "but we 'ave only one seat unsold and that is the end seat in hell."

In addition to Mr. Carle, who will personally supervise the production, the following will appear in the cast: Edward Garvey, Edmund Stanley, Addison Madeira, William Rock, May Boley, Adele Rowland and many others. One feature of the play is to be the "Peanut" ballet. So far no one outside of Mr. Carle's assistants know what a "Peanut" ballet is.

E. S. Willard is planning for next season an elaborate revival of Taylor's tragedy, "The Fool's Revenge," which had such a prominent place in the repertoire of Edwin Booth. The play has been neglected for a long time, chiefly on account of the skill and versatility required for the principal role, that of Bertuccio, the fool. Mr. Willard is engaging an especially strong company to support him, with the intention of making his coming American season the most notable of the twelve that have so closely identified him with the stage of this country.

THE MYSTERY PLAY AT OBERAMMERGAU

"School of the Cross" To Be Performed By the Villagers From June To September This Year—An Entirely New Rendering.

London, May 20.—The last of the now well-known performances of the Passion Play by the villagers of Oberammergau in the Bavarian Highlands took place in 1900, and, in accordance with imperative custom, no other can be given until 1910. From Sunday, June 4, to Sunday, Sept. 17, inclusive of this year, however, another religious drama, or mystery play, the "Kreuzesschule" ("School of the Cross") is to be performed by the villagers, on that huge open-air stage, with mountains for back ground, already familiar to very many British and American tourists. At Oberammergau, elsewhere in Germany, and in Switzerland, renderings of "The School of the Cross" have been occasionally given with varying text and music, for centuries past.

The villagers have a rather heavy task before them on the present occasion. They, as a rule, know the music of the Passion Play by heart, while the exquisite melodies lately composed by Professor Muller for "The School of the Cross," were of course new to all of them, besides being, in a sense, "difficult." However "rehearsals" seem to have been going on steadily at the village since November last. This year's performances of "The School of the Cross" commemorate the thirtieth anniversary of another performance given in 1875, on the completion and unveiling of Professor Halbig's important and ambitious group of the Crucifixion, an open air "Calvary," with figures larger than life, in Kehlheim marble, and now one of the "sights" of the village. This was a gift, promised to the community by that brilliant but hapless monarch, the late King Ludwig II of Bavaria in 1871, after he had witnessed a special performance of the Passion Play, at which, by his own desire, he was the sole spectator. The connection of the Royal Bavarian House with Oberammergau dates back six hundred years," the first of the Wittlesbachers," also a Ludwig, having conferred a communal charter in the 14th century.

The text of earlier versions of "The School of the Cross" performed at Oberammergau in the eighteenth century abounds with quaint allegories, archaic terms and naif realism, in which the primitive and single-minded villagers found nothing unseemly. In 1825 Father Ottmar Weiss, who had written a version of the Passion Play, modernized the text of "The School of the Cross," but inserted some rather irrelevant matter, notably a warning of Delilah's to young men generally, most uncomplimentary to her own sex. For the performance of 1875, again, new text and music were written. None of these versions, however, were satisfactory; consequently, for the performance of the present year the Burgomaster and Communal Council of Oberammergau requested the Rev. Joseph Hecher, doctor of divinity and court chaplain at Munich, to prepare an entirely new rendering of "The School of the Cross." Written in blank verse, the dialogue and dramatic action throughout the seven acts turn on episodes in the life of King David. The epilogue to each act recites how striking episodes in the life of the Redeemer—which are then exhibited on the stage as tableaux, or "living pictures," correspond with, or fulfil the Old Testament predictions. The tender, yet impressive music, vocal and instrumental, which accompanies the "living pictures," and includes important parts for tenor, bass, soprano and choir, has been composed by Professor Wilheim Muller of Munich, who enjoys a very high reputation for this class of work.

Dr. Hecher's treatment of his great theme—virtually the co-relation of Old Testament promise to New Testament performance—is broad, simple, direct. David, the living man throughtout the Seven Acts of the "Kreuzesschule" is always a "type" or emblem of the Redeemer. It is interesting to note how Dr. Hecher thus enforces—and one might also say revives—a form of Biblical exegesis, formerly much in favour with Evangelical commentators, namely the exhibit in the Old Testament of individual "types," or figures symbolical of the Saviour—quite apart from prophetic declaration. So wholly absorbed is the author in this aspect of his work that, altho' presumably a Roman Catholic dignitary, he has not written a sentence containing sectarian, or controversial suggestion. No devotional passage in this little book would be out of place in an Anglican, Evangelical or Free Church sermon; nor does it contain a hymn which might not be sung at a "revival" meeting. The Prologue recited by the "Choragus" or choir-leader, gives the note of the entire play—

Yet not alone by speech from lips inspired
Was the Redeemer's advent signified.
Ever and always, through the twilight haze
Had shone the image of the Promised One—
Now clear, now partly hid, now full displayed
High o'er that tent where the dread Presence was.
Thus, mirror'd in the story of His Earthly Kin
May we behold the travail of the Son of Man.
As on some lofty snow-capp'd Alpine peak
While the sun lingers, coy to rule the day,
Stray shafts of light betray the secret of the dawn
And flood each awful fastness with a rosy glow—
So, since the Fall, those holy men ordain'd
To Earthly Kinship with The Very God
Stand radiant in the glory of that light
Shed forth upon the Consecrated One.

The symbolism of Old Testament events is further insisted on, and the "Choragus," referring to David's career, continues:—

Heed then our story, fashioned to display
The great King's life—as tho' He still did live.
As you decipher this, our Mystery,
So shall the Passion-cry from Calvary
Reach down to here; find many an echo here;
'Till to the way of faith stray steps do turn;
'Till all feel sure the Comforter is nigh—
As babe in manger and as living God!
Unseen, Christ surely, will be in your midst;
Silent beholding; in the stillness blessing you.

The Prologue concludes with a Living Picture, showing the infant Jesus in the cradle. Here a new setting of the "Gloria in Excelsis" is sung, being followed by four verses of a simple hymn:

Greeting now to Thee we bring
Jesus Lord, Redeemer, King
Tender babe, yet God's strong son
Comforter and Healing One.

Shed Thy radiance o'er this place,
Manifest Thy gentle face,
And Thy perfect sacrifice
And Thy throne beyond the skies.

Act I. introduces us to Jesse and his sons in their home at Bethlehem, awaiting news of Saul's campaign against the Amalekites, the distinctive character of each personage being ably sketched. Subsequent scenes gives us Eliab's soldierly narraitve of the victory over the Amalekites. Also news of Saul's sin and repudiation by Samuel. Jesse recites to his ambitious elder sons, a forcible version of Jacob's famous promise to the house of Judah:—

Yea, when in Goshen's land the hour drew nigh
Jacob, foreseeing things to come, thus spake
To Judah:—Thou art he whom all
Thy brethren shall praise. Thy grip shall be Upon the throat of Judah's foe. Thy father's sons
Shall bow before thee. A young lion, thou,
Swift in the chase, ready of tooth and claw.
Like an old lion gorged thou lest down,
From Judah shall the sceptre ne'er depart,
Nor shall the Overlordship pass from him,
Till Shiloh promised from the first shall come
And all his folk be gather'd near the throne.

The selection and the anointing by Samuel of "the curly head of that young shepherd lad," David, winds up act I. A graceful number, David's rhapsody on the harp, occurs here:

Never shall I strive for glory
Never play the proud one's part.
I desire no place in story—
God can read my lowly heart.

All I have I lay before Him
Life and strength—my offrings free.
As babe clings to her who bore him
Clings my soul, O Lord! to Thee!

Act II. dramatizes David's combat with Goliath and Saul's growing jealousy of David. Goliath's challenge to the host of Israel is decidedly forcible:

Listen, Saul's varlets! once again I ask
Is there no match for me amongst you all?
What! no one takes the risk! Like hares ye run,
Poor feeble creatures! valiant as old wives!
Where is your god, of whom ye oft dis prate
Where hides himself your wondrous lord of hosts
Doth your almighty crouch behind some rock
Or hath he dislocated his strong arm
Perchance he sleepeth sound? He hear-eth not
That wail, as of weak women, from your camp.

When the giant catches sight of David his language is still more emphatic:

Am I a dog that thou art come with staves
To master me? Get to thy mother, boy.
That she may give thee sugar'd pap to eat!
Thou beardless wight! thou miserable elf!
Thou misbegotten spawn of Israel's craven race.

With one slap from my hand I'll end thy life
And this night will I give thy tender flesh
To make a supper for the vultures and the crows.
Thy bones the jackals presently shall crunch.

Act III. shows David persecuted by Saul; the latter's gradual development, from craven jealousy to rabid frenzy, and the attempt on David's life are graphically rendered. Act IV. contains the story of David's flight into the wilderness; the romantic side of David's nature is well sketched in his confession to his brothers:

Aye, sometimes as weak as water is my heart
Verily I could shed tears like a child—

When night and silence brood o'er all the camp
I cannot sleep, but picture once again
Those peaceful pasture lands by Bethlehem
The birds upon the wing, the gentle lambs
Skipping about, or browsing mid the flowers;
And overhead I hear the evening breeze
Making among the palm tops holy melodies,
Fit to be woven into note and song
Athwart the strings of my beloved harp.

The three remaining acts deal with Absalom's conspiracy; David's fright from Jerusalem; his victorious return to the Holy City. The music and vocal parts accompanying the last living picture, Christ in the majesty of glory, reach a very high level indeed. Dr. Hercher is, of course, responsible for the German text only. The name of the English translator, who, as a rule has adhered pretty closely to the original, is not given. Over 500 performers will be on the stage at the same time during some of the "Kreuzesschule" scenes.

St. Cloud, May 20.—The Duluth White Sox won from the St. Cloud-Brainerd Northern league team here yesterday in the second of a series of four games, the next two of which will be played at Brainerd. The score was 6 to 4. The contest was a snappy, hard-fought one from start to finish, as will be seen from the score itself and from the fact that neither team got as many as a half dozen safe hits.

St. Cloud scored first in the initial inning, when White got a base on balls, stole second and came home on O'Dea's fumble of Kump's grounder. Duluth come back with two in her half of the fourth and another two in her half of the fifth. The locals tied the score in the sixth, but the visitors regained the lead in the seventh. After that the locals didn't have a chance to win.

WINS AGAIN.

Fargo Takes Second Game From Crookston Team.

Fargo, N. D., May 20.—Fargo repeated the performance of the opening day and took Crookston into camp again yesterday afternoon in a snappy game. The contest was characterized by light batting on the part of both aggregations. Bases on balls figured in the scores and Fargo hit more opportunely than the visitors. In the second, Drennan of Crookston had his troubles. French and Traeger worked him for four wide ones each, and made a double steal, then Fitzgerald hit the first ball over the left field fence for a pair of sacks, scoring both the men ahead of him. He scored later on Sperry's wild throw to catch him on his successful effort to pilfer the third corner. Another was added in the lucky seventh and again a base on balls figured. Hanson didn't like the king served up by Drennan and let four bad ones go by. He was sacrificed to second by Donovan, and scored on Schlatter's failure to hold Reeves' throw of Rose's grounder.

Crookston took advantage of Hanson's wildness in the second when Schlatter was given a pass to the initial sack. Ludwig's long single sent the first bagman to third and he scored on a wild pitch. After giving Reeves free transportation to first, Hanson got down to business and struck out the next two and threw Drennan out to first on a dinky grounder.

In the fifth, Hisey's muff gave Drennan life after Sperry was down. A base on balls to Fitzimmons advanced him to second and while Traeger was booting Olson's single, Drennan raced across the plate. Fitzimmons tried to score on Livingston's little one to the pitcher and was neatly caught at the home plate. Schlatter flied out to center and retired the side.

One of the features of the game was the manner in which Fargo was retired in the fifth on three flies to Ludwig. In the second inning combined with Drennan's wildness Fargo swiped five bases. Sperry seemed unable to locate second base and showed a complete reversion of form over his efforts of the day before. In the seventh Fitzgerald robbed Drennan of a hit by heating down a hot drive and fielding the twirler out at first.

The game was an interesting exhibition and both teams showed to an advantage. The score:

Winnipeg, May 20.—(Special to The Herald.)—Another big crowd turned out yesterday to witness the second game between the Winnipeg and Grand Forks teams. The home players turned the tables on the visitors and won the game in the first two innings. Maloney pitched a splendid game, but he had three errors chalked up against him. The features of the game were Bradley's work at third base and an outfield catch by Saunders.

WONDERFUL WORK

Being Done By Lou Dillion In California.

San Francisco, Cal., May 20.—Budd Doble, the famous reinsman, was in the city for a few hours and gave some interesting information about Lou Dillon, queen of trotters, with whose present condition he is greatly pleased.

"She has gained in flesh on work," said Doble, "and now weighs about 900 pounds. The road work has done her a great deal of good."

Asked as to the mare's future movements, Doble said: "Lou Dillon is to be shipped East early next month. She will go direct to Cleveland, where she will doubtless take part in matinee races. If she displays her old-time form she will be sent to beat her own world's record."

Lou Dillon was given several stiff miles at Agricultural Park, San Jose, last Saturday. Doble gave her a warming mile in 2:30. She negotiated the second mile in 2:18 and the third in 2:17. The fourth mile was made in 2:15 flat, which is the fastest mile the mare has made since she returned to California. Doble will probably give Lou Dillon a mile in 2:10 before she is shipped to Cleveland.

New York, May 20.—Battling Nelson and Abe Attell have signed articles to fight six rounds at 100 pounds before the National Sporting club of Philadelphia next Monday night.

JENKINS WINS MATCH.

New York, May 20.—A sensational finish to a most interesting catch-as-catch-can wrestling match, between Tom Jenkins of Cleveland, Ohio, and Frank Gotch of Humboldt, Iowa, contsted at Madison Square Garden last night, resulted in a clean victory for Jenkins.

BLOOD

On account of its frightful hideousness, Blood Poisoning is commonly called the King of All Diseases. It may be either hereditary or contracted. Once the system is tainted with it the disease may manifest itself in the form of Scrofula, Eczema, Rheumatic Pains, Stiff or Swollen Joints, Eruptions or Copper Colored Spots on the Face or Body, little Ulcers in the Mouth or on the tongue, Sore Throat, Swollen Tonsils, Falling out of the Hair or Eyebrows, and finally a Leprous-like Decay of the Flesh and Bones. If you have any of these or similar symptoms, get BROWN'S BLOOD CURE immediately. This treatment is practically the result of life work. It contains no dangerous drugs or injurious medicines of any kind. It goes to the very bottom of the disease and forces out every particle of impurity. Soon every sign and symptom disappears, completely and forever. The blood, the tissues, the flesh, the bones and the whole system are cleansed, purified and restored to perfect health, and the patient prepared anew for the duties and pleasures of life. BROWN'S BLOOD CURE. $2.00 a bottle lasts a month. Made by DR. BROWN, 935 Arch St., Philadelphia. For sale in Duluth only by Max Wirth, 13 West Superior Street.

POISON

"BIG ED" PARRY, ATHLETIC SENSATION OF THE UNIVERSITY OF CHICAGO

"GETTING RID" OF THE HAMMER

AT THE FINISH OF THE SHOT PUT

At the recent meet at Madison, Parry, Stagg's giant, demonstrated his superiority in the hammer throw by making a toss of 143 feet and 7 inches. Coach Temple says that nothing can stop Chicago from landing the big meet next month. Chicago has a well-balanced team, and with Catlin, Hogenson, Lightbody and Parry, they are certain to be most formidable.

GETTING READY

Preparations Being Made For Opening Game With Winnipeg.

Drawing For Automobile Will Take Place on June 1.

Preparations are already being made for the opening of the Northern league season in Duluth.

Winnipeg will play the first game here on Thursday, June 1, and the event will be celebrated with the usual ceremonies. The two teams will be driven through the city, accompanied by Flaaten's band, and on reaching the park the band will give several selections. Mayor Cullum will then throw the first ball over the plate.

The drawing for the automobile will take place at this time. The auto has been purchased and paid for by the club, although enough tickets to cover the cost have not yet been sold. The club must sell about 200 tickets between now and June 1 in order to come out even in the experiment. The person holding the lucky number, which will be drawn on June 1, will be immediately presented with the automobile.

Meanwhile the team is making good on the trip and has a clean start in the race for the pennant. The St. Cloud-Brainerd combination has proven an easy mark in the first two games, and there is every prospect of the team coming home with at least half of its games won. Today and tomorrow the White Sox will play in Brainerd, and next week will play Winnipeg, Fargo and Crookston, skipping Grand Forks on the present trip.

Winnipeg promises to be a red hot ball town this summer. In the first two games played with Grand Forks the stands have been crowded, and the town apparently has a bad attack of the baseball fever. If the Canucks prove to have a winning team it will be a money-making proposition.

Grand Forks and Fargo are also enthusiastic over the game and can be counted on for their share of support. St. Cloud proved to be somewhat of a disappointment on the opening game, considering the fine weather, but Brainerd may show up in a better manner.

* * *

The diamond at Athletic park is being rolled and scraped, and by the time the team returns it will be in good shape for the opening game, if the weather remains favorable.

* * *

Tomorrow afternoon the Millers and the Proctor team will play at Athletic park. No admission will be charged to the game.

FRIDAY'S EVENTS ON RACE COURSES

St. Louis, May 20.—The favorites had a good day at the fair grounds, winning every event, but the first, when Streator Cyclone, at 10 to 1, came home.

Platoon, held at even money, won the American Jockey club feature race yesterday, defeating Roustabout, the second choice, in a driving finish. Chanley, even money, won the third race, a handicap steeple chase at about two miles. Buck O'Dowd refused the water jump, throwing his jockey, but the boy remounted and secured second place.

Kansas City, May 20.—Rebo won the fourth race at five furlongs, the feature event at Elm Ridge yesterday. The first race marked the return to the saddle of Henry Spencer, after an absence of nearly two years. Spencer had the mount on Royal Blue and he piloted the colt to victory in clever fashion, winning easily from Ferryman and Gowanus.

Louisville, May 20.—Silver Skin, the favorite, won the handicap at Churchill Downs yesterday, covering the mile and sixteenth in good time. Form players found it difficult to pick winners.

New York, May 20.—Tiptoe, carrying 122 pounds and conceding weight to the entire field yesterday won the Gaiety stakes at Belmont park. Tiptoe and Bivouac were coupled as the Belmont entry and closed favorite at 15 to 20 Tiptoe made the running all the way but had to be ridden out at the finish to win by a head from Belt of Pequest.

GREAT AUTO CARNIVAL

To Be Held In St. Paul In July.

Northern Wisconsin, Minnesota and North Dakota as well as portions of Manitoba are heavily interested in the great auto carnival that will be held in St. Paul in July. As J. S. Bryant treasurer of the Automobile club of St. Paul said: "An aggregation of men is to meet in St. Paul, gathered from all sections of the country, who could buy and sell any group of railroads in the world, and still have money enough to transact their businesses upon, and the meeting will be an event which simply cannot be overlooked by the Northwest.

"The great need of the Northwest is a productive population and the first requirement of such is capital. The visitors who are planning to come to St. Paul this summer are participants in the big road tour have capital in abundance and in a certain measure the investment of it will be dependent upon the showing made by the people of the Northwest."

St. Paul will have at least 1,500 automobiles in the big endurance tour from Chicago, Omaha, Grand Forks and Duluth. The Chicago section drawing for entries upon all the territory east and south of that city will of course be the largest; next will probably come the Southwest section which will include cars from Kansas City and as far west as Denver and from the intervening territory. This section will start from Omaha. The Northwestern section and the one from Duluth are about even so far as the number of avowed entrants. It is estimated that the Chicago section will have 1,000 cars; the Omaha division 350 and each of the others about 200. Road maps showing each mile of the tour will be furnished entrants and special provisions have been made to insure comfort, safety and speed to the tourists of all sections while on the road and in St. Paul. A program of entertainment has been arranged during the stay in St. Paul, that excells auspices of the Chicago Automobile club and by the sanction of the American Automobile association. St. Paul has raised $50,000 to hold up the city's end of the entertainment.

O'KEEFE FAILS TO APPEAR.

Kansas City, May 20.—Jack O'Keefe of Chicago who was to have boxed twenty rounds with Billy Rhodes of this city in Kansas City, Kan., last night, failed to appear when time was called, and it was learned that he had left for Chicago. The contest was declared off.

ORGANIZE CREWS

Boat Club Members Hold Meeting For That Purpose.

Only Six Weeks Left to Train For Regatta.

This afternoon between 5 and 6 o'clock, every member of the Duluth Boat club who can row or who is anxious to learn, is wanted at the club house, where the organization of crews for the coming summer will be effected.

The crews will be organized in order to facilitate the training for the regatta to be held in July, and after the organization has been effected the same crews will row together as regularly as possible.

The members of the committee in charge of the training will be present this afternoon, and the work will be outlined. Following the meeting one or both of the eights may be launched.

The oarsmen commenced work in earnest this week, and every evening at least one four has been out on the bay. The new men have been learning the stroke in the working boats, under the instruction of some of the older oarsmen and the members of the committee of five.

Only a little over six weeks' time is left before the regatta to be held in July when the Winnipeg and St. Paul clubs will send crews to compete with the Duluth crews and in that time there is an immense amount of work to be done. The Duluth men are far from being in shape yet and the captain and trainers have as yet been unable to form any idea as to the men who should represent the club.

The Winnipeg and St. Paul clubs have the advantage of two or three weeks' extra training and their crews are already getting into shape.

The Duluth club will probably enter two eights in the regatta. Winnipeg will send one eight and St. Paul may also send one. This would give four crews in the race.

Five or six crews will probably be entered in the four oared race, and several in the doubles.

The club is in need of some single shell oarsmen. Up to the present time none have shown any special aptitude for work in the single shells and Duluth is not likely to be well represented in this respect.

HACKENSCHMIDT

The Great Wrestler, Proved His Real Worth.

New York, May 20.—Frank Gotch has succeeded in raising quite a little commotion in his efforts to get on a match, without delay, with George Hackenschmidt, and his intimation that Hackenschmidt refuses to meet him because he was afraid of him finds credence among some followers of wrestling. The ease with which the Russian has succeeded in besting Tom Jenkins, who had only a short time before regained the championship of America from Gotch, precludes the idea that the big Russian's refusal to meet the Buffalonian is because of any fear of the result. It is altogether more probable that the reason given by Hackenschmidt that he has not the time to prepare for a match with Gotch before engagements already made, necessitate his return to Europe, is the correct one. Hackenschmidt has shown himself a true sportsman in meeting Jenkins at his own style. He did this against the judgment and advice of his manager.

While a match between the Russian and Gotch would probably draw a big house, and would please every lover of wrestling in the country, there is no rule or custom which requires a man who has defeated a champion to meet another man who has been defeated by the champion. As a matter of fact, Hackenschmidt has made a most favorable impression upon those who have met him here. He is a quiet, sensible fellow, who, in the judgment of experts, is much in a class by himself at his game, as Jeffries is at his.

Now that Jenkins has agreed to give Gotch another match, it will not be long before the statement of Gotch, that he was not in condition when he met Jenkins the last time, will either be confirmed or disproved. Jenkins and Gotch will meet tonight at Madison Square garden.

MIDDLEWEIGHT

Championship Argument Is Brought Up Again.

Chicago, May 20.—Word comes from Tacoma, Wash., that Tommy Burns, a Detroit fighter of only fair ability, but who has been doing very well on the coast, is to fight Philadelphia Jack O'Brien "for the middle-weight championship" at that spot July 4. Just where these gentlemen got permission to cut up the title between themselves is a mystery. Young Hugo Kelly, of this city, who damaged Mr. O'Brien to a considerable extent, rather unexpectedly not long ago, will have something to say before the middle-weight honors are finally apportioned off. Also Mike Schreck, whose recent defeat of George Gardner, has made him a very logical candidate. These two rising lights have been offered a match at Butte, Mont., in case Schreck's proposed match with Fitzsimmons falls through. And the result of that go will have as much to do with deciding the championship as anything that could be framed up.

HOLDING MEET

Pupils of Grade Schools Have Afternoon of Sports.

Contest Will Decide the School and Individual Championships.

Under ideal weather conditions the interscholastic field meet, under the auspices of the boys' department of the Y. M. C. A. will be held this afternoon at the driving park on West Third street.

The meet, which was postponed from last Saturday, is between teams representing the different public schools in the city. There will be a prize to the school team winning the greatest number of points, and also individual prizes to the boy winning in the most events.

The meet is in charge of a committee composed of Thomas Doyle, Ray Nelson, Daniel Cole, the physical director of the Y. M. C. A., and Norman MacLeod, the secretary of the boys' department.

Daniel Cole will act as starter, John Oldham as announcer, Bert Wheeler as referee, Dennis Deighton as clerk of the course, and Harwood Sturtevant as scorer. The field judges are Dr. Olson, George Wilson and Phil Bevis. The track judges are Ed Furni, Dr. Bowden and Robert Smith, and the timekeepers, Sargent McGonagle, Phil Smith and J. S. Ferguson.

There are nineteen events in all, eight field events and eleven track events. The following is a list of the events with the number of entries in each:

GOLF CHAMPION ANDERSON

To Play In the British Open Championship.

New York, May 20.—Willie Anderson, open champion of the United States Golf association and open champion of the Western Golf association, sailed on the Umbria to play in the British open championship at St. Andrew's on June 7 and 8. He left Scotland at 16, and has since won the American open championship three times and the Western open championship twice.

Anderson said on the steamship: "I have never played over the St. Andrew's links, but although our amateurs say it is a tricky course, I believe all but three or four holes will be plain sailing. I expect to find many players from the United States at St. Andrew's as onlookers, and also to meet George S. Lyon, the Canadian amateur champion, who is to take part. I will be back, win or loose, in five weeks."

Anderson will first go to Edinburgh to visit his mother and sisters, but he expects to get ten days of practice at St. Andrew's.

NOT MUCH CHANCE

For Racing Game to Open In Chicago.

Chicago, May 20.—With the racing game dead for at least a year or two, and only a dim prospect of fighting being allowed, possibly next winter, Chicago is, indeed, in a bad way from a sporting standpoint. Now and then there are vague reports of a finish fight with bare knuckles being pulled off in a barn in some unfrequented spot, before a small and select crowd, but that is a poor substitute for the events that have been witnessed here in the palmy days of pugilism. The race goers' only solace is in playing the ponies in the handbooks, of which there are a multitude, and which are operated strictly on the "cinch" system. Baseball is still left in the sporting calendar, but while it is an interesting game for those who like it, it fails to appeal to the real sporting blood, for the reason that there is no chance to "get action."

There is still some talk of Washington Park holding a meeting, but it seems too foolish at this time to be worthy of consideration. The big South Side, as its officials say, would be very glad to be shown a chance to hold a meeting, but up to date they haven't seen such a chance. The state's attorney is still very hostile, and he makes no distinction as regards the differents tracks. They all look alike to him.

KNOCKOUT PUZZLE

For Those Who Bet on the Britt-White Fight.

Britt Declared Winner, Though White Was on His Feet.

San Francisco, May 20.—Echoes of the Britt-White fight are still reverberating, and it is likely to be some time before the rumbling ceases. The sports of San Francisco are prattling glibly to cloak their confusion. They feel that they owe White an apology for placing such a small estimate on his fighting ability, and they are tendering it to him in the shape of assurances that the next time he performs here he will pull a bumper house.

The English lightweight has been modest and uncomplaining from first to last. He admits that the critics of this country could not be blamed to any extent for forming unfavorable opinions of his prowess in view of the way he was belittled by some of the sporting papers of his own country. He says that there are wheels within wheels in the English pugilistic belt, just as there in other places, and that most of the adverse criticism he was subjected to was inspired by personal feeling. He is sorry that more of the local sporting writers did not visiat him at his training quarters and judge for themselves of his class as a fighter, and he derives a certain degree of consolation from the fact that the public now recognizes him as a capable ringster, and is willing to lend its countenance to whatever attempts may be made to rematch him with Britt.

A notable feature of the international contest was the fairness and manliness of it. It was so full of action that the interest of the watchers never flagged. Some of the dyed-in-the-wool fans said, in fact, that they never knew an hour and twenty minutes to whizz by so rapidly.

The men were very tractable in the referee's hands. They broke the instant they were ordered and then began again. It was a reminder of the old days at the California club before the so-called straight Queensberry rules empowered a brace of pugilists to grapple and scuffle around like a couple of canines in a street fight.

Old-time boxers like Eddie Graney were very much impressed with White's clean hitting, the right cross counter which Jabez uses earning for him a particularly big meed of praise. It was with this blow that he rattled Britt in the third, sixth and twelfth rounds. The Englishman times his delivery to a nicety and sends his dexter glove home with splendid precision.

White has started back to England, but he proposes returning here in the fall. He will use every legitimate endeavor to get a return match with the native son. He believes he can do better if matters shape themselves so that he will not be required to jump right into training the moment he arrives.

A controversy has arisen in regard to the manner the contest ended. Some of those who bet that White would not be knocked out are reluctant to admit that they lost their money. White was in such a helpless state when the round lacked twenty seconds of completion that Referee Smith jumped between the tottering Britisher and harm, and awarded the hoonrs to Britt.

The referee said before leaving the ring that Britt was entitled to the credit of a knock-out. He instanced that when seconds interfered to prevent a principal from being punished unnecessarily, a knock-out was recorded, and claimed that a similiar ruling should be made when a referee found it necessary to ring down the curtain in behalf of a fighter who was utterly unable to protect himself.

The question of knockout or no knockout came up first, if memory serves, when Tom O'Rourke threw up the towel to save George Dixon in New York. To allow the winner the credit of a knockout in a case of that sort seemed a commonsense proceeding. If the matter had not been decided that way, the seconds in battles that have been fought since could have saved the bets hinging upon knockouts by interfering when the collapse of a principal seemed imminent.

For the referee to arrogate to himself the right to stop a contest and proclaim a knockout when both men were on their feet is a horse of another color, though. It is a point that might well be argued by such as wish to see the sport of the ring properly safeguarded. In this particular instance I believe that Referee Smith did what was right, but it seems to me that it wouldn't do to allow his action to become a precedent. If referees generally were endowed with such discretionary powers the Joe Grims of the fighting game would be in danger of being "knocked out" every time they put up their hands.

I have had to answer several queries on the point involved in Smith's ruling. One correspondent puts a suppositious case. Here it is: "How would it be if a fight was stopped, as Smith stopped White and Britt, when the end of the round was only eight seconds distant? Could the referee give the winner the credit of a knockout then?"

It is conundrums of this kind that make the average sporting writer old and wrinkled before his time. Now, without undertaking to say what a latter-day referee could or would do, it appears to me that as a man suspected of being knocked out is given ten seconds to report for duty, it would be obviously unfair to declare him knocked out when there are only eight seconds of a round left. A referee who would pronounce a man knocked out in a case of that kind would have to take refuge behind the argument, "Well, he wouldn't have come to anyhow."

Jimmy Britt and Battling Nelson will get together some time this summer or fall if they do not become all tangled up on the subject of finances again. It's a queer thing about these young men. They are the sole survivors of a long string of white-skinned lightweights, and they are itching to get together and decide which is the better fighter. But all their ambition and all their rivalry become as fires that have died down in the fear that one will steal a march on the other in regard to the division of the prize money.

Once before Nelson broke away from articles of agreement he had signed because he heard that Britt was getting "15 per cent on the side." The Battling One wanted similar consideration, and it was denied him. Jabez White took his place, and ever since Nelson has been telling the world how Britt "side-stepped" him. Yet Britt did nothing but keep his counsel and prepare for the man who became Nelson's substitute.

Britt and Nelson have had several talks on the subject of another match. All through their fiery talk was the jingle of coin and the rustle of bills. It is said that they have finally agreed upon a division of the spoils, and if there is some way of keeping money matters out of their thoughts they will settle down to road-work and bag-punching after a while.

It is said that the Western Athletic club, of which Sam Berger is the leading spirit, has agreed with Britt and Nelson for a contest which will net the boxers 65 per cent of the receipts. The Hayes Valley club is also after the match, and both clubs are after the July permit. I suppose whoever secures the permit will handle the match, but bearing in mind the way in which Bat and Jimmy have split asunder on former occasions I will remain skeptical about their getting together until I see them in the ring.

THE CLOSE RACES

Of Old Days Recalled By the Metropolitan Finish.

Three Successive Dead Heats at Old Gravesend Track.

The recent rhapsodies indulged in by Eastern press writers over the late dead heat for the Metropolitan handicap at Belmont Park, and their comparisons drawn with former finishes of this sort in great events are hardly warranted by the facts. And the older generation of turfmen have indulged in some fruitful reminiscences in consequence, says the Chicago Tribune.

Long before Sysonby or Race King or their sires were even thought of, a decade before the famous Domino-Dobbins and Henry of Navarre-Domino dead heats were run, several dead races took place at Gravesend and Saratoga that for sensational circumstances throw the Metropolitan finish away in the shade.

In England in 1855 an American bred mare, Prioress, in the late Richard Ten Broeck's colors, ran a dead heat for one of the big fall handicaps (either the Canelridgeshire of the Cesarewitch) with El Ha Rin and Queen Bess, and won the run-off in clever fashion. The late John A. Morris, founder of Morris park, was one of the Americans present at this great race, and was a financial backer of the Ten Broeck enterprise.

Some twenty years after this triple dead heat in New England the old Gravesend race course, New York, the Brooklyn Jockey club's track, witnessed an unprecedented, never paralleled contest between two crack horses of that day, which still constitutes the world's record in the matter of dead heat events.

In a race of a mile and three-quarters between half a dozen stout long distance racers two horses, Milton H. Sanford's Bingaman, a 5-year-old, by Asteroid—Bayleaf, and D. J. Crouse's Mart Jordan, a 3-year-old, by Revolver Syren, ran three dead heats one after the other, with half an hour between! And at the fourth trial between these game exponents of stamina and pluck as well as speed the older horse only beat the younger by a neck in a hard drive!

Bingaman carried 114 pounds and was ridden by William Hayward, the English jockey, now an owner and trainer in New Jersey, while Mart Jordan had only eighty-seven pounds up in the person of Lloyd Huges, late the famous "white headed" jockey that rode most of the late George L. Lorillard's cracks in their many great victories.

The younger horse was named after Mart Jordan, the Chicago turfman, who raced Singing Master with success on the local tracks last fall, and the good natured Marylander grows enthusiastic when questioned about this game performance of his namesake with his older opponent.

After the first dead heat between Bingaman and Mart Jordan the older horse was favorite in the pools at $100 to $30, as he seemed to "cool out" the better and was a noted stayer. But as old man Crouse said his colt was a "bulldog," the Western men to a man accepted the odds against the youngster.

This time Hughes on the colt tried to make a runaway race of it, but Bingaman closed up a gap of six lengths gradually, but in the final furlong when he reached Jordan could not get away from him another inch. Both horses finished "nod for nod" and nose and nose in a second dead heat amid great cheering.

During the half hour interval before the horses were called up for the third trial, the trainer of Bingaman went to old man Crouse and offered to divide the purse and not run another heat. But Jockey Hughes advised the Ohio turfman to stick it out, which he did to his sorrow.

Betting before the third trial veered over to the colt, whose light weight and fine appearance after "cooling out" made him a slight favorite at $100 to $80, and "Doctor" Underwood's pool box held a large amount of money on the result of the race.

This time waiting tactics were pursued by both. The first mile was slow, and the only real racing was the last six furlongs. Again the colt led into the stretch, only to be nailed by the old horse half way home, and both animals, game as the proverbial pebble, fought it out hammer and tongs to the wire, finishing on dead even terms in a third dead heat.

Bingaman was now the favorite at $100 to $50, and while both horses "cooled out" nicely, the 5-year-old looked the fresher of the two. But the colt showed himself game to the core by opening up a gap in the first mile that Bingaman closed in the last quarter, the pair running on nearly even terms all of the final furlong, Bingaman just winning by a neck in the last few strides.

The famous dead heat at Saratoga for the Travers stake of 1875, between Atilla and Acrobat, with Sweet Eyes and Brigand only two short heads further back, was so close that had the judges hung out a quadruple dead heat it would have been received with acclaim.

This celebrated finish, the most sensational of its day, saw two horses, PierreLorillard's Atilla and K. W. Sears' Acrobat, finish locked, away over across the track near the inside rail, while another colt, M. H. Sanford's Brigand, was in the middle of the track, and August Belmont's Steel Eyes near the outside rail, immediately under the judges, a most difficult finish to place correctly in the elevated judges' stand of that day, ten or twelve feet above the ground.

CASEY AND KEELER

Are Lightweight Phenomenons of the Baseball Profession.

American Race Big Money Maker For All the Clubs.

Boston, May 21.—One day recently I dropped into a local hotel to see Manager Frank G. Selee, and found an army of ripe ball players sitting about as both the Chicago National league and New York American players were there with him.

There was a general mix-up and much ball talk. Dr. Jimmie Casey was holding down a settee with Willie Keeler for a companion.

"Two great little men," suggested Frank Selee, "and Casey better than even this season." Willie Keeler is always in condition and has no off spells. Casey on the other hand is fond of a good time and likely to grow fat if not followed up closely and coached to keep his weight down. Two good men with the stick and nerve to burn, fast on their feet and as crisp as brier wood.

Neither is much over five feet in height, yet darlings of the ballfield and characters one can never tire of meeting. Casey and Keeler are lightweight phenomenons of the baseball profession. The friends of the umpire, a credit to the sport. May they live long and prosper. One from Brooklyn, the other from Lawrence, Mass. A dozen years in the business and good for several more.

Pat Dougherty goes slouching by; a great run getter, a poor fielder, but a valuable man; one of the few men who can throw from the outfield, an all-round batsman and a hound going over the ground to first; dopy disposition, not liked by fellow players and apparently indifferent to public opinion; a smile for no one, but the proper build for a great player, and, with more thought and practice in his weakness, should be a fancy salaried man; made a barrel of money for both New York and Boston last season when he changed his base of operations; hard man to replace on a champion team, but lacking many essentials necessary for team work.

No comparison of the playing strength of the two major leagues; players all satisfied the managers are all tied up into a hard knot for the purpose of keeping salaries in check and having no chance to flirt with big offers, they are content to fan about baseball, laughing about something that happened to Cy McCluskey in Kankakee or praising the swell performance of some of the newcomers from the minors. Abe Yeager and Pitcher Hogg, of the New York Highlanders, take a rear seat, but are noticed by Clarke Griffith, who remarks, "I guess I didn't pick up a couple of birds in that pair over there. There is a boy none of the big ones has anything on as a pitcher," meaning Mr. Hogg, "and the touting he received from the coast last season was on the level. Certainly Yeager is an old lad at the business and a very handy man for us," Griffith continued. "We had hard luck last season and are having it again this year, but we are in the bunch and I tell the boys the team that cannot weather hardship should pass up the American league. Sooner or later all the clubs will have their share of the poor luck. Its simply a case of plugging away until the cards break better, that's all."

Frank Selee is dead anxious to have it known that he has the speed players of the trade, the fastest team that he ever managed, even with some of his stars out, and he points to a rangy pair of youngsters in Schultz and Hoffman, and the next day I witnessed their very clever all-round work and wonder where Selee digs up so many fine youngsters and yet hangs on to old favorites who look weak to other clubs. But he manages to make go in fine style, like Barry, Slagle, McCarthy and others.

Dr. Casey, John O'Neill, Selee and I are standing together while the manager talks. "Those of my men who are not so speedy," says Selee, "are on the lookout, and take advantage of every opening to score. It is not always the fast man that wins the money." Just then O'Neill walked away, and Selee continued: "I said that for O'Neill's benefit, for he is one of the most conscientious players in the business, and though a slow runner will take advantage of openings to score."

Dr. Casey is down finer than for years, and says that Manager Selee made a special duty of following him up this season, chasing him to weighing machines about every week. "That I do," said Mr. Selee drawing a little book from his vest pocket. "I keep the weights of my men right here and insist on knowing their weight, for then they cannot fool me."

Manager Selee tells his players there will be no exhibition game at Lynn, and they can take in the game at the American grounds, where New York and Boston will perform. This is a treat, and the players are delighted, for they enjoy a day off to see others hard at play.

Frank Selee says with Chance back on first base that he has nothing to fear, and it looks that way, although he has no pennant possibility.

There is not enough aggressiveness in his boys. Not enough of the undercurrent desire to tear the lining out of things. Chance helps out when he is in the game, but finds it a difficult task. The team will be in the first division, all right, for Selee is a winner for getting concerted work out of even ball players.

Here comes Walter Burnham, manager of the Newark club, looking for Managers Griffith and Selee. Walter is flying high, his team is making big money and well up in the race. Finishing his business he wants to talk minor league business.

He had several clippings to show that presages no good for the few individuals who are looked on as troublemakers for those upholding the national agreement, the salvation of professional baseball. Mr. Burnham claims that he is loyal to the agreement. He speaks kindly of Howard Griffith, the Jersey attorney, who led the small hand last winter. He is a great admirer of Ed Hanlon, and gives the reasons why Hanlon signed the prayer to have President Pat Powers removed from power, and then wonders how far Mr. Powers will not go to get back at those who had the pan ready to fry him to a grizzle.

"Powers is on the warpath," says Burnham, and Walter is right, for he was then only a short distance from the Newark manager. There is some fun ahead in baseball, and the unraveling of the winter schemes will show some one dealing the cards from the south end of the deck.

The short card men alone need worry when the jury comes together, and the best of it is that we have so many first-class men in the business end of the game after all.

We will now have a chance to see the Western clubs of the National league. Boston and Philadelphia are much stronger than last season, and will make some trouble for the invaders.

At the same time the West will see what we have in the East in the way of American league players, including the Washington team. They will be very much interested to see how Jake Stahl will pull his boys through the West. The champions are in their old form and bound to hold their own. The American race is a beauty and a big money-maker for all the clubs.

GREATEST DAM IN AMERICA

Will Form a Vast Lake Holding Four Hundred Billion Gallons.

The most gigantic of the government irrigation constructions in progress is the Salt River, or "Roosevelt" dam, in Arizona, and considerable criticism has been made of the course of the secretary of the interior in setting aside between $3,000,000 and $4,000,000 for this project, which will irrigate no public lands, but only those already in private ownership, vastly increasing, of course, their value. The work which the government will do under this project will double and quadruple land values, and in fact make much land that is now practically useless worth from $30 to $100 an acre. Some 200,000 acres will be irrigated under these works, and the artificial reservoir to be formed by the Roosevelt dam will be by far the largest in the United States, with the incredible capacity of nearly 400,000,000,000 gallons. This is three times the capacity of the great Wachusett reservoir, which is to supply Boston, and twice that of the famous Croton dam of New York's new waterworks.

The criticism referred to of building government works to supply water to such a section as the Salt River Valley, where the lands are all in private ownership, instead of going out onto the desert and reclaiming public lands, is one which will not hold upon second thought. The Salt River Valley has been a famous section of the arid West. Twenty years ago it was a vast, flat plain, skirted by mountains reflecting the wonderful colors and tints of the southwest, but nourishing only the cactus and other desert plants. The Salt River cut its center, a sparkling, life-giving stream, and private capital undertook to utilize its waters for irrigation and build up a great community. Dams were built, canals were constrcuted, and thousands of acres were planted to oranges, lemons, figs, dates, raisins and wine grapes, almonds pomegranates and all the fruits and flowers of the semi-tropics, not to mention broad fields of emerald alfalfa, where fat cattle stood knee deep in the luxuriant growth. But the valley is today crippled and sick. The canal system laid out was based upon the heavy annual rainfalls which prevailed at that time, and sufficient data had not been gathered to show that the period was one of fat years, and that the lean years of drouth would surely follow. They came, however, over the whole Southwest, as can be seen by a study of the rainfall charts of that region, and the result has been that thousands of acres of orchard and farm have returned to aridity. The Old Man of the Desert came in and claimed back his own. It is simply a question, then, in the Salt River Valley, and in some other sections, as to whether it is not as good or better policy for Uncle Sam to save the homes of several thousand pioneers, who are perishing for want of water, as it is to reclaim new, raw lands and put new settlers upon them.

FROM A BROOK TO A TORRENT.

The flow of the Salt River Valley is variable in the extreme. At low water periods it runs something like 100 cubic feet per second. In one great flood the river swept down the valley at the rate of 300,000 cubic feet per second. The twelfth annual report of the geological survey describes the flood of 1891 as follows, all of which ran uselessly to the sea for lack of storage:

On Feb. 17 the discharge was 835 cubic feet per second, increasing the next day to 154,000 cubic feet, and on the 19th to 276,000 cubic feet. This was followed by a second greater swell, until, on the 24th, a maximum of 300,000 cubic feet was reached."

The Roosevelt dam is to control and store such floods. About sixty miles from Phoenix, the Salt River enters a profound canyon, with lofty, precipitous walls and a narrow floor, in which is located the dam site. Above the dam the canyon opens into wide valleys, providing the most capacious reservoir in the West.

"It would probably be impossible to find anywhere in the arid region," said Government Engineer Arthur P. Davis, the projector of this magnificent enterprise, "a storage project in which all conditions are as favorable as in this one. The capacity of the reservoir in proportion to the dimensions of the dam is enormous, and the lands to be watered are of remarkable fertility, with a climate which may be classed as almost semi-tropic."

Mr. Davis also made the important discovery that material for making good Portland cement and bricks lies immediately by the dam site. He states that the masonry dam now under construction will be absolutely permanent—"safe, solid and secure for all ages to come, a part of the everlasting hills of which it will become an integral part."

Finding that the prices bid by the cement manufacturers would add an increased burden of $500,000 or more to the payment of the irrigators, the government constructed an immense cement mill and will itself manufacture the 200,000 or more barrels of cement needed for the dam. A splendid roadway, rivaling the mountain roads of the Incas, has been built from Phoenix to the dam, at a cost of over $100,000. The cost of the entire construction, $3,500,000, will be apportioned among the lands receiving the water, to be paid back to the government in ten annual installments, and no water-user can hold more than 160 acres.

An interesting feature of the construction work is the power canal, which has already been built. The regular flow of the river has been diverted above the dam site, and at that point is tumbled over the rocks, generating some 10,000 electrical horsepower, to be utilizde in building the dam. It will be required day and night for drilling, moving great rocks, pumping, grinding rock and clinkers, mixing and handling cement and handling machinery. The river is thus being forced to erect its own dam.

Hamlin Garland is one of the foremost of American authors, and his reputation extends far beyond his native land. His books have ben enthusiastically reviewed in English and Italian periodicals, and in Paris there is a Garland cult, headed by Mme. Foulon de Vaulx, the wife of a French banker. Various of his novels have been translated into foreign languages, and they have all received a large measure of popularity in this country, being noted for vigor and truth of presentation, as well as for literary finish. Among his more recent novels may be mentioned "The Captain of the Gray-Horse Troop," "Hesper," and "The Light of the Star," all of which have met with high favor from the reading public. Mr. Garland's latest piece of fiction is called "The Tyranny of the Dark," and while it is essentially a love-story, it also deals with a subject in which most persons are more deeply interested than they are always ready to admit. It is concerned with certain psychic phenomena, commonly attributed to the agency of spirits, if not altogether disbelieved, and, as Mr. Garland points out, there is comparatively little doubt among investigators as to the actuality of some at least of these phenomena, but much tribulation as to how they are to be interpreted. Mr. Garland suggests an interpretation, and at the same time tells an absorbing story with all his wonted power and charm of narration.

"The Tyranny of the Dark" tells the story of a young woman who, while perfectly normal in all other respects, had manifested psychic powers from a very early age. Through the influence of her mother, and a fanatical preacher, who wishes to use her as a means of converting the world to an undoubting belief in immortality, she becomes practically enslaved by her own singular powers. The girl is revolted by the idea of sacrificing her youth to this fetich, and longs inexpressibly for freedom to live a happy, wholesome life, like other girls of her age. She feels, she says, like a "hotel piano," on which any one may play. Her sanity and happiness are at stake, when a young scientist comes on the scene and interests himself in her case. He resists his first impulse to fall in love with her, more than half suspecting her of fraud, but at an impromptu sitting, under the most rigid conditions, her innocence of deception is proven. The scientist, now believing in her entirely, sets himself to the double task of rescuing her from her obsession and winning her for his wife. The powers of light are opposed to the powers of darkness, and are ultimately triumphant. The story is replete with stirring incidents, concerning both the characters "in the light," and those "in the dark," and these episodes are all the more fascinating because based upon, or at least resembling, actual occurrences. The human, tragic, side of the story, so well expressed in its title, Mr. Garland has handled with power and perfect understanding. He has also, in the young scientist, illustrated the typical development of the scientific man of today who studies psychic phenomena. He shows the change from sheer disbelief to the realization that matter itself is so utterly unknown to us in its ultimate nature that it is impossible for us to declare anything impossible. The ordinary facts of chemistry and physics are, in the last analysis, as inexplicable as the psychic phenomena which impresses us as miraculous. In his interpretation Mr. Garland leans to the theory of Lombroso, that some persons are possessed of a power which is perfectly natural, but little understood, by which they are able to effect physical changes without the intervention of ordinary physical means. If such a power exists, it is essentially no more to be marveled at than electricty.

Caleb Powers' "My Own Story," which has been appearing in the Reader Magazine and is concluded in the May number, has just been issued in book form by the Bobbs-Merrill company. The book contains much interesting material not included in the magazine articles. For the last five years Powers has been imprisoned for supposed complicity in the murder of Governor Goebel, and the book is a detailed statement of the facts in the tragedy with a view to proving the writer's innocence. He charges wholesale bribery of witnesses by "the most bloodthirsty political cabal of modern times." The plea ends with these words: "I know that there is tremendous power residing in innocence and that truth and justice, sometimes slowly but always surely, are marching toward victory. Whether in this case they will arrive in time to prevent the havoc wrought in their name I cannot tell, but they will not fail in the end; and I have the consolation of knowing that my name, at least, will be vindicated." The book is of timely interest in view of the new trial that has been granted the author.

The reader who likes to have his thrills as thickly interspersed through his novel as a small boy likes to have the raisins in his pudding will find interest in "A Knot of Blue," by William R. A. Wilson. It is a story of New France, of the days just before the outbreak of hostilities between France and England that led to the end of French rule in Canada, but it is not actually an attempt at a historical novel. The place and date was chosen evidently as being suitably romantic, for the story is a romance, pure and simple, and is not intended to display the author's knowledge of history. Nor is it, like many historical novels, designed to show how little its author knew of history, for there is little history in it.

To many, the thrills will prove a bit too strong for placid enjoyment. For instance, the adventuress of the tale gets the hero into difficulties by an amazing facility at hypnotism, at a date some years before Mesmer had first introduced mesmerism to public notice, and many years before, under the name of hypnotism, the science began to come into anything like general use. This early appearance of hypnotism will seem somewhat startling to those who are familiar with its history, and the introduction of this element causes the mechanism of the story to show a little too plainly.

But the yarn is readable, and even if the attempts at melodramatic effect are sometimes strained, the reader who is not too discriminating will find much of interest in its pages. Charles Gunwald's illustrations are quite in accord with the spirit of the times and of the story, and add to the attractiveness of the book, which has just been issued by Little, Brown & Co., Boston.

Miss Elizabeth Robbins, the author of "A Dark Lantern," which The Macmillan Company will publish at once, was born in Louisville, Kentucky, and grew up and received her education in the middle west. She has risen to a high position on the stage in England, where she has spent the last fifteen years; and her fame as an author has grown with her fame as an actress. "Below the Salt," a book hardly known in her native country, first brought her to the attention of the British reading world. This was followed later by "The Open Question" and "The Magnetic North." The The scenes of her forthcoming novel are laid in London and other parts of England, but its chief interest is that of character and action. It is described as a powerful and striking story of American national pride is likely to suffer a shock through the evidently unbiased statements in John S. McLain's book on "Alaska and the Klondike" (McClure-Phillips). Both in methods of keeping the peace, and in mining laws, the Canadians seem to have much the advantage. Where we are satisfied with inadequate protection by vigilance committees, the Canadians have a rigorous and effectual system of mounted police; and, to quote Mr. McLain: "The contrast between the businesslike methods and clear and definite information obtainable at any time in the bold commissioner's office at Dawson, and the miserable tangle into which titles to mining property have been brought in Alaska, in the Nome district, for instance, is no credit to our American statesmanship."

"Enchantment," by Harold Mac Grath, is one of the latest additions to the Bobbs-Merrill company's "Pocket Books." There are five little stories in it that are light and airy, but yet hold the interest throughout, and this is quite an accomplishment in the summer days when the reader is tired and hot and not disposed to be easily entertained. Light fiction it may be, but it is charmingly written and highly amusing.

A book which promises to be one of the most absorbing of the year is the"Memoirs of a Great Detective—Incidents in the Life of John Wilson Murray," edited by Victor Speer and published in the United States by the Baker & Taylor company. John Wilson Murray was chief of the Ontario detective service, and one of the cleverest and best known detectives of this continent, and, perhaps, of the world. His methods and his success have never been equalled, outside of fiction, and, indeed, the stories which appear in the records reveal such remarkable cleverness and tenacity as to make them at times almost incredible. Mr. Murray was known as "Old-Never-Let-Go-Murray." During thirty years he solved hundreds of murder mysteries, forgeries, robberies and uncovered some of the most notable counterfeiting gangs of the world, tracking criminals over two continents and fighting desperate battles when defeat meant death. These memoirs comprise a series of detective tales which are literally true and yet reveal stratagems as clever as those of Doyle and Gaboriau. There is further, a dramatic interst in the volume which equals anything in fiction.

Virginia Frazer Boyle, whose first novel, "Serena," is soon to be published by A. S. Barnes & Co., is a member of the Ladies' Confederate Memorial association, a member of the Colonial Dames, Daughters of the Revolution and of several literary clubs. She was born near Chattanooga,, Tenn., but has always lived in Memphis. The romance of the South and its fall has always been her strongest and most sympathetic field, and the readers who have known and loved her short stories and poems will not be disappointed in her first departure from verse and folk-lore to the broader theme. While it is a novel of the wartime, it is not of swashbuckling or along any of the familiar lines. The picture of the old South before the war is touched upon as in Hopkinson Smith's Oliver Horn—"the civilization which was shattered in a night" with the firing on Sumter. But the story is that of the honor of a noble name and involves a curious psychological phenomenon familiar to science. In this connection one believes that the author might say something in regard to the original of Serena, but she prefers to let the character be treated as fiction pure and simple.

Joseph A. Altsheler's recently published story of an American political campaign, "The Candidate," has been called for in London with such frequency that the Harpers have decided to issue an English edition. This is of interest, since the novel would not seem to be one that would appeal to the English reading public. A marked feature of the story is its presentation of Far-Western political opinion and taste, and the manner in which they differ from those of the older and more populous East. The author shows the complete democracy that prevails there, and the way in which every man lives up to his opinion that he is as good as anybody else.

"Curly," by Roger Pocock, is a tale of the Arizona desert. The author of the famous autobiography, "A Frontiersman," has here given a remarkable story of the cattle ranges of Arizona, the great desert, and the grand canon of the Colorado river. The author has lived amid the scenes which he paints so vividly, and has written a romance of adventure, of conflict, and of love—a story of breathless interest, remarkable situation, and great humor and pathos. Chalkeye, the cowboy who tells the story; Capt. McCalmont, the robber chief; Lord Balshannon, the owner of a ranch; his son, "Jim," and "Curly," who gives the name to the story, are characters of great strength. "Curly" is a book of compelling interest, and its style reminds one of Bret Harte. Numerous full-page illustrations by Stanley L. Wood add to the interest as well as the attractiveness of the book. Published by Little, Brown & Co., Boston.

The oft repeated story that young authors are not given an opportunity to get their tales before the public is not borne out by fact, as per example: Before Louis Joseph Vance's romance tale, "Terence O'Rourke," was finished as a serial, arrangements for book publication were completed, in both cases the MSS. was immediately accepted. With his Irish temperament and his Irish tongue Terence is a character worth meeting.

In "The Far Eastern Tropics," Alleyne Ireland writes of various phases of British, American, Dutch and French colonial administration and policies in the Far East. A large portion of the book is devoted to the Philippine islands, and the author takes a gloomy view of the situation there. The Argonaut for May 15 reviews the book, and quotes many striking passages.

The old Chateau Langeais in France is the subject of the leading article in the May Architectural Record Magazine. Frederic Lees makes a charming descriptive story of the old castle, which has recently been restored and given to the French institute. Upon a background of fifteenth century life in old Touraine, Mr. Lees draws word pictures of every interesting feature of this ancient pile, valuable and informing because throughly intelligible. The illustrations are very complete.

Some of the biggest fortunes in the United States have been yielded by productive mines, and it is certain that from a similar source much of the wealth of the future will be obtained. That mining is, under proper conditions, a safe and profitable industry, yielding even better returns than other lines of business, is conclusively shown by a well-known writer in the current number of Leslie's Weekly. The article deals mainly with the unearthing of gold, silver and copper, and it deeply concerns a vast number of investors.

Naval matters form a feature of the issue, the illustrations including a front drawing by T. Dart Walker of a target practice scene on a battleship, and excellent photographs showing the launching of a war vessel, the presentation of a silver service to the cruiser Galveston, and of a trophy to the naval academy, the pleasant side of life aboard a warship, and the training of electricians for the navy.

To the great number of readers who enjoyed "The Masquerader," the year's most notable success in fiction, it will be welcome news that Mrs. Thurston has finished a new novel, which begins its serial publication in the May 20 issue of Harper's Weekly. The story is called "The Gambler," and relates the adventurous history of a young Irish beauty, Clodagh Asshlin, who is brought by an inherited passion for gambling to the verge of a tragic end. How this tendency works out in her character and the dramatic complications in which it involves her are told by Mrs. Thurston with an effect of sustained interest and vividness which equals if it does not surpass that of her previous great success.

IS THIS REALLY A CELESTIAL VISION?

Edward Bok's Fairyland Experience In Boston, As Told By Himself.

Edward Bok in Ladies' Home Journal: I don't say that these incidents could not have happened in some other city. Likely as not they could. Still, I have been in a few cities—New York, specifically, and others.

• • •

It started when I climbed into one of those sawed-in-half coupes that in Boston they call a "herdic," I think. I drove some ten blocks to my hotel, and then I asked the man:

"How much?"

"Twenty-five cents," was the answer.

"Again?" I asked, not sure of my hearing.

"Twenty-five cents," once more came to my unbelieving ears.

And then I fancied myself getting into a New York public coupe and being carried ten blocks for twenty-five cents! I did, as a matter of fact, a few days later, and the "fare" for nine blocks was just exactly four times that.

• • •

When the bell boy at the Hotel Touraine showed me to my room he turned to me and said:

"Shall I bring you a book, sir?"

"A what, did you say?" I asked.

"A book, sir," he repeated. "Here is a catalogue of our library."

Now, if he had said ice water! But a book!

"A book?" I mechanically repeated. Then, as I recovered from the shock I added: "Yes; suppose you bring Mr. Kipling's last book. I've forgotten the title." And I had for the moment; everything had left my mind but that boy.

"You mean 'Traffics and Discoveries,' sir?" smote upon me next.

"Ye-es," I feebly muttered as I stood mutely gaping after the boy.

Surely I was in Boston!

• • •

I went downstairs to the hotel newsstand.

"A Transcript' please," I said, and added: "How much?"

"Three cents," said the pleasant-faced young woman behind the marble counter.

The regular price! For once, I thought, a clear-headed newsdealer in a hotel deems is possible to ask regular street prices for the newspapers!

• • •

"That's a very pretty idea," I said to one of the head waiters in the dining room as I left, "placing a vase of carnations on each table. Decorates the room."

"Thank you, sir," politely returned the man. "Glad you like it."

And an hour afterward, when I returned to my room, there stood a huge vase filled with some fifty carnation blooms!

The next morning I was busy writing in my room while the chambermaid bustled about, dusting. Suddenly I was conscious of the fact of the soft scratching of a pencil. I furtively looked around to find the pencil in the hand of the maid. Almost simultaneously she looked up, colored and exclaimed: "I beg your pardon, sir. I was merely copying the title of one of your books."

I walked over to the book. It was W. J. Henderson's "Modern Musical Drift."

"Are you interested in music?" I asked.

"A little, sir," came the simple reply.

"In what way, please?" I persisted.

"Why, sir, I go to our Symphony concerts and the recitals as much as I can."

"And you are fond of reading about music?" I next asked.

"Yes, sir. I had not heard of this book, sir, and so I thought I would copy the title."

There was one book about music, then, she had not heard of!

Musical chambermaids and literary bell boys!

What next!

• • •

The "next" was a workman.

A lady, living in the suburbs had closed an important letter with sealing wax and was taking it to the village postoffice when the cold cracked the wax and the envelope sprang open. She reasoned that if she could apply a match to the wax it might soften and she could close the envelope again. But she had no match. Just then she saw a workman on the road. She walked over to him.

"Can you give me a match?" asked the lady.

"No, ma'am, I cannot," he answered; "I don't smoke," and the look that came with the answer made the lady feel it incumbent upon her to explain. She did.

"Perhaps you can suggest some other way to close the envelope," she ventured to the man, wondering for the moment if he could.

"Well, ma'am," came the reply, "if I were The Lady from Philadelphia' I should say: 'Stick your tongue under the flay and seal it.'"

Even he! And a woman's periodical at that!

• • •

Passing the new Colonial theater the next morning I went into the foyer and asked at the box office if I might step in and see the auditorium, explaining that I had never seen it.

"It is against the rule," came a polite voice from the back of the glass partition, "but if you will excuse me a moment I'll find the management and get his permission, if I can."

I saw the auditorium; in fact, they lighted it up for me, and as I thanked the attendant I told him I had asked the same favor, only a few days before, at a theater in New York, and was told, "No, you can't. Pay your way in tonight and then you'll see the house;" and I don't know whether the man's jaws or the glass wicket snapped the loudest.

"Well," said this Boston box office man, "you cannot very well maintain a public patronage where courtesy is the exception rather than the rule."

And I tried my best to think of another theatrical box office man I had ever treated with who so intelligently reasoned out his employer's interests, and expressed himself in that way!

• • •

Perhaps this is exceptional, I thought. So, passing Keith's theater, I stopped in there.

"Any objection to my seeing the house?" I asked of an attendant.

"Objection?" said the attendant in surprise. "Glad to have you!" as if I had done him a favor by stopping in. And to my amazement that man, for one full hour, took me through the theater, down into the engine room, back to the stage, into the dressing rooms, up into the "flies," until there was not the smallest corner I had not seen and had fully and intelligently explained to me.

When I had seen the last nook my conductor said: "The performance is just about to begin. Won't you stay, sir, and see a few acts? Let me take your overcoat," and in a minute more I was shown to one of the best seats in the house.

My only surprise was that I was not invited to dinner when I came out.

That afternoon I went out to a suburb, took a station team, and drove a good mile to my destination.

"How much?" I asked.

"Ten cents, sir." (It's always "sir" in Boston.)

I gave him the dime and an extra one.

"Ten cents is all sir," came the reply, as the extra dime was handed back to me.

"But you don't object to taking a 'tip,' do you?" I asked in astonishment.

"It's not exactly that, sir. But I like to think a man is better off with what he earns and not what he gets that he doesn't do anything for. And ten cents is the fare."

Just fancy for a moment a New York "cabby" reasoning that way!

• • •

I stepped into a decorator's shop and asked if they had any objection to telling me how they had mixed a certain finish on some wood I had admired. I explained that I lived in Pennsylvania; that there was, therefore, no job in it for them, but I wanted to duplicate the stain.

"Certainly, sir," came the reply. "Let us make up a piece of the wood for you." They did, and the next day I went around to settle with them.

"Nothing at all, sir, nothing at all," was the assurance; "glad to do it," and then, not satisfied with a job that, as I found out afterward, had called for three hours' work by one of their highest-salaried finishers, the wood was sent to my home by express, with the charges prepaid.

And with the full knowledge that no commission could come to them from the request!

"Theres' something else than cold business in the world," said the decorator as I thanked him and he let me out of his shop.

I had occasion to make a call on Newberry street, and when I came out of the house I hailed a passing cab.

"She is a fine lady that," said the cabman, as I was paying him at the end of the ride.

"What lady is that?" I asked.

"The lady whose house you were calling at, sir, if you don't mind my saying so."

"Not at all," I said; "but do you drive her?"

"No, sir," he said. "I don't drive her, but I have read her 'John Ward, preacher,' and it takes a fine woman to write that book. I always take a good look at her when I see her, although, of course, she doesn't know it."

The greater the pity that she doesn't I thought.

A literary cab driver! But the best revelation was yet to come!

"But when do you find time to read?" I asked.

In the evening, after I put my horse up. I live with my mother and sister, and, being all fond of books, we read aloud to each other. We read quite a deal. I have read everything, I think, written by Dr. Holmes."

"Well," I said, "you're a regular literary man. You have never written yourself, I suppose?" I ventured to remark.

"Not much, sir. Two or three pieces," came the quick reply.

"Prose or poetry?" I asked.

"Oh, prose, sir! I never tried poetry I had two articles and a story printed in the papers here. Then I began to read Herbert Spencer, and when he recently died I wrote an article on my impressions of his philosophy. But I couldn't get it published, and I got discouraged. And I don't know but that cab driving pays better than writing—to me, at least," he said, as he mounted his box, bade me a polite good-night, and drove off, leaving me in full contemplation of a cab driver reading Herbert Spencer.

• • •

That evening I had my dinner at the hotel. My bill was $2.15. The idea of giving the waiter a moderate "tip" occurred to me. I signed my bill, laid down a quarter and awaited developments.

"Thank you, sir," came the acknowledgment, as the right hand withdrew my chair and the left handed me my paper.

I couldn't help thinking of New York again!

• • •

The next day I went into Matsuki's Japanese store, where I am rather fond of fussing around. I wanted a particular Japanese print—one of those soft, low-toned prints that the Japanese know so well how to produce.

"It is $5," said Mr. Matsuki in reply to my question as to the price.

I asked that the print be sent to my hotel and gave my name.

"Oh!" said the gentlemanly Japanese, as he read the name, "excuse me, but we allow a special price to professional people. This will be $3.50; not $5."

Yet I have known the knowledge of names to have quite a different effect on prices!

• • •

Speaking of prices:

At the Manhattan hotel in New York city I ordered for my little boy's supper a quart of milk and some biscuits. The check that the waiter brought was for 70 cents!

The milk cost not a cent more than 14 cents, the two biscuits, say 2 cents—hardly that as hotels buy.

For curiosity's sake I ordered exactly the same thing in Boston. This check was for 30 cents.

Just a slight difference!

• • •

I asked a guard at the Grand Central depot in New York if there were any place in the depot where I could get something to eat.

"Left," was the laconic answer, pointing his thumb over his shoulder, and continuing a personal conversation with a lady friend.

I went to the left. It led me into the baggage room. There I inquired.

"Think we keep victuals here?" asked the man with a grin and winking to the other men around him. Finally I found the restaurant myself.

I asked the same question of a guard at the Boston Terminal.

"This way, sir," he replied cordially, and forthwith he conducted me through almost the entire length of that huge station, showed me to an elevator, pushed the button, and tipping his cap to me said:

"This elevator will take you direct to the dining room, sir."

• • •

"Now, George," I said to a cabman at the Boston North station, "it is 12:40 by the watch. I want to get my trunk, get to the Terminal, check my trunk there and catch the 1 o'clock train for New York. Can you do it?"

"I don't know, sir," came the respectful reply; "at least, I'll try."

And the horse was whipped up round to the baggage room, the trunk was found and dragged to the carriage, we went across the city; the trunk was checked at the Terminal, and, wiping his perspiring brow, the cabman said to me in triumph: "And five minutes to spare, sir. Let me carry your bag to the gate!"

"And how much?" I asked when we reached the gate.

"Twenty-five cents."

"But how about the trunk?" I asked.

"Oh, that was good ballast," came the jolly reply.

And as I slipped something into his hand, and slipped myself through the gate, I looked back to see a smiling "cabby" waving his hat at me through the iron railing, and I heard:

"Thank you very much, sir."

I had left Boston as I came; decently treated.

And all the way home I was glad I had married a Boston girl.

An automobile stage service between Eveleth and Virginia is our latest claim to progressiveness. Moses Bolliveau has brought an auto here from Duluth and will put it on at once. CRIPPLE CREEK DISTRICT.

Galena, Gold, Carbonate, Battle and Ironclad Hills.

Colorado Springs, Colo., May 20.—In this week's letter we have endeavored to give some idea of thee xtent of the Cripple Creek district, as indicated by reports shown herewith for the past month from Galena Hill, Gold Hill, Carbonate Hill, Battle Mountain and Ironclad Hill. Attention is called, however, to the fact that some of the immense producers are on Bull Hill, Raven Hill and Beacon Hill.

The Fort Pitt company, operating the Sunshine claim on Galena Hill, is pushing development work as fast as possible and keeping up a fair tonnage of ore each month. This is the only property in that vicinity that is under active operation, and the only producer on that hill.

The Tunnel Mining and Leasing company, operating under lease the Abe Lincoln mine on Gold Hill, are now outputting a carload of smelting ore each day, most of which is being broken in the bottom level of the property wheret hes howing is much better than it ever was in any of the upper levels.

The first shipment of ore to leave a property on Carbonate Hill for several days was sent out yesterday by Lessee McDonald and associates from the Elkhorn property. From all accounts an ore body was struck on this ground several months ago, as the lessees have been very active of late in tying up considerable acreage in the immediate vicinity under bond and lease.

Fifteen sets of lessees are shipping ore from the Ajax mine, on Battle Mountain, nine from the surface and six from underground workings. The shoots from which they are taking profit range in width from two to six feet, and values from one to ten ounces. Shipments average $30 in gold to the ton, and of such material 1,000 tons is leaving the mine monthly, a considerable part thereof being contributed by the company. Prospecting is steadily proceeding on company account, and with encouraging results. Like nearly every other mine of the district there has been more or less annoyance from water. There is hardly enough to pump and more than enough to bail. However, it causes little inconvenience.

The Frank Gilpin Leasing company, operating under lease the main workings of the Jerry Johnson company on Ironclad Hill, has opened and cut the extension of the famous W. P. H. vein, which dipped into Jerry Johnson territory at a depth of 4,050 feet. Operations are to be pushed forward as fast as possible as the operators are satisfied that a fortune is in sight. At the present time the vein is measuring anywhere from six to twenty feet in width, and contains an ore shoot in the center of from three to four feet, that carries value of three ounces of gold to the ton.

Fogleman and associates, operating the Midway property, located between Bull and Ironclad Hills, have opened up a nice body of ore a short distance from the shaft, at a depth of 150 feet. In driving the drift a good ore body was followed, but it suddenly took a downward course, and by sinking a winze on the ore they have opened up a body that measuresf rom three to five feet in width, and that is returning values of from $30 to $40 to the ton.

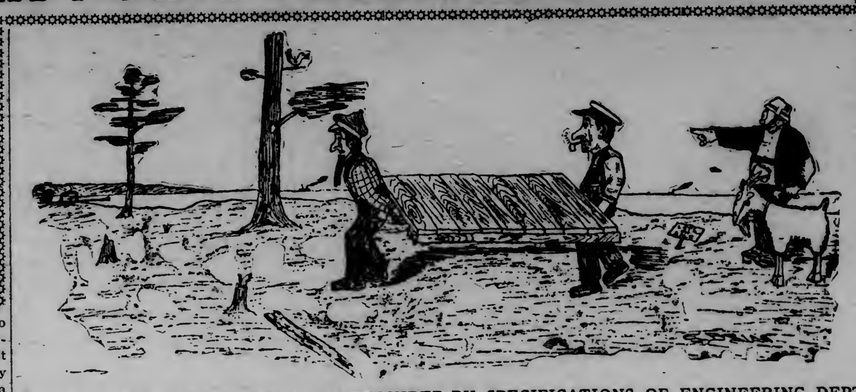
SPECIFICATIONS FOR MOVING PARK POINT PLANK SIDEWALK

Humorous Product of the City Engineer's Office.

Response to Request By Board of Public Works.



MOVING PARK POINT SIDEWALK AS REQUIRED BY SPECIFICATIONS OF ENGINEERING DEPT.

Engineers, as a rule, are expected to be practical, cold-blooded and unromantic persons, but within the breast of one of the assistants in the city engineer's office there is implanted a vein of humor which at times crops out and shows signs of bearing ore in paying quantities.

A sample of the yield of this vein was furnished last week when the board of public works called for specifications for moving the plank sidewalk on Park Point, on which the board was planning to advertise for bids.

The engineer was somewhat puzzled to know just what specifications were necessary for the moving of a four-foot plank sidewalk, but he turned the matter over to his assistants, and they concocted the following detailed plans for the work:

TOOLS.

No crowbar, pickax, or any tool of iron, except round faced hammers, shall be used on the work.

METHOD OF PROCEDURE.

The walk shall be cut at every other mudsill, or oftener if necessary. No more than one man at each corner of a section cut as above described shall be allowed to move such section. Anything above this number shows physical debility on the part of the men, and incompetency on the part of the contractor, and it shall be construed so to mean, and shall be deemed good and sufficient reason to justify the members of the board of public works to jump in and finish the work themselves, it being expressly understood that a light head and a strong back are essential qualifications for a competent workman, while a contractor with great intellectual powers may be excused for not possessing such physical ability.

The stringers must be firmly spiked to the mudsills with four forty-penny wire nails. The nails shall be struck on the head with the aforementioned round-faced steel hammers a sufficient number of times as shall be deemed necessary to make them penetrate the wood. After the nails have penetrated the wood, no more blows shall be struck, as that might be considered working overtime, and the city is strongly in favor of supporting the work of the trade unions.

It is expressly understood that the walk shall be taken up and moved before being spiked together, and no violation of this clause will be tolerated for an instant. Failure to move the sections before spiking them together again would involve an additional cut, and this would mean overtime charges against the city.

Great care should be taken to place the walk top side up, as otherwise the people would be forced to crawl along on the upper side like flies on a ceiling. This is no longer considered good form in the large cities of the East, and the inspectors will see to it that the top side is uppermost.

The sand cushion on which the walk shall rest is furnished by the people of Park Point and will be found in position when the time comes to move the walk. This sand cushion is now lying loose somewhere around the easterly side of Minnesota avenue, this cushion having been decided upon by the city engineer as being a fit and proper resting place for a certain plank sidewalk which is now where it ought not to be.

Great care should also be taken not to leave the walk standing on edge when the moving is completed.

Other minor matters will doubtless suggest themselves to the contractors, who will see to it that everything possible is done for the welfare of the people of the city.

CONDUCT OF WORKMEN.

Before leaving the work at night, each and every man employed upon the job, including the contractor himself, shall shake the sand out of his boots. This is done, not only for the convenience and bodily comfort of the workmen themselves, but to safeguard the interests of the city. No one on the work may be allowed to have sand, but the city inspector. If thought necessary by the city engineer the inspector may also be allowed to wear sandy whiskers, but this remedy will be resorted to only in cases of extreme emergency.

The workmen shall wear boots of a size deemed sufficient to cover the feet.

While operating the round-faced hammers above mentioned, the workmen shall use no loud or profane language, except in cases where the hammer comes in close contact with the workman's thumb, when he shall be permitted to use the expression "Oh, Gee," or even" Gee whiz," if the city engineers deems the provocation sufficient.

GENERAL DIRECTIONS.

After the sidewalk has been moved and deposited according to the above directions, the contractor may be allowed to repair such holes as he may find in the walk, with strips of mahogany or black walnut as he may see fit. This, however, may be deemed optional with the contractor.

After the work has been completed and the contractor has been paid his money, he is hereby granted permission to enter any cigar store in town and purchase twelve Havana cigars not to exceed six inches in length, which cigars may be presented by him to the members of the city engineer's department.

NEGLECTED CHILDREN OF THE UPPER PENINSULA

The Work of Good Will Farm and Home Finding Association.

Splendid Results Attained By Society In Upper Michigan.

Houghton, Mich., May 20.—(Special to The Herald.)—A splendid work is being accomplished on behalf of homeless children by the Good Will Farm and Home Finding association, which has been in existence fourteen years. The acsociation is justly proud of its record for the past year. A new home has been erected at Portage Lake. There were seven children in the home on Dec. 1, 1903, and during the past fifteen months there have been 106 children there. Sixty-eight were placed in happy homes, and there remain thirty-eight, ranging in age from 3 weeks to 15 years. The territory of the association reaches from Sault Ste. Marie on the east to the Wisconsin line on the west and southwest, and from the shores of Lake Michigan to those of Superior on the north and south. The superintendent, H. M. Draper, in a recent report, said regarding the new home:

"This is a frame building on a stone foundation and consists of a basement, which is used almost exclusively as a playroom for the children, and here they spend a big share of their time during thec old weather, as they are at liberty to play ball, rubber sheep run, pomp-pomp pull away, duck on the rock (with rubber balls and football), etc. Here they also have five swings, and one wall is almost covered with hand instruments, which are at the disposal of any boy or girl who takes enough interest in music to make use of them, and there is scarcely an hour in the day that some one is not 'tooting.' Above this, on the first floor, are the following rooms: Superintendent's office, Mrs. Draper's private parlor and bedroom, dining room, school room, kitchen and pantry. The second floor is divided into girls dormotory, girls' toilet and bathroom, nurseries, sewing room and bedrooms for the help. Then high above all others, on the third floor (the fourth counting from the basement) is the boys' dormotory, about forty feet long by twenty-five feet wide and the boys' toilet and bathroom. This building is thoroughly up to date, and is a source of satisfaction and pride to not only those in charge, but equally so to all who have favored us with a visit. In our old building we could not properly care for more than twenty children, but now we feel that we can much more easily care for fifty, and if necessity demanded it we might crowd in seventy-five. As soon as the spring opens and weather permits we shall begin work on the grounds surrounding the building, and we hope, before the time arrives for our annual picnic, to have the driveways, walks and general exteriors to correspond with the interior of our new home.

"Next in the line of improvements is our gasoline engine, pump, and water tank which gives us a fine water system for both house and barn use, fire protection and irrigation for our garden, besides relieving our boys of the laborious work of pumping water by hand. Then follows a new root house, with stone walls two feet thick, over which is a drive shed 30x16 feet, with a walk leading down to the stable directly under the large barn, where we have warm quarters for our five cows, two calves and three horses.

"Next in order comes our printing plant, where we set the type and do the press work for 'Good Will.' With this we are not only disseminating the news of the work being carried on at Good Will farm to our thousands of patrons but we are giving our girls and boys the foundation, if not teaching them outright, one of the most useful trades possible for them to learn.

"Last but not least among the improvements of 1904 was the clearing and opening of our lovely little park on the beautiful shores of Portage lake. As soon as the snow is off the ground we shall again have the children to work among the trees, clearing out under brush, raking up leaves, levelling the ground, trimming trees, bonfires, swings, merry-go-rounds, seats, picnic tables etc., and making ready for a summer visit from the churches, lodges and schools all over this Upper Peninsula."

The association is preparing to unite with the National Children's Home society, which is a federation of the children's home societies of many states, through which much of the legislation in behalf of neglected children has been brought about.

The officers of the Good Will Farm and Home Finding association are: President, W. H. Dodge; vice president, Johnson Vivian, Jr.; Webster Dock, secretary; Edward Haas, treasurer; H. M. Draper, superintendent; Mrs. G. M. Walker, financial agent; Mrs. Ella Johnson, Mrs. John Senter, Mrs. Stuart Goodell, Mrs. Herbert Baer, Mrs. John Condon, Mrs. E. D. Johnson, Miss Alice Chadbourne and Miss Daisy Goodell, board of inspectors.

SAVING MONEY.

Viewed From a Standpoint of a Clerk.

To the Editor of The Herald:

It has always been a source of great pleasure to me to read the editorials in your evening paper as I have always had great faith in the writer and believed he knew that what he was talking about, but I beg to take exception to an article that appeared in your editorials and the bank account. It went on to say how a married man on wages should save money. I agree with you, but how is he going to do it in Duluth? Duluth is the most expensive town outside of Butte, Mont., for any one to live in.

I am speaking from the standpoint of a clerk. I would wager that if you go to every clerk in every retail and wholesale house in Duluth, railroad and steamboat offices and in fact each and every clerk in Duluth you will find when I place the average wages monthly at $50 it is putting it rather high.

Below I give you an idea of where your $50 per month goes:—

Rent	$15.00
Groceries	13.00
Meat	8.00
Insurance	3.00
Fuel	4.00
Doctor bill	1.00
Dress	3.00
Evening Herald	50
Amusement	1.00
Light	50
Street car fare	1.00
Total	$50.00

Somo may say get a cheaper house. Where? In my family there are three. I would like someone to show me where I can get a house big enough for three for any less, without going to Lakeside or West end, where you might get one for $10, but you will spend more than the difference in car fare.

Some may say reduce your grocery bill. Please show me how and where I can reduce my grocery bill less than $13.00 per month, without going hungry, and the same can be said of the meat bill.

I figrue that $2,000 is little enough insurance for any married man. Your fuel bill in Duluth the year around will average $4 per month at the lowest. You will have to figure at least $1 per month for doctor bills, and in my own case it has been a good deal more; $3 a month for dress or $1 a month a piece for three, or less than 3 cents a day apiece, which includes laundry bills, barber bills, etc. The clerk is expected to dress well or he is not wanted and $3 per month is a very low estimate. A man ought to be entitled to one daily paper, and as he has no time to read the morning paper he, of course, takes the evening paper. He dares to have the nerve to put in electric lights and by using them very carefully he may get the bills down to a 50-cent a month limit, and then again he has the nerve to spend $1 a month for amusements, such as a 10-cent show, or a balcony seat in one of the cheaper theaters. It is not always possible to walk down town on account of the various climates in Duluth, either yourself or family. It is necessary to ride once in a while and as you cannot step on a Duluth street car for less than 5 cents, so $1 a month is a fair estimate for street car fare. Now there is your $50. He does not dare to put in a telephone or think of a boat ride on the lakes or a little railroad excursion or some other pleasure outside of his $1 limit.

Instead of preaching to the salaried man to save his surplus, it would be a better plan to preach to the men who are paying the salaries to pay more. It is all very well for these men to talk about saving, those who have made their fortunes out of the salaried man, but I would like to name, say, ten of these men and have them live on, say, $75 per month for three months, and at the end of that time they would say that it is impossible for a man to live in Duluth for $50 per month. If a man cannot afford to pay more, let him do without clerks and do his own work; if he has three clerks at, say, $50 per month, let him keep two at $75 per month and let the third go, for he will find he can get more work out of one $75 clerk than two $50 clerks.

Look in the "Female Help Wanted" ads in The Herald and you will find girls and even men who are willing to work for experience. I know of a case where a girl offered to work for nothing, provided the firm would pay half of her car fare. I know of another instance where a leading attorney in Duluth wanted a stenographer, and when the applicant appeared he offered her (without blushing) the large salary of $3 per week, and it is a mighty good thing for him it wasn't a man he offered such a salary and insult, for the man would be justified in making the lawyer a fit subject for one of the hospitals.

I am speaking from actual experience and not from hearsay, and I know what I am talking about. It should be made a crime for an employer to offer a clerk less than $60 per month; if he can't afford to pay that, let him go without.

WILLIAMS MUST HANG

Murderer of Mrs. Keller and Son Sentenced By Court.

St. Paul, May 20.—The jury in the case of William Williams, charged with the murder of Mrs. F. S. Keller and her son, John, at 11:15 last night brought in a verdict of murder in the first degree, and Judge Lewis immediately sentenced the prisoner to death. The date of the execution will be fixed by the governor.

Williams, on April 13, killed Mrs. Keller and her son as a result of the woman's refusal to allow the boy accompany him down town. The boy was killed while he slept in bed, and the woman was shot in the back while fleeing from the murderer. The evidence adduced in the trial, which has been in progress for about a week, showed that the man had been infatuated with the boy, and that the latter's parents had endeavored to break up the intimacy. The defendant's attorneys endeavored to establish a case of insanity, a number of medical witnesses being called for that purpose.

Ernest Grotke of 296 Fourth avenue east, Duluth, Minn., mason, says: "I speak from experience when I say that Doan's Kidney Pills are a reliable and valuable remedy. I first heard of their merits from a friend who had received gratifying results in his own case, and as I was then suffering from severe, dull pains in the small of my back and loins, and had become so bad that I was almost compelled to give up work, I procured a supply of Doan's Kidney Pills and began using them. Although other remedies had failed to help me I soon noticed the benefit, and kept on using Doan's Kidney Pills until the pain and other symptoms gradually but surely disappeared, until I was entirely free from the trouble."

Playhouses.

Betty had her playhouse
In the big woodpile;
Minnie had her playhouse
Over by the stile.

Betty's dishes were of chips,
Minnie's were of leaves;
(But of course all of you know
These were make-believes.)

Smooth white chips were chicken,
Kneaded mud was dough,
That was rolled and put in pans
And shaped in loaves, just so.

Sand was sweetest sugar,
Potatoes brown and round
Were pretty little pebbles
Picked up from the ground.

Water in a tin can
Was coffee in an urn;
Bits of bark was beefsteak
Broiled quite to a turn.

Oh! the fun these little ones
Had through the livelong day!
By stile and in the woodpile,
With naught to do but play.

Candy Making at Home by the Children.

All girls—and boys, too, for that matter—love home-made candies, from the old-fashioned boiled molasses taffy to the soft white creams that melt in one's mouth.

As these confections are much more wholesome, as well as toothsome (and very much more reasonable) than the candy bought "ready made," it is not amiss to give a few recipes here for the making of bon-bons at home.

COOKED FONDANT TO BE USED IN MAKING CREAMS.

Into an enameled stewpan put one pound of granulated sugar. Pour over it half a pint of water. Place the stewpan over the fire—not next to the blaze—and stir constantly with a clean silver spoon till the sugar is dissolved. Then remove the spoon and let the syrup boil for from five to six minutes, trying a few drops of it in a glass of ice-cold water. When it forms soft balls in your fingers, remove the pan from the fire and pour the syrup into a large platter that has been cooled in cold water. When the syrup becomes thick and cool beat it rapidly with a wooden spoon. Any flavoring desired must be added before beating. After having beaten the mixture till white, use the fingers to knead it as you would knead dough. This will cause the fondant to become smooth and of a good consistency, which may be easily shaped to suit one's fancy.

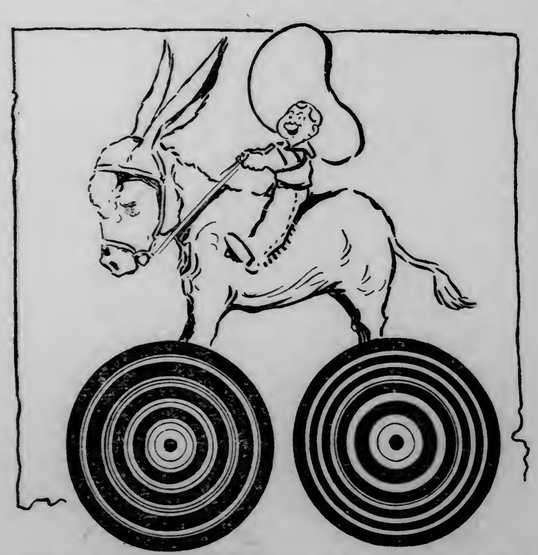
CHOCOLATE CREAMS.

To make delicious chocolate creams take a pound of the cooked fondant and roll one-half of it into small balls and place on an oiled paper to harden. Put the remaining half pound of fondant into the stewpan, with two and a half ounces of grated chocolate (the unsweetened) and add a few drops of some favorite flavor. Put this stewpan into another vessel of boiling water, allowing the fondant and chocolate to melt together to a thick cream. Then remove from the fire, take the hardened fondant balls on a silver fork or sharpened stick and dip into the chocolate fondant, placing them immediately on a smooth, white oiled paper in a cold place to harden.

CHOCOLATE CARAMELS.

Take one pound brown sugar, four ounces grated, unsweetened chocolate, a teaspoonful thick molasses, two ounces butter (unsalted if you have it), and one-third cup sweet milk. Put all together in a porcelain stewpan and stir constantly over the fire for twenty minutes. Try dropping a little in a cup of ice water, and as soon as it forms a ball and does not discolor the water remove the pan from the fire. Add 20 drops vanilla and beat with a wooden spoon till cool, then pour into a shallow tin pan that has been greased with butter, and allow to harden. Before it is quite hard cut into blocks with a sharp knife.

Auto Animals for the Children.



Cut these auto animals out each week, paste on a thick piece of cardboard or paper, then turn rapidly from right to left and see the animal go. Fine amusement for the little tots when indoors.

Arthur among the Big Heads or, In the Land of the Egotistical.

By William Wallace, Jr.

Arthur Grey had eaten a hearty supper—as was his wont—and as a full stomach is always conducive to sleep, he rubbed his well-rounded palms together, blinked lazily—holding one eye open long enough to find his way from the table to a couch that stood convenient in a corner of the room—threw himself down contentedly and proceeded to fall asleep.

That evening Arthur had brought home from school his monthly report card, which was marked so high that the vain fellow had made himself quite unbearable over his success, going about the house putting on great airs and boasting in a bold way to the servants. He had been a bit overbearing, too, towards Tommy Peters, an orphan boy, who was one of his classmates. This had occurred on their way home from school. Tommy worked for "his board and keep" in the home of a butcher, whose wife kept Tommy out of school on every little pretext, first to mind the baby while she visited the neighbors, again to work in the kitchen or garden. Thus it was that poor Tommy's standard at school was very low, while Arthur was usually at the head of the classes.

But when one understood Arthur's case exactly it assumed a different aspect, and he was not to be so much commended after all for his high grades and punctuality. He was never allowed to be tardy at school a minute, for his parents were anxious he should have every possible chance to become a scholar, and no pains were spared by either of them to help with his education. At night, when Tommy Peters was busy minding a crying baby or running errands, Arthur was seated in his armchair beside his mother, who went over the morrow's lessons with him. The fact is, Arthur's mother did more of Arthur's work than the boy did himself, for she would din the lessons into his mind by repetition till only sheer stupidity could have made him forget them. And Arthur was not stupid.

So one will not wonder that Arthur was frequently at the head of his classes, for few other pupils had such attention and assistance as he did.

It was as the children ran from school that evening that Arthur's vanity and selfishness were vented on Tommy. "Just see," he cried, in a bragging way, holding out his report card. "Wouldn't you like to be as smart as I am? I've got 90 per cent. Bet you ain't got 60. Bet, too, that you won't pass. I'm going to college when I'm through school. I am. Bet you never get to go to college!"

Tommy hung his head in shame and hid his own report card—full of tardy and absent marks—under his coat front. "Wish I had a mother an' father, too, so I could go to school reg'lar. I can't keep up when I'm keep' away so much. 'Tain't my fault, though," he pleaded.

But Arthur was too much preoccupied with his own greatness to notice Tommy's remarks. Now, in full justice to Arthur, let it be told that he was not a bad fellow at heart; he was an only child, pampered and spoiled and made to think that he was a few grades better than other children. And this fed his vanity and selfishness.

As it was Friday evening, and there was to be no studying that night, Arthur—as has been told—ate a hearty supper and lay down on the couch, where he was on the point of dropping into a sound sleep when the door opened and in walked the queerest little boy, with an immense head on his shoulders. He came without ceremony to where Arthur lay, took hold of Arthur's hand roughly and said: "Come; you are elected a member of our society."

Arthur rubbed his eyes, sat up, and marveled at the strange individual. "What do you want?" he questioned, trying to draw his hand free.

"I want you," the boy said, shaking his immense head emphatically. "Come along; don't keep me waiting." Then he gave a pull at Arthur's hand.

"But I don't wish to go," persisted Arthur.

"That doesn't matter," returned the boy. "The Big-heads have you down on the list. You see, you have become a Big-head, now." As he made this statement the boy held a small mirror before Arthur's eyes. Arthur looked. Lo, he was a sight to behold! His head was twice its wonted size, and his nose turned up in a most sarcastic and self-satisfied manner. "Come," again commanded the visitor, imperatively, half dragging Arthur from the couch.

Arthur obeyed, not knowing what else to do and being half dead with sleep. As he rose to pass out with this strange child—no larger than himself—he hoped his parents would interfere and liberate him. But they had evidently finished their supper and retired to another room, for no one was in the dining-room now save himself and this uninvited "Big-head."

The boy jerked Arthur along in no gentle manner, leading him out through a side door and down to the rear of the back yard, where Arthur saw a small cart hitched to a frisky little pony. Into the cart the strange visitor shoved Arthur, then sprang in himself, clucked to the pony that darted off at breakneck speed. To Arthur's dismay the animal leaped right into the air and ran toward the clouds, his hoofs and the whirling cart wheels resting their weight on nothing! Arthur held on to the sides of the cart seat for dear life's sake. After some time spent in this strange travel—silence reigning, for Arthur's companion was not inclined to talk—they rushed through a moist, thick, cloud, the vapors of which almost strangled Arthur. Then into the midst of a heavy black cloud that roared with cold, fierce wind. All of a sudden the horse and cart struck substance. Once again they were on solid land, much like the mother earth. Arthur's companion sprang out and motioned Arthur to do likewise. Arthur had nothing to do but obey. He was led from the cart along a muddy, ugly, unkept road that was overgrown with weeds and briars that tore their clothes and flesh.

At last they came to a huge, tumble-down old building, and Arthur read this sign over the door: Asylum for Big-heads. Arthur was led in. All about him he saw boys and girls with enlarged heads, heads peculiar in shape, some of them looking like pumpkins and others like great gourds. As he glanced about in mingled astonishment and fear, his companion departed, drawing the door shut behind him and leaving Arthur with the strange assembly. All these boys and girls looked pale and thin, as if ill.

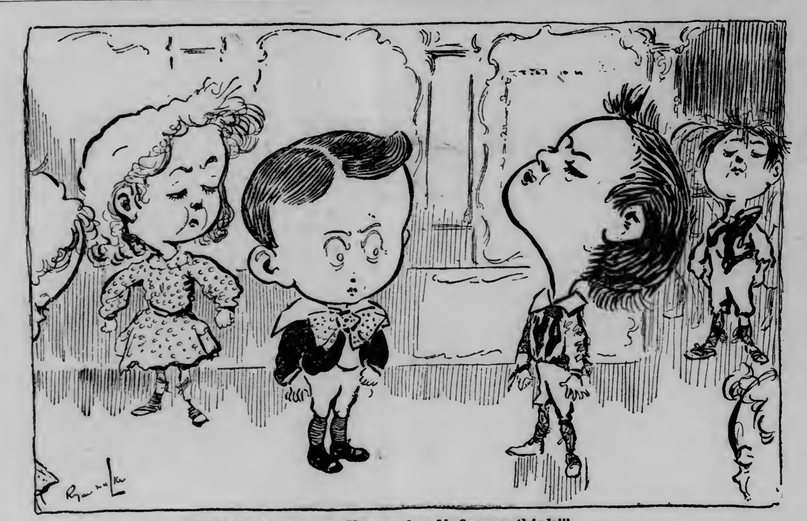
For a few minutes Arthur stood awkwardly in the middle of the room, looking at those about him. The stare was returned, all eying him critically. Presently a girl of some 12 years of age stepped close to Arthur and said, wagging her enormous head: "Pray, fool, what did you ever accomplish to get such a case of big-head? You look vain and stupid, and I know you are lazy, for all I have to do is to look at your unkept finger nails and tousled hair to be informed of that fact. Another thing—you are a glutton, too. You are so full of supper this minute that you resemble a piece of newly upholstered furniture. But, come, dunce, tell us why you are here."

While the girl was speaking the others in the room gathered close about Arthur, sneering and jeering at him. One boy went so far as to kick Arthur's shins, saying, "Yes, idiot, break silence and tell us how you became a Big-head."

Suddenly Arthur beheld a picture of himself while on earth—his old world-home—and he saw himself as others saw him. He was foolishly vain of his good standing at school (just as though he did not owe it to his Creator, his parents and himself to work diligently at school and accomplish all that was in his power to do), and he was very silly over matters pertaining to dress, behaving in an overbearing and arrogant way toward boys less fortunate than himself. As he viewed this picture he felt like one in a trance, and spoke out involuntarily:

"I guess I got the big-head over my fine average at school this month and because my papa owns the finest store in town and we live in an elegant big house and keep two servants, while lots of other boys don't have half so much as I do. I dress better'n most of the other kids my size, and I never have to work. I always made fun of the poor boys who had to earn a few nickels doing odd jobs after school. But I am awfully smart—I am. I am often at the head of my classes. I shall be a great, rich man some day and make hundreds of people work for me." And Arthur's head expanded another inch as he said this.

"Ah! ha! you dunce—you saphead! So you think!" cried another Big-head.



"Ah! ha! you dunce! You saphead! So you think!"

"That was the way I felt when I first came here. But this place takes the starch out of you. It is work or starve—like the common poor. As I won't work like a miserable laborer, here I am so nearly starved that I'm as thin as a lace curtain and as hungry as a Siberian wolf. Look at my clothes—in shreds! And my shoes, not been polished in months. But I won't blacken them if they are never blackened otherwise. Why, my parents are rich and go in the swellest society, they do. My standing in school was fine—my father paid enough to insure that, and I had private tutors who got my lessons for me."

"Oh! my own mother got my lessons for me," bragged Arthur, his great head tossing in an egotistical way. "That is, she always went over them to me till I couldn't possibly miss. And what a world of work and trouble she saved me."

"Shut your mouths, snobs!" cried the girl who had first spoken. "What are either of you compared to me? I came of nobility," she said, with a heavy stress on the last word. "I never so much as unlaced a shoe or combed my own hair till I came to this place. I had nurses, maids and governesses to wait upon me night and day. When I went down the avenue in our splendid carriage I turned my nose up at the poor, miserably dressed children who walked on the pavements and who stopped to admire and envy me."

"What are you doing here?" asked Arthur.

"Just what you are doing," she retorted, tossing her huge head, that seemed in danger of coming off her thin, ill-fed body. "Can you tell what you are doing here?"

Arthur was perplexed for a moment and shook his heavy head that ached so owing to its awful swelling. "No," he answered; "but I did not come here of my own will. I do not know why I am here or what I am to do."

"Well, let me tell you why you are here," sneered a boy about Arthur's size. "You are here to be made humble—to bite the dust. You will work or starve. If you eat you must go into the fields and plow and sow and reap. The girls—if they eat—must cook, sew and keep house. You see how nicely this place is kept, don't you?" he asked, sarcastically. "Well, if you are like the rest of these smart alecs you'll refuse to do anything but grumble and starve."

"Oh! you needn't brag," retorted another girl, making a threatening gesture as if to strike the speaker. "You are nothing but a smarty, boasting always of your own intellect and superiority. And, like the others that you condemn, you are a pack of lazy bones. The quicker you starve the better for this community. We'll be rid of a mass of vanity and egotism."

"And who are you, Miss Spouter, that you should air your opinions?" loudly shrieked another girl who till now had kept proudly aloof from the rest, looking on them scornfully.

Thus the quarrel grew, all taking voice and evident delight in it with the exception of Arthur, who grew uneasy, fearing blows would come to pass. Why all this disagreement and hostility? he questioned himself. If all these Big-heads were to dwell together, why not do so peaceably?

But when the time came for Arthur to go to work, he refused. What, he, Arthur Grey, dig in the dirt? Starve first! Then came the time for him to show a friendly disposition toward his associates or an unfriendly one. At first he felt inclined toward the former, and approaching another boy he said: "Let's be friendly and, if need be, do a little work to keep from starvation. I'm so hungry."

The boy addressed turned proudly away and snapped in surly tones: "A common clod-hopper, I daresay. Deliver me from associating with such trash. Better be dead than work like the common herd for a crust of bread!"

Even as the Big-head spoke he fell in a fit and died—died from starvation! Too proud to work, although broad fields surrounded him, and plenty would have smiled on every hand but for the asking, he preferred to perish rather than harden his palms with toil.

In horror Arthur turned and looked about him. Everywhere were shops not running, schoolhouses without pupils, for education was not compulsory in this land of the Egotistical Big-heads. They could work and study if they choose, or do neither. Arthur decided he would enter one of the schools and set to work. Better study than starve, he thought. Boldly entering one of the schoolrooms he wakened a Big-headed schoolmaster who slept at his desk, told him he wished to become a pupil, and passed the examination the master wrote out for him. But Arthur's studying was only a pretense. There was no mother to do his tasks for him, no father to urge him on with words of undue praise; no poor Tommy Peters to flaunt his learning before. Lazily he rose and left the schoolroom. As he passed down the filthy streets he saw swarms of Big-heads sitting listlessly about, starving, or in angry groups, quarreling with each other. Everywhere were rags, dirt, laziness, foolish vanity.

"Oh! oh! If I could only go back to the world where people work—and where children go to school. I would never, never look down upon the poor who toil again. I'd even be willing to be a common laborer myself to get away from this awful place, where envy and vanity causes such misery. And Tommy Peters—why, I'd like him, now th"——

"Come, come, open your eyes and tell mother you are all right, dearie. Oh! thank God, my darling lives!" And Arthur felt his mother's lips on his own, while tears fell from her eyes on his face.

When at last he felt fully awake he opened his eyes and asked what was the matter. Then they told him that he had been overcome by gas, and but for the timely entrance of Tommy Peters he would now be dead. Tommy had come to deliver some meat, had tapped on the side door, and, receiving no response, had made bold to open the dining-room door with the intention of putting the meat on the table, where the servant would find it on entering. The odor of escaping gas almost strangled him, and he threw the door wide open and ran into the hall, calling for help. Mr. and Mrs. Grey were in the parlor with company that had called as soon as supper was over. When they left the room Arthur was asleep on the couch, and a new maid, just from the country and ignorant of gas, was clearing away the dishes. After finishing her task and not seeing Arthur (as a tall screen stood across the couch), she, being of an economical disposition, got on a chair and blew out the gas. Then she left the room, tightly closing the door behind her.

No need to tell you that the experience poor Arthur had while "under gas" was in truth a fine lesson for him, and although he never became brave enough to tell his parents of the strange land and stranger beings that he saw in his dream, they noticed a decided change in him from that day. He became more considerate of the poor, and often helped such boys as Tommy Peters with their lessons, and shared his toys and games with them. As for Tommy Peters—well, not only did Arthur become deeply attached to the kind-hearted, appreciative little fellow, but his parents took a deep interest in his welfare. A better home was found for him, and he was given full advantage of the longed-for education as well as parental affection by the good people who took him as their own.

"Just think, dear, Tommy Peters saved your life," said Mrs. Grey, in talking it over with Arthur the next day.

"Yes, and I shall always be his friend," answered Arthur. Then, under his breath he added: "He brought me out of the land of the Egotistical Big-heads, thank goodness."

Little Biographies of Big Masters.

Of course you children—all of you—love pictures, for they represent the things of nature dear, to all. On bits of canvas or wood Nature's own wondrous landscapes, sea views and the white-clouded heavens are shown us with splendid effect. And all things that live—plant life, sea life, animal life, bird life and human life are the properties of the studio, to be used at will by the artist, master of pencil and brush, form and color.

But not only are the works of the masters dear to you, for the men and women of the palette claim your attention and admiration as well. We love the picture and we reverence the hand that executed it—the brain that conceived it.

One of the features of this children's department for a few weeks will be very brief biographical sketches of masters of art, past and present, with portraits of the artists accompanying when they can be obtained. Cut out these little biographical sketches and paste in a scrap book. They will prove very convenient to refer to when occasion demands.

Sandro Botticelli.

Herewith is the sketch of one of the old masters, Sandro Botticelli, whose real name was Alessandro di Mariano Filipepi. You will say his parents were not stingy when bestowing a name upon the little Sandro, destined to become very great.

Alessandro di Mariano Filipepi was born in Florence, Italy, in the year 1447. Early in youth Sandro showed a distaste for ordinary school learning, and after much difficulty in trying to force an education on his son the elder Filipepi despaired, took the boy (whom he called stupid) to a goldsmith named Botticello, where he left him apprenticed to learn the good goldsmith's trade. Although the little Sandro was destined to become more than a goldsmith, his first lessons in the shop of Botticello were well worth his while there, for he learned precision of line and earnest attention to detail that stood him in such good stead in his life's great work.

Not many years did Sandro serve as apprentice to the able Botticelli, for as he grew older he became possessed by one all-pervading passion—the passion to become an artist. Understanding his son better now, the elder Filipepi came to his assistance and placed the ambitious youth with a Carmelite monk, Fra Filippo, who at that time was one of the first masters in Florence. And here it was that Sandro found his sphere. Diligently he pursued his studies under the monk, and at the age of 22 he had the proud distinction of being called the first painter of Florence.

As his art grew Sandro found his great need of that education which in boyhood he had so wilfully neglected, and with a will he set to work to possess himself of the very things he had thrown away. His art shows us that he acomplished the task, and became one of the best read men of his time and familiar with the classics.

Besides being a painter of beautiful Madonnas, Sandro Botticelli executed some wonderful frescoes and many portraits of Popes.

In the morning and noonday of his genius he was a great favorite of Lorenzo the Magnificent, but later that illustrious personage died, Sandro fell under the influence of Savonarola, which was so hurtful to his art. In his old age he was eclipsed by Leonardo, Michelangelo and the wonderful colorist, Raphael. In deep melancholy, poverty and neglect the once proud favorite of the crowned heads and the grandees of the court and patrons of art passed away.

It was John Ruskin and the English pre-Raphaelites who restored to their rightful place the works of Sandro Botticelli, for they had sunk into oblivion. Now the masterpieces of this great Italian are prized beyond price by the greatest galleries of the world.
